"What are fundamental principles of Anglo Saxon civilization? There are two: 1st, A belief in the fatherhood of God; 2nd, A belief in the brotherhood of man. It is these two principles that have given character and life to the Anglo Saxon in all history. They lie beyond the Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights as they do behind the Declaration of Independence and the right of trial by jury, which is characteristic of Anglo Saxon civilization alone.....Our Secretary of State, Mr. John Hay, has lately said, "The fundamental principles of American diplomacy are the Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule."....Civilization is now going, and is destined to go in the future, as never in the past, along the line of expansion, and God has organized and fitted the Anglo Saxon to be the exponent of expansion as he is of no other idea..... God has given the Anglo Saxon, and especially the American type, the expansion blood of the world.....In the settlement of our country, Divine Providence winnowed the countries of Europe to procure the best types of its blood and gave us the Puritan and Pilgrim, the Knickerbocker and the Quaker, the Cavalier of Virginia and the Huguenot of the Carolinas. These have been fused into a great American type by a quarter of a millennium of comparative peace, until the best blood of the earth throbs in the heart of the American. The American also has the expansive brain of the world. No such brain power is found elsewhere. For ductility, versatility and originality, it is to-day on this earth.....The Earl of Dufferin said five years ago that America would lead the world in diplomacy before another quarter of a century, and we are doing it before a quarter of the time specified has expired. In great international perils, the nations of Europe look to American diplomats to lead the way to peace and safety.....Most of you have doubtless seen the splendid illuminations of the World's Fair City at night. With its millions of lights, flung by the hand of Almighty power over the brows of the hill sides and draping the shoulders of these buildings, it is a sight before never seen by mortal eyes. As you gaze upon it you are led to think that God's angels have held a jubilee over the spot and have shaken from their pinions feathers of light and beauty which have fallen like snowflakes upon the face of the earth. What is the secret of all this brilliancy and beauty? In a plain little building there is a powerful engine, beating its ceaseless heart throbs and feeding a dynamo which disseminates all the beauty of this fairy scene. Stop feeding the dynamo and the lights will pale into darkness; keep the dynamo supplied and it will feed the lights with warmth and brilliancy. What that dynamo is to this exposition, the American Christian Missionary Society is to America. Make it strong and powerful and great, and it will regenerate our beloved country. It will banish ignorance and superstition from the cabins of the cotton fields in our South; it will strike out the darkness and discontent from the cotton factories of the East, and will break the loneliness and dreariness of the ranches of our West. It will take away the great covetousness and avarice from the great commercial march of our mighty cities and teach the brotherhood of man to both employer and employee. It will banish brutality and licentiousness from the dark abodes of sin that cluster along the wharves and harbors of our shipping ports; it will usher in the golden age when the fruits of arbor and field, gifts of beneficent Providence, shall no more be turned into the accursed fluid which dethrones the reason and leaves the mind in lurid darkness and drunken stupor; into that which destroys the image of God on the forehead of man and stamps his brow with demon like fierceness."

Now if the American Christian Missionary Society can expel vice and darkness, and illuminate our country like the dynamo does the darkness of night, and usher in the golden age will they not with Senator Doolittle claim that the United States is the "Stone cut out of the mountain without hands," that is to fill the earth? Human nature being the same in the old and in the new world, how long till this nation will claim to be the kingdom of God?

Walking With God.

It is a saying that a person is known by the company he keeps, and is usually true. The society we are the most pleased to mingle in is a fare index to our real character and life. Our desires and tastes in this direction will seek their own companionship as naturally as water will seek its level, and that too almost as unconsciously to ourselves as the flowing stream rushes on. Our character depends very largely on the companionship we choose. We can tell a soldier by his walk. We see a man staggering along the street we know by his un-

The first account we have in the Bible of [illegible] walking with God is found in Gen. [illegible]. It reads, "And Enoch walked [illegible] God 300 years. We murmur and complain and think 20, 30, 40 or [illegible] a long time to run his race [illegible] God in our weak [illegible] could, [illegible] and walk [illegible] years and what was the result "and he was not for God took him." This same event will occur to all those that walk with God to day. Two shall be in the field, one shall be taken and the other left; two shall be grinding in the mill, one shall be taken and the other left, etc.

Again, Noah was a just man and perfect in his generation (or dispensation under which he lived) and Noah walked with God. Gen. vi. 9. And amid the fierceness of that mighty storm that wrapt a startled world in a watery winding sheet of death God took him and bore him upon the bosom of that fierce tempest and carried him onward to a new found world because he had been just and walked with him. I know of no language in all the Bible more encouraging for us to walk with God than that found in Mal. iii. 16, 17. It says, Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it, (was that all) and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and thought upon his name, (was that all). And they shall be mine saith the Lord, in the day when I make up my jewels. We travel into the far off gold fields of earth, seeking the hidden treasures gold, diamonds and jewels, forgetting that we may so walk as at last to become a jewel, accepted and cherished by God as one of his treasures. But says one, how are we to walk with God and thus be accepted of him? Micheal vi. 8, tells us, It reads he hath showed thee, O man, what is good and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God? This walk is a humble journey. Let us be willing to take it.

National Bereans, Cleveland, Ohio.

The twenty-fourth regular meeting of The National Berean Association was held on Tuesday evening Nov. 8, 1904, at the home of Brother and Sister Pott. In the absence of the president, the meeting was called to order by the vice-president Brother Buell Nutt, and opened with prayer by Brother Harry Pott. Twelve members responded to the roll call. Minutes of the previous meeting were read, and approved by the society. The only unfinished business left from the previous meeting, was a suggestion made by Brother George Neill to change the time of meeting from the present monthly schedule to once every three weeks, a motion was made to this effect, with no second, and the question was dropped. A report was made by Brother James Thompson of the amount collected up to this time for the fund to be sent to Miss Ruth Smith of Chicago, Ill. It was decided by a unanimous vote to send flowers to our brother Roy Smith who was ill at Dayton, O. The corresponding secretary reported having written seven letters and receiving four; letters from Brother Glover and Sister Anna Burton were read to the society. The business of the annual election of officers for the ensuing year was then taken up, and the election was made as follows:

Sister Hattie Pate, President by six votes; Brother Stanley Sanford, Vice-President by six votes; Sister Jennie Salisbury, Rec. Sec'y., by five votes; Brother Sterling Groves, Cor. Sec'y., by six votes; Brother George Neill, Ast. Cor. Sec'y., by four votes.

This having completed the business for the evening the subject was then taken up, which was "The Life of Paul" continued. An interesting paper was read by the leader Sister Edna Cowell and a number of remarks were made on the subject.

This completed Paul's first missionary journey. The society had the pleasure of the presence of two visitors Brother and Sister Tomlinson. The meeting adjourned to hold the next regular meeting on Dec. 12, 1904; at the home of Brother Buell Nutt.

From Death to Life.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation: but is passed from death unto life." There are three very significant words in this verse: condemnation, death and life.

We all know what death is. It is a cessation of life, a ceasing to be, and each funeral procession reminds us of its reality. Life is the antithesis of death. Jesus is not speaking of the present life and natural death that awaits all, he spent very little time in [illegible] things of the future. Let us pause, and draw a practical lesson: Are our minds engrossed in the things of the present, or do we do all things with some reference to the glorious future? Let us pattern after Jesus, and let us have the Fathers will uppermost in our minds. As the present life is not spoken of in this verse, neither is the natural death, but a second and more terrible death of those who hear the word and refuse to believe it. We are all under condemnation but there has been a way of escape provided. Jesus says in John iii: 18. "He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten son of God; so in order to come out from under the condemnation, we must believe in the only begotten son of God, and to believe in him we must believe his word. It is only the believers that are spoken of as not coming into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life. Jesus says in Luke xx: 38, that "God is not a God of the dead but of the living." Again in John xi: 11, He says "our friend Lazarus sleepeth, but I go that I may awake him out of his sleep." In Daniel xii: 2 we are told that "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Then again Paul, tells us; "we shall not all sleep" and again we are told that "those who sleep in Jesus God will bring with him." My idea of this passage then is, that a believer is never dead to God in the sense that an unbeliever is; but is come out from under the condemnation, and is simply sleeping. Jesus says: "My words are spirit and they are life" and "my words shall judge you at the last day." We have natural life now, but if we desire unending life we must believe the word. We have believed; so his words will judge us at the last day. We have placed ourselves in a very responsible position and unless wefail the requirments of that position, we can never expect to advance in the divine life or gain the approval of our Master. He has promised us eternal life with glory and honor in his kingdom, if we faithfully perform our duties now; it is not an easy task we have undertaken, for it requires patience and courage, and many times he tries us to prove our faithfulness; but, if we persevere to the end he will crown us with life eternal and reward us according to our works; so the more diligent we are in his service, the greater will be our reward. Brothers and sisters, let us press on always keeping the mark of the prize of our high calling in view that we may each and all hear his well done.

Stephenson Memorial Fund.

In response to my call, I wish to report that I received from all sources, twenty-nine dollars and ninety cents, and this was placed in the hands of Bro. Thomas Wilson, living at Ripley, Illinois, where Bro. Stephenson was buried.

A neat polished blue granite monument has been erected, appropriately inscribed with age, etc., with the motto "Waiting for the Coming King," costing thirty-five dollars. The church at Ripley raised the balance of the fund. Yours in the blessed hope.

Signs of Christ's Coming.

Were I asked what the greatest evils of this present age are, I would not say that they are drunkenness and other kindred vices, which, it is true, are sapping the moral life and physical health of the world. A subtle skepticism, and indifference to God's pleadings, are two of the greatest foes of spiritual progress that ever existed. Blasphemy against the Holy Spirit shall never be forgiven, neither in this world nor the next. This means rejection. "For my Spirit shall not always strive with men," says God. As in the days before the flood, so now, men are absorbed in sensuality, and are devotees of this world, bondservants of Satan.

Paul had this revealed to him by the Spirit, and says, in an epistle to Timothy, that the Spirit saith expressly that in the latter times men "shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Increased invention and means of travel have given them greater facilities for enjoying pleasure. The motto of the age is, "Money." Added to [illegible] stituted of but comparatively [illegible] members. They have been gathered during the years from the weak, the despised, yea, from them that are nought. What precious jewels they are to Christ. They are in constant process of cutting and polishing. These constitute the bride of the Lamb, and the world knows them not, even as it knew not Christ. Merely nominal believers look upon them as poor, contemptible persons, as a rule. It is well, and we are satisfied. Be not dismayed, brethren, at the exceedingly fiery trial of your faith, which is to refine you, even as gold is purged of all dross. Praise God, who loves us, that he chastens us. For every son whom he receiveth, "he chasteneth." Some day the world will see the wisdom of our choice.

The belief in the second coming of our Saviour in person has almost at times been almost extinguished. Men sneer and say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" "All things continue as they were from the beginning."

The seven seals, described in Revelations, are disclosures in symbol, of things past, present and future. They portray, with absolute accuracy, events which are allotted to seven epochs of time. Why did Jesus deliver these things to his servant, John, and to all believers, if they were not to be known? It would be utterly unlike God's dealings with his children. "The wise shall understand," but the wicked will not understand."

Are you a wise servant? Is your lamp full of oil? Are you watching? "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus."—Laurence Tyler, in Crisis.

One Year $1.50. Six Months 75 Cents.
Three Months 40 Cents.

PLEASE READ EACH WORD OF THIS.

We have made an agreement with the publishers of "Farm and Fireside," a semi-monthly journal, published at Springfield, Ohio, by which we can present our patrons with that paper for a year entirely free of cost.

Farm and Fireside has from 20 to 32 pages each issue, and is illustrated. It is accredited with having the largest circulation of any home and farm paper in the world. It is a good paper for the farmer, dairyman, stock raiser, poultryman, fruit grower and gardener. The housewife has a department—in short all members of the home are supplied with reading suitable to each one. A sample copy will be sent to you soon.

OUR PROPOSITION.

Our proposition is to send each one of our patrons who pays his subscription up and on to the end of 1905, the Farm and Fireside for a year free of any charge whatever.

This simply gives you the both papers for the price of ours.

There is necessarily a limit to this offer and you will have to act very promptly if you wish to take advantage of it. Our arrangement ends with the month of December. So if you want the Farm and Fireside free for one year, send at once as above, and we will see that you get the two papers.

This applies to new and old subscribers alike. Each one who pays for THE RESTITUTION to the end of 1905 gets the Farm and Fireside as well.

Send as soon as possible, so as to be sure and secure the present we offer. If you are in arrears send the money to cover the delinquency, and send $1.50 for next year, and you get Farm and Fireside absolutely free.

A SECOND PROPOSITION.

In the city of Boston, Mass., is published a monthly journal devoted to education of young and old to the necessity of a humane and merciful treatment of dumb brutes as well as our duty to our fellowman. This paper is called "Our Dumb Animals," and is specially beneficial for the youth of our land, though older people cannot fail to be helped by reading it.

We propose to send Our Dumb Animals free one year to every person sending us a new subscriber for THE RESTITUTION for next year.

Do not misunderstand our offer—

1. Pay all arrears and for 1905 and you get THE RESTITUTION for that time and Farm and Fireside for one year.

2. A new subscriber paying $1.50 for the year 1905, will receive all the papers of 1904 from the time his subscription is in hand, and the full year 1905, and will get Farm and Fireside for one year.

3. Any person sending us $1.50 for a new subscriber for next year, not only entitles such new subscriber to what is mentioned in No. 2, but he will himself get Our Dumb Animals a year free of cost.

Should you wish to do so, you may name any boy or girl you would like to have receive Our Dumb Animals in place of yourself.

If you send two new subscribers as above, you can name some one for each subscriber you send, and Our Dumb Animals will be sent to whomsoever you name.

Poetry.

Christmas.

The earth has grown old with its burden of care,
But at Christmas it always is young,
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair
And its soul full of music breaks forth on the air,
When the song of the angels is sung.

It's coming, Old Earth, it is coming to-night!
On the snow-flakes which cover thy sod
The feet of the Christ-Child fall gentle and white,
And the voice of the Christ-Child tell out with delight,
That mankind are the children of God.

On the sad and the lonely, the wretched and poor,
That voice of the Christ-Child shall fall,
And to every blind wanderer opens the door
Of a hope that he dared not to dream of before,
With a welcome of welcome for all.

The feet of the humblest may walk in the field
Where the feet of the Holiest have trod,
This, this is the marvel to mortals revealed
When the silvery trumpets of Christ have pealed,
That mankind are the children of God.

The Times of the Gentiles. No. 2.

"Why seeing times are not hid from the Almighty do they that know the Lord not see his days." "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." "Measure thou the time diligently in itself and thou seest part of the signs past which I have told thee before, then shalt thou understand that it is the very same time wherein the Highest will begin to visit the world that he made."

As it is evident that the Gentile powers could not begin to tread under foot the holy city until the abandonment thereof by the Lord God of Israel, as shown by the departure of the glory of the Lord, as described by Ezekiel the prophet, which memorable event occurred in B. C. 584. Then their sin had come, their iniquities were filled full, and the time of their punishment was due. While the "fierce anger of the Lord shall not return until he has performed the intents of his heart, in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly." But the Lord had promised them in their captivity that he would be a little sanctuary to them in the nations wherein they were to be scattered and lost.....He also promised them that "the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." While a prophet's prayer was to be answered, "O Lord, revive the work in the midst of the years." "In measuring the time diligently in itself" half of 1260 years is 630 and in deducting this number 594 B. C. "the midst of the years" reaches down the centuries to A. D. 36. At which eventful period we find that the Lord God had remembered Israel, and in due time sent his only begotten Son that whosoever believed upon him might not perish but have everlasting life. Woe unto Jerusalem, woe unto the inhabitants thereof; they could not discern this time the time of their visitation when the Son of God and Son of David was with them to restore and bless and rule them and save them from their sins.

But when they rejected him and would not listen to him, then he announced to them, "Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers." "If thou hadst known even thou, at least in this thy day the things that belong unto thy peace, but now they are hid from thy eyes, for the days shall come upon thee that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee and compass thee round and keep thee in on every side and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee, and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another, because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation.

Jesus the Son of God wept over the city exclaiming, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings and ye would not. Behold your house is left unto you desolate. And verily I say unto you, ye shall not see me until the time come, when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." "Ye hypocrites ye can discern the face of the sky but how is it ye do not discern this time."

A. D. 36 Paul was preaching in Damascus proving by the Scriptures that their Messiah had come and suffered and died by the hands of sinful men, that he was the Son of God and they had rejected their king of glory. The Lord said of Saul, "He is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel.

Woe unto Jerusalem, the measure, the double measure must now continue and be filled full for all her sins. The seven times of Gentile rule reaching through the long centuries of 2520 year days must roll over Jerusalem and Israel before the king of glory should come into his own and reign in righteousness. A. D. 36 is the midst of the years when God in mercy was to revive his work and ehoosemit his elect body through the centuries to reign on the earth with Christ in the regeneration which should be in the due time. 630 years after in dividing the time brings us to 666 A. D. and is a full measure and number of time times and a half and is "the midst of the years" of the double measure of seven times allotted to Jerusalem for Gentile supremacy. "In the midst of the years make known in wrath remember mercy" was the closing clause of the prophet's verse.

What events have transpired during this measure of time? Let us subdivide the times and enumerate a portion of them.

One-fourth of the measure is 315 years and this reaches to 279 B. C. Self was [illegible] B. C. and is [illegible] D. And we find that "in 277 B. C. the translation of the Septuagint Scriptures was made by order of Ptolemy Philadelphus and as we approach the next subdivision we find the dates of time are changed from Before Christ to Anno Domino the year of our Lord, with his wonderful coming, and his dreadful sufferings and death, while in his glorious resurrection is our hope, wherein he saved Adam's lost race from death and utter extinction. The Savior of the world, blessed be his holy name.

From A. D. 36 the lapsing of three-fourths of the measure brings us to 351 A. D. During the interval of this period, the Gentile power of the Great Red Dragon, Pagan Rome persecuted to death the apostles and early Christians. And we find in the true church of God the woman of Revelation who was clothed with the sun and founded on the teachings of the prophets and apostles and who was sent in the wilderness into a place provided for her, for a time times and a half time, and also 1260 days was allotted her—note the double measure and number given her, the whole of the "times of the Gentiles."

The man child that was born of her and who was to rule the nations with a rod of iron, and was caught up unto God and to his throne, was Jesus Christ the Lord. Jesus said, "I saw Satan as lightning falls from heaven." "And the great dragon was cast down to the earth." In the last quarter of the first measure, we find that in 363 A. D. Julian Emperor of Rome abjured Christianity and attempted fruitlessly to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem." "A. D. 602 Phocas Emperor of the east acknowledged the supremacy of the Pope." "A. D. 607 the Pantheon at Rome was dedicated to God, the Virgin and all the saints." We see in these last two dates that papal Rome was now in the ascendant. A. D. 616 Jerusalem was taken by the Persians under Cosroes II." "A. D. 622 Era of the Hegira or flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Medina. "A. D. 636 Jerusalem taken by Omar and the Saracens who keep possession of it 463 years."

"A. D. 640 the library of Alexandria founded by Ptolemy Philadelphus is burnt by the Saracens."

A. D. 666 is the end of the first measure and number appointed to Jerusalem, and which year of the Lord is the landmark impressed upon the church of God and the seed of the woman by John the Revelator whereby we may understand wisdom. Gentile Mohammedanism ruled the Holy City at this period of time and the mosque of Omar still stands in the holy place as the abomination of desolation. "Let him that readeth understand."

Thus far have we followed a portion of the annals of the church of God through the wilderness of Gentile times, and in our next paper we will follow its foot steps through the mysteries of the double measure appointed unto Jerusalem.

Obituary.

On Nov. 25, 1901, at 10 P. M. in her residence at 666 Park Ave., Chicago, where she had lived and worked for many years, Sister Harriet Denton, eldest daughter of Benj. and Mary Ann Boyes, went to sleep, to wake no more until the King calls. Her father and mother were pioneers in the faith, and she early embraced the truth, and all her subsequent life earnestly endeavored to follow the Master's teachings. At call of distress, she was there to relieve with both work and money, as long as strength or money lasted self was never consider; she seemed indeed to "love her neighbor better than herself," for self was constantly sacrificed for the benefit of her neighbor. She suffered much, having buried all her children—the last, a young man died two years ago, while she herself was suffering from a severe illness. She never fully recovered the last blow. Indeed, on Thanksgiving day, with her husband she went to visit the boys' home and on Friday went to sleep herself. Her husband is almost unconsolable as he is left alone. All day Saturday and Sunday afternoon there was a continuous procession of those whom she had befriended who came to take a last look at her, and tell of the many kind deeds she did for them, and mourn for her, each one seeming to feel the loss a personal one. As I showed them our dear one, lying so calm and peaceful in her last sleep, and heard the testimony of the many strangers, believers and unbelievers, I could not help thinking, how well she had shown her faith by her works, and so glorified the Father which is in heaven as we are commanded. All said, "She is sure of her reward." Many through their tears saying, "She is now happy in heaven." She suffered much but bore it patiently, her only moan being, "I am so weak I can do nobody any good and I long to be at rest." Our loss is great. We miss her at every turn, always at church service when possible. We miss her smiling face. Always at "Ladies' Aid" society when possible to get there, where she was the life of the company, and the support of the treasury. Our loss is indeed great, but her gain, a peaceful rest, and a glorious upspringing to life and joy forever, when our King comes. Oh, how precious is this hope and what a peace it brings to the sorrowing. If we are only faithful enough to be partakers in that glorious resurrection time. Bro. Lindsay spoke many words of comfort and cheer, to the mourners, and as she was lowered into her leafy bed, bade us think of the time when in glory she would rise again and we with her, if we are faithful, praise the King in his beauty, through the endless ages of eternity. "After life's fitful fever she sleeps, well." Farewell until the meeting time.

RUTH W. WHITEHEAD.

News reached me while preaching at Mountain Grove, Missouri, that Sister Denton, (the daughter of Brother and Sister Boyes, both asleep in Jesus) had fallen asleep.

The news cast a feeling of sadness over me. I have been familiar with her from early childhood, and the sad tidings brought back to memory many incidents of early life with which she was associated.

As to her exact age, and immediate circumstances connected with her death, I do not know, on account of being away from home, except that she was laid to rest by the side of her son, (the last of her children who passed away a little over a year ago,) in Forrest Home Cemetery, Chicago.

Sister Denton, bore a kind, lovely, and Christ-like disposition; like the dear Savior, she had a sympathetic heart for the sorrowful and afflicted wherever she met them. Oftentimes she would be willing to suffer herself, if by so doing she could relieve some one else's suffering. These things are not merely matters of report, I have personally witnessed them. Is it not sweet when we pass away, to leave such a memorial, as a monument behind us? Such a monument will far out-last, and is infinitely far more beautiful than monuments of granite or marble. No one ever appealed to the dear Savior in vain. He always had a tender heart for suffering humanity. He would groan in spirit and weep with the sorrowful. Copious showers of blessing always fell from the hands of our Savior. His joyous promises are ever soul-inspiring, they raise the believer's mind from scenes of sorrow, to lofty and joyous aspirations. The Savior's great heart always did delight in administering comfort to the afflicted, and every true follower of his delights to do the same thing. We cannot be true followers of Jesus, if that same beautiful spirit does not dwell within us.

Beloved, let us all follow the sweet leadings of the Bright and Morning Star shine upon us, and let it illumine our pathway through the labyrinth of life, and guide our footsteps over the snares and pitfalls which beset our path, until we safely arrive at our Edenic home. The great heart of Jesus was and is large enough to fill us with blessings to the fulness of our capacity.

Today we may weep by reason of the advent of death in our midst, yet it is in his heart to rob death of its sting, and restore the sleeper in Jesus to a joyous, happy life, which can never end. God is good. God is love, and his desire is to bless us if we will only obey him.

I would say to the dear husband of our sleeping sister, trust the same Savior she trusted in, believe and obey the same gospel message she believed and obeyed, and live the same blessed life we find Jesus led, and then we can all meet and live in a beautiful age, when sin, sorrow and death, will be things of the past, in the Christian's home in glory.

May God be with you, and bless you, and lead you close to the loving Savior's side. When death draws near, then is the time to compare values. At that time ask the gold of Ophir, the onyx stone, the saphire, the crystal, the coral, the topaz of Ethiopia, the pearl, or the rare jewels of gold, have you length of days in your hand? the answer will be an ominous silence. Ask the Star of Hope, the herald of the Blessed Hope, and words of life like music of seraphic sweetness will greet the believers' ears. The heart will sing for joy, and in heaven's own sweet melody ascribe praise to him who has loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood. This sunbeam of hope lights up the mourner's heart, and converts gloom into glory.

"Night falls, but soon the morning light,
Its glories shall restore;
And thus the eyes that sleep in death,
Shall wake to close no more."

God be with you all who mourn the loss of our dear Sister.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Bro. A. T. Morris fell asleep in Christ at the Soldiers' Home near Santa Monica, Los Angeles Co., on the 22nd day of last October. He was buried in the cemetery belonging to the Home, on the 24th of October the anniversary of his birth at the age of 68. The brother had been afflicted for a number of years, was very deaf and a nervous trouble chiefly in his limbs. He was very patient, was respected by all who knew him, he was a firm believer in the gospel of the kingdom and the Abrahamic promises.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

He was a native of Ohio. He came with his father and family to Kansas, served in the War of the Rebellion. He married a Mrs. Tinkey, who with her former husband lived for several years in Marshall Co., Ind. They moved to Kansas, Bro. Tinkey died there. Sister Morris was married to the deceased brother, they moved to California a number of years ago and settled in Arcata. They moved to Soldier's Home nearly a year ago.. He has gone to his rest. He leaves a wife who is also a believer in the precious promises but in feeble health. But we sorrow not, having a hope in the near coming of King Jesus, who will bring to life our loved ones, and wipe the tears from off all faces.

J. OGILVY.

To all who have been accustomed to visit the Illinois Conference each year this article will bear news of unusual sadness. Bro. Amos Eaton of Mt. Carroll, Ill., died Friday, Dec. 9, and was buried Sunday, Dec. 11, in the family cemetery at Elmoville. When sixteen years of age he moved with his parents from Oswego County, N. Y., to Illinois. Remaining in Illinois until twenty-one years of age, he with others crossed the plains to California, where he remained for six years after which he returned to Illinois and settled down upon the old homestead in the Pleasant Valley locality in Jo Davies Co., where in 1866, he married Susan M. Bruce. To this union nine children were born, two of which died in infancy. His first wife died in 1882, and he again married in 1884, being united this time with Mrs. Emma Keller to which union two children were born.

In 1902 they left the old farm and moved to their present home in Mt. Carroll.

Those who mourn his loss are the wife, seven daughters, two sons, two step-sons, one sister and three brothers. Besides these he leaves the whole household of faith to mourn as those who mourn the loss of a faithful and consistent brother. When visiting Bro. Eaton his chief topic for conversation was the old, old story. He disliked shams. He loved his home and family with unusual devotion, entering with interest into all the affairs of life with which his loved ones came in contact. The grief expressed by the family was an indication of the measure in which he will be missed.

His last words spoken by him to the writer just a few days before his death were these: "Good bye, if we never meet again in this life, I trust we may meet in the Kingdom of God." We all await that great event which shall unite us forever with those who are asleep in Jesus, being raised up to a glorious immortality. May God give comfort to all who sorrow.

Editor Restitution:

You will find enclosed, herein $2 00 for the paper for another year. I intended to send in time to get the Farm and Fireside but have been away from home some time, and see that the time has expired for that offer, for which I am sorry.

I so often think and meditate on that good meeting we had in August, at Oregon, Ill. and hope we can all meet there again next year, but long more especially for that glorious holy meeting in the kingdom of God where there will be no parting or good bye, where we shall see the King in his beauty, and be with him no more to go out from his presence. We do so long for the company of the household of faith, and their associations, yea, and their comforting influence, and encouragement.

ELIZA A. RANE.

[Farm and Fireside will be sent.—ED]

Our offer of two papers for the price of one has been extended through the month of December. Send in renewals and take the benefit of the offer made.

We ask any brother or sister who knows the time paid for on subscription is expired, to please renew today. We need it.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 21, 1904.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 15 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

WE wish you all—each one—a Merry Christmas.

MANY friends of Bro. and Sister Zilmer will be interested to know that a little boy came to their home one day last week.

BROTHER J. H. Willey who has been at Plymouth for some months was called to Rensselaer last week by the death of his brother-in-law, Mr. Porter.

WE learn that Bro. H. F. Cordill of South Bend, Ind. had the misfortune to cut his foot with an axe, and will be disabled for some time in consequence.

THE person who sent money in a letter from Roll, Indiana, and signed "Mrs." to the letter has not yet given us the balance of her name. We cannot fill the order till we hear from you.

WE do not wish to urge it against the will of any one, but we are ready to publish "Love Feast" letters again this year, as for some years past. Letters giving your testimony as to your faith and hope, are read by a good many with interest. Send them on and we will print them.

READ our offer to do Missionary Work, by sending THE RESTITUTION to a number of friends the coming year. Some may think they see no visible results from efforts in the past. This should not discourage. It is our work to shed the light—to scatter the seed. The harvest is not in our hands. The Lord will take care of that. Let us do our part well, and rest assured his part will be well done.

THE War in the far east is slow in showing results. The last of the Russian battleship at Port Arthur has been disabled, and is aground. The different sections of the Baltic fleet are likely to be held back, if not returned. They cannot get to Asiatic waters for some months yet at best, and in the mean time the Japanese get their fleet in trim to receive them. Could the Russians combine their fleet would be stronger in number of ships, but weaker in gun power, and inferior as to officers and crews. Without saying a word against the commanders on these vessels, the element that counts largely in modern naval warfare is the "Man behind the gun," and in this respect the Japanese have proved themselves quite superior. So that taken all in all, it will be a dangerous thing for Russia to send the Baltic fleet to cope with the Japanese at this time.

THIS is the time of the year when families gather to hold reunions, and give presents as tokens of friendship and love. While we do not believe that it is possible to positively settle the exact date of the birth of the Savior, yet there can be nothing wrong in a day being set aside specially to celebrate the event. As the world generally observes Dec. 25, there is no reason why we may not join in this custom and wish each other a happy day, looking back to the time when Jesus was born in the Bethlehem manger, and forward to the time we so long for when he will appear on this earth again to take to himself his power and reign. At the little Church here at Plymouth we gather with the scholars of the Sunday school, and their friends. Appropriate exercises, such as songs, readings and recitations are given, after which little gifts are presented to the faithful scholars, and a good time is enjoyed by all. We would be glad if a short report could be sent this office, as to how other Sunday schools conduct their exercises at this time. Perhaps by giving such reports we might aid one another to get ideas that will help us in the future. We ask each one in charge of any such gathering to send a short report, and we will give place for them in the paper.

Selected.

The True and the False.

There is much said in these days about a more "liberal religion," a "broader Christianity." Of course the intimation is, that the Christian religion as taught in the New Testament, is too narrow, too bigoted, too antiquated; in fact has lost its usefulness largely as a means of satisfying the demands of this age of high civilization and learning. It is not "up-to-date." The church and the world have outgrown it! It must be revised, amended, enlarged, to suit the various phases of the multitude of sects and isms which desire to take shelter under its branches, and claim sanction and authority from its teachings. And many claim the right to add to, or take from its teachings. And many claim the right to add to, or take from its teachings as their notions or fancy may require, in order to avoid its condemnation of, or claim its vindication for their anti-christian fables and deceptions, which they are publishing broadcast through the world. Whatever portions of the Bible condemn their theories they throw overboard, and when otherwise, they give it a nominal recognizance to furnish for them a cloak in the name of Christianity.

Now Christianity is founded on the doctrines and precepts as taught by Jesus Christ in the New Testament. It is a divinely revealed Christianity. It is the only divinely revealed Christianity in the world. If anyone proclaims or teaches a Christianity that opposes or contradicts the one taught in the New Testament by Christ and his apostles, it is anti-christian, and has no right to claim the name.

Now let us look at some of the teachings and doctrines on which the Christian religion is founded. Not for the purpose of sustaining some sectarian creed, nor yet as bigoted, dogmatic theorists, but as free, open-hearted, honest searchers after truth; and we notice the divine inspiration. That "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," and the words which they have left on record are truly God's revelation of his will to man. If we do not admit this, then we are all at sea without anything reliable or authoritative. We have nothing but tradition, legend, and perhaps fiction, to depend upon for instruction on this important matter. So that if the life, teachings and claims of Jesus the Christ are not the divinely inspired record as given us, then we have no divine authority upon which to build; only the mere uninspired opinions of any man or set of men. Neither can we by any fair means claim to be Christians, while at the same time we condemn the only authority on which such a claim can undisputably rest.

So that if the divine inspiration of the Scriptures is denied, we are left to be "carried about by every wind of doctrine," invented by the vain imaginations of men whose opinions may be good or bad, but always uncertain, because confessedly without authority.

As we did not intend to give space in this paper to prove the divine inspiration of the Bible, we simply mention the foregoing considerations as necessary to the just claims of the Christian religion, and shall proceed on the ground that the Scriptures are the divinely inspired words of God. Who was Jesus the Christ?

According to the record he claims himself, over and over again, to be the "Son of God;" that he came down from heaven." The Father said of him: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." The angels declared that "there is born unto you this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." The apostles, his most intimate friends and followers all confessed in the words of Peter, in the question: "Whom say ye that I am?" "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." The above is in short the record given of Christ as to who he was. Such testimony must prove his divine origin, or words are useless. But more; he is claimed to be "the only begotten Son of God," consequently he must have been something more than a mere man, however wise and good. Such is the testimony. Is it true? If not, what then? There can be but one conclusion. Christ made claim to what he was not, and God, the angels, and apostles were all mistaken! And the whole system of Christianity is built upon a mere mortal man, and he a fraud!

Now all who claim that Jesus Christ was only a man like other men, was no more divine than other men, no more inspired than other men of his day or of ours, are not with Christ in his claims, and are therefore against him. "Whoever is not with me is against me." Can any one rightfully claim to be believers and teachers of Christianity while at the same time they repudiate Christ's claims and teachings? Oh! but what's in a name?" Sometimes not much, but the name of Christ stands for a good deal. He is the one name given under heaven and among men whereby we are saved, the foundation upon which the whole superstructure of Christian salvation is built, and "if the foundations be destroyed, what will the righteous do?"

"The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." "For while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. For as through one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, even so through the obedience of the one shall many be made righteous." These passages, and many more, show very clearly that the object of Christ's mission into the world was for the purpose of making an atonement: that by the sacrifice of himself he might save that which was lost by disobedience, so that all could be reinstated into God's favor if they would.

Now this truth being clearly stated by Christ and his apostles and foreshadowed by Moses and the prophets, has any man, or any number of men, the liberty to set this cardinal doctrine of Christianity aside and claim that they are Christian teachers? Paul declared to the Corinthians: "For I delivered unto you, first of all, that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." He also says that they also received it, and would be saved by it, unless they have believed in vain.

But the "liberal religion," the "broader" Christianity of these days, ignores it, casts it one side, tramples it under foot as "useless," "worthless." Are such teachings calculated to impress upon the minds and hearts of honest people the danger of neglecting the "great salvation" offered them by God through Christ, and the necessity of their immediate personal attention to it? Is it to be wondered at that the preaching of to-day in our modern pulpits is nearly powerless for good, that revivals of a pure Christianity are few and far between, that wickedness and crime of all kinds are stalking abroad at noon-day, that undisguised disrespect for religion pervades all departments in society, that covert as well as open and unblushing infidelity is on the increase? "By their fruits ye shall know them."—S. J. Roney in Crisis.

My Strength.

Be our days many, or be they few, from any burden which God may see fit lay upon us, our life may gain, not only contentment, but grandeur and nobleness. My strength during all my life has been precisely like this—that I have no choice. During the last thirty-six years God has twelve times changed my home and fifteen times changed my work. I have scarcely done what I myself would have chosen. The support of my life is to know that I am doing what God wishes, and not what I wish myself.

The best thing often that can happen to a man is to be thwarted in his favorite hopes. The old song sings the hope that in time of old age we may find one face at your fireside whom we loved when we were young; but I would say: For rather than this—God grant that we may find him here in the home of our darkened life. Then all else will seem to us to be but dross. When a man has nothing there to lose, when his hopes are all beyond the grave, when we listen without terror to the ebbings and flowings of the tide of life and the rush of its storms—then, after the night, to us the day will come back, and after the tempest, a great calm. We know then that it is God's work, and that God loves us better than we can love ourselves. We know then that all our life is guided by him, so that we find consolation and contentment; and if we have those two things with us—consolation in all sorrows and contentment in any loss—we have the richest blessings which God can give us.—Archdeacon Farrar.

The Force of Habit.

People imagine that habit is a tide which has its turning. In themselves and in their friends they make this great mistake. Wrong doings, they say, is a transient thing. Why be over anxious? Another mood will take us by and by, even if habit should get running strongly. Good people see their children drifting away from religious life. Their sons weary of church-going. They live largely away from home. They are too much in the clubs. They read skeptical literature. They speak slightingly of the faith of their fathers. They get on a powerful drift away from the hope of eternity. But loving parents look on without dismay. They think the tide will turn. They make no response to the entreaties of ministers for their children. They are not amused to earnest prayer. They are content to wait, believing all the time that this is only a tide; it will turn by and by. Our children, they think, can not permanently remain at enmity with God. Blood will tell. Have they not a godly ancestry? What prayers have gone up for them! The tide will turn. Let us wait.

Meanwhile the current of impenitency outruns all limits and periods. It proves itself to be no tide at all. It is the river Amazon. This tremendous stream gathers its head-waters within a hundred miles of the Pacific Ocean, and facing eastward rushes over an extent of nearly three thousand miles before it reaches the Atlantic, draining the Andes slope for a stretch of two thousand miles receiving in its mad sweep across the continent tributaries as large as itself, very soon cutting its channel to the depth of sixty feet, it plows deeper and deeper until near the sea it becomes three hundred feet deep.

It throws its gathered forces against the ocean tides, and the sea piles itself up in vain to resist. The struggle is soon over, and the restless current sweeps on. Far out at sea sailors dip up fresh water. The tides are felt four hundred and fifty miles up the river, but the current outruns it and makes its freshing influence felt five hundred miles from shore. There is no tidal law to control the force of such a stream. It is persistent, growing irresistible.

The forces of sinful habit are not feebler than the rushing of the Amazon. The lives of unrepentant men are gathering tributaries from days and years. They rush on in tremendous rapids and plunges. The powers of the world to come, like ocean tides, sweep far up from the shore into the thoughts and passions of men. Heaven makes its influence felt through years of growing impiety; but the current of sinful habit sweeps on unrestrained, and carries character and doom far out upon the bosom of eternity. Life is what makes itself. Its momentum creates permanence. Its awful sweep makes nothing of forties and restraining forces. On it goes, more and more like itself, until its bitterness or its sweetness are as certain as eternity is enduring.—Presbyterian.

The Work at Marlboro.

It was indeed a delight to us and we believe to all who entered into it as lovers of God's truth. This is a peculiar little town in some respects. It is located, built up and governed by two large companies, the Great Northern Portland Cement Co., who operate the great Marl beds in the vicinity, and the Marlboro land improvement Co. These two companies own and control the entire village, and the families living here rent their houses of them and work for them. There are about 75 dwelling houses and 300 people, with a good school building, opera house, a large store with modern appliances, also a commodious hotel, all these being lighted with electricity, which is utilized from the marl plant, a huge concern which turns out 1000 barrels of Portland cement per day. All this, but no church building. We understand however that the companies were negotiating for a site to erect one in the spring which will probably be undenominational. There are people here who are members of the Episcopal, Baptist, Disciple and Methodist churches, and now there is our family of the "one faith," each securing a minister of their respective denomination for an occasional Sunday as they can. Our coming to them was the first preaching they had ever heard on the gospel of the kingdom. The Disciple and Baptist friends were the most attentive to the Word spoken, eagerly asking about each subject as it was brought out and wondering why they had never heard these wonderful truths before. They very kindly invited us to their homes and every moment was profitably used on Bible themes. The congregations were not large but they made up in attention what was lacking in numbers. I think every one as they leave us pray by express or by mail that the meetings must close and desire our return as soon as possible. While there we made our home (and it was truly one) with Bro. Blakely and wife. Brother Blakely had been studying the Scriptures for some time and was not slow in getting at the beautiful side of the gospel, and as soon as he heard the sermon on baptism was ready to obey, and on Sunday morning we walked to the Pere Marquette river, one half mile away, and the Elder buried him with Christ in baptism. How glad every one seemed at the morning service to extend to him the right hand of fellowship and afterward in the communion service, what a satisfied joy was expressed in his face. We believe the Lord will have an earnest worker in this brother, who is a fine business man. He is now private secretary of the Marlboro land improvement company, a leader in many of their religious gatherings, superintendent of the Sunday school, and with Sister Blakely as organist they both lead in singing. How beautiful to see this young couple starting out in the gospel work together, united in marriage last June, now doubly united in Christ Jesus. Sister Blakely was brought up in the faith, and her heart is very full of thanksgiving in seeing her husband so earnest in the work. May others at Marlboro see and believe the gospel is our prayer.

To Readers of The Restitution.

We all like to hear of the good work going on. Tuesday Nov. 15, I went to Everett, Ohio, was met by J. M. Thorpe, drove to the Methodist chapel at Bath, about 6 miles, was welcomed and introduced to the audience by the minister, preached the kingdom of God, drove to Bro. Thorpe's about 3 miles, was made welcome and kindly entertained. Spoke three times in the Methodist chapel, at the close had long talk, and questions from the minister, and left with a pressing invitation to come again and bring wife. Preached Friday and Saturday in Presbyterian chapel about 3 miles from Methodist. Sunday morning spoke briefly at the Grange hall near Bro. Thorpe's and Sunday afternoon at Bro. Thorpe's home. Concluded the meetings Sunday evening at the Presbyterian meeting house, to a most attentive audience. All that was due to the energy of Bro. Thorpe and his love for the truth, and his fellow men. Mrs. Thorpe made her home pleasant for me.

On coming home wife and I had a call to Cleveland for an important conference committee meeting to seriously consider the work before us and ways and means. Brethren in Ohio, believed in the Lord, the harvest is plenty, the laborers willing, let the means be sufficient.

Thursday Dec. 8, there was joy in heaven over one repentant sinner, and there was joy in the Church of God at Salem, Ohio, when Mrs. M. Cole was buried with Christ by baptism, and now walks in newness of life, and is with us rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. Our Sister Cole was a true Berean, and fully satisfied herself that the gospel of Christ is the power of God to salvation. We have much comfort in our new sister.

Friday Dec. 9, I went to Kimball, Erie Co., Ohio, on the assurance of Bro. B. F. Smith, that meetings would be held at his home, if no where else. Preached in the school house near his home Saturday night, to a number beyond expectation, and Sunday night to a greater number, after meeting the audience gathered in groups. One man asked me if I was likely to come again, as they would like to have me. I referred him to Bro. Smith, said I would correspond with our brother, and if time and circumstances permitted would come again. Bro. Smith is true to the faith, is very active, and though he is alone faithwise, he has not fallen his fight, but, like Brother Thorpe, has talked to and supplied his neighbors with tracts and books. We closed the meetings Monday night at the Kimball school house, but not being well known of, the meeting was small. Those present said, "Come again, let it be known and we will have a good meeting." It is a great pleasure and genuine satisfaction to meet brethren like brothers Thorpe and Smith, for years alone in the faith of the gospel, but true to its simplicity. Mrs. Smith did all that could be wished for my comfort.

P. NEBEL.

The church at Salem expect to hold a series of meetings beginning Sunday Jan. 1, 1905, ending Sunday Jan. 15. The meetings will be held Sunday, Monday, Wednesday, Friday, Sunday, Monday, Wednesday Friday and Sunday. This arrangement proved very satisfactory last year. On or about Jan. 18 we expect to go to Pipon, have been invited by Bro. and Sister N. S. Westfall, will likely be there two weeks, that will take up the month of January.

P. NEB. & MRS MATTIE NEBEL.

After January I expect to go round among the churches in Ohio, and directly after to Sisterville, West Va., concerning which I have been corresponding with Bro. Farley. He is trying to make arrangements for meetings there. Bro. Juergensen of Barberton is looking after an opportunity to have meetings there. And through Bro. J. T. Ongley I have been invited to Centerville, Pa., by Mr. and Mrs. G. Salmon. We were slow getting started, but the work on hand is plenty. May the Lord find some honest hearts that will bring forth fruit to his honor and glory.

P. NEB.

To Those Who Love the Truth.

The proposition to put into tract or book form the excellent series of articles on the "Paternity of Christ" by Bro. M. Joblin, should meet with a ready response by all lovers of the truth. It is meet in in due season, for that gigantic error "The Human Paternity of Christ" may soon be reenforced by a powerful ally in the form of Buddhism. An article appeared in the Arena written by Subhadra Bickshu, a learned Hindoo in which the following statements are made: "Buddhu teaches the highest wisdom and goodness without a personal God; —a continuation of being without an immortal soul; an eternally blessed state without a local heaven; a possibility of Salvation without a Saviour; a Redemption where each is his own Redeemer, and which can be reached without prayer, without Sacrifice, without Divine Grace, and solely by one's own will and power." What a field for the advocates of the Human Paternity of Christ to revel in! Write by card to M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, stating the number you will take.

Be Happy To-Day.

Tired fathers, weary mothers, when is your happy day coming? Long since you expected it to dawn. It is not here yet, nor will it ever be so long as you do not determine that it shall be to-day. This failure to take comfort as you pass along life's pathway, but ever looking forward for all enjoyment of good, is throwing away the real sweets of life. You may as well attempt to store up Summer sunshine to warm in Winter, or bottle moonshine for cloudy nights. The real and only true way is to find in the present all the good God gives us. Our whole lives may be filled with joy if we are only willing to learn that in all good work there is profit, in all sorrow are some rays of sunshine, and in all care some compensation. Make the most of to-day, and your future will grow brighter and brighter as you step into it. Let the old saying that "Man never is, but always to be, blessed," be proven false by your finding in the present all the fullness of blessing it really possesses.

Poetry.

The Second Place.

Unto my loved ones I have given all;
The tireless service of my willing hands,
The strength of swift feet running to their call,
Each pulse of this fond heart whose love commands
The busy brain unto their use; each grace,
Each gift, the flower and fruit of life. Come
They give, with gracious heart and tenderly,
The second place.

Such joy as my glad service may dispense,
They up and to make some brighter life more blest;
The grief that comes despite my frail defense,
They seek to soothe upon a dearer breast.
Love veils his deepest glorious from my face;
I do not dream how fair the light to be
Beyond the shadow where I bold, longing,
The second place.

And yet, 'tis sweet to know that though I make
No small's supremest bliss, no life shall lie
Ruined and desolate for my sake,
Nor any heart be broke when I die.
And sweet it is to see my little space
Grow wider hour by hour; and gratefully
I thank the tender fate that granteth me
The second place.

Communicated.

Dear Restitution:

I am in receipt of the following letter, with inquiries as therein stated.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 6, 1904.

Dear Brother Daiggins:

"I received my RESTITUTION yesterday and in it saw your reply to our Bro. Smith. More than him feel troubled about points, that you, being a lawyer, are expected to be able to search out. In your article in THE RESTITUTION, the first point is just splendidly handled. The second I am and have been so much absorbed for the last few years, that you will please excuse me if I write you about it. Twenty years previous to 1890 I was in the Crisis body of believers and as you know, they believe that all the wicked dead will be raised at the coming of Christ, and they, with the living wicked, will be plunged into a lake of fire and die. Again, I supposed of course it was true. I had just lost my eldest son. He had suffered for eighteen months. I never witnessed such suffering and to think that he knew nothing about suffering to what he would in a little while. You must realize what a relief it was to come across a body of Advent life believers who saw the mercy of God * * * If all the wicked dead are to be raised, is it not for some other purposes than to make kindling wood of them? * * * I wish above all things to know what is truth.

Now, Bro. Dwiggins if you can give me some light, I wish you would. Will any body that is dead now have an opportunity of seeing the truth in the future?

Yours in the gospel hope."

In the study of God's Word there are certain fundamental propositions, which must always be kept in mind. Among them are the following:

1. God made the Bible. It is his Book. We do not therefore dare to treat its teaching lightly.

2. The Bible is our guide book. Unless we study it critically and carefully, and follow its directions explicitly, we will go wrong and fail in getting the reward we are hoping for. No mariner ever becomes so expert that he could safely sail his ship without his chart and compass.

3. What was God's original purpose in creating the world and placing man upon it? This question is answered by what God said to Adam and Eve, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth and subdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." The first four words of the above quotation tell the whole story. God wanted the whole world filled with people. He wanted those people to be happy, therefore he supplied them, not only with food, but with beautiful flowers, the animals, the birds and the fish in the sea. They were kept busy and made happy in caring for all these. If that was his desire, and purpose, on that beautiful creation morning, is it not still his desire and purpose? It most certainly is. Do you doubt it, dear reader? Our heavenly Father has been working nearly six thousand years to bring about these things contemplated in his purposes and plans. He will never cease until all is accomplished.

4. Without faith it is impossible to please God. This must be taken in its fullest and strictest sense. We have no option whatever. We cannot believe that which meets our approbation, and discard that which does not. The great and besetting sin of this age is unbelief. Jesus knew it would be so when he said, "Will the Son of Man find faith on the earth when he comes?"

5. The Bible is harmonious in all its teachings. It does not conflict with itself.

6. The Bible contains a full and complete plan of salvation for the whole human family. The plan is universal, its acceptance by all may not be. But how can any one accept who knows nothing about it?

Jesus died for all. "In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 3.

Please read the promises carefully and then say how many are left out. If they were universal in the beginning they are universal still. When we get all the nations, and all the families and every person and all his kindred, haven't we got the whole number. There are foundation propositions that cannot be ignored and must not be forgotten in discussing the plan of the salvation of the human family. Remember it is a plan for the salvation, not the destruction of the human race. It is not my purpose or desire, in what I may say, to try to settle any controversy there may be concerning the subject under consideration. I never write with that purpose in view. All I hope or desire to accomplish is to make suggestions which may lead others to investigate, and in this way we may compare notes, and like children of a common family, arrive at the truth. May God help us all along these lines. The first question is, does the Bible teach that there will be a universal resurrection of all the dead? To my mind the following Scriptures teach, beyond question, that there will be. If any of the wicked dead will be raised, all certainly will be. God is no respecter of persons. Jesus said, "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth, them that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and them that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John v. 28. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Rev. xx. 5.

In my answer to Bro. Smith which was published a few days ago in THE RESTITUTION, I went into this question of the universal resurrection of the dead quite fully. I will not therefore take time to give further quotations from the Scriptures, but will ask the reader to carefully read and consider the following Scriptures, viz. Ezek. xxxvii. 11; 1 Cor. xv. 22; Acts xxiv. 15; Rev. xx. 12. Remember that our preconceived notions can in no way affect God's Word. Also remember the injunction given by Jesus when he said, "Have faith in God." Mark xi. 22.

Can the simple fact of death affect the question of what our reward shall be? If we are to have part in the first resurrection, we must be prepared before we die, but outside of that, can or will death affect the reward which we shall receive at the hands of our heavenly Father? God does all things in an orderly manner. From the time the promise was made to mother Eve, to the time Jesus was born was about four thousand years. During all this time God was engaged in carrying forward the work which was to result and did result in the birth of the promised Messiah. From the birth of Jesus to the time he shall come for his bride, the special and particular work in which our heavenly Father has been engaged, has been the taking out from among the Gentiles a people for his name, who are to become the bride of Christ. During this time some crumbs of truth may have fallen from the Father's table, which may have been gathered up and eaten by persons on the wayside, which may cause them to obey, and furnish them with sufficient strength to carry them into the kingdom at the time of the general judgment, but they will certainly fall short of becoming members of the bride. This is only incidental to the main proposition of securing a bride for the Bridegroom. After this is accomplished Jesus comes, resurrects the dead saints. Changes the living and all are caught away to meet him in the air. The marriage takes place and Jesus comes back to the earth bringing his bride with him.

The second Adam and the second Eve having been brought into existence and having been united in marriage and been made one, as was the first Adam and the first Eve, enter at once upon the millennial or restitution age, which will continue one thousand years.

In Rev. xx. 5, we are told that "the rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years are finished." By this we learn that the resurrection period does not begin until the millennial age is closed. During the millennial age King Jesus, with the assistance of his bride, shall rebuild Jerusalem, rebuild David's throne, restore the twelve tribes of Israel and rule over them, as well as over all the nations of the world. The gospel of the kingdom as well as the everlasting gospel shall be preached in all the world to the end, that "the earth shall become full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing." "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." "Thy people also shall be all righteous."

"The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek, he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted * * to comfort all that mourn." What blessed glorious promises. They will all be fulfilled to the letter. What a glorious condition the world will be in, to receive the millions, who will be brought to life at the general resurrection. The curse will have been taken off. All the animals, birds and fishes will have become tame and gentle. Satan will have been destroyed. We are now down at the close of this beautiful age of love, peace and gentleness. We gather with the angel Gabriel to witness the resurrection of the hundreds of millions who are now peacefully sleeping in their graves. Why does the angel disturb them? A few of them have been so fortunate as to have heard the gospel, and have believed and obeyed it. Their names are in the Book of life. They will get the reward of eternal life, but how is it with the poor heathen who has never heard the gospel and knows nothing about the plan of salvation? Will he never be shown the way and be invited to walk therein and thus secure the great boon of eternal life? If not, why not?

Again, what is to be the fate of children who die in infancy. Jairus' daughter died in childhood, she was twelve years old, and therefore represents those children who die before arriving at the age of accountability. She was resurrected by Jesus. The fact that she had been dead did not in any manner prevent her from growing to womanhood after her resurrection. Neither did it prevent her from learning the truth and obeying it, and having her name written in the book of life, and thus obtaining eternal life. Why may not all children do the same after their resurrection? There is a theory that children who die before the age of accountability are in some way saved by the blood of Jesus without any volition on their part. I cannot concur in this view. There is but one road that leads into the kingdom. All who would have eternal life must enter by the door into the sheepfold. "I am the door." John x. 9. "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." John xiv. 7. All must be put upon trial, and only those who stand the test will gain the victory.

Suppose it was true that Lazarus had not become obedient prior to his death, was there anything to have prevented him from learning, believing and obeying, and thus getting his name written in the book of life, after Jesus resurrected him? It may be insisted that he was dead so short a time that it could not be said he had been resurrected. Jesus was only dead three days, still he was resurrected and become the "first fruits of them that slept." Why may not all who have not heard the gospel during their lives, have it taught them after they are resurrected and be given an opportunity of obeying and receive the reward. All who by reason of their environment were prevented from learning the gospel cannot be condemned for failing to obey it. God's book is a revelation to man. By its teaching all must, and will be tried. But it is not a revelation to those who have never had an opportunity of learning its teaching. No one can be or will be destroyed until they have been given a formal trial, as provided in the holy record, and found guilty of refusing to obey God's precepts.

The whole human family have one common Father, who is the author of all life. All have the same Savior, who gave himself a ransom for all. All inherit the same mortality from Adam. All die the same death, and all are promised a resurrection through Christ. What a glorious outlook for the whole human race. That good old prophet, Micah, in speaking of the time when Jesus shall be given dominion and glory and a kingdom that all people, nations and languages should serve him." Dan. vii. 13. When will all the people of every nation and every language serve him? After he takes the kingdom. What is God's purpose in causing all people of all nations to serve and obey King Jesus? Let the prophet answer, "James answered saying, Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name, and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord." Acts xv. 13-17. Who are the residue? During the ages that have passed, part of the human family have had the gospel and those who were so disposed, have sought after the Lord, substract those who have thus had the gospel, from the whole number of Adam's descendants, and those remaining will constitute the residue.

"Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world." Acts xv. 18. Yes, God understands his plans, he knows how it is to be brought about, and how it will all end.

"That was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John i. 9. Is it true that this true light will shine into the heart of every one that cometh into the world? God's Book says, yes, it is true. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. i. 16. That which is the power of God is not weak and likely to fail, but it is strong and mighty for the accomplishment of that which it is intended to bring about. Why is Jesus waiting at the right hand of the Father all these years? He is waiting for his wife to make herself ready. Why is it that the multitude spoken of in Rev. xix. 6 are heard to rejoice? It is because the time for "the marriage has come." Why are the multitude interested in this marriage? Because the great work of converting the world and restoring all things, cannot be entered upon until after the marriage. After this marriage "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and all nations shall flow unto it." Isa. ii. 2. After this marriage, "the nations shall beat their swords into plowshares." After this marriage, Jesus shall rebuild David's throne and establish it forever." After the marriage peace and good will shall be established among all people. Even the wild animals will become tame and gentle as it was in the beginning. After the marriage Jesus shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem gloriously. After the marriage "he will swallow up death in victory." After the marriage the poor Jew will receive such a blessing as shall cause a shout of thanks to go up that will resound around the world. After the marriage, "A little one shall become a thousand and a small one a strong nation." Oh, the blessedness of God's plans for the human family.

George Storrs, who was one of the best Bible thinkers, in the latter years of his life, printed in 1874 (he died in 1879), these words, "All the dead will be the subjects of God's grace, the only exception they who after receiving the knowledge of the truth, sin willfully, or blaspheme against the Holy Ghost." Blessed thought. To be the subject of God's grace means more than we realize or conceive. Unless there is positive and affirmative proof to the contrary, we are forced to the conclusion that God's great mercy will be round about every poor human being that he has brought into existence. The more ignorant and helpless a person is the more he would need God's grace and assistance. According to God's economy there never has been a time when a knowledge of the plan of salvation could have been brought to the hundreds of millions of heathen who lived and died. All of these people will be brought to life through Christ. At the time they are thus made alive the world will be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Why, O why, can't these poor heathen be permitted to drink of this knowledge and live forever? Have these poor helpless human beings been brought into existence to people the devil's kingdom? No, a thousand times no. I will not, I cannot believe it until I am confronted with overwhelming proof of the fact. Thank God, our God is a good, kind, gentle, loving Father, who following age to age, and generation after generation, has been gently on toward that time when Jesus will come and give to us, if we are faithful, eternal life, together with all the many, many blessings, which he has in store for his children.

My dear sister, the great suffering of your son caused you to think more seriously, perhaps; with reference to God's plans than you had previously done. God did not cause your son to suffer, but he used the suffering for his own purpose, and lead you to see a truth you had not seen before. You now have a better understanding of the life, which Jesus bring with him, than you possessed before. Why was not your son constrained to become obedient to the divine commands and thus have his name written in the book of life before his death? The strong probabilities are, that had he been fully instructed in the plan of salvation as you now understand it, he would have done so. Is it too late for him to be thus instructed, to the end that he may obey and obtain eternal life?

You are an overcomer, and like all of us, hope to become a member of the bride of Christ, you will therefore have the privilege of being with Jesus, at least one thousand years before your son is raised from the dead. Suppose that when you first meet the Master you tell him about your son, and make the request of him, that when your son is made alive, that he be sent immediately to you, to enable you to instruct him more perfectly in the way of life. Would Jesus refuse such a request? If he granted it don't you think you could very soon bring your son into the family of God? Remember it will be easy then. Satan will have been destroyed and the "earth will be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." But some one may say, the wicked will be condemned at the time of, or before their resurrection. That cannot be, all must and will appear at the judgment and have a hearing before they can be condemned or punished, or rewarded. Why could not parents, who are members of the bride, have the privilege of instructing their children after their resurrection?

Let us turn back the pages of history to the time of the existence of that great and wicked city Nineveh, and see if we cannot find a precedent. God spent much time and trouble in sending Jonah to that city, and directed him to proclaim to the people the destruction of their city. Did Jonah go to the city of Nineveh? He did. Did he preach the destruction of that city? He did. Did the people hear God's proclamation? They did. Did they believe it? Yes, they did. Was it true? It was. Was the city destroyed? It was not. Why was it not? Had not God pronounced judgment of destruction upon it? He had, in the most unmistakeable terms, "Yet forty days and the city of Nineveh shall be destroyed," were the red hot words of Jonah. That being true, why was not that great and wicked city reduced to ashes? The people believed God, and repented. Oh, the power of those two words belief and repentance.

The action of our heavenly Father with reference to the people of Nineveh is a strong illustration of his characteristics. He cannot and will not punish any person who has done, and is doing all in his power to have his sins forgiven. If repentance saved the wicked Ninevites will not faith, repentance and baptism save other people no matter at what time in the history of their lives each person may claim the blessing?

My well beloved reader, let us stand by the old Book. Its precepts and teaching have brought us safely thus far and will guide us safely into that blessed port where we shall meet the Captain of our salvation, who shall lead us to that fountain of everlasting life from which all the faithful ones may drink and live forever and forever. Amen. Your humble brother waiting the soon coming of our blessed Master.

Obituary.

William Henry Frier was born Aug. 28, 1836, in Fayette Co., Ind. Died Dec. 12, 1904.

Was united in marriage to Mary Ann McClelland Feb. 8, 1861. April 19, 1882, Bro. Frier was united in marriage to Lydia E. Patterson. The third marriage was to Minnie Richey, Feb. 2, 1901.

About the year 1860, Bro. Frier upon profession of faith in the gospel of Christ was baptized into the name of the Anointed One, and has since then Meeting House, a large assembly of sympathizing friends, who listened attentively to the answer given by inspiration to the question that in all ages stirred the depths of the human heart: "If a man die shall he live again?"

The pathway into the tomb, beaten both broad and deep by millions of the race, needed no specific revelation. Every day the awful reality could be plainly seen. But the "pathway of life," hidden from mortal gaze by the thick gloom that like a dark cloud hung over the tomb, could be shown by him only who was divinely appointed, "the Life-giver," yea the "Prince of Life." For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself."

All life upon this planet is the result of antecedent life. The same demonstrated truth is applicable to the Life that is to come, and the sure pledge of the Life-giver to all the faithful "Because I live ye shall live also" has forever settled the question of future life for the believer.

J. F. WAGONER.

It is with a sad heart that we chronicle the death of our beloved Brother Reuben O. Small, which occurred in Anthony, Kansas, Nov. 17, 1904. He was born in Dunlphan Co. Kan. Dec. 20, 1868, and moved with his parents to Harper Co. in 1883, where he has since resided.

His death was caused by appendicitis. From the first he believed it would have a fatal ending, and before submitting to the surgeon's knife, he closed up his business affairs, and sent for his relatives.

The funeral was held at the home Nov. 19th. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to a large congregation of friends from Job xiv. 14, "If a man die shall he live again," after which we laid him to rest in Spring Grove Cemetery until the Lord shall call. "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee. Thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."

Brother Small was baptised by the writer and became identified with the Church of God about twelve years ago, since which time he has remained a faithful member.

He leaves a wife, three children, a mother, two brothers and a host of friends to mourn. But we sorrow not as others who have no hope, for we are assured he fell asleep in Jesus and that Jesus died and rose again, and has the keys of hell and of death, and that he will open the graves, and our brother with all the good and pure of all ages will come forth clothed with immortality to sing the victor's song saying "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation; and hast made us unto God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

What a glorious hope that can look beyond this time of sorrow and death to that glad time when there shall be no more curse.

I would say to the sorrowing ones look beyond this night of sorrow to that glad day when our sufferings will have an end. Take the Word of the true and living God for council and guide, and draw near to him and he will draw near to you, for he alone can sooth your sorrow and wipe all tears away. Thy husband and thy son and thy brother shall live again.

And it came to pass that the angels were gone,
When one man was following o'er mountain and plain.

And swift is their thought, the lone beaming star
Was lighting with brightness the dusk of their room,
And pointing before them in path stretching far,
Where life's journey led, in its darkness and gloom

"Oh how I Wish," said the bright earnest boy.
"That Bethlehem's star were but truly my own,
That I, like those men of the East, might enjoy,
What they, in the coming to Jesus, have known!"

"I want my own self, by the star to be led,
"Till I come to stand safely beside the dear King.
—Frankincense and gold, they brought him, 'tis said,
—For his service and glory, myself would I bring."

"The star you may have, it is ready for you."
Said the mother, who stood in the dusk of the door,
"And Philip may come, and our dear Ellie too,
By the light that it throws on the pathway before."

"And if you to Jesus, your homage would pay
You must climb clear apast the dark mountains of pride,
And find in humility's valley the way,
Where only and ever the Savior abides.

"No mirage it was that you saw in your room.
The glory flashed out from the book in your hands,
It! It was the star that enbrightened the gloom,
And pointed ahead the delectable lands."

Where did Cain get His Wife?

One of the favorite questions with infidels of a certain class, "Where did Cain get his wife?" I have met also many young Christians who have been greatly puzzled and perplexed over this question. The man who can make his inability to find out where Cain got his wife, an excuse for refusing to believe the Bible to be the word of God, when there are so many positive and overwhelming proofs that it is the word of God, can hardly be regarded as a very fair minded or reasonable man. It is hard not to believe him a mere quibbler. And the person who makes his ignorance of where Cain got his wife an excuse for not excepting Jesus Christ as his Divine Savior, when so many perons of unimpeachable veracity are testifying that Jesus Christ has proven Himself to be a Divine Savior in their own experience, can hardly be considered a person of good, hard-headed common sense. He is about as sensible as the sick person who refuses to take a medicine that he knows will cure him, because there is some mystery that he has never been able to solve, and which it is none of his business to understand, about the matrimonial affairs of a man who was third cousin to the man who manufactured the bottles in which the medicine is put up.

When one makes his failure to understand where Cain got his wife an excuse for rejecting Christ, the simple fact is, he wants to continue in sin and makes this a pretext for so doing.

A worker called me one evening to deal with a man who professed to be a skeptic. I began by saying, "You are a skeptic, sir?" "Yes, sir, I am." "What makes you a skeptic? What is the particular point upon which you have difficulty?" "I can't understand where Cain got his wife." "That is really your difficulty is it?" "Yes sir." "Well, then, if I show you where Cain got his wife, you will accept Christ?" "Oh, no, I won't promise that." "But you said that was your difficulty. Certainly, then, if you are an honest man and I clear up your difficulty, you will accept Christ."

The man saw he was cornered and laughed. Then I put another question to him. "Tell me, isn't there something wrong with your life." After some hesitation and dodging, the man owned up that there was, and I soon found out that the real difficulty was not about Cain's wife, but about another man's wife.

But where did Cain get his wife? In Gen. v: 3, we learn that Adam in his long life begat many sons and daughters. There can be little doubt that Cain married one of these numerous daughters as his wife. "But," some one will say, "then Cain married his own sister." Yes, that was of course, a necessity if the whole Adamic race was to descend from a single pair. But as the race increased, it remained no longer necessary, and the practice, if [illegible] of human history, is the not so. As late as the time of Abraham, that patriarch married his half-sister (Gen. xx: 12).

But some one else may object that "the Bible says that Cain went into the land of Nod and got his wife." But the Bible does not say so. That is about as near right as infidels get in quoting the book against which they object so much and of which they really know so little. The Bible says that "Cain dwelt in the land of Nod. And Cain knew his wife." (Gen. iv: 17). Any one who is at all familiar with the Bible usuage of the word "knew" understands very well that it does not here mean to get acquainted with, but is connected with the procreation of the species. Let anyone take up their concordance and look up the word "knew" when used of man and wife and they will soon see its meaning. (See e.g. Gen. iv: 1; Judges xi: 39; 1. Sam. i: 19; Matt. i 25).—*R. A. Questions for You.

Reader, are you a Christian? Are you doing anything for Christ? Do you believe you can be a Christian and do nothing for Christ? Have you done anything for him today? Do you really want to do something for him? Are you willing to do what you can? Are you willing to do what he wants you to do?

Have you earnestly and sincerely asked him to show you what you can do? Have you looked about you seeking for an opportunity to do something for him? Did you see anything to do? Did you do what you saw you could do? Do you think that you have done what you could today? Did you tell any one about Jesus Christ? Did you try to lead any one to him?

Have you prayed for any one today? How much time have you spent in prayer today, ten minutes? Do you think that was enough? Have you lived today as though it was to be your last? Suppose such should prove to be the case—what would be the result?

Could any one tell that you are a Christian by the way you live? Are you a good example to those about you? If Jesus should come now would he find you ready to meet him? Do you really believe he is coming soon? Do you live as though you expected him any moment? If you are not ready will you get ready? Will you do it now?—L. F. Ladd.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

One Year $1.50. Six Months 75 Cents. Three Months 40 Cents.

PLEASE READ EACH WORD OF THIS.

We have made an agreement with the publishers of "Farm and Fireside," a semi-monthly journal, published at Springfield, Ohio, by which we can present our patrons with that paper for a year entirely free of cost.

Farm and Fireside has from 20 to 32 pages each issue, and is illustrated. It is accredited with having the largest circulation of any home and farm paper in the world. It is a good paper for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit grower and gardener. The housewife has a department—in short all members of the home are supplied with reading suitable to each one. A sample copy will be sent to you soon.

OUR PROPOSITION.

Our proposition is to send each one of our patrons who pays his subscription up and on to the end of 1905, the Farm and Fireside for a year free of any charge whatever.

This simply gives you the both papers for the price of ours.

There is necessarily a limit to this offer and you will have to act very promptly if you wish to take advantage of it. Our arrangement ends with the month of December. So if you want the Farm and Fireside free for one year, send at once as above, and we will see that you get the two papers.

This applies to new and old subscribers alike. Each one who pays for THE RESTITUTION to the end of 1905 gets the Farm and Fireside as well.

Send as soon as possible, so as to be sure and secure the present we offer. If you are in arrears send the money to cover the delinquency, and send $1.50 for next year, and you get Farm and Fireside absolutely free.

A SECOND PROPOSITION.

In the city of Boston, Mass., is published a monthly journal devoted to education of young and old to the necessity of a humane and merciful treatment of dumb brutes as well as our duty to our fellowman. This paper is called "Our Dumb Animals," and is specially beneficial for the youth of our land, though older people cannot fail to be helped by reading it.

We propose to send Our Dumb Animals free one year to every person sending us a new subscriber for THE RESTITUTION for next year.

Do not misunderstand our offer—

1. Pay all arrears and for 1905 and you get THE RESTITUTION for that time and Farm and Fireside for one year.

2. A new subscriber paying $1.50 for the year 1905, will receive all the papers of 1904 from the time his subscription is in hand, and the full year 1905, and will get Farm and Fireside for one year.

3. Any person sending us $1.50 for a new subscriber for next year, not only entitles such new subscriber to what is mentioned in No. 2, but he will himself get Our Dumb Animals a year free of cost.

Should you wish to do so, you may name any boy or girl you would like to have receive Our Dumb Animals in place of yourself.

If you send two new subscribers as above, you can name some one for each subscriber you send, and Our Dumb Animals will be sent to whomsoever you name.

Poetry.

Happy New Year.

TO THE DEAR SAINTS OF GOD:
I wish you good cheer
For the beautiful year,
That is coming to view
With joys that are new.

For as God in the past
To your hands has held fast,
And been for each day
Your strength and your stay;

So, in days near at hand
I pray He may stand,
Close, close to your side,
Ever ready to guide.

And if Jesus should come,
Ere the year's lovely bloom
Be furnished and lost
In the breath of the frost,

And eternity's crown
From Him who comes down,
Be placed on the head
Of the dear sleeping dead,

May you and I share
In glory so fair—
A place to us given
In kingdom of Heaven.

What Must I Do to be Saved?

No question can be asked by any man that is of more importance to him who propounds it than this. What must I do to become rich or great or popular or praiseworthy or learned or wise? Neither one nor all contain a tithe of the interest to us that this question should awaken. The answer to it must come from him who has undertaken to save us. The question itself suggests ignorance, helpless, and anxiety on the part of the enquirer. The answer comes from him who is the impersonation of wisdom, power and pity. "By grace are we saved through faith." The favor of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." The voice proclaiming God as one God has gone into all the world. And the condemnation resting upon all nations is the result of a refusal to retain God in their knowledge; and debars them from receiving the truth found in the precious words of reconciliation. The commandment, "Thou shalt have no other God before me," is ever in full force. God's eternal power and Godhead must be recognized before his grace that bringeth salvation and life eternal will be manifested to them. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." To believe in God as the self-existent, all-controller is the beginning of the faith without which the apostle declares it is impossible to please him, and is an essential pre-requisite to a belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus declares that no man cometh unto him except the Father draw him. God is especially favorable toward all who call upon his name, and who like the centurion prayed often and ministered to the wants of the poor. See how the Spirit of God directed Peter to instruct and lead him to the Christ in whom is life and the full salvation, and the only way to approach God to secure the eternal riches, the enduring substance. I did not design in this short article to specify all his duties that God requires at the hands of those to whom he offers eternal salvation; but only to impress the reader of his obligation to do all that God has appointed him to do in his Word. This embraces a complete surrender of his will to God, having exercised full faith in his Word, and full confidence in his power to do all that he promised. I believe we have no well defined instance upon the sacred record where the Spirit of God has drawn any man to the Christ who did not previously acknowledge God as his Creator. The Savior said to the Jews, "Ye believe in God believe also in me." There is a distinction made between him that is in Christ and he who only acknowledges God's existence. It is not enough to believe in the Father alone; seeing that we cannot approach him except through the mediation offered through the blood of Christ. Temporal blessings are the heritage of all God's creatures. But eternal things come to us from God through our Lord Jesus Christ. It is on account of the love that God has for the world that he gave his Son to suffer the death of the cross. But it is pre-eminently due to the love he bears his Son that he is willing to accept us through him. O the depth of the riches of his grace. Who can requite him? Whose service is adequate to purchase the things he has prepared for the upright? What must I do to be saved? Ans., Believe in God. Submit to his guidance, and be led by his Word and Spirit to Christ; "who is able to save to the utmost all who come unto God by him." Obey from the heart that form of doctrine given us. "Cease to do evil, learn to do well." Love the Lord with all your might. Love your neighbor equal with yourself. Recommend God and Christ to every one you meet, and when the times of restitution are here you will receive a welcome into everlasting habitations. We should not be anxious to know how little we may do and yet be be accepted of him, but we should agonize to know what he requires of us and strive to do that. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." It is faith that is accounted to us for righteousness. We will walk by faith when we are led by the Word of God. We will walk by sight only when the glorious holy city is brought within our range of vision. We may then walk and not faint, run and not be weary. We should know that obedience is better than the sacrifice of beasts, and more acceptable to God than gorgeous pageantry and solemn feasts, though the occasion was ordained to celebrate the mock baptism of a prince. Such things are not embraced in the answer to the vital question, What shall I do to be saved? "In vain do you worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." Rome's solemn assemblies and tawdry ritual are more than ever captivating and leading away the churches and world from the true worship and the true God of Israel. The deadly wound of one of the heads of the beast must be healing and all the world is wondering at the miracle. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." The harvest will reveal the nature of the sowing. "Brethren, let us cleave unto the Lord with all purpose of heart."

Parable of the Mustard Seed.

MATTHEW XIII. 31, 32.

In considering this parable, the first important step is to find out what the Lord purposed to teach, or place before his disciples in this parable. He was the great teacher that came down from heaven, and he taught many things in parables. Ver. 34, "All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables, and without a parable spake he not unto them." And he said in the 13th verse, "Neither do they understand." Then in case we might not understand, perhaps it would be well for us to find some plain facts, layed down by inspiration, bearing on the subject at hand. We find this in Acts viii. 12, "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." Then it is plain from the language, that the burden of Philip's preaching was the things concerning the kingdom of God, the things telling about the kingdom; the pre-requisite characteristics of the kingdom; that is, all the principal elements that will eventually go to make up the kingdom. All these must first be prepared here. Would it not be remarkably strange for the Lord to set up a world wide kingdom, without any work of preparation whatever? But we find that there is, and has been, a great preparatory work going on in the world. Heaven and earth have joined hands in the progressive work of preparing the material, in fitting up the soil, in planting the seed, in raising up men and women, who will be qualified and worthy to inherit the kingdom at its coming. God himself is directing the movements of the nations of the earth, to suit his own purpose in preparing the way for a kingdom that will pale into insignificance all other kingdoms that this world has ever known. This is the day of work, it is the day of preparation. The very first thing we meet in the parable is work. The man took a grain of mustard seed and sowed it in his field. Now he expected some returns, or he would not have sown it, but there is nothing in the parable that indicates any returns in this life, then it must be placed further on. The mustard seed was perhaps the smallest of all seeds, with which the Jews were familiar. The seed sowing began in the smallest way possible, just one little seed to start with. In Luke viii. 11, we learn that the seed is the Word of God. Then it was the Word of God that the man sowed. The Word of the kingdom began to be spoken in a very small way indeed, Heb. ii. 3, "Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." Now we have the order of the sowing; first by the Lord, then confirmed unto us by them that heard him. In reality this covers the whole ground. Then the Lord was sowing the seed, when he uttered these parables, and it is still being sown, and will be until the Lord comes in his glory. No earthly kingdom had ever been conceived by human wisdom with such a small beginning of available material; and yet, so far distant, that the Jews could not possibly grasp the wisdom and greatness of God, in the far reaching plan of the kingdom of heaven; and many there are today, coupled with the experience of 1800 years, who can see only an earthly concern, on the plane of the flesh, that they ignorantly call the kingdom. Such can never see the true realities, that the wisdom of God has in store for those who love him. Thus we find the Word of the kingdom in the little mustard seed not yet fully developed, for the work is still going on by which he will complete the last call or mercy; the final message, that will close the scene forever in this world. The last seed will then have been sown; and then we can see the greatest tree among herbs looming up, and expanding itself as by magic. Even the birds of the air did not lodge in its branches, until it became a tree. Some would do well to learn a lesson from the little birds, for then they would not be falling into the grievous error of mistaking the church for the kingdom, as one comparison reaches its climax in the full grown tree. Even the law of nature teaches us, that the seed is not the tree, but that which produces the tree. It is readily seen then, that the seed sown is not the kingdom, but the preparatory means, through which the kingdom is produced. Then the returns for past labor, is an inheritance in the kingdom of God on the plane of the Spirit. This is the reason why the returns did not come in this world, it is placed on the plane of the Spirit, for Paul said in 1 Cor. xv. 50, that "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." Then let us wait patiently for the returns, for the parabolic seed sowing antedates the fruitage. The tree is the completed and perfected development of the little mustard seed; and precisely on the same principle, is the kingdom of heaven, the completed and perfected development of the Word of the kingdom. It is the crowning glory of the plan and purpose of God; which can only reach its perfect state when the tree is laden with the golden fruits of heaven's own choice. Matt. xiii. 43, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father."

Now, I will say in regard to the remaining parables of this chapter; I do not think an explanation necessary, as they are very easily explained on the ground of general principles.

Your brother in Christ,

F. C. MYERS.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

THE RECOMPENCE. LUKE XIV. 14.

Who is to be recompensed, or receive the gift of God? Jesus was rebuking the Pharisees for they were seeking honors in this life, and he said unto them, whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. This rebuke is not only to the Pharisees, but to all that strive to receive honors in this life only. Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all things shall be added; do all things for the glory of God. If our work is among the humble and lowly work without thinking of recompense. If it is work for the Master, do it gladly, for he will reward us according to our righteousness. Love your enemies and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again, and your reward shall be great. The Disciples said unto Jesus, We have forsaken all, and followed thee, what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, Verily, I say unto you, that ye which have followed me; in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel, and every one that forsaketh all things, for my namesake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit eternal life. The promise of a recompense is all through the Word. There is the promise of a great gift to all who will keep the commands of God. I will recompense them according to their deeds. Great in council and mighty in work, for thine eyes are open upon the ways of the sons of men to give every one according to their ways. The Lord recompense thy work and a full reward be given thee. When will the followers of Jesus, his saints, be recompensed? Luke xiv. 14, "And thou shalt be blessed for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just, for the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and live, and they that hear shall live, those that are asleep in Jesus will hear, and will answer and awake unto the resurrection of life everlasting, for this is the recompense, the gift of God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye appear with him in glory. Blessed and holy are they that have part in the first resurrection, for they shall sing the new song, thou hast redeemed us unto our God by thy blood, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth, and we shall see his face, and be like him. Brothers and sisters, let us live only for the glory of God, and receive the recompense of the saints.

"I WILL NOT FAIL THEE NOR FORSAKE THEE." JOSHUA i. 5.

"As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee nor forsake thee." There are many promises such as this that God will care for his people, and not forsake them. Psalm xxxiv. 7. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." Deut. iv. 31. "For the Lord thy God is a merciful God, he will not forsake thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them." The Lord is true and faithful, he will not forsake those who put their trust in him, neither will he forget the covenant made with their fathers, and it is through this covenant that all families of the earth are to be blest. Oh, that every one could understand what the fulfilment of this covenant means to us, and what great blessings are in store for those who are adopted into the family of Abraham. Let us all who understand these blessed promises strive to live near to God. He says to those who trust in him, Deut. xxxi. 6, "Be strong and of good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them, for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee, he will not fail thee nor forsake thee. Psalm xxxvii. 19. They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied." What a promise from one who always fulfil all that he has spoken; he has not promised riches nor honor in this life, but says in Heb. xiii. 5, "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have, for he hath said I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." But he has made conditions; we are not to forsake the worship of him who sits on the throne, he counts it evil to forsake him. Jer. ii. 13. For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters; and have hewn them out cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water." The disciples left all to follow Christ. And it is required of every one not to let the things of this life come in the way of our service to God. Luke xiv. 33. So likewise whosoever he be of you that forsake not all that he hath he cannot be my disciple." We see that the followers of Christ are required to make sacrifices. And then they may claim the many promises of being cared for by the heavenly Father. Psalm xxxvii. 28. For the Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever. Psalm xxxvii. 25. The psalmist David says, "I have been young and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

Though troubles assail and dangers affright,
Tho' friends should all fail, and foes all unite;
Yet one thing secures us whatever betide,
The promise assures us the Lord will provide.

HOLD FAST THAT WHICH THOU HAST. REV. iii. 11.

"Behold I come quickly, hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." These are some of the words of Jesus to his servant John to write to the church at Philadelphia. They come down to us today with full force. Hold fast, that no man take thy crown, the crown of life that our Lord Jesus Christ has promised to those that hold fast, that overcome, that endure to the end. Let us notice other words of Jesus. These words spake Jesus and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, the hour has come, glorify thy Son that thy Son also may glorify thee. And in the morning rising up a great while before day he went out and departed into a solitary place and there prayed. He prayed for those that he was sending forth to preach the glad tidings of salvation, the gospel of the kingdom of God, that they might hold fast. He prayed for Peter because Satan desired him. He prayed for those that would believe on him through the teachings of the apostles, that they might overcome, that they might hold fast that which they had. They should be made partakers of Christ, if they hold the beginning of their confidence steadfast to the end. We have believed, let us hold fast that no man take our crown. Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession, let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. He that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne. Hold fast that which thou hast. Brethren and sisters, let us all strive to hold fast.

A Bible on the Chair.

You have all heard how the Fijians were raised in the scale of social life after Christianity had been introduced among them. A missionary told me that this came under his observation in the following way: A ship having been wrecked off one of the islands of Fiji, a boat's crew that had got ashore from the wreck were in the greatest possible terror lest they should be devoured by the Fijians. On reaching land they dispersed in different directions. Two of them found a cottage and crept into it, and as they lay there wondering what would become of them, one suddenly called out to his companion, "All right, Jack; there is a Bible on this chair; no fear now!

What must have been the effect produced upon that man's mind! He now felt that the people of that cottage being Christians, he and his companion were safe, while under other conditions they would probably have become a meal for the first Fijians who made their appearance.—Lord Shaftesbury.

OUR offer of two papers for the price of one has been extended through the month of December. Send in renewals and take the benefit of the offer made.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

WE wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

WE are short of figures to make changes in mail list. As soon as we get them we will make corrections.

THE article in this issue entitled "The Two Thrones," will be finished in three issues. It is sent us by Bro. J. H. McClary, who states that it was written by a brother in Texas some years ago and published, but the name of the writer is lost, and he cannot give it.

IN North Africa the French are having trouble in Morocco. By a treaty between England and France signed last year, France is left free to do as she wills in that part of Africa. The Sultan of Morocco objects, and will have to be conquered, which will be considerable of a job, as the country is without roads, and armies can operate but slowly.

IT is reported that the Japanese have taken some more forts about Port Arthur. The Russian general sent a proposal to surrender the place, the conditions being that the remaining ships and the troops be allowed to return to Russia. The Japanese refused this. Later reports are that the Russians have asked for a respite to enable them to remove their wounded. It is the impression that before many days the fortress must fall.

As the short years of time for us in this world pass, we count them one by one, and keep their number as our fathers before us have done. New Years—new cycles come to us, and go past. We must realize that for us each one is but a time of preparation for that great New Year when the God of heaven shall set up his kingdom that shall never be destroyed. As these definite periods of time pass we find that each succeeding one is much like its predecessor. To be sure there is variety, for knowledge is not standing still, new associations come about us, evil grows, grief and joy are mixed in varying degree, and sorrow is tempered by the blessings that the Father bestows. Let us as the old year dies and the New Year of 1905 comes, make sure that nothing we wish to do in the last year of our life is left out of our calculation. It may not be your last year, but it is quite likely to be. So let us each be watching and with earnest, anxious hearts, do our very utmost—make our last struggle—to so finish our work that the Master will give his approval, and can say, Well done, you have done all you could.

A Child's Paper.

How can we have a Child's Paper?

Sister Wince has stated how much we need it, but it would be hard to fully express the need in words.

A Child's Paper for the home and Sunday school, that will instruct in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. One that gives no uncertain sound.

Who can suggest a plan, by which we may have a Child's Paper. Books are good, and we need books, but let us have a Child's Paper first. Who will devise the plan?

"Orders."

Good order, or methodical arrangement, is the foundation of all things pertaining to human life. Without it, all is confusion. God is not the Author of confusion, but of order.

I want to speak in this paper about "orders" of the "clergy." At the present day the clergy constitute a class of men who have been set apart for ministering in holy things, and they are regarded as being more holy than the "laity" so-called. In the organization of which the writer was formerly a member, the Evangelical Association, there are the following orders or grades of the ministry: 1. Preachers on probation. 2. Deacons. 3. Elders. 4. Presiding Elders. 5. Bishops. The first class, as the name indicates, are on trial, and the period of their probation extends over two years. Their duty is to preach and exhort. The deacons are made by the imposition of hands by the Bishop and the Presiding Elder. In addition to preaching, they may administer baptism and the Lord's Supper, and also solemnize marriages. After two year's service they are consecrated as Elders by a second laying on of hands by the above mentioned officers. The Elder is considered as being "in full standing with the ministry." The Presiding Elder has the supervision of a "district" usually consisting of from ten to fourteen "charges." He presides at the quarterly conferences which are held on each charge once every three months. The Bishop has the supervision of the whole "church," and when there are more Bishops than one they apportion the church among themselves according to their combined best judgment. The Bishop travels almost all the time, and preaches, presides at the annual and quadrennial conferences, "dedicates" churches, etc. The Elder is such for life, or until disqualified by immorality. The Presiding Elder is elected for a term of four years, but when there are more districts than one in a conference, he is eligible for re-election, and is then changed to an adjoining district. The Bishop also is elected for four years, with the possibility of re-election every four years as long as qualified. This arrangement was, for the most part, copied from the Discipline of the M. E. Church.

When a man is promoted from his probation to the office of a deacon it is said, "He has received deacon's orders," and similarly when he is made an elder. Some years ago I asked a Presiding Elder as to the authority or right of a church to "ordain" a man a deacon, and then in two years the same man as an elder, to which the reply was made that "there were deacons and elders in the early Church." When I replied that they were servants in the local congregation, and not prelates with jurisdiction over a number of congregations, he said he would write to the Bishop for information; but up to date I have not learned what that information was.

The Bible knows nothing of a "clergy" as distinct from the "laity" nor of the "orders of the ministry" as they exist in the Methodist and other churches. In the early Church there were elders and deacons who were servants of the congregations of which they were members. Their jurisdiction or authority did not extend beyond those bounds. "Every church" had its elders. There were elders at Jerusalem (Acts 11:30; 21:17, 18), at Ephesus (Acts 20:17), in the churches in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia (1 Pet. 1:1; 5:1), at Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe (Acts 14: 22, 28), and "in every city" in Crete where there was a church. (Titus 1:5). From these Scriptures it will be seen that there were more elders than one in each church. There were at least two, and from Acts 20:30, 37 it is evident that there were more than that number in the church at Ephesus. The epistle to the Philippians was addressed to the saints with "the bishops and deacons." Phil. 1:1. Thus there were at least two bishops, besides deacons, in the church at Philippi.

By close attention to the Scriptures it will be seen that in the apostolic Church the elder and bishop were identical. Paul addressed the elders of the church at Ephesus and told them the holy Spirit had made them overseers (episkopoi) over the flock to feed the Church of God. Acts 20:28. This Greek term is translated "bishop" by the R. V. and Luther. The same fact appears from Titus i. 5-7. After commanding Titus to ordain elders in every city, the apostle describes the qualities which must enter into the moral and spiritual equipment of the elder, and says "For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God." From which it is clear that the elder and the bishop are the same.

"The office of a bishop" (episkopee) is a "good work" and desirable. 1 Tim. iii. 1. It is good because it involves the oversight and care of the Church of God. Acts xx. 28; 1 Tim. iii. 5; 1 Pet. v. 2. The word bishop is a corruption of the Greek episkopos, from epi, upon or over; and skopeo, to see or view.

The elders or bishops are charged to "feed (poimanein, shepherd, tend) the flock. They are the "pastors (poimenas) and teachers" of which the apostle wrote Eph. iv. 11. That this is true is evident from 1 Peter v. 1-4, where Peter "exhorts" the elders to feed the flock, and then says that "when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive the crown of glory that fadeth not away." Christ is the Chief Shepherd, the elders are shepherds in the flock under him—undershepherds. Teaching is one of the functions of these "pastors." Aptness to teach is one of the qualifications called for. 1 Tim. iii. 2. He is to "hold fast the faithful Word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort, and to convince the gainsayers." Titus i. 9. This exhortation and conviction pertains to those in the flock. In thus fulfilling his charge, the elder is to employ "sound doctrine." This doctrine must be derived from the proper source of doctrine—the divinely inspired Scriptures which are "profitable for doctrine," etc. 2 Tim. iii. 16. He is to give them meat in due season: first the sincere milk of the Word, and then the strong meat. Exhortation is for encouragement in the service of God and faithfulness to duty. The edification or building up of the body of Christ is the object in view. Another important, though perhaps not so pleasant, duty devolving upon the elder is to convince or convict the gainsayers. These gainsayers may contradict either the doctrine or the practice of the Church. The elder is the conservator of order in the Church. He is to guard and defend the teaching of the Church against false doctrine. To this end he must "take heed," not only to himself, but also to the flock to see that they are not led away from the pasture provided by the Chief Shepherd.

To do his work well he must be acquainted with all the members of the flock, and with their mental and moral condition. He is the person to rule (proistemi, preside over, govern) the affairs of the Church. 1 Timothy v. 17; Rom. xii. 8; 1 Thes. v. 12. He has charge of the "assemblies" of the Church (Heb. x. 25; James ii. 2), and should see that they are regularly held and properly conducted. He should not forget "the communion of the body of Christ" in the breaking of bread and participation in the cup of blessing. 1 Cor. x. 16. The "coming together" of the Church to eat (1 Cor. xi. 17, 18, 20, 33, 34) and exhortation (Heb. x. 25) is not to be neglected, for separation from the brotherhood tends to the loss of the Spirit and then to sensuality. Jude 19. This coming together is to be attended to, not merely once a year, or once a month, but often, and on "the first day of the week," according to the practice of the apostolic Church. Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2.

The qualifications of the elder are that he shall be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children, not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker (not ready to wound), not greedy of base gain, a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding fast the faithful Word, vigilant, orderly, of good behavior, patient, not a brawler, not covetous, one that ruleth well his own house, not a novice (or recently come to the faith), of good report of them that are without (Titus i. 1-9; 1 Tim. iii. 1-7), and lastly, to sum up, the elder is to be an "ensample" to the flock. 1 Peter v. 3. Should not a man tremble who assumes the oversight of the Church of the living God. The flock of God has been committed to his trust. He is to feed the sheep with wholesome food, watch over and carry the tender ones and the weak, lead back to right paths those who have gone astray, and drive off the wolf who seeks to destroy the flock. Here is food for reflection and cause for humiliation before God. If he rightly apprehends the responsibility of his position he cannot be lifted up with vanity over the "honor" that has been placed upon him. He watches for the souls entrusted to his care, as one who must give an account to God. Heb. xiii. 7, 17.

He is the elder, not merely because the Church has selected him for that position, but because the holy Spirit has ordered that there should be such overseers in the body of Christ. Acts xx. 28. Though Paul and Barnabas might ordain (cheirotoneo, elect by stretching out the hand) elders in every church (Acts xiv. 23), and Titus might ordain (kathistemi, set or place) elder in every city (Titus i. 5), these men held their positions primarily because the holy Spirit had ordered the appointment of such officers in the Church.

The elder is responsible, in the first place, to God, but also to the Church. If he does not live according to the rule laid down to govern him, either in doctrine or in practice, an "accusation" is to be brought against him, but there must be two or three witnesses to the crime with which he is charged. 1 Tim. v. 19. An heretical person, one who causes divisions. Rom. xvi: 17, can not be retained in the Church, especially in a position of trust like the eldership, but is to be avoided, and after a first and second admonition, rejected. Titus iii: 10. But this admonition to an offending elder be full of the same solicitude which he is required to show for the welfare of the flock. To "gain thy brother" is the object of the admonition, Matth. xviii: 15-17, but when he refuses to hear the Church, silence and forbearance cease to be virtues, and as a member afflicted with an incurable, festering disease whose retention not only endangers but ultimately will destroy the body, painful though it be, amputation is the only remedy left. He has, by his obstinacy, separated himself from the body of Christ.

The Church also owes a duty to the elders. Paul besought the brethren of the Church at Thessalonica to "know them which labor among you and are presiding over you, and admonish you, and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake." 1. Thess. v. 12, 13. The Hebrew brethren were admonished to "remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of the Lord; whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation." Heb. xiii. 7. They were also exhorted to obey and submit themselves to them, that they may give an account with joy and not with grief. V. 17. And Paul further advised Timothy to "let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in word and doctrine." 1 Tim. v. 17.

What this "honor" is, is not definitely stated, but it appears from V. 18 that those who labored in word and doctrine received some pecuniary remuneration for their services. From all these passages it is evident that the Church is required to show its appreciation of the labors thus faithfully performed. Their character commends them to the esteem, and their work to the love of the brethren and sisters.

If the "elders in every church" thus labor, and their efforts are properly honored and appreciated, "every church" will be in a healthy and prosperous condition, and thus the entire Church of God will grow unto an holy temple in the Lord, an habitation of God through the Spirit. Eph. ii. 21, 22.

We will consider the deacons in another paper.

What Can I Do?

What can I do? asked the lone, gray mountain peak. I have not one inch of soil on all these barren solitudes. None of the beauty of the valley is mine. No flower or shrub or tree will grow on all my highland wastes. The songs of birds, of merry children never cheer me. I see only the flight of the carnivorous eagle as it soars about my brow. No foliage will bloom here; no harvests will ripen. I am useless and worthless and helpless. In all the great world of prosperity I stand alone and have no share, either in its beauty or glory. Would that some earthquake might rend me in pieces, then out of my ruins, may be God would cause verdure and gladness to spring. Thus bemoaning its unhappy lot the great mountain fretted itself to sleep. And in its slumber it saw a vision. It saw great slopes wrapped in white winding sheets of snow. The ravines and gulches were filled fathoms deep where the swift winds had swept the white spray from the face of the crags. It saw the sun shine upon the gray waste; and far down among the fallen rocks the cascades leaped. Merry and happy the streamlets seemed as they merged their laughing forces and sent the shouts of their waterfalls among the everlasting hills. The waters were turned into irrigating sluices and borne away among the hills. Wherever they came green fields of alfalfa grew, the wheat-fields were golden and the corn rustled in the wind. The orchards blushed with fruitfulness. Men were prosperous and homes were happy. Factories sprang up and rang with industry and workmen rejoiced in wages. When the beasts of the field were thirsty the waters supplied their want. When fires broke out in the city, the melted snow-banks drowned them. When the overland trains were to want it was here their thirst was slacked. When winter came in the valley the frozen snow-water gave them ice, and to banquet hall and sick chamber there came pleasant refreshment and comfort. The strangers who passed through the valley wondered at its beauty and said, Whence is all this charm of village, city and field? And men pointed to the aqueducts on the hill and to great slopes of snow far away. It was then that the great mountain opened its eyes and saw that the glory of the valley was its own. And now the voices that are sometimes heard as the storms break over the heights, are not voices of murmuring, but the thunderpeals of thanksgiving. We fulfill our mission best by faithfully doing our duty in the field where God has placed us and not by repining at the prosperity of others.—United Presbyterian.

Notice the Pleasant Things.

If we were only as prompt to recognize the really pleasant and good things that can be found in the world around us, and which sometimes seem to be relics of a better nature that has survived the fall, as we are to detect and exaggerate the little, selfish, and unworthy things we find, how much more should we illustrate the spirit of Christ, and how much brighter the same world would be for ourselves and others. But, probably as the result of the original sin that is still in us, we are very slow to do this thing, in fact it is about the last thing we do—if we do it at all.

Our neighbor may be a firm friend of the poor and the defenceless; he may prove his benevolence by innumerable kindly and liberal acts; he may be exemplary in private and in social life: yet all these qualities go for nothing, because we look at him through a microscope of a double-million magnifying power, with which we are able to detect a few flaws that we do not like. This hypocritical spirit is not that of our Lord, and is not the one that is to make the world brighter or better. This is to be done by love—the love that sympathizes with all forms of goodness, that is quick to recognize every kindly act, and that does not grudge its praise while it is sparing of its blame.—Evangelist.

Forget It.

On my way to one of the ferries, I passed two little girls about eight years of age.

They were evidently confidential friends, and one, with an indignant look on her face, was telling the other of some unkind word spoken by a little playmate.

"Oh, well," returned her companion calmly and soothingly, "don't think of it; forget it."

The words rang in my ears all through the hours of the day, and since then have not been absent from my memory.

Did not the little one give good advice? How often we, in our intercourse with a dear friend, take offence at a hasty word, and in our indignation brood over it until our hearts are filled with bitterness, and the friendship of years, it may be, ruthlessly destroyed, the only remembrance of our friend being the hasty word. Our dignity has been insulted, and we have no desire to forget it.

I remember hearing a lady reprove her little sister for some hasty word spoken to a playmate.

"O sister," answered the child, "did she tell you that?" and then burst out with a grieved expression, "If she had only remembered the many kind words spoken that day, and not thought so much of that one word!"

"A good test of the divine and permanent character of a religion is its effect upon individuality. Of all the religions in the world, which seems to produce the finest and strongest type of manhood and womanhood? In the light of historical facts, there can be but one answer—Christianity. This test alone would be sufficient to establish its superiority to all other religions."

Politeness.

Real politeness is something very different from bowing, and scraping, and chattering, and complimenting. Real politeness must have honesty, kindness, gentleness, self-denial and sympathy as its foundation. The man who approaches you with a smile made to order, and a simper borrowed from some empty headed dandy, will bear watching, and doubtless make a very good stranger. The woman whose politeness consists in a borrowed giggle and a few honeyed phrases spoken in an artificial tone, is not truly polite. An honest heart, love that worketh no ill to its neighbor, a tenderness that bears one another's burdens, and so fulfills the law of Christ, a watchful tact that enables one to do the right things at the right time, and is careful of the feelings of the weakest and the poorest; these show that a person understands something of true politeness.

The Scripture lays the foundation for true politeness when it admonishes us to "Honor all men," "be pitiful, be courteous," and if we will ponder these precepts we shall learn the secret of true politeness. The Apostle Paul was a true gentleman, and the Saviour of sinners was the gentlest and noblest of all. To be Christ-like is to be really polite, not in the sense of hollow-hearted pretense and complimentary affectation, but in tender and honest kindliness which helps the weak; which makes the lonely feel at home; which smooths the rough places over which weary feet must pass, and which makes life brighter and better by our presence, our words and our deeds.—H. L. Hastings.

With the Dying Year.

Old year, farewell,
Sadly I ring for thee
A parting knell;
I thought to fill thy fleeting days with sweetness;
And lo! they mock me with their incompleteness.

I thought some so ds
Of helpfulness to sow;
Some noble deeds
To trace upon thy page whilst thou didst wait;
Thy book is closed: alas! it is too late.

I thought to cheer
So many waiting ones:
Alas! I hear
Upon the midnight air their piteous moan:
"We ask'd for bread: thou gavest us a stone."

I thought to share
My brother's crushing load:
To help him bear
His heavy burden with love's mystic spell;
Alas! I lingered, and my brother fell.

So, day by day,
The deeds I would have done
I put away,
A more convenient season to await;
Too late, alas! it is too late.

Father, forgive,
And through the coming year
Help me to live
Through every [redacted] day, so close to thee,
That thou may'st own and bless my ministry.

The Two Thrones.

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.—Rev. iii: 21.

The topic that we have selected for our talk this morning is, "The Two Thrones"—that is, The Throne of the Father, The Throne of Christ.

People in reading the Scriptures, sometimes fail to recognize the real distinction that exists between the Throne of God and the Throne of Christ. It is generally supposed the position which the Lord Jesus now occupies on the throne of the Father, is final, so far as his exaltation is concerned; and yet, on the other hand, the Scriptures very plainly teach that Christ is but a temporary occupant of that exalted position and that someday, in the near future, he will vacate or leave the throne of his Father, and reign on his own throne.

THE THRONE OF GOD.

All persons will agree as to what is meant by "The Throne of the Father." Says the Psalmist, "The Lord reigneth; let the people rejoice; let the multitude of isles be glad thereof. Clouds and darkness are round about him: righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne."—Psa. xcvii: 1, 2. The prophet Isaiah locates the throne when he declares: "Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool."—Isa. lxvi: 1. It is in heaven that the Father dwells. There he receives the homage of his holy ones, crying, "Alleluia! Salvation and glory, and honor, and power unto the Lord our God." It is from heaven that the laws go forth to regulate the universe. Thence come the messengers of God to pour forth the vials of wrath upon earth; or with glorious promises and messages of peace and good will to man. It is to heaven that Christ has gone, accepting the invitation of the Father: "Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool."—Psa. cx: 1.

THE POSITION OF CHRIST ON THE FATHER'S THRONE NOT ETERNAL.

It will be noticed from our text, and from the Scripture last quoted, that Christ is now a joint occupant with the Father of this heavenly throne. Let us for a moment examine the testimony on this subject. We would first direct your attention to the 8th chapter of Hebrews, where the apostle sums up a series of statements previously made, with this conclusion, commencing at the first verse and reading to the second inclusive:

"Now of the things which we have spoken, this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not man."

It appears from this testimony that Jesus Christ has been exalted in the heavens to a position of thronership with the Father; and on that throne he occupies the position of a great High Priest. Hence it is declared, in Heb. iv; 14, 15, 16:

"Seeing, then, that we have a great high priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

You will discover from this that Jesus Christ is represented as occupying a position in the heavens as our High Priest. He is within the Holy of Holies in this heavenly temple or tabernacle, where none but the High Priest is allowed to enter; and it is distinctly declared that where he now is no one can enter, as we find from Jesus' own words as recorded in John xiii: 33.

"Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye can not come, so now I say to you."

What did he say to the Jews? Turn to John vii: 33, 34, and we find the answer:

"Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while I am with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me and shall not find me: and where I am thither ye cannot come."

So it will be seen that in order for Christ to be with his people it is absolutely necessary for him to leave the Heavenly Throne and return to earth, for they cannot go to him. But he says in John xiv: 1, 2, 3, in speaking of this matter:

"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house (government or kingdom) are many mansions (or habitations): if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Here, then, you discover that Christ has been exalted to the right hand of the Father, having gone as a nobleman into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return; and when he does return, having received the kingdom—that is, the "Father's house," the "many mansions," or government of the Lord—he will then assume an entirely new position in relation to the world.

This position you will find foreshadowed in a declaration in the 110th Psalm, 1st and 2d verses:

"The Lord saith unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool. The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies."

That this prophecy applies to Jesus Christ is evident from the words of Peter in his great sermon on the day of Pentecost, when, in speaking of Jesus, he quotes these words saying: "Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear. For David is not ascended into the heaven: but he saith himself, The Lord saith unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool."—Acts ii: 33, 34, 35.

Now if you will turn to Hebrews x: 12, 13, you will find that Jesus Christ hath been exalted to the right hand of the Father, and is to remain there until his enemies are made his footstool. The word "until" limits the time of occupancy of the throne of the Father in heaven, and when he leaves the right hand of the Father, the "until" will have ended, and the time will have come for him to occupy his own throne.

From the testimony of these Scriptures it is, therefore, clearly evident that Jesus Christ our Lord is only occupying the throne of the Father for a specific time, and for a specific purpose during which time the Gentiles are invited to a copartnership with him, as heirs in all the power and glory of his throne and kingdom.

CHRIST TO OCCUPY HIS OWN THRONE AT HIS SECOND COMING.

But I hear you say, "If the Lord Jesus is not to sit eternally at the Father's right hand; if he is to leave that seat of glory in the heavens, where will he find a throne worthy the exchange? and when will he take his power and reign?" There is no doctrine in the Scriptures more clearly defined, or positively taught, than that the Lord Jesus is coming again to earth; and that when he does return, he will sit on his own throne, and exercise justice and judgment on the earth.

Please turn with me to the 25th chapter of Matthew, and read, commencing at the 31st verse, and we shall learn when he is to take the throne of his glory:

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left. Then shall he say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Other Scriptures might be introduced, but this is sufficient to prove that Jesus will take his throne of glory at his second coming.

THE THRONE OF CHRIST IS THE THRONE OF DAVID RESTORED.

"Well," says one, "that is very plain, but where do the Scriptures represent him as having a throne connected with this earth?" In order to answer this question, I will ask you to go back with me and read a covenant made by God with David, which will show in the sequel that the throne promised to Christ is none other than the one promised to David his father; and that he is to reign over the house of Jacob forever; and that his throne and kingdom will be on this earth. That is the reason why he is to return to earth. He comes as the heir of promise, through whom all the blessings of David are to be fulfilled in that day when our earth shall be filled with the knowledge of God; and when all evil shall give way to our glorious Lord, when he shall come forth in his majesty, and sway the sceptre of universal empire, and all the world be bathed with the beauty of heaven, as in the day "when the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy."

THE COVENANT WITH DAVID.

This covenant we find recorded in 2 Samuel vii., commencing at the 12th verse. God says to David, through the prophet Nathan:

"And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my mercy shall not depart away from him as I took it from Saul whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee: thy kingdom shall be established forever."

Now notice how David understood this promise:

"Then went king David in, and sat before the Lord, and said, Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O Lord God; but thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come * * * And what nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things and terrible, for thy land, before thy people, which thou redeemest to thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods? For thou has confirmed to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee forever: and thou, Lord, art become their God, and now, O Lord God, the word which thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, establish it forever, and do as thou hast said. * * * Therefore, now, let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue forever before thee: for thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it: and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever."

Here, then, we discover that the prophetic spirit upon David, in responding to the promise and covenant, looked forward to that time when the covenant pertaining to his throne and kingdom would be fulfilled.

Science analyzes a flower under the microscope; tells of its petals, stamen, ovules, calyx, anthers, and pollen. The bee merely sucks the honey out of it. He cannot tell you the names of its parts, but he knows that it is sweet and satisfies its longings. Who by thinking can find out God? But the humblest and most ignorant soul, by faith, can find the honey in the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley.—Dr. Torrey.

"It is harder to make one's practice ideal than it is to make one's ideal practical. There is a distinction here with a real difference. One can bend his ideal down to his life—to the practical plane of it—easier than he can lift his life up to his ideal. But that is far from saying that it is not a good thing to bring the ideal down to and in vitalizing touch with the daily life."

The Berean Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

"Enter ye in at the strait gate, because strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. vii, 14. In Luke xiii. 23 this question is asked, "Lord, are there few saved, and he said, strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able." Whatever God's purpose may be in regard to the number saved, it can in no way hinder our salvation. The number rests with God, and the fewer there are the more necessary it will be for us to strive to be one of that number. The way is a difficult one, only by following in the footsteps of Jesus can we walk in so narrow a way. He is our leader and but for him no way would have been opened by which we could gain immortal life. Through severe trials he proved his obedience to his Father's will. "He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin, and for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. xii. 2-3.

In walking the narrow way we must not only believe in Christ but follow him and obey his voice. He says, "My sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow me." There is no middle road, we must either walk in the narrow or on the broad way that leadeth to destruction. We cannot keep both the favor of God and the world, for the friendship of the world is enmity against God. Let us seek the honor that cometh from God only and follow the Captain of our salvation. Many are called but few are chosen. Only the overcomers, the "little flock" who overcome the world, will be granted an entrance into that strait gate, into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord. Let us not forget the prize the crown of life, which fadeth not away. The honor and glory of sharing with Christ his exalted position at the end of the race. "For eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for those that love him." He who has taught us the way of life will give us strength and grace for each step of the journey.

ADA A. DREW.

I was requested to write for the Berean column this month and I will take the words Paul wrote to the Corinthian brothers, 1 Cor. xv. 58, "Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Be ye steadfast and unmovable in what? We must be steadfast in our faith and belief. As young members we are more liable to be led astray by what are mere trifles. Christ is steadfast, he is the same every day and we should take him as an example. We may start out all right but in time lack firmness, but we are not made partakers of Christ if we do not hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. Hebrews iii. 14, and if we hold this confidence unto the end, we can lift up our heads and shall not fear. Let us live our lives in usefulness and be victorious over all temptation, and whatever we do in word, or deed, do all in the name of the Lord. "The wages of sin is death," and Jeremiah says, every one shall die for his own sins. But what is promised to the righteous? Christ says, he that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life. And again he says, I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. Let us keep these promises before us and gain them.

Your sister in Christ,
EDNA ANDERSON.

Christmas Greeting to all Bereans:

As the old year draws to a close it brings with it the remembrance of the greatest event of all ages—Christ's birthday. It is our entire and only hope. As we contemplate the wonderful life of Christ it should be an inspiration to us and give us new courage for this coming year to strive for better things and guard our actions more carefully, for we know that our trials are not to be compared with his and he overcame and now promises to be our Helper in time of trouble. Doubtless, we have not been as faithful to our Berean pledge as we should have been; our short comings have not been intentional but of neglect. So as the Old Year dies let all of our unfaithfulness be put away and as the New Year appears let us drink anew of the Spirit of Christ and strive harder than ever to continue strong in the faith and as Paul exhorts Timothy to faithfulness, "Be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity; for in so doing thou shalt save thyself and them that hear thee." So it is evident that our labor and self denial will not be in vain.

AMY WEAVER.

Report of Labor.

We left Omaha Nov. 5th for Eagle Grove, Iowa, arrived there a little afternoon, commenced a series of meetings the same evening, but owing to some sickness and another meeting in progress our attendance was not large, yet at times we had a good attendance. Bro. O. J. Allard came up from Fort Dodge Sunday morning and helped us with his genial presence and good singing. Sister N. Hudley of the same place, State Sunday school superintendent also cheered us by her presence and gave the Sunday school some valuable help. We remained until the 20th, spoke 20 times, baptized 3, viz. Mrs. Loretto Wyman, Mrs. Eva Van-Natley and Miss Hilda Hegfond, whom we now introduce to the household of faith. We shall long remember our visit to Eagle Grove. We made our home with Bro. and Sister J. P. Allard and they certainly made it seem like home. Sister Rhoda Waddell, the Sunday school superintendent, possesses a great deal of talent, and the school is prospering under her management. We met here Bro. and Sister Kinnon and had several splendid visits with them, talking of our childhood days. On Nov. 21st we reluctantly took our departure for Lake Mills, where we spoke 17 times. We had a very pleasant home with Sister Lloyd and daughter. Our visits during the day with Bro. and Sister Porter, Susie Todd and others was pleasant and encouraging, but the time came when we had to leave them, and while none obeyed, the brethren were encouraged to press on and some very near to the point of obedience. On our way to Irving we stopped off at Gifford where our father lives, and spoke in the evening in the Methodist church to a large congregation of old neighbors and friends. We arrived in Irving on the 6th of Dec. Bro. Eldred Marsh joined us at Marshalltown and assisted us in the meeting. He had prepared the way by opening the church that had been closed for several years and organized a Sunday school and has arranged to speak for them once a month. Bro. Marsh is a young man just beginning and is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed and we hope he will receive encouragement from the brethren at Irving. We made our home with Bro. and Sister F. L. Marsh, and their true hospitality will long be remembered. We also enjoyed a good visit with Bro. and Sister Chas Adams, also F. V. Marsh and wife and others. None responded to the call here but a number are very near the point. Bro. Allard was with us the first Sunday, then went away on business and returned and was with us over the second Sunday. To the satisfaction of all he gave us a splendid talk on home life. Sister Elva Chapin of Clarksville came down on the last Sunday and was such a help with her playing and singing. We left Irving Monday, Dec. 19th, and commenced a meeting four miles northwest of Marshalltown the same evening. But owing to the Sunday school at this place making elaborate preparations for Christmas exercises our attendance was not as large as it would have been on Thursday evening. However we had a splendid attendance and intense interest was manifested while we discoursed on the things concerning the kingdom, it being the first time they had ever heard a ring of the truth. It was very plain from the expression on the faces of several there never would be a place in their hearts any longer for the traditions of men that are so contrary to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Some seemed amazed to think they had never understood such plain simple truths. We expect to return here January 2, and continue the meeting. We have collected money as follows: Eagle Grove, $2.77; Lake Mills, $7.05; Irving $22.00; total $32.42; expense, $17.12. This shows our meetings are $15.30 ahead of expense not counting our salary. May the Lord bless the seed sown and give the increase.

ALMUS ADAMS.

OUR offer of two papers for the price of one has been extended through the month of December. Send in renewals and take the benefit of the offer made.

Dear Brethren:

I send a few lines to the household of faith. In scanning my late RECTIFIER, of Dec. 7, I was much interested in reading Sister Roxana Wiuce's article in reference to a book for the children. I am glad to see some taking thought in this direction. She has expressed my mind so nearly that I feel like rejoicing to know that I am not alone on this subject, though like her I haven't any children by ties of blood relations, yet the children of God's children, I count as mine. Truly, they are all dear to me, and I am much interested in their welfare, and I am greatly burthened in mind when I see the dear children of our brethren and sisters going wild after the vain amusements of the world. Surely our people have forgotten that the Savior said to his disciples, Ye cannot serve God and mammon. If we have not the spirit or disposition of Christ our Book says we are none of his. Did we ever read of any of Christ's disciples, or any of his followers running after these worldly practices. Of course you will say no, no, I never did. Well, if it was wrong then, is it any the less wrong now? And yet as plain as this is shown by the Savior to be wrong, yet we find it creeping into both families and churches, and it is eating out the very vitality of both, and what is to blame for all this? Why, it is plain to see that the fault is with the parents, this is the starting point. Joshua said, Let others do as they may as for me and my house or family we will serve the Lord. Now, if all the professors of religion in our great enlightened country would stand as firm as did this dear old servant of the Lord, what a wonderful influence this would have on the non-professing world. But while I thus speak it is not our privilege to dictate as to what other churches should or should not do, but let us begin at home in our own church circles, here is the place for each and every one of us to try to work. Right in our homes, yes, if the fathers and mothers have no influence over their children, then I fear the salt has lost its savor, and wherewith shall it be salted? Read Matthew v. 13 and 14. Yes, we ought to be a light to the world, if we have the eyes of our understanding enlightened by the light of truth shining into our hearts, then let us not put it under a bushel and live in a community and not let our neighbors know what our faith is. Oh, I think we want more practical Christianity and less disputing over doctrines. If we cannot reason and talk together in the spirit of our Elder Brother we had better remain quiet, but I hope for better things of our people. Although I thus speak, then let us all while the old year is passing away resolve to welcome the new year in and try to live nearer the Christ life in our every day actions. Let us glorify Christ in our bodies and spirits which are his, if we live in the spirit, let us walk in the Spirit, and not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not, and as we have opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. Then let us all welcome the new year with joy and gladness, and go forth in the discharge of Christian duty, while we are spared to work in the Master's vineyard. I have selected few verses which are so much in keeping with my feelings that I would like to have them published in connection with this article. It feasts my soul to read it, and I hope it will be enjoyed by others who have tasted that the Lord is precious to their souls.

"My closet, my temple, my social retreat,
Its there with the Savior in concert I meet;
How many thy objects inviting me there.
To pour out myself in the order of prayer.

When shades of great darkness come over my heart,
And I fear that my God is about to depart;
I come to my closet and still find him there,
His hands filled with blessings in answer to prayer.

I bless the glad day when his grace I first felt,
His mercy hath warned me and pardoned my guilt;
I will visit my closet and never despair,
It is there my Redeemer first answered my prayer.

My Savior is found in all places below,
His mercy abounds and his grace overflows;
A temple, a closet, I find everywhere,
And Jesus is waiting to bless me in prayer.

Christian greeting to the household of faith.

The Times of the Gentiles. No. 8.

"Here is wisdom. He that hath understanding let him count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man, and his number is six hundred, three score and six." "O Lord revive thy work in the midst of years. In the midst of years make it known. In wrath remember mercy." "The fierce anger of the Lord shall not return until he have done it, and until he have performed the intents of his heart. In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly."

In our last paper while enumerating the events that occurred and the tribulations that befell the seed of the woman during this great red dragon beast's supremacy whose rule was during the "times of the Gentiles," we found and counted the number of the beast to be, the year of our Lord 666, which is the midst of the double measure of 7 times allotted to Jerusalem, for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." In this mystical number of the beast there is wisdom and understanding to be found for it is the beginning, ending and midst of the times, we find it is the middle year of the 7 times or 2520 years of Gentile times, and it is the ending of the first measure and number of 1260 years days, and the beginning of the double measure and number of time times and a half time. This number of the beast is a wonderful landmark to the Church of God as we trace her way through the wilderness in the labyrinthine paths of time.

By A. D. 666 "The woman arrayed in purple and scarlet color and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls" was firmly seated on the scarlet colored beast, the great red dragon who holds so many of the world powers under subjection during Gentile times. This woman was and is the Roman Catholic church, of which the Pope of Rome was and is the head of this apostate church, he is the man of sin, the son of perdition, and the power that he exercises over the world, was that of the scarlet colored beast full of names of blasphemy having 7 heads and 10 horns. He was the King of kings among the Gentiles. Emperors and kings were subject unto him, full of blasphemy, for he claimed to be the vice-gerent of the Son of God on the earth. Blasphemous was he when he claimed to be infallible.

Let us make this man of sin, the Pope of Rome and his position plain. Paul teaches us that the church of God is symbolized as a woman. Christ is not the woman but the head of the woman, the true church—just so does the Pope stand in relation to his church. He is the head of the woman clothed in purple and scarlet. He claims infallibility, and she must believe and teach it, whatever he commands her to do she must obey. "He that hath understanding let him count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man "and his number is six hundred three score and six." The Pope of Rome's number is 666 as we can prove by the triple mitre or crown he wears, for it has emblazoned thereon in jewelled letters "Vicarius filii Dei," "Vicegerent of the Son of God." Taking the numeral letters out of this title which the Latins used, and giving them their numerical value, we have the number 666.

Thus we have V five, I one, C one hundred, I one, U formerly same as V five, I one, L fifty, I one, I one, D five hundred, I one, which sums up the number of the beast and the number of a man, the great red dragon beast of the times of the Gentiles. Pagan and Papal Rome, a world power, with "A man" the Pope of Rome with his ecclesiastical and world power combined. And the dragon was wroth with the woman (the Church of God) and went to make war with the remnant of her seed which keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." What is the remnant of her seed? "The seed is the Word," "A seed shall serve him, it shall be accounted unto the Lord as a generation."....."This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." "Ye are a chosen generation, a peculiar people"....."Even when the number of seeds is filled in you." "Show me the image of a voice (the phonographic is this), and then I will declare to thee the things that thou hast labored to know." "When he cometh shall he find the faith on the earth?" Only with the elect remnant of seed of the Church of God who believe in the Word of God alone.

Another subdivision of 315 years elapsing brings us to 981 A. D.—Roman rule had darkened the world, apostasy was the rule, while superstition in every land. And yet there were a few and watchers who waited for and expected their Lord to come in A. D. 1000: keen disappointment was the result even as it was in the 40s.

Centuries rolled on and the midst of the double measure of times reaching to 1296 A. D. drew on apace—and what were the events of this period? What do the chronicles of history show for that century? In 1204 A. D. the inquisition was established by Pope Innocent III.—1234 A. D. the inquisition was committed to the Dominican Monks with all its attendant horrors.

Methinks it is at this time that the fifth seal is opened, "And the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God and the testimony which they held. And they cried with a loud voice, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwelt on the earth, but it was said unto them that they should rest for a little season until their fellow servants also and their brethren that should be killed as they were should be fulfilled."

Pagan Rome in the early centuries martyred with horrible deaths the followers of Jesus Christ—while Papal Rome was not behind it with his terrible Inquisition work on countless numbers of Christian victims. We shudder as we think of the sufferings of the Waldenses, the Hugenots, the Covenanters, the English martyrs and the victims of the massacre of St. Bartholomew. A long array of atrocious deeds, committed by the Man of sin and his socalled Holy Mother Church of Rome. No wonder she could say, "I sit a queen and am no widow while she was drunken with the blood of saints. Small the remnant of seed was there left to uphold "the truth as it is in Jesus."

The Catholic Pope sent crusaders at this period of time to wrest Jerusalem from the hand of the false prophet..... but the set time to favor Zion had not come, and their work and wars were fruitless—Gentile Mohammedanism yet rules, nor will the burden be lifted until the measure and number be fulfilled.

Another subdivision of time, 315 years more brings us to A. D. 1611, a memorable year when King James Version of the Holy Scriptures was translated into English and was a comfort and solace to her people after the Reformation.

What are the annals of the persecuted seed between these two periods of time. A ray of light shot athwart Catholic darkness when Wycklife taught the Word of God in 1350-70 and became the Morning Star of the Reformation. Again in 1517-1934 Luther preaching pierced the gloom of the dark ages and taught again the true light of the world. Nobly did the elect stand up for the Word. Mighty was the task set before them, and unflinchingly did they work for their Lord, grand heroes all

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

W. L. CROWE.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 4, 1905. NUMBER 1.

are ordained of God, whomsoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God." Dan. ii. 20-21 says, "Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his. And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that have understanding."

Now clearly we see this verified in his dealings with the children of Israel in their settlement of the land of Canaan. In their first encounter in the strongly fortified city of Jericho, where without divine help, they would have met with strong resistance, if not defeat; but by obedience to God's directions, the strong walls were removed for them and victory made easy. Why, it may be asked, did God so miraculously favor this people? In order to answer this question intelligently, it would be necessary for us to go back to the call of Abraham, giving the promises to Abraham and his seed, for which we have not time now, neither is it necessary to the point we wish to make. Suffice it to say, they were God's chosen people, and the land of Canaan had been promised to them for an everlasting possession: and in order to teach them that they cannot ignore the divine power and rely on their own strength, God manifests his power in their behalf. In their next engagement at Ai, they meet with defeat on account of a violation of orders, and the sin of one man Achan, when the cause of defeat was made known to them and the proper rectification was made, they go on to victory, and thus we find all the way [illegible] their history, in obedience they [illegible] remarkably successful and in sin [illegible] were surely punished. [illegible] lessons of success [illegible] obedient, they still [illegible] captives by [illegible] we find that the [illegible] not the only nation that [illegible] over, either directly or in- [illegible] by the great and All wise [illegible] of heaven and earth. A lesson was given to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and of the Chaldees; he had become so inflated by his great power and prosperity, that he forgot the God of heaven, notwithstanding the warnings that had been given him. Dan. iv. 29 to 37 says, "At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon. The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty? While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; the kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will. The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like bird's claws. And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou? At the same time my reason returned unto me, and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honor and brightness returned unto me; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me. Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honor the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment: and those that walk in pride he is able to abase."

Belshazzar who succeeded his father Nebuchadnezzar, made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before them, until crazed with drink he committed a great sacrilege in bringing out the golden and silver vessels which his father had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem, and drinking therefrom. In that very night was Belshazzar slain and Darius the Mede took the kingdom. Darius falls into a trap and learns a lesson; his lords and captains are displeased because Daniel, a Jew, is above them in rank, and devise a scheme to get him removed; they lure the king by flattery to sign a decree that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of the king himself, he shall be cast into the den of lions, knowing full well Daniel's custom of praying to God daily and that he would not cease on this account. So Daniel was reported for a violation of the decree. The king is very sorry, for he loved Daniel very greatly, yet as the law of the Medes and Persians was unalterable, he was compelled to execute the order, much as he regretted it.

Daniel was cast into the den of lions, but much to the king's gratification, his life is miraculously preserved, and Daniel comes forth unharmed. Then king Darius makes a counter decree of his own free will as follows.

"Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth: peace be multiplied unto you. I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions. So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian." Dan. vii. 25-28.

In Jeremiah xxvii. 1 to 8 we find this statement. "In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Thus saith the Lord to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck. And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah. And command them to say unto their masters, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; thus shall ye say unto your masters; I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and my outstretched arm, and have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me. And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant; and the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him. And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come; and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him. And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the Lord, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand."

How well does this agree with the language of our text, "There is no power but of God, The powers that be ordained of God." While God's overruling power was more manifest with his own chosen people, yet we have seen that it has been felt and acknowledged by others also, and is being manifested in our own day and time.

Psa. ix. 17 say, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Of course the word, hell, here is not supposed to be a place of torment as the term is commonly used, as governments could not experience corporeal punishment; and to digress just a little, we do not believe that the hell of the Bible is a place of torture. The word should be rendered "Sheol" or the grave, and as we understand the grave to be the end of life, so may a nation be brought to an end. And as we look over the history of nations, we find the record of the rise and fall of many; and we find further, that the nations that went to decay were those that did not recognize the Divine overruling power.

Is God ruling among the nations today? We answer emphatically, yes. Jesus commissioned his apostles and disciples to "go in all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." And again, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached among all nations." Christian nations are endeavoring to carry out this command. Missionaries are being sent to the heathen nations to civilize, educate and Christianize them. But the lives of those missionaries are always in jeopardy, and in many localities have to have protection, and indeed in many instances, a way has to be opened by the Military first, before the missionary or teacher can get a start. We see this verified in our own newly acquired possessions the Philipines. We saw it but recently in the Boxer movement in China, when the powers combined to save, not only the missionaries and Christians, but the ministers, consuls and citizens of their respective governments.

Christian nations guarantee protection to her citizens, both at home and abroad, and when the civil power fails to accomplish this, then the Military is called in. There is no dodging the fact that a government cannot exist without the power [illegible] does not follow that we must have war because we have soldiers: but it does follow that soldiers are necessary to the enforcement of law and protection of the government.

We started out with the statement that a lawless element existed which had to be controlled by force. How often do we see, right here in our own free America, riots and mob violence, which baffles the civil powers, and resort to the Military is the only recourse; without this power, anarchy would have full sway and all government would be destroyed; hence we look upon our soldier boys as the protectors of our homes, our property, our country and flag.

But there is still another purpose for which God is ruling among the nations, which we will consider in our next.

The Times of the Gentiles. No. 4.

"Let not him that seeketh cease from his search until he find, and when he finds he shall wonder, wondering he shall reach the kingdom, and when he reaches the kingdom he shall have rest." (from Gaugell's recent discovery of St Thomas Gospel.)

"For like as all that is made in the world, hath a beginning and an ending, and the end is manifest, even as the times of the Highest have plain beginnings in wonder and powerful works and endings in effects and signs." "Measure thou the time diligently in itself and when thou seest part of the signs past then shalt thou understand that it is the very same time wherein the Highest shall begin to visit the world which he made. And he shall come to the astonishment of them that dwell on the earth. And the time shall be when these things come to pass and the signs shall happen, which I showed thee before, and then shall my Son be declared whom thou sawest as a man ascending."

"All the works of the Lord are exceeding good and whatever he commandeth shall be in due season. But he that giveth his mind to the law of the Most High, and is occupied in the meditation thereof, will seek out the wisdom of all the ancients, and be occupied in prophecies. Because it is he that feedeth unto wisdom and directeth the wise, for in his hands are both we and our words. All wisdom also and knowledge of workmanship. If a man desireth experience she (wisdom) knoweth things of old and conjecureth aright what is to come. She knoweth the subtleties of speech and can expound dark sentences. She foreseeth signs and wonders, and the events of seasons and times, for God loveth none but him, that dwelleth with wisdom." "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

When "the sixth seal was opened, Lo, there was a very great earthquake and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood, and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind."

In our last paper, while following the tribulations of the seed of the woman, who were persecuted by the great red dragon "because they keep the commandments of God and hold the testimony of Jesus" we reached the time of 1611 A. D. and which we found was the last subdivision of the "times of the Gentiles;" 315 years "the time of the end" when the wise should understand.—King James' translation of the Holy Scriptures was made in this year and a solace and comfort it was to English readers for 270 years, who loved and revered the Word of God as thus written. As time went on, we hear of among the English reformers a fifth monarchy sect who looked for some thing far better than the Gentiles rule under which they lived. These people were put down by Cromwell's iron hand about 1650 A. D. thus showing that a few had studied the Word of God to good purpose, that the wise could begin to understand Daniel's prophecies and the coming age of the glory of the Lord.

Meanwhile throughout all these centuries of time, the great red dragon was still persecuting the seed of the woman who suffered unto death during the great tribulation, through the diabolical machinery of the inquisition tortures—whose work went on until the sixth seal was opened in 1755 or up to 1780 for it is written, "and my Word shall not return unto me void." Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light." We learn that there was an effort made to set up the inquisition in New Orleans, and an eminent father of the Catholic church was sent from San Domingo to this intent in 1784-5, but he disliked the task, and was excused. But we have the Word of God that there was none of the elect that suffered after the darkened day appeared, as a beacon sign to the Church of God. The great tribulation commenced with the suffering and death of Jesus the Christ, and ended as we have seen just prior to 1780, the year that brought the wonderful sign from God. "For then shall be great tribulation such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time (1780) no nor ever shall be, and except those days should be shortened there should no flesh be saved, but for the elect's sake, those days shall be shortened. Those days of tribulation should not extend to the end of Gentile times, but those days of suffering should be shortened for the elect's sake. Some writers speak as though the days of the French Terror were included in these days of tribulation, but not so, there was no elect class to suffer there—they belonged to the man of sin, for they were the subjects of the Pope of Rome. "But in those days after that tribulation shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light and the stars of heaven shall fall and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken." When the sixth seal was opened, lo, there was a very great earthquake and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair and the moon became as blood and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind".....In this last division of time, the time of the end, the signs were due after that great tribulation of the elect seed, for the times of the Highest have plain beginnings in wonders and powerful works and endings in effects and signs. Those signs given from God came in due time, and in due order, first the great earthquake of Lisbon in 1755 that was so far reaching in its effects. Then the sun was darkened in 1780 and the stars fell from heaven in 1863 and the signs of the times. The sign of the Son of Man in heaven in the fall of 1863 with its marvelous red sunsets and sun risings, that was the wonder of all beholders. God's hand wrought all these in the order given to, and by his servants the prophets, and as told us by his Son. Can the Church of God, his chosen elect, deny them as signs to us, from God himself, given in these last days to strengthen the faith of those who watch for his coming. In this time of the end in 1804 the Bible society was organized, that has sent copies of the Holy Word throughout the world, thus publishing the gospel of the kingdom of God throughout all nations and then shall the end come.

In the 1820's and on, a cry went forth, Behold the bridegroom cometh. Go ye out to meet him—the watchmen of Israel were alert and watched longingly for his coming. Deep was the disappointment when he did not come at the time that they expected.

In 1880 another disappointment came to the watchers—but it is written, Watch ye therefore for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even or at midnight, or at the cock crowing or in the morning. Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." The Church of God has watched through the even, the midnight, and the cock crowing watches, the morning watch will come. "Blessed are the servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." "And if he shall come in the second watch or come in the third watch and find them so, blessed are those servants. Be ye therefore ready also for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not." "I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the housetop." I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait and in his Word do I hope, my soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning, I say more than they which watch unto the morning." "Give thanks unto his holy name, for his anger is but for a moment. In his favor is life. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "The end is manifest" A. D. 1926 is the last year of the Times of the Gentiles, but whether our Savior comes for his elect before that time or after, none can say, our attitude is to watch until he does come and be found ready for his coming. This is the hope, the blessed hope of "the church in the wilderness" during her long sojourn therein, relying on the blessed promise of her God. "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her iniquity is pardoned, for she received at the Lord's hand double for all her sins."

In that blessed morning watch, shall the watchman joyfully see, "The sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

1905.

"It is high time to awake out of sleep." By the signs as they pass, and we can check them off in our Guide Book, we know that our Lord is "even at the door." This year, 1905, may bring our Lord's return. We do not know it. We only know it is possible. Do you belong to Christ? Has he bought you? Did he pay a "great price," for you? If so then you are precious in his sight. The past year was good in many ways, but to enumerate them would be too long a story. To the child of God, to one who is waiting patiently and watching earnestly, the best time is yet future. The resurrection of our Lord gives us hope of a future eternal life that is held in reserve for us.

While we wait and watch, and hope and pray, we have a duty to perform. It is never laid upon us that we must convert the world. We are however called upon to witness for Him. We must tell to those about us, in every way that we can, the message left us to deliver. We dare not waste time longer in considering how best we can use the means we have to spread abroad the good news of a soon coming Savior. This question of "how" must not take up all of our attention. We must not waste time any longer in looking for "results." We must "sow the seed." This is our part—the harvest is not for us, as yet. If there is any person about you—a relative, a friend, a companion, a neighbor—anybody at all whom you would like to meet in the Kingdom of God, it is your imperative duty to in some way make that person acquainted with the way of life. You can tell him yourself, have a preacher come and tell him, supply him with literature that he can read. If he refuses to hear, you are not to blame. Your reward is just as sure as if he were to accept.

Inasmuch as we are entering upon a new year—inasmuch as we are not sure but this may be our last year—that this may be our last chance to do any witnessing for our Master, it behooves us to be up and doing with a will the little that is in our power to yet do. "It is high time to awake out of sleep."

Port Arthur.

On Jan. 2, after 240 days of battle, the Japanese army is ready to enter Port Arthur. With 18000 wounded soldiers, his ammunition about gone, General Stoessel called his officers about him, and decided to surrender. The remaining ships in the harbor were blown up, and the fortifications that have withstood the Japanese fire were destroyed. The terms of the surrender are not given out, but it is quite likely that the victorious Japs will be generous to the Russians, and by so doing will impress the world with their willingness to end the war on fair terms. It is ten years since the Japanese army took Port Arthur from the Chinese, and the same general who planned the first campaign planned the one just ended. It is well known how Russia with the aid of France and Germany caused Japan to abandon her footing which was subsequently taken by Russia. Expecting to stay there Russia spent millions in fortifying the place, and making improvement in the city and harbor. The Siberian railroad was built to Port Arthur. Dalny was built as a commercial port, while the work of making Port Arthur the warm water Military and Naval place for which the Czar had so long wished, was hurried on with feverish haste. With Vladivostok in the same way fortified, and Harbin and Mukden made into great military depots, it was easy to see that a little time would enable Russia to have complete control of Manchuria, Corea, and with a fleet such as was in the Russian mind to establish, even the eastern seas would be under her control.

Mild protests were made from time to time, but they were ignored in the usual Russian way, or quietly parried off, and the work pushed forward. Admiral Alexieff, who had charge of the arrangements, is said to have remarked that Russia needed peace till the summer of 1905, and then she would be prepared for any event. The world knows how the sixth of last February the Tokio government broke off diplomatic relations, and in two days had seriously crippled Russia's naval power. The progress of the War has been chronicled each week, and while large numbers of men have been killed in the assaults on the various forts, the Japanese have gone steadily on, day after day, and week after week, drawing the lines a little closer, taking advantage of every foot gained, until they have worn out the gallant defenders, and reduced them to the point where they could no longer make resistance in force, and were compelled to stand and be shot down, or surrender. Though the Japanese suffered greatly by mines and other obstructions, they were held together by the successes of their arms. The victories of the army in the north, and of their fleet on the seas, encouraged them to deeds of valor. On the other hand, the Russian garrison knew their ships were being smashed, and that there was little hope of a new fleet being able to come to their aid. They have known for months that it was next to impossible for the army of General Kouropatkin to reach them. In this seemingly hopeless state they have been held by the will and power of one man, their General Stoessel, whose wonderful defense of Port Arthur, even in defeat, has earned him a name among the great ones of the Russian nation.

What effect the fall of this stronghold will have is conjecture. Russia may maintain that it is only an incentive to continue the war, and recapture the place. She may argue that by sheer force of numbers she can eventually get troops enough along the Siberian Railroad to drive the Japs southward again, regain her lost ground, and with her Baltic fleet reinforced and joined with the ships at Vladivostok, again be in position to meet Japan on the water, with chance of victory. Should this be the decision, the interference by other powers will be a serious question, and the war may continue for some time. Should this be the policy of Russia it will tax the Japanese government to the utmost to maintain the struggle on her resources.

At the present time it looks as if the Baltic fleet must be recalled, as it is only inviting disaster to proceed at this juncture. Whether the peace party of Russia, together with the danger of unrest and uprisings among the dissatisfied populations of some districts, will be an element that will cause the Czar to yield for the time to the force of circumstances, is hard to tell. We can only wait and see. Russia the giant, is beaten by Japan the pigmy. The war was started on account of Port Arthur. Russia wanted Port Arthur because it gave her a warm water port. She wanted a warm water port at Constantinople, and through Persia to the Gulf, but England turned her back each time. She is now turned back by Japan. Why does England want to keep Russia within bounds? She does not object to any other nation having access to the sea the whole year round, and why object to Russia? Is it on account of the kind of government that controls Russia? If so and the present agitation in the realm of the Czar shall lead to a radical change, and the people of Russia be given a voice in her affairs, will England then remove the barrier? Would a revolution among the millions of the Czar's subjects so change the policy of the Russian government as to make her a desirable factor in the world's commerce? These are questions for the student to consider. It is a natural craving that Russia has for access to the sea. Every great nation has it, and must have it. How long can she be held in check? How long is it desirable to hold her in check? It is not likely that even this defeat will quench this longing. Russia must come to the water. What nation will be the wreck over which she will march?

"Orders." No. 2.

As there were elders, there were also deacons in the congregations of the apostolic Church. Deacons were chosen for the Church at Jerusalem (Acts vi: 1-6), and there were deacons in the Church at Philippi Phil. i: 1, as well as at Cenchrea. Rom. xvi: 1. Deacon is a translation of the Greek word diakonos, the meaning of which is a minister or servant. It is rendered into English by the three words "deacon," "minister," and "servant:" Their "business," according to Acts vi: 1-4, was to minister, or serve tables. Indigent widows seem to have been the special beneficiaries of their ministration. The deacons had the custody of the Church funds, which up to this time had been in charge of the apostles. See Acts iv: 34-37. We may say they were the treasurers of the Church. "Phebe our sister" is mentioned as a servant diakonon of the Church which is at Cenchrea. Rom. xvi: 1. The apostle Paul desired that at her coming to Rome she should have a fitting reception, mentioning particularly the services she had rendered to him and others. She, like the deacons at Jerusalem, was engaged in important business. While no deacons are mentioned in connection with other places, we find allusions in the epistles of Paul to "the ministry diakonia of the saints," etc. Rom. xii: 7; 1. Cor. xvi: 15; 2. Cor. viii. 4; ix: 1. From all of which it appears that the Church funds 1. Cor. xvi: 1 were placed at the disposal of those persons—persons of honest report, full of holy Spirit and wisdom Acts vi: 3—who made distribution to "the necessity of the saints" Rom. xii: 13 as every man had need. Acts iv: 35. In the Church at Jerusalem, the business of looking after the poor required so much time that the apostles were hindered in their work, and hence the appointment of deacons, ministers or servants. From which it will be seen that these deacons were not an "order" of the clergy, but men appointed to relieve the ministers of the word of an arduous duty which seriously interferred with their work. The Church at Jerusalem being very numerous, seven deacons were appointed. See Acts xxi: 8. This number seems to have been required in the case before us. Two of the Jerusalem deacons were public speakers—Stephen and Philip. Acts vii: 7-53; viii: 5, 12; xxi: 8. However, it does not appear that they were specially ordained for this work, and least of all, that they were an order of the clergy. Philip was not an apostle, and yet he both preached evangelizo and baptized. Acts viii: 5, 8, 12, 25, 35, 38, 40. In fact, the preaching and ministering in holy things of apostolic days was not confined to the apostles, or to a so-called "clergy." After the stoning of Stephen the Church at Jerusalem were all scattered abroad, except the apostles, and the record says that "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching evangelizo the word. Acts viii: 1-4. Who gave them authority or license to preach, we are not told, but it is presumable that they were prompted by the love of Christ.

The qualifications of deacons are that they must be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre, holding the mystery of faith in a pure conscience, husbands of one wife, ruling their own children and their own houses well. 1. Tim. iii: 8-12. To this the apostle adds that they who have "used the office of a deacon (or ministerd) well, purchase to themselves a good degree (or standing.—R. V.), and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus," v. 13.

The work of an officer in the Church of the living God is serious business, and great responsibility attaches to it. It is therefore proper that men of dignity and good judgment should be selected to fill such positions. The Scriptures do not state for how long a time the elders and deacons are to be chosen, but it is presumable that they hold these positions as long as they are members of the congregation. The elders, then, "take care of the Church of God" as to its spiritual needs, and the deacons or servants have charge of the financial and temporal affairs of the congregation.

Neither the elders or the deacons of the early Church were "honored" or ornamented with titles with which the names of modern preachers are bedecked. Men are styled "Reverend," "The Reverend," "Right Reverend," and even "Very Reverend," and "Doctors" ad infinitum. Why all this? Because they happen to be preachers. Do they all preach the gospel as commanded by our Lord? Even if they did, why should they therefore be thus titled? Did the Head of the Church provide such titles for the proclaimers of His message to men? Nothing of the kind is upon record. Did He command or authorize His Church to bestow such honors? Again the record is silent. Then who authorized men to either give or recieve such titles? The whole thing is of human invention, and is not calculated to encourage humility of mind, devotion to God, or love to fellowmen. There were those in the days of Christ who loved to be called "Rabbi"—master, teacher or doctor. Matth. xxiii: 7-10. Why not be called "Doctor?" For One is your Master, Leader or Teacher, even Christ. We are told to "call no man father upon the earth; for One is your Father (He which is) in heaven." And yet it seems as if the things which were specifically forbidden are the things men love to do.

It seems to me that reason would teach that a real preacher of the truth needs no title to give dignity to himself or his work; and a poor one does not deserve a title which denotes capacity to teach.

The writer of this sometimes receives letters which are addressed to "Elder" A. H. Zilmer. Now it so happens that he is not an elder in any sense. In the first place, he has never occupied the position of an elder in either of the congregations with which he has been connected as a member. And further, he is not an elderly man, not yet having reached two score years. Why a comparatively young man who is engaged in evangelistic work should be styled an "elder," has never seemed clear to me. If someone can explain, I shall certainly be grateful. If it is done as a mark of respect, I appreciate it, but for practical purposes it is needless.

The apostles spoke of each other with terms of respect. Paul, in his letters, referred to Peter, James and John (1. Cor. xv: 5, 7; Gal. ii: 9), Peter spoke of "our beloved brother Paul" (2. Pet. iii: 15, and Jude of "the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Jude 17), but in none of these references are man-made titles used to give or heighten respect. The mention of familiar names or persons, and the character attaching to each, was sufficient to awaken interest and command respect. The same artless simplicity and the same fervent affection that characterized the relations of the early Christians, should be found in us.

These lines are written, not to antagonize anyone, but to draw attention to the primitive order in the Church of God, to awaken an interest in the good then existing, and to arouse to an imitation of the example thus set before us.

In our next we will study the evangelist and his duties.

More Joy in Salem, Ohio.

Our hearts were rejoiced, our hope cheered and brightened, our courage refreshed by the action of Wilson Townsend and wife. He is a son of our beloved and steadfast brother W. D. Townsend. Our new brother and sister have been quietly but diligently searching the Scriptures for considerable time, and having sincerely believed the glad news of the kingdom, the gospel of Christ, to be the power of God to salvation, they asked to be immersed for the remission of sins. To this end they were gladly assisted on the afternoon of Dec. 27, 1904, and yesterday morning, Sunday Jan. 1, 1905, were warmly welcomed by the faithful few. We believe that they as babes in Christ realize that they have entered the narrow way that leads to life everlasting, and we have much pleasure in trusting that they will walk soberly and godly in Christ Jesus, and be helpful to the Church of God in Salem.

P. Neil.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Merry Christmas and happy new year to you all. A number of the dear ones have written, saying, What has become of old Uncle John Foore that we don't hear from him any more? Is his voice stilled in death? Dear brethren, no, Uncle John is still busy, if he is not preaching he is either singing or painting houses. He has been an evangelist in the Church of God in the West for 34 years. He has seen some terrible hard times for want of means to make both ends meet. He has been in 16 different States, and has never held a public collection, that is he has never had the hat passed around for money to pay him for preaching. He has never preached on a stipulated salary. He has almost always taken the plan laid down in the Bible, let not the right hand know what the left hand doeth. During the year 1904 I have baptized 22, preached 51 sermons and held one public discussion with a world burner Advent preacher on the thousand years reign spoken of in the 20th chapter of Revelations. It lasted six nights and then he (Fritch) had to go to Conference. First proposition, Do the Scriptures teach that the thousand years spoken of in Rev. xx. are in the past. W. H. Fritch affirms, John Foore denies. 2nd Proposition, Do the Scriptures teach that the thousand years spoken of in Rev. xx. is yet in the future, and will take place at the second coming of Christ and at or after the first resurrection. Affirmative John Foore, negative W. H. Fritch. The discussion was in my favor by all, and his own moderator, an Advent preacher, so expressed himself. Well, I traveled in miles in 1904, 2320; my income was for the year, $108.25; my expenses were $50.00; above expenses, $58.25. I am now 72 years old, but am as fully determined to keep on in the fight until the King comes and will say to the dear brethren, pray for me that my faith fail not. Dear brethren, my prayer is that the good Lord may raise up someone to take my place, to see that the dear ones are protected from the lion's jaws. As I am growing old and my usefulness will soon be over, and my education is limited so much so that I have got to stay by the Bible, the Word of God. Brethren and sisters, pray for me and all the dear ones who love the Lord Jesus. May God bless you all is my prayer.

John Foore.

Ruts and Routine.

A traveler needs a road, and roads are rendered passable largely by the tracks of those who have traveled over them. But too many tracks following in succession cause ruts: and if we follow others too slavishly we shall find ourselves in ruts of routine which we cannot easily escape. It is well to know how other people have done things, but there should be variety in this knowledge, and we should be influenced by present circumstances as well as by former usages. Dead things can be shaped into the most orderly and symmetrical forms. Living things must have individuality, variety of freedom, motion, and action. A course or custom, proper in certain circumstances, must be varied to suit emergencies and necessities.

In an experience of half a century in attending large meetings, in doors and out, we have frequently noted the unwisdom of regulating such special services by the ordinary routine of a formal religious service; where singing and prayer would be followed by a sermon, a hymn, and a benediction. In certain cases the sermon is liable to prove a failure, and the people go away disheartened and discouraged, when perhaps at that very moment there were persons present ready to speak with earnestness and power, but who find no opportunity to do so. There is sometimes a self sufficient narrowness in men who preside in such assemblies, by reason of which ruts are followed, time is wasted, opportunities are unimproved, the Spirit of God is grieved, and such meetings prove unprofitable.

A little more freedom [illegible] ity would often furnish [illegible] these difficulties. [illegible] addresses might [illegible] for one set speech [illegible] would rush to [illegible] and alert; and [illegible] feebly that [illegible] not hear him, another [illegible] that all could hear, and [illegible] edified.

The idea that it is always best to leave what the speaker has said without comment, that the impression may remain on the minds of the people, may be a good one, provided an impression has been made, but sometimes this is not the case, and the hungry flock go fainting to their homes. Every large assembly should have a character of its own. Not necessarily the character of an individual member, or of a single speaker, but the impression made by one should be reinforced and strengthened by another, until the thought of the people no longer revolves about what some one man has said, but carries away the impression made upon the mind by the entire transactions and proceedings of the day. A meeting properly organized, presided over and guided, may thus be a power for good, and exercise a mighty influence over those who are present, while a meeting which is noteworthy only for ruts and routine, leaves hearts unsatisfied, and souls unsaved.—H. L. Hastings.

God's Promises.

A promise is like a cheque. If I have a cheque, what do I do with it? Suppose I carried it about in my pocket, and said, "I do not see the use of this bit of paper, I cannot buy anything with it," a person would say: "Have you been to the bank with it?" "No, I did not think of that." "But it is payable to your order. Have you written your name on the back of it?" "No, I have not done that." "And yet you are blaming the person who gave you the cheque! The whole blame lies with yourself. Put your name at the back of the cheque, go with it to the bank, and you will get what is promised to you." A prayer should be the presentation of God's promise endorsed by your personal faith. I hear of people praying for an hour together. I am very pleased that they can; but it is seldom that I can do so, and I see no need for it. It is like a person going into the bank with a cheque and stopping an hour. The clerks [illegible] is a plainly stated Bible proposition, but most unreasonably brought forward by believers in universal salvation to prove what is utterly false, that sin is in harmony with the purpose of God. This perversion of a plain text seems necessary by those adherents of a false theory in order to harmonize their own system of supposed truth, under the plea that the Bible must be made to harmonize. A strange way of bringing the Bible into agreement with itself! by assumptions the most absurd, and shocking to common sense. Truth is harmonious.

John L. Wing.

"Then said Solomon, The Lord hath said he would dwell in the thick darkness, but I have built a house of habitation for thee." And again, "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honor of kings to search out a matter. The heaven for height and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings is unsearchable." Prov. xxv. 2, 3. God is unsearchable to man, but by the Spirit he can search the deep things of God. To have length a thing must first have breadth, and depth must have depth. A sky-scraper must have foundations before it can go very high, so let us keep in the order of God's purposes.

Our Bro. Gellerly in his article, "A Meek and Quiet Spirit," Peter's exhortation to wives who obey the Word, truthfully says, "It is essential to know, better to do, best and hardest of all to be, and further that the essential part of growth is appetite, and the self being manifested in the former who knows it all. There are indeed good thoughts here, worthy of consideration of every thoughtful Scriptural student, as is also the gospel of love. "Where is the wise? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? it was God's good pleasure through the foolishness of the Word preached to save them that believe. Christ crucified, the power of God and the wisdom of God to us who are being saved, but to them that are perishing foolishness.

The secret of doing and being is knowing. The self-styled first apostle is all on the do, being wofully ignorant of the purposes of God in the salvation of mankind has been caught in the wiles of the adversary, while the meek, humble, called and sent apostle, called and sent understanding and given by revelation, the twelve on doctrine of Scripture, being dead him not ashamed of the glad tidings, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. For therein is revealed the righteousness of God from faith unto faith, as it is written, the righteous shall live from faith." If all the promises are to the righteous, how shall we gain possession of such a prize? Now it is written, by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Abraham believed God, it was reckoned unto him for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake alone, but for our sake also, unto whom it shall be reckoned who believe on him who raised Jesus our Lord from the dead, who was delivered up for our trespasses and was raised for our justification (righteousness). Being therefore made righteous by this belief we have or let us have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. After being made righteous by knowing, by preaching, we do walk in newness of life, not in the letter of the law, but in the spirit of love. As more of the good tidings is preached either negatively or affirmatively, we grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The past to be forgotten and making restitution, and doing penance not to be considered only as occasion offers.

God will inspire the meek and quiet and humble spirit with grace and knowledge, and when the cry is heard, "Behold the Bridegroom!" he is ready. He will not join the rich in the extention of the socalled God's kingdom, his God is able to deliver him bodily unto his coming, but whether he does or not, he will not bow down to the lineage the world is setting up. So all the precepts of Scripture are given not as commands but rather as suggestions in love, and if we do not live up with them, how dwelleth the love of God in us. Let us receive more love, for the yoke is easy and the burden light. Not a few words were used in telling the Israelites who they were, "Ye are the sons of the prophets and of the covenant, which God made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham, In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. Christ

...it is plainly stated. Wide proposition, but most unreasonably forced forward by believers in universal salvation to prove what is utterly false, that sin is in harmony with the purpose of God. This perversion of a plain text seems necessary by these adherents of a false theory in order to harmonize their own system of supposed truth, under the plea that the Bible must be made to harmonize. A strange way of bringing the Bible into agreement with itself!! by assumptions the most absurd, and shocking to common sense. Truth is harmonious.

JOHN L. WINCE.

"Then said Solomon, The Lord hath said he would dwell in the thick darkness. but I have built a house of habitation for thee." And again, "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing; but the honor of kings to search out a matter. The heaven for height and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings is unsearchable." Prov. xxv. 2, 3. God is unsearchable to man, but by the Spirit he can search the deep things of God. To have length a thing must first have breadth, and height must have depth. A sky-scraper must have foundations before it can go very high, so let us keep in the order of God's purposes.

Our Bro. Gellerly in his article, "A Meek and Quiet Spirit," Peter's exhortation to wives who obey the Word, truthfully says, "it is essential to know, better to do, best and hardest of all to be, and further that the essential part of growth is appetite, and the wolf being manifested in the boaster who knows it all. So all the precepts of Scripture are given not as commands but rather as suggestions in love, and if we do not live up with them, how dwelleth the love of God in us. Let us receive more love, for the yoke is easy and the burden light. Not a few words were used in telling the Israelites who they were, "Ye are the sons of the prophets and of the covenant, which God made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham, In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. Christ and the saints (his body) will fulfil this promise at the manifestation of the sons of God at his coming. Then will the kingdom of God be extended. "Let no man take your crown." It does not behoove a king to walk as do men who are not of royal blood. We are earnestly contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints. Do not endanger your crown refusing to obey Christ in baptism. Be careful how you endeavor to discern the "time" of the supper, and fail to discern the "body." Solomon built a house of habitation for God, but it is written, "God dwelleth not in temples made by hands." If not in the temple he ordered made, how much less in these of modern structure? What house will ye build me, and where is the place of my rest? Thank God in the believer, and when they are assembled together, they represent the highest heavens, and when glorified, God will dwell there forever. We do not go to Zion, Illinois to live and pay tribute to its founder, for having been born in Zion we reside there always in spirit, for Jerusalem from above is our mother. Wherefore, God is not ashamed of them to be called their God for he hath prepared for them a city." "Wherefore, receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken let us have thankfulness, whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God with godly fear."

Christian Growth.

After having laid the foundation for Christian building we should then leave the principles of the doctrine of Christ (not because they are worthless but because we have passed those great landmarks in our Christian journey) and we go on unto perfection. "Not laying again the foundation of repentance and of baptism, etc. Heb. vi. 1, 2. We laid that foundation once, now let us leave it, and "grow up into Christ our living head."

Supposing a man buys a corner lot and after having laid the foundation for a house, as you are passing by he calls to you to come over and see his foundation that he has just completed. You answer his call, look it over and say to him it is a fine foundation, perfect in every part, and you then pass on. In a few months you go that way again and you notice the man is still standing there admiring the work of his hands, but no building appears. Again he calls to you to look his foundation over, you do so, but say to that man six months ago you called to me to come and admire this piece of masonry. I did so, saw it was well prepared to receive and sustain a wonderful structure, but why have you not been building there on? The man says, I don't like to cover up the wall it is so very nice and perfect. What would you think of such a man as that? Yet it is so with very many Christians. They lay a good Bible foundation for Christian building and know every cubic foot in the wall, just the number it contains, and thus far are well acquainted with all its surroundings and conditions, yet there they stand. There they have stood for many long years, looking at and admiring their foundation, but no further growth ever appears. No growing in that grace and knowledge that makes men and women strong and noble in Christ Jesus. No widow or orphan has been visited, no tears of sympathy shed for the unfortunate, no gift has fallen from their hand to that of the afflicted. They have no time or desire to look after any thing but that foundation of theirs. If there is any one thing over which the chill winds of winter can drift the falling snow shading with its white crystals a desolation that nothing but the beautiful spring sun shine can ever dispel it is a decaying foundation for some structure that a fanatic has reared and deserted.

We must grow or we will become worthless dwarfs and die unknown and unappreciated. Their standing still with God. But Christian growth depends largely upon the nature of the pasturage ground on which we feed and the society we choose and mingle with. The ball room, the card table, the saloon and billiard hall affords very poor food with which to grow valuable Christians. These grounds are not the battle fields where Paul won his victory and gained his crown. Christian growth and victory comes not without a struggle and without an earnest warfare. Following Paul's growth and victory over sin and the devil come these words of confidence and trust, "I am now ready to be offered, the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown which the Lord the righteous judge will give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing and kingdom." May the assurance that comforted Paul in his last moments of life be ours when the dark shades of death come to us. First the sowing, then the harvest; first the toil, then the rest; first the cross, then the crown. The poet has asked this question:

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me."

Will we carry it? We must if we wear the crown.

L. S. BRONSON.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Psa. cxvi. 15. John Wesley felt this when in his dying moments he murmured, "The best of all is, God is with us." Dying Neander felt the need of rest, as with his last breath he whispered, "I am going to sleep now, good night." Alexander Mather proved his faith in God as he neared the hour of dissolution, saying, "The Lord who hath taken care of me fifty years, will not cast me off now; glory be to God and the Lamb! Amen, amen, amen." Dying John Powson after preaching the gospel so many years says, "My death bed is a bed of roses." The dying soldier still alert to country and duty exclaims, "Boys I am going to the front." Dying Paul, holding the truth of God more precious than life, exclaims, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." The beloved John was comforted with this sweet thought, "When he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." I expect we shall all feel like Paul some day, looking back over this mortal life. These light afflictions which are but for a moment work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. What we have to bear in this age is not like the trials of the martyrs; but perhaps sometimes they are as hard to bear as death for truth's sake. The smothered pain or heartache caused by our near by fellow mortals. The "thorns in the flesh" with its ever present goading. The uncalled for fault finding of onlookers. The sacrifices which come with every rising sun, with every throb of every pulse beat, these things overcome may in that day place many a lowly disciple side by side with the heroic apostle and the martyr throng. But after all, brethren, what are we doing? What are we suffering, what are we sacrificing to give the gospel to a dying world? What is our ambition? What is our glory? And what will be our place of standing in the day when the crowns shall be awarded and the lives and actions, the sacrifices and sufferings of this brief life will be weighed in the light of Calvary, in the light of eternity, and in the scale of a dying world? Is it possible we are doing all we can? I have in my mind now at least five worthy objects, which ought to have from $100 to $500 to give truth more liberally to the world. Some one could help in these things if they would. If they withhold what is in their hand to give, will the blessing come to them? If we desire to be precious in God's sight, living or dying, let us help his cause now.

The Two Thrones.—No. 2.

THE OATH OF CONFIRMATION.

Now turn with me to the 89th Psalm, and there we find David reiterating this promise, and declaring that this solemn covenant of the Almighty was confirmed by an oath. Hear his words, commencing at the 27th verse:

"Also, I will make him, my first born, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him forevermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven. * * * My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that has gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven."

This is a reiteration of the language of the promise made to David through the mouth of the prophet Nathan, and in words so positive, and with an oath so binding, that there can be no doubts as to its meaning, or fears as to its ultimate fulfillment. David undoubtedly understood the covenant to mean that he should have eternal successors upon his throne; and the question arises, as no word or promise of God can fail, who is the heir of the throne and kingdom, and when will he take his power and reign?

TESTIMONY OF THE PROPHETS.

The subject of the covenant with David, and the expected heir of the kingdom and glory of Israel, was a favorite theme of the Hebrew seers. Jeremiah tells us of a "Branch of Righteousness" who should grow up unto David. Isaiah tells us of the birth of a mighty king who should sit upon the throne of David. And Ezekiel, looking beyond the time of Israel's downfall, sees the throne restored and occupied by him whose right it is. Turn with me to these prophecies, and see how clearly they indicate the nature and location of the Messiah's throne.

First of all, I will read to you from Jeremiah's prophecies, the 33d chapter, commencing at the 15th verse:

"In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely, and this is the name wherewith he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. For thus saith the Lord: David shall shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel. * * * Thus saith the Lord, If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne."

Such were the words of the prophet, spoken from his prison cell at a time when the last reigning prince of the house of David was on the throne, and that throne was tottering before the onslaughts of the hosts of Babylon. When all was dark, and Israel's hope seemed lost, the word of prophecy declared that the throne of David was as secure as the eternal fastnesses of earth; and assure as day would follow night, so sure would the night of Israel's desolation be succeeded by the day of blessing when the "Branch of righteousness should grow up unto David."

Now turn with me to Isaiah ix: 6, 7, 8, and hear his words in regard to this exalted personage:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

From this prophecy you learn that this mighty one will have the government upon his shoulder, and shall reign upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom forever. Now there is nothing plainer than these teachings of the prophets that a Messiah should come who would be of the house of David and reign on David's literal throne upon this earth. But I hear you say, "The throne of David is not in existence. The kingdom of Israel is a thing of the past. Her land is desolate, and her people scattered to the four winds of heaven." This is also in harmony with the Scriptures, and tends only to strengthen the promise, for when God's curses have met with their fulfillment, you may rest assured that his promised blessings will not be neglected.

In proof of this, I would invite your attention to Ezekiel xxi: 25, 26, and 27, where God says to Zedekiah, the last reigning prince of the line of David:

"And thou, profane and wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God: remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."

So it has been overturned by the Babylonian, by the Persian, and the Roman; overturned and trodden down by the Gentile nations from that time to this. The cities of Israel have been destroyed, and her sons and her daughters have been carried away captive, and scattered among all nations. Jerusalem has ceased to be a place of independence; and, since the days of the prophecy, the people of Israel have been subject to Gentile rule and authority, their glory has departed, and every effort that they have made to throw off the shackles, and regain their independence, has only been followed by another overturning. And yet the promise is, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." And, so sure as the kingdom has been overthrown, the diadem removed, and the crown taken off, just so sure will the one "whose right it is" restore that throne, and on his brow will gleam a crown richer and far more glorious than earthly monarchs ever wore.

Who, then, is the rightful heir to this throne and glory? Who is the coming king who shall rear again the throne of David, and execute judgment and righteousness in the land? Let the Scriptures answer.

JESUS THE LEGAL HEIR OF DAVID'S THRONE.

Doubtless you have asked why, in the genealogical tables given by Matthew and Luke of the ancestry of Jesus, there is such an apparent discrepancy. It will be noticed that both lines converge in David, then diverge into separate lines through Solomon and Nathan, and then again converge in Joseph, the reputed Father of Jesus. This is easily explained, when we understand that Matthew gives the genealogy of Joseph, and Luke of Mary, both of the royal line; and these two lines unite in Jesus, who is beyond dispute the legal heir to the throne and glory of David. The Jews may search their records and genealogical tables, but they can find no other heir. Jesus of Nazareth is without doubt the rightful heir in the two lines through Joseph and Mary, and none other has the right. It was at his birth that the wise men of the East came with their offerings to enquire: "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?" It was then that king Herod called together the chief priests and scribes, and enquired of them where the Messiah should be born; and they turned to the book of the prophet Micah and gave answer:

"In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet, For thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda art not the least among the princes of Judah: for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel."—Matt. ii: 5, 6.

"Well," says one, "these prophecies and testimonies seem clear that the throne of David is to be re-established; but is there any direct testimony that Jesus is the person to occupy that throne?" Turn with me to the 1st chapter of Luke, where the subject matter of throne and promise, and the direct relationship of Jesus, is more specifically developed. These are the words of the angel to the virgin, Luke i: 31, 32, and 33:

"And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Here, then, is a definite promise, made by a messenger from God to Mary, that her son Jesus was the rightful heir to the throne of David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there should be no end. Compare this promise with the covenant of David, already quoted, that, "his house and kingdom should be established forever;" and with the oath and promise that "his seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun;" and with Isaiah's words concerning the one who was to reign "upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom forever;" and the language and ideas are so nearly identical that it is impossible to escape the conclusion that they all refer to one and the same person; and that Jesus, the Son of Mary, is therefore the one of whom the prophets spoke; and that one of his greatest honors will be to reign as "King of the Jews," on the restored throne of David.

Dr. Arnold's Daily Prayer.

"O Lord, I have a busy world around me; eye, ear and thought will be needed for all my work to be done in that busy world. Now, ere I enter upon it, I would commit eye, ear and thought to thee! Do thou bless them, and keep their work thine; that as, through thy natural laws, my heart beats and my blood flows without any thought of mine for them, so my spiritual life may hold on its course at these times when my mind cannot consciously turn to thee to commit each particular thought to thy service. Hear my prayer, for my dear Redeemer's sake. Amen."

The Signs of his Coming.

The event of our Lord's return is the most important of any in the history of our race. His return will decide questions of the greatest magnitude to the national and individual inhabitants of our earth. His coming is ever of interest to his brethren, because if he come not they will never receive the promised eternal life, and the dead saints will forever remain in the dust of the earth—therefore the never failing interest of the true believer in the literal and personal return of their Lord and Master. The nations are also interested in his return, but they know it not. Their strife, groanings and war will not cease until he speaks peace to their troubled seas. Matt. xxiv. is probably the most comprehensive chart left by the Master to indicate our whereabout in the time from his departure until his return in power and glory. Three of the historians have given an account of his memorable discourse—Matthew, Mark and Luke. In order to get as near as possible at all that the Master said we take Matthew and supply from the other writers what seems to be lacking in Matthew. Rightly dividing the Word—placing the events narrated in their proper order is the critical point in the exposition.

From the first to the end of verse 14 the speaker narrates in a general way the most important events to his disciples, from that time to the end of the age or to his coming. Verse 14, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." This must have reference to the end of Gentile times, because the context shows that iniquity abounds, and that the love of many waxes cold; a condition that did not exist in the first half century of the Christian era. And again it is reasonable that the gospel should be published as a witness to all nations prior to the overthrow of those nations, and the establishment of the kingdom of heaven in all the earth. Now if we take the Bible, the Word of God, as the witness to all nations it would indicate our nearness to the end of this Gentile age.

In verse 15 the speaker goes back to the time of his disciples, and points them to what the prophet Daniel had written concerning Jerusalem, and emphasizes the imperative necessity of their immediate flight from the city. In ordinary circumstances it would seem that the time to flee would be before the city was surrounded by the Roman army, but in reading Josephus we find that those heeding the warning had an opportunity to escape after the city was surrounded by the army. "But now Cestius, observing that the disturbances that were begun among the Jews afforded him a proper opportunity to attack them, took his whole army along with him, and put the Jews to flight and pursued them to Jerusalem.....It then happened that Cestius was not conscious either how the besieged despaired of success, nor how courageous the people were for him; and so he recalled his soldiers from the place, and by despairing of any expectation of taking it, without having received any disgrace, he retired from the city without any reason in the world." Wars of the Jews, Book 2 chapter 19. He also commences chapter 20, thus, "After this calamity had befallen Cestius many of the most eminent of the Jews swam away from the city, as from a ship when it was going to sink." This is a remarkable circumstance of divine providence in caring for the saints.

Verse 21, "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." Ver. 22. "And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." The point here to be understood is, the "shortening of the days." And to this end it is necessary to read what Luke says about the tribulation, because he adds much to what is written by Matthew. "There shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Lu. xxi. 23-24. Here we learn that the tribulation is to last until all things written in the prophets are fulfilled. This brings us to the end of Gentile times. But on account of the elect "those days shall be shortened." The hatred and persecution by the nations consists in the tribulation upon Israel—God having given them over to the wrath of their enemies on account of their sins. Now if the wrath of all nations had continued as in the dark ages, no Jews could now be alive. But by the increase of knowledge—giving liberty of conscience—one nation after another has ceased to persecute Israel after the flesh, and when all nations shall cease to persecute—then look for the signs in the sun, moon and stars of our Lord's return. Because it is written, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." Matt. xxiv. 29-30. Therefore the publishing of the gospel for a witness, and the ceasing of the tribulation, are the events now in process of fulfillment, that proclaims the return of the Master.

HERE OVER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

W. L. CROWE.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

The Birth of Christ.

Now darkness falls, and Bethlehem's inn
Is crowded as a fold with flocks.
Arches and court the travelers win,
Group after group, with eager din,
And lest in all a place be lacks—
A grave man, yet its shielding there
He sees young wife from the chill air.
Knocks at the strong door of the gate,
And bears a suit none through so late.
"O keeper, strangers here are we
From [illegible]
And worn and weary with our quest.
Pity the dear, and let us rest.
Nay! pencil the heavens in fairer tints,
No room is left save in the stable.
No such [illegible] the wife's off rel.
And [illegible]
Was the rude shelter Bethlehem gave
To Mary, mother of the Lord.

But he whose [illegible]
All unaware [illegible]
Of [illegible]
And [illegible]
And to the shepherds cried, This day
In David's city Christ is born.
And suddenly the heavenly host
Filled all the air, and over vaulted
Glory to God in the highest be
And on earth peace, good will toward men.
And [illegible]
To find their manger-cradled King.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher One lesson tonight will be THE INVITED ONES, in answer to the following request.

Dear Brother Wilson:

Will you be so kind as to explain the beautiful parable of the king who made a marriage for his son, Matt. xxii 2-14? Does not the marriage feast or the invitation to come and partake represent the high calling to rulership with Christ? And the class that refused to respond the Jew? And those that were gathered from the highways the Gentiles? How do you explain verse 10, seeing that only the good can come to the honor of rulership with Christ? What class is represented by the guest who lacked the wedding garments? How came he to be in that company? Or in other words, how was it possible for him to enter into the king's palace and into his presence at all seeing he was not in royal attire? If the called out ones are the guests at this wedding where is the bride? Please answer through THE RESTITUTION or Bible Class. Submitted from a true desire to learn.

MRS. W. B. WOLFE.

Teacher. What is your opinion Arlon, does the parable under consideration introduce the whole scene of a marriage, including both the bride and ceremony?

Arlon, No. It is dealing mainly with the invitation.

Q. Please name the key text, which shows the whole intent of the parable?

A. You will find it in verse 14, which reads as follows: "For many are called, (invited) but few are chosen."

Q. To whom was the invitation first extended?

A. See Acts xiii 45, 46: "But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming. ('When they opposed themselves and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them; your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles." xviii 6). Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said It was necessary that the Word of God or (invitation) should first have been spoken unto you; but seeing ye put it from you, (refused the invitation) and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn (or offer the same invitation) to the Gentiles."

Q. Who were not worthy?

A. "They which were (first) bidden."

Q. Who judged them to be unworthy?

A. "Judge yourselves unworthy." "Made light of it (the invitation) and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise."

Teacher. Lud, will you tell us, how the refusal affected the host, who sent out the invitations?

Lud. "He was wroth; and he sent forth his (the Roman) armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city."

Q. Is the invitation still being extended?

A. Yes God's servants are still engaged in "the highways," saying come.

Q. Do God's servants find a hearty response as they go abroad in the highways, saying, Come?

A. They do not. Only one here and there responds to the invitation to come.

Q. How do many act when invited?

A. "Make light of it," and go "Their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise."

Q. What will be the result of making light of the invitation?

A. "I say unto you that none of those men which were bidden (whether Jew or Gentile) shall taste of my supper."

Q. Do not many who profess to have accepted the invitation, value their farms and merchandise more than the invitation they have professed to accept?

A. Undoubtedly so.

Q. In the end which will they receive?

A. Why just that which they value most. If they prefer their farms and merchandise to the invitation, they will be refused admission to the bridal chamber, they cannot have both.

Teacher. One man is found in the chamber, who had not clothed himself with a "wedding garment," was he allowed to remain?

A. No. They bound him hand and foot, and cast him into outer darkness, where many were weeping and gnashing their teeth in bitter anguish, because they had been so foolish as to "make light" of the invitation, and show their preference for their "farms and merchandise."

Q. Are there many today who presume that they will be admitted to the festal chamber without the "wedding garment?"

A. There are.

Q. What is the wedding garment?

A. See Rev xix. 7-9: "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb has come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write, blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, these are the true sayings of God." Here we find the garment is "fine linen clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."

Q. Then what was the man destitute of who was cast out?

A. "The righteousness of saints."

Q. What is the righteousness of saints?

A. As to Abraham we read: "Faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness." Rom. iv. 9.

Q. What relation did circumcision sustain to his faith?

A. "He received the sign of circumcision, a SEAL, of the righteousness of the faith."

Q. What relationship did this sealed faith sustain to the righteousness of saints?

A. "That he might be the Father of all them that believe, that righteousness might be imputed to them also.  Who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham."

Q. What is the first step to take in order to secure the (wedding garment) the righteousness of saints?

A. To "walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham."

Q. What is the second step?

A. Seal the faith by the circumcision of Christ.

Q. Please explain what the circumcision of Christ is?

A. See Col. ii. 10-13: "In whom ye are also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands."

Q. What does this circumcision accomplish in the one who walks in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham?

A. "Putting off the body of the sins of the flesh."

Q. By what means?

A. "By the circumcision of Christ."

Q. How is that kind of circumcision performed?

A. Paul says, Being "buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead. And you being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having given you all trespasses."

Q. Can we have the (wedding garment) righteousness of saints, "while they walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham," then submit to the "circumcision of Christ," which consists in being "buried with him in baptism," and the result following viz: he the "forgiveness of all trespasses," and on securing this, we have "the righteousness of saints," even the wedding garment.

Q. Why do so many fail to secure the wedding garment, or "the right cousness of saints"?

A. Because they seek it by ways and methods of their own devising. They base it upon some other faith than that of the faith of Abraham, and refuse to submit to "the circumcision of Christ," being buried with Christ in baptism," preferring to accept of human substitutes, such as sprinkling, and pouring, etc.

No other "wedding garment" than God devised by the King of kings will be recognized in his wedding festivities. Those appearing without it will be bound hand and foot, and cast into outer darkness to keep company with all others who presume to doctor divinity. God has no use for Doctors of Divinity.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Self Examination.

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith. 2 Cor. xiii 5. Surely the foregoing is timely advice with us at the present day. There was a time when the doctrine of justification by faith was pressed to its extreme limit by the so called Reformation. The Methodist Discipline reads, "That a man is justified by faith only is a very wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort." This form of words was objected to by the followers of A. Campbell and also our own people of the Abrahamic faith as being too exclusive, and many public and private discussions grew out of this proposition. Notwithstanding the failure of the objectors to cause the expunging of the tenet from the various creeds and confessions of the churches, the controversy did result at least in quieting the claim that its defenders put forth for the literal meaning of the words as they stand in their creeds, and in addition created a tide of sentiment in favor of justification by works that threatens at this time to bring into disrepute and to relegate all faith to the shades, and bury the true faith under an avalanche of so called good works so deep, that it will never be referred to as a means to salvation again. Thus one extrema follows the other. In our text we will notice that the apostle does not say, Examine yourselves whether ye be in profession of faith, but whether ye be in the faith. This doubtless means whether you are holding fast the form of sound words of the gospel, and walking in harmony with its requirements or not. There are many at the present time who claim to be followers of Christ, who are utterly averse to carrying out the apostles' injunction, "To contend earnestly for the faith." Even those things that they esteem as indispensable to salvation are kept back lest some who hold different be offended; and while none perhaps discard faith as useless in obtaining the favor of God, they are not sparing in their criticism of those who insist on specifying the things which constitute the glad tidings.

It is at this point that the writer is often charged of being too dogmatic [illegible] unchristianable [illegible] other what can we say? Do we seek to please God or man? Is the Word of God so ambiguous and indefinite that we may not define it, nor affirm what it denies, nor deny what it denies. Some one, "Hold what views of God's Word you please but do not try to force others to believe as you do, as you are no more sure for from the truth as they." And again, "They have the Bible, you have and can read it, all as you and therefore are [illegible] all the churches are in error but one (yours)." Why don't you preach the gospel and say nothing about other people's views?" Why can't you be [illegible] and let that vine oppose [illegible] are to hear the truth as you see it? These questions bring to memory a little incident that took place some years ago when the writer was a member of the Christian church. We were assembled together in what was then called social worship, which consisted of various exercises as singing hymns, exhortation and prayer. The writer had made a confession of [illegible] to see for b the necessity of "seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and had tried to define what is meant by that phrase as we now understand it. When I sat down a good old sister rose up, and began a modest review of what I had said, with a gentle admonition to us all to shun controversy. She then said, "Let us all be good brethren and sisters in the kingdom of heaven," and before I could think how it would sound on such an occasion, I said, "But Sister Cass, we are not in the kingdom of heaven." Now as regards the criticism of our manner of preaching. "Hold what views you please." This critic evidently is not interested in the Book at all, and ten chances to [illegible] knows nothing, and cares nothing [illegible] the Word. Our second critic is [illegible] like the first, he is the one who says, "The Bible is like an old fiddle." Only he is unable to play any tune on either. Now, as to our lack of charity in this respect, let us first enquire, Whose message is it we are called upon to deliver? Answer, God's. To whom is it to be delivered? Answer, man. For what purpose? To point out to him a way of escape from destruction, and a way to everlasting life. Now what is the best qualification of a messenger? Answer, faithfulness to deliver the message. What is the penalty for failure to deliver the message to the man? Answer, "His blood will I require at thy hand." Now, where does charity come in? Answer, In giving the message to the man. And where the lack? Answer, in delivering to him some word of our own. O that ministers of his Word might be a thousand fold more impressed with the solemnity of their calling, and study to be a workman that need not be ashamed, but give to each the portion of God's Word that is needful for food and medicine. When two persons differ on any point of doctrine, and each concedes that the other is as near right as himself, then neither affirms nor denies any thing. Truth triumphs only when its defenders assail error. This is our apology for placing them in contrast. Says Stephen, "Ye do always err." The only way to show true charity toward one who is ignorant of the way of life, is to warn him of his danger, and then point him to the narrow way. To tell him he is as near right as you are is to tell him nothing. Fancy such a preacher if you can. Brethren, if we know the truth, we should speak the truth, and walk in the truth, and it shall be credited to us for charity. This does not exclude meekness and humility, but it does exclude hypocrisy and deceit. Forbid that any of our dear brethren should hold the truth in unrighteousness, or think to contribute to the success of the gospel by joining hands with error. Yours for the truth.

A. B. WISER.

There is only one way to be happy, and that is to make somebody else so, and you can't be happy cross-lots; you have got to go the regular turnpike road.

To the household of faith:

My hope in the blessed promises given us in the gospel of the kingdom is unceasingness I read them in the Word of God. What a merciful and kind Father we have in heaven to give us his will written out by holy men, who wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, for our guide and consolation in these last days of Gentile times; for where would we be without the Bible? It is a great blessing to the people now living, and yet how few regard it, [illegible] thus the mercy of God is not heeded, thus the gospel of the kingdom is a blank to them. But my brothers and sisters, may it not be so to us; I can say it is not to me, for when I read the blessed promises, I feel it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes and obeys it. Thus we are strengthened in the race and narrow way that leads to life eternal. God help us to endure unto the end.

C. P. ALGIRE.

Household of the One Faith:

Another year has rolled away into the past, and as we cannot change it let us be thankful for all blessings and pray our heavenly Father to forgive all wrongs; and help us to love each other more and to love the great cause of Christ and his coming kingdom most of all. We are so glad to see Brother and Sister C. C. Ramsey's name in one of THE RESTITUTIONS, write more Bro. Ramsey, you know how dear your names are to us and all the dear ones. Just a word from you all is so much to us who are of the one family of God. And a word for the child's paper, I am so glad, for we do need such a paper. Sister Barber and Sister Wince, you can go on with this good work and we will stand by you. God bless all is the prayer of your brother and sister.

JOHN & MARY ALLARD.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I love to read your letters of good cheer and exhortations and will tell you that I too am looking for the dear Lord's soon coming for his bride; and am striving to be one of the wise virgins who have their lamps trimmed and burning and oil in their vessels, then when we hear the shout, Behold! the Bridegroom cometh, we will not have to go and buy oil and come back to find the door shut. We have no meetings of our faith here, but I go to Los Angeles quite often and meet with a band of worshipers. Last Sunday Jan. 1, I heard a fine sermon by Bro. R. S. Dwiggins. Let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Your Sister,
MRS. S. J. LANPHEAR.

Jew-Baiting and Persecution in Russia.

The following extract is from a letter from Russia, and communicated to us by the Rev. M. L. Mollis, of Liverpool:—"In general there reigns here a gloomy feeling. In this unfortunate war some thousands of young lives have already been sacrificed, and then neither affirms nor denies any thing. Truth triumphs only when its defenders assail error. This is our apology for placing them in contrast. Says Stephen, "Ye do always err." The only way to show true charity toward one who is ignorant of the way of life, is to warn him of his danger, and then point him to the narrow way. To tell him he is as near right as you are is to tell him nothing. Fancy such a preacher if you can. Brethren, if we know the truth, we should speak the truth, and walk in the truth, and it shall be credited to us for charity. This does not exclude meekness and humility, but it does exclude hypocrisy and deceit. Forbid that any of our dear brethren should hold the truth in unrighteousness, or think to contribute to the success of the gospel by joining hands with error. Yours for the truth.

"And yet here the Russians are Jew-baiting, and persecuting the Jews not less than Kischineff. Here the enemy is as relentless as there the Japanese are.

"There is no compassion here, no honesty; but robbery, murder and cruel mockery. And the worst thing is that the instigators of the common people to evil are the better and intelligent classes, with only few exceptions.

"During October, in not less than six towns where the Jews dwelt, both houses and shops were broken into, plundered and demolished, and some human lives were even sacrificed.

"This is verily the vale of tears. Those who can afford to do so emigrate to America, to the land of freedom and justice; and even if these persecuted Jews were to turn their faces to Japan they would not be so barbarously treated as here, and perhaps be kindlier received.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLEASE READ EACH WORD OF THIS.

We have made an agreement with the publishers of "Farm and Fireside," a semi-monthly journal, published at Springfield, Ohio, by which we can present our patrons with that paper for a year entirely free of cost.

Farm and Fireside has from 20 to [illegible] pages, good large and illustrated. It is accredited with having the largest circulation of any home and farm paper in the world. It is a good paper for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit grower and gardener. The housewife has a department—in short all members of the home are supplied with reading suitable to each one. A sample copy will be sent to you soon.

OUR PROPOSITION.

Our proposition is to send each one of our patrons who pays his subscription up and on to the end of 1905, the Farm and Fireside for a year free of any charge whatever.

This simply gives you the both papers for the price of ours.

There is necessarily a limit to this offer and you will have to act very promptly if you wish to take advantage of it. Our arrangement ends with the month of December. So if you want the Farm and Fireside free for one year, send at once as above, and we will see that you get the two papers.

This applies to new and old subscribers alike. Each one who pays for THE RESTITUTION to the end of 1905 gets the Farm and Fireside as well.

Send as soon as possible, so as to be sure and secure the present we offer. If you are in arrears send the money to cover the delinquency, and send $1.50 for next year, and you get Farm and Fireside absolutely free.

A SECOND PROPOSITION.

In the city of Boston, Mass., is published a monthly journal devoted to education of young and old to the necessity of a humane and merciful treatment of dumb brutes as well as our duty to our fellowman. This paper is called "Our Dumb Animals," and is specially beneficial for the youth of our land, though older people cannot fail to be helped by reading it.

We propose to send Our Dumb Animals free one year to every person sending us a new subscriber for THE RESTITUTION for next year.

Do not misunderstand our offer—

1. Pay all arrears and for 1905 and you get THE RESTITUTION for that time and Farm and Fireside for one year.

2. A new subscriber paying $1.50 for the year 1905, will receive all the papers of 1904 from the time his subscription is in hand, and the full year 1905, and will get Farm and Fireside for one year.

3. Any person sending us $1.50 for a new subscriber for next year, not only entitles such new subscriber to what is mentioned in No. 2, but he will himself get Our Dumb Animals a year free of cost.

Should you wish to do so, you may name any boy or girl you would like to have receive Our Dumb Animals in place of yourself.

If you send two new subscribers as above, you can name some one for each subscriber you send, and Our Dumb Animals will be sent to whomsoever you name.

P. S.—We have extended the above offer for a short time. However we will not send unless you request it. If you want these papers extra, just say so when you write.

Plymouth, Indiana, Jan. 18. 1905.

Brother Zilmer has been holding meetings at Burr Oak Church, this County for a week. His audiences have been good, though the weather has been severe most of the time.

Mrs. Lou Greer Butler was recently married to Gabriel Rohrbach, and lives at Zelma, Okla. She writes to in this way inform her friends of the fact, and we take pleasure in making this statement for her, and wish her happiness.

The programme for our Indiana Conference is published in this issue. We trust the friends throughout the State will make an effort to be present. All will be made welcome. We are to be visited by Sister Mattie Neill of Salem, O., who with her husband shares the the honor of being Ohio State Evangelist. Bro. Geo. Neill of Cleveland, O., who will attend this meeting is the son of Bro. and Sister P. Neill, and is a young man of no mean ability. Be at the meeting and besides meeting there new faces, renew acquaintances with the old veterans on the programme who will each be here if health permit. Come and have a good time.

To say anything regarding the War in the far east at present is to enter into the list of guessers. There has been little done of an active character. A small body of Cossacks have penetrated across country to the rear of the Japanese lines, and damaged their railroad from New Chwang. While this is unpleasant, it is not a decisive event. Little is known of the movements of either Japanese or Russian fleets. The Russian war party is contending with the threats of revolution at home. What they may amount to is yet to be seen. The element that is now the most dangerous is the notice sent by Russia to China, and all the neutral powers, claiming that China has been disregarding her agreement, and has been aiding Japan in the War. The motive for making this protest just now is likewise a guess. If Russia really thinks China has violated her agreement, and wishes to have the same stopped, likely the powers combined can make a way to force China to cease. However, if it be but notice that on this pretext Russia herself will henceforth claim the right to invade Chinese territory then there are various complications to arise. Should her ships evade the Japanese vessels, and get to far eastern waters, this would leave her free to seize any convenient port, and make it a base. As a number of her vessels are now in Chinese waters in a dismantled condition, the Japs may take the opportunity to sail in and finish them. Again, there is a vast line of Chinese frontier to which Russia has already laid her railroads, and she could invade the country from these points. This would bring the dreaded Chinese uprising, and while Russia was being stung by thus stirring up this hornet nest, she could call all Europe to her aid to put it down. Inasmuch as our own government took the leading part in inducing China to stand neutral, we could hardly expect to keep out of the affair. Should it be the aim of Russia to thus embroil other nations, and so detract attention from her own condition, it will be taking desperate chances, and there is no knowing how it may end. Events move rapidly and the student of the Scriptures must be prepared for any event. Watch.

"Orders." No. 3.

In this paper we will consider the functions and qualifications of the evangelist. As a preliminary remark I wish to say that the modern conception of a "clergyman" as "pastor" of a church is not Scriptural. As shown in a previous paper, the elder or bishop is the pastor, the one to feed the flock. Acts xx: 28; 1. Pet. v: 1-4. He is the pastor and teacher. Eph. iv: 11. This being true, there is not any Scriptural warrant for the modern "pastor." If the man to whom this term is applied has a work or place provided for in the Apostolic Constitution, he is an evangelist. He is engaged in preaching (whatever that may be) and such other duties as were performed by the evangelist.

The term "evangelist" is found Acts xxi: 8; Eph. iv: 11; 2. Tim. iv: 5, and properly means "a messenger with good tidings." The apostle Paul charged Timothy to "do the work of an evangelist," and among other duties enjoined upon him was this: Preach the word." 2 Tim. iv: 2. This is a vital part of his "work." From Acts 8 we learn that Philip, who was an evangelist (Acts xxi: 8), preached or evangelized Christ (v. 5), the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ (12), preached Jesus (35), and evangelized in the cities until he came to Caesarea. 40. He was evidently called an evangelist from the fact that he evangelized. In this evangelization he conformed to the injunction to Timothy to "preach the word," for it is said that "the apostles heard that Samaria had received the word of God." Acts viii: 14. From all of which it is seen that he is strictly a preacher of the word. Whatever that word teaches concerning "the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," he is to evangelize—announce as glad tidings. Philip did at Samaria what the Lord said should be done there, viz.: "witness." Acts i: 8. And this witness was "this gospel of the kingdom" which Jesus said "shall be preached in all the world as a witness to all nations." Matth. xxiv: 14. When the Lord made provision for the proclamation of the truth in all the world He was careful to instruct the Church as to the message to be borne forth to men. In the proclamation of the gospel Jesus Himself, as the the Head of the Church, set the pace. See Luke iv: 18, 43; viii: 1. Philip's preaching consisted of two classes of things: the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Acts viii: 12. Due attention was given to the prophetic statements concerning that future kingdom, but not to the neglect or at the expense of the things which concerned the name of Jesus Christ. He "preached Jesus," setting before men and women the facts of his life, his character, his doctrine, his death, his burial, his resurrection, his ascension, his occupancy of heaven, and his return in glory to assume the reins of government. It is not definitely stated that he taught baptism, but from verses 12 and 36 it is seen that the people at Samaria as well as the eunuch were baptized as a direct result of hearing him preach. The former would not have been baptized, and the latter would not have requested baptism, had not something been said upon this subject. It is one of the things which concern the name of Jesus Christ. Into that name believers of the gospel are baptized.

The evangelist is dealing with "the word of truth" (2. Tim. ii: 15), which is the gospel. Col. i: 5. This word is not only to be divided, but "rightly divided." It must be adapted to the understanding of the hearers. He must begin with the first principles of the doctrine of Christ. Heb. v: 12; vi: 1, 2. He is to inculcate sound doctrine. 1. Tim. i: 3, iv: 6, 13, 16. He goes into new and unoccupied territory, and upon his labors in the neighborhood will depend the character of the doctrine the people believe. If he is an ordinarily respectable man he will influence some to believe the doctrine he teaches. How necessary, therefore, that he so divide the word of truth that he "needeth not to be ashamed" of his work. He is to study, not only the apostolic doctrine, but also the primitive manner of its proclamation. What a power for good or evil he may be. If he conscientiously and faithfully preaches the word, there will be men and women, as at Samaria, to believe his preaching; if he preaches something else, there are also likely to be followers.

The evangelist is to "avoid unlearned (untaught) questions." 1. Tim. i: 4; iv: 7; vi. 4; 2. Tim. ii: 23. These will gender strifes. Where such contention exists, is it not due either to the loose preaching of the evangelist or a loose administration of Church Discipline on the part of the elder? The elder is to "hold fast the faithful word as he hath been taught." Titus i: 9. But by whom has he been taught except by the evangelist, who is to insist upon sound doctrine? 1. Tim. i: 3. Here is food for reflection. If the Church is not what it should be in doctrine and practice, if it is rent by factions, and divided by strifes of words, how much have I contributed to such a condition?

Another duty of the evangelist is to see that the Church is properly officered with elders and deacons. 1. Tim. iii: 1-16. The work and qualifications of these officers are distinctly set forth in the Word of God, so that the evangelist need not guess as to his duty in respect to this matter. He is the proper person to attend to this. See [illegible] is the vessel which bears to men the doctrine of God both as to faith and practice. He understands the message which he brings, and knows the principles of its application to human life through the Church.

As to the qualifications of the evangelist, it may be said, first of all, that he must be studious. "Study" (2. Tim. ii: 15), "read" (1. Tim. iv: 13), and "meditate." 1. Tim. iv: 15. He is to study the word which he is expected to preach. He can not preach the word if he is not familiar with its contents; and he cannot know the word without study. Study the word, its contents, its biographies, its history, its doctrinal teaching, and its prophecies, both fulfilled and unfulfilled. Let that be the treasury from which he brings forth things new and old. Matt. xiii: 52. Besides this he and his hearers may be benefitted by facts from history and science. Anything which will enrich himself or his hearers in knowledge that tends Godward, is to be the subject of reading and study.

He is to be "apt to teach," apt to communicate the knowledge he has acquired. 2. Tim. iii: 24. There are men who are veritable "walking cyclopedias," but they are closed up and can not impart knowledge to others. He should have clearness of perception, aptness of expression, and a good delivery. If there is anything in elocution, rhetoric and logic which can be useful in the proclamation of the truth, let him not disdain to make use of it.

He must not be contentious, not "strive." 2. Tim. ii: 24. He is not a debater, though he never fails to defend the faith when it is assailed.

He must have the power of enduring afflictions. Men may say unkind things about him as well as the doctrine he teaches, but this must not disturb his peace of mind. He is to be instant in season, out of season. He must not be easily discouraged at the seeming want of success in his labors. He must remember that "the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain." Jas. v: 7.

He is to "watch in all things." 2. Tim. iv: 5. He should be swift to hear, quick to observe; he should watch everything and everybody. But above all things else, watch himself.

He is to be "an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity (love), in faith, in purity." 1. Tim. iv: 12. Even though he be a "youth" or young man, his character must be such as to commend him to the esteem and love of all good men.

The office and work of the evangelist are not the product of man's imagination, as it is distinctly said that he that ascended "gave some evangelists." Eph. iv: 11. Barnabas and Saul were sent forth by the holy Spirit as well as by the Church which was at Antioch. Acts xiii: 3, 4. Timothy was chosen by Paul "to go forth with him." Acts xvi: 1-3. Philip the evangelist (Acts xxi: 8) was one of those scattered abroad who "went everywhere preaching the word." Acts viii: 1-5. He was not an apostle, for these all remained at Jerusalem. The Church must discern the qualities that fit a man for the work of an evangelist. Let the Church be pure in doctrine and life, and she will not be slow to recognize adaptibility in her children for the work of the Lord. Then let her encourage such in word and deed to "go to the work."

It has been "ordained" by the Lord "that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." 1. Cor. ix: 14. While it is true that the apostle "used none of these things" on his visits to Corinth (1. Cor. ix: 15), yet it is also a fact that he did take wages of other churches to do them service. 2. Cor. ii: 8. This is not written as a plea for a fat salary for the evangelist, but simply to call attention to the Lord's order relative to this matter. It should be beneath the dignity of the evangelist to degrade his work to the level of a money making institution, but if he gives himself wholly to the gospel, spending all his time and energies in the work, he is justly entitled to that which the Lord has ordained. Let it also be borne in mind that, although he may begin a youth, he will not always be young and strong and vigorous. After awhile age and labor will enfeeble him, and the Church must not allow the faithful servant to go down to his grave destitute and in want. That the evangelist may not be unduly hastened to his end, let the brethren and sisters see to it that he is given a warm bed when he retires from the labors of the day. To place him into the nicest spare bed in the farthest corner of the house, between the nicest sheets you ever saw but awfully cold, is not calculated to improve his health. Let him also be careful of his own health. Also let him be careful lest he cause unnecessary work and anxiety to the family who have received him with so much kindness.

Are there enough evangelists in the Church of God? What say the brethren about this? Have you an eye on the men who possess the necessary qualifications for useful evangelists? Have you encouraged them in a practical way as well as with good words? Church of the living God, are you awake to your privileges and opportunities? Do you feel your responsibilities? I feel deeply what I write, and would ask the brethren and sisters to consider these things in all seriousness. Where we have one evangelist we ought to have scores of them. We can not do too much. Are we doing all we can? Are our hearts, hands, and purses open to help where we can?

Secret Prayer.

Nothing contributes more toward sustaining our strength and spiritual growth in Christ than earnest prayer, and no place is more conducive to acceptable prayer than the closet. Hypocrisy is not an element of secret communion with God, such surroundings beget no false motives nor excite a desire for a display of words and mock solemnity. Pride and vanity and self esteem often are painfully manifest in public prayer. The voice, gesture and attitude all indicating that the prayer is addressed to an appreciating audience other than God. Some are so embarassed that they fail to ask for thing they really need. They fall into the habit of using old stereotyped phrases that may or may not contain any thing that God has promised. Such persons should be kindly instructed to enter into their secret chamber and there ask of God to give them the things most needful. Only a few may be able to pray acceptably before an audience add fewer still who may pray while standing without calling the attention of the audience to themselves rather than God. Kneeling is doubtless the most suggestive attitude of humility and reverence that we can assume, virtues that are not excessively prominent in this generation. Paul's expressed desire "That men should pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting need not be pushed the extreme as teaching that every attitude is recommended, but rather that prayer should not be neglected when it could possibly be made. I would not be understood as condemning the attitude of standing while giving thanks, but I think that kneeling is better for me. Personally I regret to see this old humble form displaced by any other. Sitting in prayer is most certainly the way if ease is consulted but aside from this it has no merit. I know we are admonished to submit to every ordinance of man for conscience sake but that does not interfere with my privilege and preference of bending the knee and bowing the head when asking of God the things needful for my well being. Let us not forget to pray the prayer of faith and take a firm grasp of the hope set before us. This will prevent us from drifting on to the rocks and being driven by every wind of doctrine.

A. B. Wince.

To those of like precious faith:

As I do not see many letters in the items under the heading of love feast this year, I will write a few lines hoping they may be beneficial to some scattered ones, and that others may be induced to write. We are of one family, and should hear from one another, and should bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ, in order to do this we must get acquainted with each other, and what better way can we accomplish this than by writing letters to the household of faith through The Restitution. Hoping the paper may be instrumental in leading some to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and act as a preacher to those who are isolated, and do not have the privilege of hearing the glorious gospel of the kingdom preached and to exhort people to follow in the footsteps of our blessed Master, who was tempted in all points as we are yet without sin, who did no sin neither was guile found in his mouth. Would to God that all who have taken upon themselves the name of Jesus, and who are trying to develop that higher life, so that they may be fit to reign with Jesus in his glorious kingdom. Do we appreciate our high calling to live and reign with Jesus? Oh, what responsibility rests upon us. If we expect to reign or rule with him we must also expect to suffer with him. If we are to be joint heirs with him in his glory and reign we must also participate in his sufferings. The Christian life is a life of warfare, we are commanded to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life, we must keep down the old man of sin, which is corrupt, and be renewed in the spirit of our minds. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, gentleness, meekness, temperance, which is self control. If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful, but so an abundant entrance shall be administered unto you into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Therefore let all those who have accepted the glad message of salvation let their light shine out brilliantly, be like a city set on a hill, which cannot be hid, that others may see their good works, and be led to glorify our Father who art in heaven.

Yours in hope of eternal life when the Life Giver comes.

Obituary.

Death has invaded our home and taken my loved and loving husband Andrew L. Filkins. He was born at Richfield, Otsego Co., New York, Dec. 27, 1844; died at our home at Canton, Kansas, Dec. 26, 1904, being sixty years old lacking one day. When our country called for troops in 1861 he was among the first to respond and served until after the close of the war, being in the Regular Army. Five years of army life left him broken in health, having taken a severe cold which resulted in lung trouble, which ultimately caused his death. In Aug. 1868 he was married to Delta C. Calkins, at Richland, Oswego Co., New York, came to Kansas in January, 1878, where he has remained until death claimed him. No children have blessed our union but several have been sheltered in our home by his loving care. Twelve years ago he accepted the gospel of the kingdom and was baptized into the saving name of Christ, has been ever strong in the faith, his parting words were, "Look for the coming Savior and the resurrection unto life." Although my home is broken and my heart is lonely, I am not mourning as those without hope. May the dear Lord soon come is my prayer. Delta C. Filkins.

Dearest brother, thou art sleeping,
Safe from pain, and toil and care;
Dearest brother, we shall miss thee,
Miss thee at the house of prayer.

Thou wilt sleep, but not forever,
Jesus died and rose again;
Soon He'll come in clouds of glory.
Then wilt rise with him to reign.

Julia A. Barber.

Julia A. Reynolds was born on Aug. 2, 1823, in St. Lawrence Co., New York. Came to Kingsbury, Ind., with her parents and family in June, 1836. Was married to Daniel Shaw on Nov. 6, 1839. From this union twelve children were born, six girls and six boys, of which number eight are living. On Sept. 21, 1852 she with her husband, took letters and withdrew from the Methodist Protestant church, at which time she with her husband were "Age to come, Second Advent believers, and have been such ever since as the Scriptures teach. She died Jan. 2, 1905. The good book says, "Blessed are those who die in the Lord, yea, saith the Spirit, from henceforth they do rest from their labors, and their works do follow them. At the funeral the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians was read and a hymn sung. We laid her away in the Kingsbury cemetery to await the resurrection.

[The above notice was sent us, but no name signed to it. Bro. Daniel Shaw is now 91 years old, and has taken this paper since it was first published by Joseph Marsh in Rochester, N. Y.—Ed.]

To the Illinois Bereans:

We now have some Berean pins, 20 cents each. Those who have not been supplied, may send to Anna E. Drew, 620 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Ill.

"Half our difficulty in doing anything worthy of our high calling is the shrinking anticipation of its possible after-consequences. But if Peter had tarried to count all that was to come—the poverty and wandering and solitude and lonely old age, the outcast life and chance of a fearful death—it may be he would have been neither an apostle nor a Christian."

No honest, faithful, heroic work ever failed of reward. It may not be the particular reward that the worker set out to win, but something richly worth the toiling for is bound up with all labor, this is one of God's beautiful laws.

Ye Must Be Born Again.

Birth has much to do with life. How can one live a pure and noble life who has descended from ancestors who were paupers and criminals? Some thinkers maintain that almost everything depends on birth. Men say, "Blood will tell;" "The stream cannot rise higher than its source;" "The child is father to the man;" and Jesus says, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." No one can boast of his blood. It is all tainted. Life is a treasure so valuable that it should be kept free from blemish, but it never is.

It is necessary to begin anew. When a traveler discovers that he is on the wrong road there is but one thing to do, he must turn round and begin again. When a builder discovers that he is working on an inadequate foundation, his work may be admirable, but he must throw it all away, and lay a good foundation and begin again So it is with life. The bias of heredity gives us a wrong trend. The fault can be remedied by beginning over again. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him." Saul of Tarsus discovered that his life was wrong, and he counted it all loss and began again. He did not try to mend his old life, but, becoming as a little child, he made a new beginning. When the Lord Jesus touched him he consented to be crucified with Christ, and then exclaimed, "Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

Some will hold on to the old life. They are proud of their birth, their honesty, their good works, and their own righteousness. But it is the question of the kind of life. There is a natural life and a spiritual life. That there are good qualities in the natural life no one will deny. Let them not be disparaged. But they are not spiritual. They do not bring the soul into fellowship with God. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Not until God enters into our life through the door of our voluntary surrender to him can we enter into his fellowship. Let men come to Christ with all their sins and depravity, yea, with all their culture, refinement and natural goodness and excellence, and be born again, and they shall enter upon a new life as much larger and sweeter and higher than the old life as the life of an intelligent natural man is higher than the life of the lower animals. It is the life of God in the soul of man. It is eternal life. If the stream can rise no higher than its source, let us rejoice and be exceeding glad, for the source of the spiritual life is God. This is that "life more abundantly" which Jesus came into the world to bestow on men.—Christian Advocate.

"A Roman Catholic priest, in Germany, on entering the pulpit, took a walnut into it. He told them that the shell was tasteless and valueless; that was Calvin's church. The skin was nauseous, disagreeable, worthless; that was the Lutheran church. He then said that he would show them the holy Roman Apostolic church; he cracked the nut and found it rotten!"

Poetry.

A Closing Song.

Lord dismiss us with thy blessing,
Keep us in the narrow way;
May thy spirit ever guide us,
May our footsteps never stray.
We are weak, dependent children,
Lead us by a Father's hand;
We are prone to wander from thee,
Pilgrims to fair Canaan's land.

'Tis not riches, fame nor power,
All while time must pass away;
But true wisdom we implore thee,
With thy grace from day to day.
We are weak, dependent children,
All our help must come from thee;
Thou art able, thou art willing,
We will put our trust in thee.

When temptation's wiles surround us,
And our hearts are vexed with grief,
Then to thee we fly for refuge.
Thou alone can give relief.
We are weak, dependent children,
Guard us with a watchful eye;
Thou alone can guide, direct us,
On thy word we will rely.

Berean Meeting, Cleveland, O.

The twenty-fifth meeting of the National Berean Association was held on Tuesday evening, December 13, 1904, at the home of Sister Hattie Pate, the place of meeting having been changed on account of the inability of Bro. Buell Nutt to be present, at whose home it had been decided to meet. The meeting was called to order by the President and opened with prayer by Bro. George Neill. Eight members responded to the roll call, minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved by the society. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $3.77, the amount of dues collected $1.20, making the total cash on hand $4.97. Sister Hattie Pate reported having received a letter from Sister Luella Smith, she also read an encouraging letter, which was of much benefit to all, sent to the society by Bro. Joblin, both were expressions of thanks for remembrances of flowers sent them.

Bro. James Thompson also reported having received a letter from Sister Whitehead, thanking the society for their part of the fund sent to a sister in Chicago through Sister Whitehead.

It was decided upon motion that the society endeavor to fill any space which should be allotted to them by the publishers of THE RESTITUTION, once each month and that this be commenced with the papers written on the present subject, "The Life of Paul." The matter of changing the name of the society was brought up by Bro. James Thompson, and upon a suggestion by Sister Bessie Nicholls, a committee of three, namely, Bro. James Thompson, Sister Jennie Salisbury and Bro. George Neill was appointed to arrange some definite plan to be submitted for decision at the next meeting.

The society had the pleasure of three visitors, Fred and Lillie Blythe and Sister Gertrude Grief and were pleased to add Sister Grief's name to our list as a new member of the society. This having completed the business for the evening the continuation of the subject was then taken up. Our leader Bro. Buell Nutt being absent his paper prepared was read by Bro. George Neill, there were also papers read by Sister Bessie Nicholls and Bro. Stanley Sanford, all of which were both interesting and instructive, the meeting then adjourned to hold the next regular meeting at Brother Klingstein on Jan. 10, 1905.

OUR REFUGE.

Our subject for this evening is found in Ps. ix: 9. "The Lord also will be a refuge for the oppressed; a refuge in the times of trouble." Also the next verse, "And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, has not forsaken them that seek thee." All through our life up to this present time, we can all say that this is true for God knows all our infirmities and remembers that we are but dust. Through the Scriptures we find the life of Jesus, as well as His disciples, one of hardship and trouble, yet he never complained, but often spent whole nights in prayer, for He knew that God would deliver him in these times. In Ps. lv: 22, we read "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee; he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved." He is touched with the feelings of our infirmities and knows all about our weariness, weakness and trouble by actual experience, for he himself was familiar with all kinds of suffering. When we are affected in any way, we are apt to think that God has forsaken us, but if at this moment we read our text, our minds are entirely changed. In some cases he is just trying our patience, and it is necessary that we should trust in God in order to understand Him and work out our salvation, and he will surely help us. David was continually calling upon the Lord asking for deliverance, and God always hearkened unto him and answered his prayers, simply because David trusted him and so found him to be a refuge. We have an example in 2 Sam. xxii: 2 7 "And he said The Lord is my rock and my fortress, and my deliverer; The God of my rock; in him will I trust: He is my shield and the horn of my salvation, my high tower, and my refuge, my Saviour, thou savest me from violence. I will call on the Lord, who is worthy to be praised; so shall I be saved from mine enemies. When the waves of death compassed me, the floods of ungodly men made me afraid. The sorrows of hell compassed me about; the snares of death prevented me. In my distress I called upon the Lord and cried to my God; and he did hear my voice out of his temple, and my cry did enter into his ears." "But I will sing of thy power, yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning; for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble. Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing, for God is my defence and the God of my mercy." Ps. lix, 16, 17.

How thankful we should be brothers and sisters that we have some one to whom we can go with all our trials, and by going to God we will receive strength and comfort to continue our way. We are told that if we suffer with Christ we shall also reign with him and whenever we are oppressed or in trouble, it seems as though we are brought nearer to him, if we go to him in the right spirit. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord, Heb. xii: 14, and this purity is to be had only by union with the Holy One of God. The life of the future is all holy for it is exclusively in Jesus.

Even though he was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, despised, oppressed, afflicted and cut off out of the land of the living as one unworthy of life, yet he was the "Chosen One." He is the king who shall banish all sin and trouble and reign in righteousness, and whose princes shall rule in judgment. Isa. xxxii: 1 "He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth, and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reins." The reign of Jesus is to be a reign of glory, power and triumph, when vice and iniquity shall come to an end and when all nations shall serve, worship and obey the King of Israel. What a glorious reign that will be when the King and all his officials will be righteous and do justice to everyone, and oppression and trouble will be no more, and peace and prosperity prevail and abound. Brothers and Sisters, our hopes set upon Jesus and apart from him we have nothing to expect. If we are to partake of the glories of that day and share in the establishment of the reign of righteousness, we must prove ourselves eligible for our Master's trust. We must go to him often in order to receive strength, and trust him at all times and work earnestly for his cause so that when he descends from heaven, we will be among those who are worthy to reign with him.

Love Not the World.

It is important that we heed the admonition of the apostle when he said, Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 1 John ii. 5. But few in these days hear these grand words. Under the law they were commanded not to covet. Yet they lo..d the world and the things of the world. Lot suffered great loss by the love of the things of the world, God sending his angels to lead him and his family out of that wicked city that they might not be destroyed. The mind is so constructed that it cannot retain the things of God and the things of the world. When we discard the things of the world we must remember Lot's wife. She made an effort to leave the things of the world but forgot God's command and looked back. Our Savior said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it first hated me before it hated you. If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead (to the things of the world) and your life is hid with Christ in God. Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness which is idolatry. Col. iii. 1 5. This whole chapter should be read and studied carefully. God rejected his ancient people for practicing idolatry so he will reject us if we heed not his warning. Covetousness leads us to deny God who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die that we might live through faith in his name. We must be able to destinguish between a covetousness that is commendable and one that is not. The apostle said to the church at Corinth, "Covet earnestly the best gifts." And yet he said, show I you a more excellent way. Which I understand to be those things that abideth forever, faith, hope and charity. If we covet these things with the same determination that those who love the things of the world do we will fill the measure of the Word which says, let them abound in you or be ye filled with the Word. The fountain from which all good must come is the Word of God. If ye love me you will keep my commandments. Also love one another with a fervent love. There is a covetousness which we should avoid as it leads to destruction and its end is death. Webster defines it as a strong desire, an inordinate desire. Excessive desire for riches. A greed for getting more deprives itself of the true end of getting. The covetous person lives as if the world were made altogether for him and not he for the world. In the 10th Psalm we find this character described. Let us use it as our measuring rod. Remembering that the Master refused worldly power and riches for the right to rule in the ages to come. "The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor. He boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous whom the Lord abhoreth, (margin). The covetous blesseth himself, he abhorreth the Lord. The wicked (covetous) through the pride of his countenance will not seek after God. God is not in his thoughts. (Margin. All his thoughts are, There is no God.) His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his sight. As for his enemies he puffeth at them. His mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud; under his tongue is mischief and vanity (iniquity). He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages. He lieth in wait to catch the poor, he doth catch the poor when he draweth him into his net. He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten; he hideth his face; he will never see."

What a terrible character we see painted in this picture. We see them all around us and often feel the weight of his hand. Many of them make loud professions. Others giving away princely fortunes to again turn and apply themselves to their dishonest trade. Better be as our Savior was "without where to lay his head," than have all the riches of the world and be covetous for the same. Follow not after such things. Remember what the Psalmist has said. The Lord is King forever and forever, the heathen are perished out of the land. Lord thou hast heard the desire of the humble; thou wilt prepare (establish) their heart, thou wilt cause thine ear to hear; to judge the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may no more oppress (terrify). Bless the name of our God, his promise is sure; only we must with patience wait and with much energy acquire the whole Christian armor, that we like Paul run with patience the race that is set before us and like him in the end be able to say, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only; but unto all those also who love his appearing. My dear readers, let not the deceitfulness of riches deprive you of the rich reward that God has promised you. That of an eternal inheritance in his kingdom.

COMING BACK.

"Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also." John xiv. 1, 2.

What are the settings that surround these words? When were they spoken? Under what conditions and circumstances were they uttered? They are the words of our Savior. The last passover had been observed by Christ and his twelve apostles. Jesus had said, One of you must betray me. Christ had spoken to Judas saying, What thou doest do quickly. Judas had already gone out into the darkness of the night to betray his Lord and Master into the hands of his enemies to be crucified. After Judas had gone Jesus began to tell the eleven that he was about to leave them and that where he was going they could not come. But, said Jesus, Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God believe also in me. If I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also. I will come again. Coming back. Oh! how much of hope, comfort and cheer are found in those two, short words! I am coming back again!

Very many times the sadness of a separation of friends and loved ones has been brightened by the joyous hope of a return, of a coming back of the absent one, and yet the fond hopes of the return we so long looked and hoped for never came.

Jesus's vision saw not into the fathomless future and man's arm fell powerless to dictate and fulfill. But the promise Christ gave to his apostles is not shrouded with an uncertainty. No chasms to cross, no bridges to sink, plunging his palace car hundreds of feet below, burying its occupant forever from the sight of the loved and waiting ones left far behind. No green grave on the broad prairie or on the mountain to prevent the fulfillment of these words, for Christ has said, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore." And as John the Revelator stood on the sea-girt isle banished for the witness of Jesus, with nothing to cheer him in his lonely solitude, save the requiem of the ocean waves as they dashed against the rocky walls of his prison home could with confidence exclaim, "Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him." "Then cast not away your confidence which hath great recompense of reward," Heb. x. 35, for it is Jesus speaking. After the wearisome journey up Calvary's height had been traveled, after the crown of thorns had been worn, after the bitter cup of gall had been drank, after the cheerless sleep in Joseph's tomb had been experienced, we hear Jesus say "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man as his works shall be." "Watch therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh; and what I say unto you, I say unto all, watch."

Are we ready, waiting, watching and longing for that return? Will the Church be found watching, ready, prepared as a loving bride adorned for her husband when Jesus shall come? Let us draw before our mind's eye two pictures and see which of the two conditions in life we are living.

Far back among the green hills of New England stands a vine-clad cottage. Night has spread her mantle over the scene. Two lovers are sitting side by side. The maiden is in tears. Her lover says to her, Let not your heart be troubled at my departure. If I go away I will come again, and where I am there you will be also. When certain events come to pass then begin to look for my return, for it will then be nigh at hand, even at the door; and with a few parting words he is gone.

The maiden rises from her seat and retires for the night. For a period a loving correspondence is carried on. After a time the lover in the far off country detects a cold indifference on the part of his betrothed. Her letters are short and far between. He wonders, and is greatly troubled because of this fact. He feels he must return and learn the cause. He sends word of his coming. His neighbors learn of the good news, and hasten to rejoice with the maiden, saying, We hear Charley is coming back soon. In a very indifferent tone and manner, she replies, Perhaps he will sometime. I am not particularly interested in that event. I am having a good time in society, why should I wish for his coming back. I am not particularly interested in the matter. It matters not to me how long he stays away, or if he never comes.

Oh! how it would have saddened the heart of the far-off lover if he knew the full extent of the indifference that existed in the bosom of his betrothed. He hastily makes preparations to return and learn the truth. He sits down and in loving words from a true, noble, manly heart he says to her, I am coming back very soon, will start in the morning. At early dawn a stranger enters the car. I am attracted with the pleasing countenance of the man. I draw towards him. I stand by his side. I ask, Are you going far, my friend? The stranger looks up and with a happy smile replies, Yes, sit down by my side and I will tell you all about it. Am going east to one of the New England states. Far, far up among the hills dwells a beloved maiden awaiting my return. We are to be married soon. To what place are you going? I am going east, also beyond your city. Let us sit together as we go.

For many miles we enjoy each others society. As we near his destination my friend begins to move uneasily in his seat, and eagerly notes the snow-covered hills and mountain-tops as we swiftly pass them by. I know his heart and mind, and I leave him alone to enjoy his thoughts of the meeting now near at hand. I take my seat in the rear of the car that I may unobserved note the greeting of the happy lovers and catch a glimpse of the waiting one. The last station but one is called out. My friend starts from his seat and looks out into the blinding storm that is raging. On and on the train speeds. My friend in his eagerness to catch a glimpse of the station with warm hands melts the frost and ice from the car window and anxiously looks out into the raging tempest. I now have become almost as anxious as he to behold their meeting. I cross over to the same side of the car with my friend and anxiously look forth. The whistle sounds. We have reached his station. The train stops. Long before the cars cease to move my friend bounds from his seat and with a parting smile and a good by he is at the door. He is on the platform and down among the moving passengers. But oh! where is the maiden? I do not see her as I expected. Where is she? She is not there. Where is her lover? There he stands alone among strangers. Oh my God! what a sad change in his appearance? His smile has disappeared from his once happy countenance. Joy and hope have fled. He stands alone among the passing throng. She did not care to welcome his return. She did not care for the absent one. Sad picture, but it can be true.

Again, another picture rises before my eyes. Far up among the same green hills stands another vine-clad cottage. Two lovers are sitting in the doorway of that summer home. The same words of love and hope which were breathed into the ears of the unfaithful one and which will never lose their sweetness as long as love fills the human soul, were spoken into the ears of this loving heart, saying, If I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am there you will be also. With a smile on the maiden's face and a few words of hope and a good by, he is gone and the darkness of night receives him out of her sight. Many and oft are the loving messages that pass between them. After a time the events which were to mark the time of his return began to transpire. Eagerly did the loving heart of the maiden note and remember all these events and "daily ponder them in her heart." Often she would go to the office and enquire of the operator. Have you any tidings from Charley for me? Finally one morning she went and asked the same question over again, The operator said, Yes, here it is, tell the waiting one, "I will be home in a few days." With a glad heart the maiden hastens homeward, saying to all, Charley will be here soon. He is coming back. In a few days he will be here. Eagerly she watches the office for tidings of his approach. Again we find her sitting by the side of the operator watching for fresh tidings of the coming one. Finally as the instrument clicks off a message, the operator starts and exclaims, This is from Charley. Tell Lena I started yesterday morning. Am now in Kansas City and will soon be there. She hastens home and prepares to meet her loved one. At each point of any note he sends a message of his approach, saying, Kansas City is passed. Have reached Chicago. Am in Detroit. Buffalo is in sight. New York is fading out of view, and on and on he speeds homeward. At last the quick ear of the waiting, promised bride hears the shrill whistle of the approaching train that is bearing her lover homeward. Away down the track far beyond where the coaches over stop to unload the traveler, a white figure is seen peering through the mists of early morn to catch the first glimpse of the approaching train that is bearing her lover to her waiting arms, and the joy of the coming back and the meeting is soon realized and the union is complete.

Brethren, which of these two pictures describes your feelings and attitude as the waiting bride of Christ? Are you ready, longing and looking for his return? Heaven's great operator with spirit fingers and with a divine touch from a masterly hand guided by God himself, has sent to his church a loving message of the return of his Son, saying, He is soon coming to take you home. He is on his way even now. Babylon is passed. Medo-Persia is no more. Greece is left far behind. Rome is divided and tottering to her fall. The little stone will soon smite the great image on its feet, and God's kingdom will be here forever. The last station is almost reached. The whistle is sounding. Are you prepared as a bride adorned for her husband? Are you standing at the station ready and eager to welcome him back to earth again, and feel to exclaim "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly?" If so, happy art thou, and to all such he will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

Editor Restitution:

Wife and I do not want you to think that we do not intend to pay for the dear old paper, for it is the least thought of our minds, but we have been so busy and neglect and not very plenty of money has put us off till now, of course the "devil" would have us put it off always but we made up our minds to do it now, so, please find inclosed $1.50. We thank you for waiting on us. I hope we can always have the only true gospel paper in our home, it is the only true reading we have besides the Bible itself for we never have any "Gospel of the Kingdom" preached up here. I am so sorry for there is so much Spiritualism and the lie of the devil that one must keep a pretty level head on him to keep from believing the lie himself, so we search the Scriptures for therein and there only is found the foundation of man's relation to God, also what a great Christ we have to deliver us from the death caused by Adam. Some tell me that God caused all things and so he caused death, but when I read that "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," and "since by one man came death, so also came the resurrection from the dead," it looks to me that God was not the one who caused death. They need not try to lay the cause to God, for I cannot stand that. I point them to the Scriptures, which is our defense and only refuge in time of trouble. Many things point to his coming which I hope will not be long, for the world is waxing worse and worse, and people are fast becoming lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.

I can with all my heart say with the rest of Christ's little flock, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Yours in truth and the one faith.

Editor Restitution:

I am still striving for the faith once delivered to the saints in my weak way. I am trying to do all the good I can, and as little harm as possible. I thought I would send in a few lines for the love feast. I hope it is not too late, for he says, he that is last shall be first. Dear brothers and sisters, let us do all we can for our Savior. For my part I am doing a right smart of missionary work for THE RESTITUTION. I am doing all that I feel like I am able to do at the present time. Dear brothers and sisters, let us do all we can as there is work for you and a work for me in the vineyard. Dear brothers and sisters, a new year's greeting to one and all. Now dear ones, if we should n't ever meet in this troublesome world, I hope we will all meet in that better home where there is no sighing, no troubles, or no parting. Love to all, from a sister in the Abrahamic faith.

Thy Kingdom Come.

Thy kingdom come.
I heard a seer cry: "The wilderness,
The solitary place,
Shall yet be glad for him, and he shall bless
(Thy kingdom come) with his reverent voice
The forests; they shall drop their precious gum,
And shed for him their balm; and he shall yield
The grandeur of his speech to clothe the field.

Then all the soothed winds shall drop to listen
(Thy kingdom come)
Comforted waters waxen calm shall glisten
With hushed tremblement beneath his smile;
And who over the while
Shall take, and to her awful joy is prest,
The humblest of his types—Thy kingdom come)
And hills that all apart shall be no longer dumb;
No, they shall shout and shout,
Raising their lovely loyalty along their dewy plain,
And valleys round about.

And all the well-content wood land, maple sweet
With flowers—the opened at his feet,
Shall meaver-shout and make the welkin ring,
And tell it to the stars above, about and sing,
Her cup being full to the brim,
Her poverty made rich with him.

Her yearning satisfied to the utmost sum—
Lift up thy voice, O earth, prepare thy song,
It shall not yet be long;
Lift up, O earth, for he shall come again,
Thy Lord; and h shall reign, and he shall reign
Thy kingdom come."

The following clipping from the Baltimore Sun may be said in the main to express truth, and it may also be said to express it in a very wrong way by giving credit to Herbert Spencer and modern science as the discoverers of the "Only Living" and "True God." The concept of the "one great Eternal underlying cause"—the intelligent energy is framed in modern sound but the sense is equally well expressed by the ancient Bible writers, centuries ago. The Psalms are full of poetic descriptions of the intimate and close relation between the Creator and his "work." The prophets rejoice of the presence and "shelter of his arms. Jesus said, "I know that thou hearest me always" and Paul told the Athenians that in him we live and move and have our being. That science would have dared to make the sublime discovery of the "Living God" unaided is not within the range of probability if indeed it could have been possible—this we may observe from the "agnostic" position of its leading and representative men living and dead. In fact it may be considered doubtful that science has made the discovery at all so far. Heretical science up to date has made no public profession of any such faith as the doctors give her credit for, and experimental science has also been dumb on the subject. The most that can be said so as to be strictly within the limit of truth would be that all the discoveries of modern science are corroborative of the ancient Bible postulate that "God is." Perhaps this is about what the celebrated doctor intended to say but he overstepped the mark and gave credit where it did not belong, and took away credit where it did belong.

J. F. GRILLETLY.

In answer to a request for fuller information concerning his much-talked-of Harvard sermon Dr. Lyman Abbott issued today a statement, in which he said:

"The sermon was not written. It was delivered, as all my addresses are, extemporaneously. Its theme was "The Divine Presence;" its object to awaken in the consciousness of the congregation the sense of that presence of God which is the foundation of religion and the inspiration of life. It contained nothing which I have not been saying in one form or another in spoken word and printed page for years past.

"The conception of God as a Great First Cause, who ages ago set in motion certain secondary causes which control the world, and with which he interferes from time to time as exigency may require, is giving place to a conception of One Great Eternal Underlying Cause, as truly operative today as he was in that first day when the morning stars sang together: Every day is a truly creative day.

"This is the conclusion to which science has been leading us, expressed in the words of Herbert Spencer, who, though not a great philosopher, is a great interpreter of the scientific thought of his time: 'We are ever in the presence of an infinite and eternal energy, from which all things proceed.' This eternal energy is not absent from the universe. It is in the universe. We are ever in its presence. It is not many energies. It is one energy. Science has dug a grave and buried in it, beyond possibility of resurrection, both polytheism and idolatry.

"This Energy is an intelligent Energy. The relations of the physical world are intellectual relations. Science does not create them. It discovers them. Science thinks the thoughts of God after him.

"The notion of a humanized God sitting in the center of the universe, ruling things, is gone, and in the place of this science has brought us back this: 'We are ever in the presence of the Infinite;' and history has brought us back this: 'There is a power not ourselves that makes for righteousness,' and literature has brought us back this: 'Spirit with spirit can meet; closer is He than breathing, nearer than hands or feet.'

"I think that there was a personal God 6,000 years ago, or 60,000 years ago, or 600 years ago, and that today, when I can go out and see him painting the leaves and starting this fall the beginnings for next year's spring—see the love and life of the ever-present God at work before my eyes, can I think that his personality is gone? No; a thousand times nearer, a thousand times closer.

"We are in the presence of the great Divine Personality. What we mean by personality is this: The infinite and Eternal Energy from which all things proceed is an Energy that thinks, that feels, that purposes and does, and is thinking and feeling and purposing and doing as a conscious life, of which ours is but a poor and broken reflection."

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once. Sow now the seed—God will give the increase.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chidwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope,
W. L. CREWS.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

The Secret of Success.

Choose thou, oh, youth, thy path in life,
Let not events decide;
Be not, in life's momentous strife,
Like weeds upon a tide.

Determined what thy aim shall be,
Toil with that aim in view;
If circumstances hinder thee,
Make circumstances new.

Be not the iron that is beat
And made to glow
The arm that gives the blows.

They win in life who will to win,
They fail who faint and fear;
To him with dauntless heart within
No obstacles appear.

There is no mount too high to scale,
No stream too wide to span,
For him who wills he will not fail,
Who will and therefore can.

So choose, oh, youth, thy path in life,
With firm resolve decide;
Bring all thy powers into the strife,
Success shall thee betide!
—Philip Burroughs Strong.

Notes by the Way.

My work at Cedarville, Missouri, being concluded, Bro. R. Fyfe, conveyed me to Lockwood, where I took the train for Mountain Grove, Mo. While waiting at the depot I noticed a horse trainer, breaking in wild and vicious horses. This was quite interesting to me. The horses would fight and kick in a furious manner, but it was all to no purpose, the animal in a very little while would become quite subdued, and docile in his hands. I could not help thinking of how the very men who could so soon break the wild spirit of a furious animal, were utterly powerless to break their own wild spirit. James says: "We put bits into the horses mouths that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body." "Every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tame, and hath been tamed of mankind; but the tongue no man can tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." "The tongue can no man (by his methods) tame," but there is a power that can subdue the wildest nature, and put in subjection the "unruly member." When once the Blessed Hope captivates the heart of a sinner, and the sweet spirit of the blessed Christ rules within the wildest spirit can be subdued, and brought into subjection.

I arrived at Mountain Grove at about 10 o'clock P. M. Bro. Dale met me at the station, and took me to his home in his carriage, where I was kindly welcomed by Sister Dale. I found them both rejoicing greatly in the Blessed Hope.

Bro. Dale and family were living at Galveston, Texas, at the time the tornado and the flood which laid waste the city, and strewed the ground with the dead like a battle field. While pretty much all they had was destroyed; yet they were more fortunate than most families, the lives of the entire family were saved, which was far more precious to them, than all earthly goods.

They had a pair of mules which were turned loose, which sought places of refuge. When the waters had subsided one of them returned to the place where the home once stood, and the other one Bro. Dale found perched on the top of a house which laid on the ground.

Greater desolations than those which visited Galveston, will shortly visit the earth, when the Lord cometh out of his place to shake terribly the earth, and punish the inhabitants for their iniquity. God's servants are going about over the land, saying: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the Inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." How few believe the message. The only place of refuge is in the Ark Christ Jesus. All who neglect to seek refuge, will have to endure the storm. Only one here and there accepts of the invitation to seek refuge, and happy are they. The storm will come, all the same, whether men believe it or not.

The good seed—the Word of the kingdom was sown at Mountain Grove. It is a new field. The attendance for a part of the time was good, and like all other places, some were impressed, and some were not. If this age should continue much longer, some at Mountain Grove, may enter the ark. A number of Russellites attended [illegible] but when they found that the preaching did not harmonize with that of their blind guide Mr. Russell, they staid away. They do not look for the coming King, but are saying, Lo, he is here, or lo, he is there, he is in the "secret chambers," has come in secret or invisible presence, thus fulfilling to the very letter what the Lord said would take place, just previous to his glorious, open visible coming, a coming which all tribes (nations) of the earth will see. Mr. Russell teaches that the crucified Jesus did not rise from the dead, but his body was made way with in some mysterious manner, thus contradicting the angel, when he said: "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." When Thomas heard reports that the crucified Lord, was risen from the dead, he said: "Except I shall see in the hand the print of the nails, put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." Jesus said to Thomas, "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." He wanted to prove to Thomas that he was the identical Jesus, whom the Jews hung on the cross. If the teachings of that blind guide, Mr. Russell is true, then Jesus must have practiced fraud upon Thomas. The declarations of Jesus, and the teachings of Mr. Russell are entirely at variance.

These followers of Mr Russell at Mountain Grove, are real nice people, and I believe honest, and I do hope the scales will fall from their eyes, before it is too late to enter the ark, before the King comes.

There are many nice people living at Mountain Grove, and it seems to me, with a little earnest effort some may yet be gathered into the "little flock," from that city.

The city is located on the Ozark Mountains, the surrounding country is quite pretty. Bro. Dale took me up on the highest eminence called Bald Knob. From that elevation we could discern a mountain range in the State of Arkansas.

The land on the Ozarks is fruit land. The whole country is given up to fruit raising, apples and peaches are especially fine.

I enjoyed my visit at Mountain Grove. Brother and Sister Dale are two of God's precious jewels, may God bless them. Having bid them farewell I took the train for Kansas City, arriving there at about six P. M. on Saturday night. My nephew, Ira Wilson met me at the depot. I spent Sunday with my nephew and family, and had a pleasant visit with them.

On Monday I took the train for Bonner Springs, Kansas. I was invited by Dr. Denslow. I learned that the doctor had fallen asleep in Jesus. I found that circumstances were such that no meetings could be held at that place. I spent a few days visiting with Sister Denslow. She was living with an Uncle of hers, a Seventh Day Adventist, who was ninety-seven years old, the old gentleman wanted her to have me come and stay at his home, as he said he might learn something. A married daughter of the old gentleman was keeping house for him, who was a Methodist.

The old gentleman was of the opinion, and he did not fail to express it either, that all except Seventh Day keepers belonged to Old Babylon, and would be damned. They make Sabbath keeping take the place of the gospel. I never yet saw a single Sabbath keeper who ever kept it according to the law of Moses. On Friday night, I said to his maid servant, you will have a rest tomorrow, won't you? Why no, she said, why should I? I said to her, you employer is a Sabbath keeper, and that would be a violation of the law, for him to allow his "maid servant," to "do any manner of work," either "baking" or "seething." Ah, says she, I shall have to work, he will have his meals cooked all the same.

The Sabbath keeping exists more in their brains, than in fact. At the age of ninety-seven this old man's mental capacity remains quite unimpaired. He can reason well, and transact business. He goes for all the preachers who come to his home. They don't think it proper to argue with an old man, and so he thinks they cannot meet him, but that he can scatter them like a fog before the rising sun.

A Seventh Day Adventist preacher staid at the house a night and a day while I was there These are the first Seventh Day people that I have met while on my trip. Sister Denslow wished me to accompany her to the grave yard, to see where her husband was laid to rest to await the coming of the King.

On Saturday afternoon, I went up to Kansas City, and stayed over Sunday again with my nephew and family. On Monday, I went to Rosedale, Kan., and spent a few days with a cousin.

I next took the train for Winter, Oklahoma. I left the train at Orienta, at one o'clock P. M. Bro. Randolph met me at the station. We took dinner at a restaurant, preparatory to a twenty-nine mile drive by carriage to Winter. We started at about 1:30 P. M. Bro. Randolph said he had given out an appointment for me that night, but we would not be able to make it. Sister Nancy Barber, of Salem, Ohio, who is a sister to our Sister Randolph, was visiting at their home, went and filled my appointment, and assured the people that I would be on hand the following night. Sister Barber had several times previously addressed that community. The next night I commenced a series of meetings which lasted about two weeks, continuing over two Sundays. The attendance at these meetings was satisfactory, and the attention and interest all that one could expect.

The people were quite friendly and social, and invited me to visit them at their homes. Tracts were placed on the desk, for free distribution, which were eagerly carried home. The meetings were held in the school house, where I hung up at different times eight charts, to illustrate my topics, which were a great help in making the truth plain.

Bro. Randolph put an organ in the school house, which was played by Sister Barber, and two or three others, who live in the community. The people gathered early, and had neighborly visits, and clustered around the organ, and had a merry time singing. After preaching they would have more singing.

How nice it would be if we could have had hymn books of our own, when the people could sing truth, in place of lies. A hymn book is much needed. There is nothing now. A book should be gotten out as soon as possible.

As to the effect of the meetings at Winter, it will take time to develop. A neighbor told Bro. Randolph that the whole community was stirred up, that nothing had ever before aroused it as these meetings had done.

One yielded obedience to the gospel by being buried with Christ in baptism. This is Bro. Mead Randolph, a brother of Eugene Randolph. The baptism took place on the afternoon of January 8th, in a small body of water, at the bottom of one of those great canyons, which are numerous in this part of Oklahoma.

Bro. Mead has learned his lessons well and is well posted in the one faith and hope of the gospel. I am told that morally he is a very exemplary man, and lives an upright life.

This part of Oklahoma has rich fertile red earth. The main crop is broom corn. Winter is in Woods County, and the said county is on the extreme western border of Oklahoma, the [illegible] ying off place of frontier life. Most of the people here are holding down government claims. About one year ago, a tornado swept over this country and blew away nearly all the small log houses built on their claims in which they were serving their five years' time. In place of rebuilding these houses, the people are living in "dug outs" in the ground. Several young ladies are holding down claims, one of them is Sister Hannah Barber. [illegible] use blew away, she is now [illegible] probation in a [illegible] door. The walls are plastered by a cement on the earth, made by burning gypsum, which abounds in this country. She then painted this plaster with green paint. She has two rooms, they look quite cozy and are certainly comfortable in cold weather. The roof is raised up some two or three feet above the level of the ground, and in this is placed a small window, for light and air. I visited another, which is on the edge of a great canyon. This they dug into the side of a hill, and the door coming on the level earth on the top of the canyon. This is occupied by a widowed father, and his daughter. Bro. and Sister Randolph, Sister Barber, and myself accepted an invitation to take dinner with them. After dinner they entertained us by music on a violin and guitar. We enjoyed it so much.

Some houses have sod walls, and shingle roofs, inside walls plastered with gypp cement.

The Randolph brothers, however, have modern houses.

We also accepted an invitation to dine with another neighbor, whose house escaped the path of the tornado. Some of the young ladies holding claims are energetic pushers, they worked as carpenters, and helped to build the school house I preached in.

I certainly have been favored with a practical glimpse of pioneer life in all its various phases, away on the frontiers.

All the timber there is in this country is in the bottom of the canyons, and they have to snake it out by horses, fastening ropes and chains to the timber.

The air sweeping over these hills and mountains, is sweet and pure. Consumption certainly never develops in this pure atmosphere.

Personally I feel well and vigorous, and have sound lungs, and clear voice with which to sound out the glad news. I have improved in health so much travelling in this western country. After filling three or four more appointments, I expect to go into Texas and Louisiana.

I feel encouraged with the results of my ministry of the Word. I feel assured that much good can be accomplished in Oklahoma.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Bible. No. 2.

Open and avowed infidels are not the worst enemies of this book. There is a class of professed friends who are doing vastly more mischief in their work of undermining faith in the Scriptures than the whole line of infidels have done from Phorphiry and Celsus down to Robert G. Ingersoll. These are the Higher Critics, who have become so conspicuous in the last few years as to attract the attention of all who know any thing about current religious literature. The destructive criticism of these pretended friends of the Bible has spread further than to those who know them by name, and how to meet them. Some who know not their name nor their system have had their faith shaken and are calling in question portions of the Bible, and even doubting the reality of miracles. Dr. Burr in "Salvation" "These men even the most radical of them, are preaching their views without hindrance in our churches and presses. They occupy chairs in our colleges and seminaries. The defection is so great that no ecclesiastical discipline is attempted. Courts civil and ecclesiastical have been appealed to in vain, to prevent the perversion of trust funds defended by oaths and creeds as strong as human ingenuity could make them." The complaint in part is that these critics are sapping faith in the well established doctrines of the old creeds." Were this all we would not be alarmed, especially if they were adopting in lieu Bible views. The religious world would then be saner. If these men would turn their critical acumen upon much that is stereotyped in creeds and do it in the light of "what saith the Scriptures," they would find an ample field for the exercise of their mental powers. This is the time for them to engage in this kind of work, when they can without hindrance or without dread of ecclesiastical courts say things the most radical against the Bible. Many of the doctrines of the creeds are not Scripturally well established though those who still endorse them think so. To upset these would be a much easier task than to upset the great Pyramid, figuratively speaking. These critics cannot disprove the proposition that the Bible is an inspired book; that its author is God, but they are nevertheless, filling the world with the evil fruits of infidelity. These Higher Critics are men of learning, are graduates of the highest schools this country, Great Britain and Germany afford. Are men of character and influence, and are in stations and relations where they can wield this influence to the best advantage. They are in the pulpit, in college chairs and back of the press. Grey heads listen patiently to attacks on the Bible, which a few years ago would have raised a storm of astonishment and protest. Their criticism is so destructive that little is left as inspired and reliable. With many the Old Testament is gone and the New Testament is going. The Messiahship of Jesus, his miraculous birth, the atonement, his resurrection and ascension; and all the miracles are but human inventions. Some who have not gone so far are feeling their way at various stages along the line of descent to the same horrible pit of unbelief. Now it matters not how far these critics have gone in their denial of inspiration to whole chapters and books of the Bible, they still pose as ministers of the gospel, as Professors of theology in colleges, as creditable expounders of the Word, as entitled to prefixes and affixes denotive of their dignity when in reality they are infidels, but lack the courage and honesty to confess it. What else are they? The outspoken infidel is still in bad repute and these Higher Critics keep out of bad company.

Sobriety Among the Jews.

The following testimony of Dr. Norman Kerr to the Sobriety of the Jews is given in the Jewish Encyclopaedia, vol. i 334:—

"Extensive as my professional intercourse with the Jews has been, I have never been consulted for inebriety in the person of a Jew, while my advice has been sought for this complaint by a very large number of Christians. In my opinion their general freedom from inebriety in almost every clime and under all conditions (there are a few exceptions to this rule) is as much due to racial as to hygenic influences. This extraordinary people has, amid wondrous vicissitudes, preserved a variety of distinctive characteristics, and I cannot help thinking that some inherited racial insusceptibility to narcotism, strengthened and confirmed by the practice of various hygienic habits, has been the reason for their superior temperance. Even among those Jews in whom there has been an unusual amount of alcoholic drinking (though they were not drunk), when there has been slight thickening of the tongue, and unwonted exuberance of spirits, evidencing a certain amount of alcoholic poisoning, I have never detected the existence of the disease inebrity. Of this strong impulse to alcoholism or other narcotism I have never seen a case among this distinctive people."

Let us be pilgrims, not by constraint, but by loving choice.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLEASE READ EACH WORD OF THIS.

We have made an agreement with the publishers of "Farm and Fireside," a semi-monthly journal, published at Springfield, Ohio, by which we can present our patrons with that paper for a year entirely free of cost.

Farm and Fireside has from 20 to 32 pages each issue, and is illustrated. It is accredited with having the largest circulation of any home and farm paper in the world. It is a good paper for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit grower and gardener. The housewife has a department—in short all members of the home are supplied with reading suitable to each one. A sample copy will be sent to you soon.

OUR PROPOSITION.

Our proposition is to send each one of our patrons who pays his subscription up and on to the end of 1905, the Farm and Fireside for a year free of any charge whatever.

This simply gives you the both papers for the price of ours.

There is necessarily a limit to this offer and you will have to act very promptly if you wish to take advantage of it. Our arrangement ends with the month of December. So if you want the Farm and Fireside free for one year, send at once as above, and we will see that you get the two papers.

This applies to new and old subscribers alike. Each one who pays for THE RESTITUTION to the end of 1905 gets the Farm and Fireside as well.

Send as soon as possible, so as to be sure and secure the present we offer. If you are in arrears send the money to cover the delinquency, and send $1.50 for next year, and you get Farm and Fireside absolutely free.

A SECOND PROPOSITION.

In the city of Boston, Mass., is published a monthly journal devoted to education of young and old to the necessity of a humane and merciful treatment of dumb brutes as well as our duty to our fellowmen. This paper is called "Our Dumb Animals," and is specially beneficial for the youth of our land, though older people cannot fail to be helped by reading it.

We propose to send Our Dumb Animals free one year to every person sending us a new subscriber for THE RESTITUTION for next year.

Do not misunderstand our offer—

1. Pay all arrears and for 1905 and you get THE RESTITUTION for that time and Farm and Fireside for one year.

2. A new subscriber paying $1.50 for the year 1905, will receive all the papers of 1904 from the time his subscription is in hand, and the full year 1905, and will get Farm and Fireside for one year.

3. Any person sending us $1.50 for a new subscriber for next year, not only entitles such new subscriber to what is mentioned in No. 2, but he will himself get Our Dumb Animals a year free of cost.

Should you wish to do so, you may name any boy or girl you would like to have receive Our Dumb Animals in place of yourself.

If you send two new subscribers as above, you can name some one for each subscriber you send, and Our Dumb Animals will be sent to whomsoever you name.

P. S.—We have extended the above offer for a short time. However we will not send unless you request it. If you want these papers extra, just say so when you write.

Brother Joblin writes that his wife is still very low, and they live between hope and fear. He is too worn by care for her and his own infirmities to write at present. Our prayer is, if it be God's will, that they both may be spared for more work for the Master.

On last Thursday the ceremony of the blessing of the waters of the Neva occurred at St. Petersburg. It seems that just in front of the Winter Palace on the ice of the river, a chapel had been erected for the ceremonies. A salute from batteries of artillery on the opposite side of the river was given, of course with blanks. By accident or design, no one will tell, one gun was trained directly at the chapel where the Czar was. When it was fired men fell, shot down by a charge of grape shot. The Czar was unharmed.

Russia Faces Revolution.

On Saturday last 100,000 workmen in St. Petersburg quit their work. It was planned that the people assemble and go to the Czar at his Palace on Sunday with a petition, asking relief from the hardships imposed on them. It was given out that all demonstrations must cease. That no gatherings would be allowed. Troops were hurried into the city and placed at all points to guard the approaches. A priest named Gopon who has the confidence of the workmen, and is said to be a leader, sent a letter to the Czar saying, "Sovereign: I fear your ministers have not told you the full truth about the situation.

"The whole people, trusting in you, have resolved to appear at the winter palace at 2 p. m. in order to inform you of their needs.

"It vacillating, you do not appear before the people then the moral bonds between you and the people who trust in you will disappear, because innocent blood will flow between you and the people.

"Appear tomorrow before the people and receive our address of devotion in a courageous spirit.

"I and the representatives of labor and my brave workingmen and comrades guarantee the inviolability of your person."

The Russian novelist Maxine Gorky says, "Today inaugurated revolution in Russia.

The emperor's prestige will be irrevocably shattered by the shedding of innocent blood. He has alienated himself forever from his people.

Gopon taught the workmen to believe that an appeal direct to the "little father" would be heeded. They have been undeceived. Gopon is now convinced that peaceful means have failed and that the only remedy is force.

The first blood has been shed, but more will follow.

It is now the people against the oppressors, and the battle will be fought to the bitter end."

To relearse the whole story would tax the limits of our paper. The newspaper headlines read, "Czar's home a city of death. Russian troops kill 2,000 and wound 5000 men, women and children. Not since the Massacre of St. Bartholomew has the world seen a like slaughter. Streets run in blood. Cossack hordes turned loose upon the people, and they laugh as they kill. Cry now is for vengeance. Workmen building barricades; thousands marching to their aid; Dynamite factory seized. Faith in emperor is gone.

All day Sunday the reign of terror was kept up, and Monday it was worse in its mutterings. More troops are on the march, the Czar and family have fled from the city. All business is stopped. Thousands of workmen from other points are on the way to reinforce their comrades. Stores of arms have been seized, and the call for aid is being answered throughout the Russian empire. There was to have been a strike at Moscow next Thursday, but the slaughter of Sunday has hastened that, and revolution is sweeping over the land. At Warsaw, Odessa and other large cities the call is heard and the answer is of no uncertain sound. To attempt to tell what the outcome will be is idle, and we will simply wait for developments. Meanwhile the war in Manchuria is dwarfed and out of sight.

"Who Hath Believed Our Report?" Isa. lviii.

The question here propounded by the prophet seems to imply that the people of that day were incredulous even in regard to the one longed for event, viz. the coming of him of whom the prophets had spoken, and set forth as their deliverer, the Messiah. In refusing to give ear to the voice of the prophet when he so graphically described the character and person and work of the coming One, they were willfully preparing to stumble, and to be offended at him when he should appear. Since as the prophet had said, "There was no comeliness nor beauty in his appearance that would make him desirable as a king. They had no conception of greatness and royalty blending with meekness and humility, and ending in ignominious death. One thought of victory and deliverance from their enemies and national reinstatement dominated every other, and rendered them blind to the glorious work of redemption to be wrought through the sufferings of God's Anointed, preliminary to his universal reign. Hence the words of the prophet in regard to his mission of service and sacrifice passed them as an idle tale. Their foolish hearts became inflated with pride. They shut their eyes, and stopped their ears, and rejected their king, and brought destruction upon their own heads as a nation. God rejecting them, and suffering them to reap the sad harvest of their own sowing. Their case would indeed be hopeless if God had not lain their iniquity as he has ours upon the sin Bearer, had it not been arranged through his amazing love that we and they should be healed by his stripes. Because we have all gone out of the way, and the same sentence of condemnation rests upon every soul of man that doeth evil, to Jew first and also to the Gentile. We may not boast of our fidelity to God and his inspired Word; nor claim to apprehend all that has been written by prophet and apostle. There is the same chance at this day to stumble and apostatize from the truth, yea, truth as vital to our salvation as that over which they stumbled and fell. We are cautioned repeatedly to keep in memory what we have heard, and not to be forgetful hearers of the Word, and to watch and to pray for the coming of the King, and kingdom as well; lest we all be overtaken in that day, "For as a thief shall it come on all the world." Now, how many of all those professing fellowship with Christ, are anxiously watching and waiting for the return of the Lord to begin the grand work of restitution, as outlined by all God's holy prophets since the world began? Were not these things written also that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of the living God, and believing we might have life in his name? Verily it was these things concerning his glory, that so few would be found believing when the Son of Man returns. How can they watch and wait and hasten unto the coming of the Lord himself, who do not believe he is ever coming to this earth again? How can such be said to love his appearing and kingdom? Then, how can they with Paul receive a crown of life in that day? Submitted in love.

A. B. Wince.

And God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty, that no flesh should glory in his presence. 1 Cor. i. 27-29. And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him, and said unto him, The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valor. And the Lord looked upon him and said, Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites. Judges vi. 12-14. The strength of weakness leaning upon God, and the weakness of human strength—this is the paradox, this is the spiritual truth of which Gideon's life is the illustration. See him hiding behind his wine press and trying stealthily to thresh out a little wheat for his family use, fearing lest the Midianites take it from him as they had been doing since the children of Israel had done evil in God's sight. But an unseen power was close at hand to guard this man of God. For Gideon was to perform through faith what 32000 men could not be trusted to do. Look Gideon, see who has arisen from his seat under the oak and is approaching you, listen to his words, "The Lord is with the mighty man of valor." But Gideon was in a discouraged mood that day and he questioned how God could be with them, when to all appearance [illegible] had taken and forgotten them. [illegible] again assures him, "Go in this thy might and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites, have not I sent thee." And still, O human weakness, the excuses began to come, the poverty of his family, [illegible] the humble place he occupied in his Father's household, were they not enough to hinder his usefulness. "Surely I will be with thee" [illegible] repeated to him, and still he asked proof after proof before he stepped out in the work God had marked out for him. It seems to us, looking at this whole event 3000 years after, that Gideon needed a great deal of urging. But he must count the cost and he knew what the result of that bold step would be. He had erected an altar to Jehovah, would God let him stop there? O no, the altar of Baal was in his father's house, God wished it removed, and perhaps this was the hardest thing to ask Gideon to do, but the command came, "Take thy father's young bullock, even the [illegible] bullock of seven years old, and [illegible] down the altar of [illegible] bath and cut down the grove that is by it." Jud. vi. 25. O how slow Gideon is to believe God, and mature into a faithful servant. Here again we see the timid trembling, natural man, even in obedience. Under the inspiration of the presence of the angel he could erect the altar to Jehovah, but when Baal's altar in his father's house was ordered torn down by the God of heaven, he trembling at the task, enlisted ten men of his servants, and under cover of night, "because he feared his father's household" performed the strange task, and awaits the results. Morning breaks and "His neighbors look with angry astonishment upon the wreck of their shrine, and the evidence of Gideon's bold rebellion. But how they clamor for his life and but for his father's shrewd tact he must have died. But when he suggested that if Baal be really God he should have killed Gideon himself, they had to let him go. How these words, "Surely I will be with thee" must have comforted him as this trial passed—only to meet another, for the angry Midianites gathered their mighty forces to battle to slay Israel. Again he must have thought of the angel's words, Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites. The Spirit of God comes upon him, he blows his trumpet, and his men rally around him 32,000 strong. But with all this host about him we see him begin to falter and ask God for a sign that he is really walking in his will and patiently, lovingly God listens and grants the request desired concerning the fleece of wool. Judges vi. 37-38. How human like is the lesson, shrinking from duty, fearful of consequences, but there is one good thing in this act, Gideon did not want it all one way, he desired a sure sign, so asked it reversed. No, casting lots with Gideon or trusting random work. "He was no longer the natural man, but the man of faith," and he now stands armed completely with faith, the mighty victor. Little did he realize however what a test awaited him, 32,000 men, not as many as their enemies, and still, "The people with thee are too many," came ringing in the ears of Gideon, "Lest Israel vaunt themselves against me saying, mine own hand hath saved me." So the sifting began and two out of every three are sent home, all the fearful ones and those afraid could go back again, 10,000 only remained. And still there are too many, another test must be made. Bring them down to the water brook, and I will try them for thee there. Surely he was safe for God stood right by him. "I will try them for thee." Gideon does as God directs and simply stands by and watches them as they drink. See them, man after man intent only on slacking their thirst they kneel and drink, and drink entirely unmindful of the lurking foe, who might spring upon them in an unguarded moment. Only 300 of the 10,000 men who listening, watching stand and cautiously dip the water in their hands, drink while they watch. Ah, these are enough for the Lord's work. O brethren, beloved of God, is this not the trial we are passing through? Mourning, discouraged because of the few, almost envious of others who are gathering many into their folds, forgetting it is not the many, but the "little flock" who are to inherit the kingdom. God will work all his will with the brave few who are faithful unto death. No cowards or careless ones wanted, they will all be sent back as Gideon's men were. He understood now that it was not his might or valor, but the Lord's that was to save Israel. "It was the strength of faith which is always the strength of weakness because it is the strength of God." These men been had been brought down to the valley of decision, and saw they were not fit for his work. Is it so with us? Is the blessed Master giving us blessings which we do not appreciate but becoming all absorbed in them forget the work before us so necessary to be done. God is weighing us in his balances, will he find in us any worth? Certainly if we watch, but we are very seldom told beforehand that the test is coming, so we must be on our guard and take the torch of truth, and fill our pitchers from the well of life, then can we cry with victory as did Gideon, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon."

Add Thou Not Unto His Words.

I believe that the names "Immortal soul," "Spiritual Israel," "Prophetic time" and "Door of mercy," as they are commonly used, represent ideas which are baseless, misleading and heaven daring additions to the Scriptures, for I do not find in the Scriptures any of those names or the ideas which they are used to represent.

The Parousia.

The word parousia, of which the Scripture so constantly speaks, is said to signify His presence; and therefore elaborate volumes have been written to prove that "the coming—parousia—of the Son of man" means His abiding invincible dwelling in the Church through the Holy Spirit. "Presence" the word undoubtedly means, but not omnipresence. The everywhereness of Christ in the person of the Comforter is the peculiar blessing of this dispensation. In this sense He can say to every member of His mystical body, the Church, in every place on earth and at every moment of time: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age." It was in order to give place for this world-wide, or rather Church-wide indwelling that it was expedient for our Lord to go away; that so the Paraclete might come to abide with His people perpetually. But this everywhere-presence of Christ by the Holy Ghost is never once spoken of in Scripture as His parousia. This term applies only to His bodily and visible presence, a being with us, which can only be effected by a corporeal return to us. Therefore is His advent comprehensively called His parousia, or coming: it is that "for which we look," and which "every eye shall see," and not that which has already come to pass spiritually, and which, therefore, no eye can see.

The second coming of Christ is the axis of a true eschatology; that in which all its doctrine and all its hopes stand together. Rightly are some insisting on what they call a Christo-centric theology; only let them consistently apply their principle to the doctrine of last things, making all our ultimate hopes and attainments to concentre in the coming Christ. Then shall we cease to hear in orthodox dogmatics that "sanctification ends at death," when the New Testament everywhere binds its consummation to the second advent of Christ; then also, except in liberal theology, may we no longer listen to the affirmation that resurrection is attained for each one separately in an instant, in the shutting of an eye, at the last breath of the body, when Scripture declares that "we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. 1. Cor. xv: 51, 52. Any doctrine of the resurrection dissociated from the advent must be false—false because eccentric, and without relation to the axis of redemption, the parousia. No atonement apart from the cross; no resurrection apart from the coming! The morning star of the Church is the glorious appearing; but this star, at least has satellites—the resurrection, the rapture, the glory—and not one of these will be visible "until the day dawn, and the day star arise."

What deep questions suggest themselves as soon as we begin to meditate on this theme! How can it be, if His coming is personal and bodily, that "every eye shall see Him?" Will His parousia be prolonged, or, as some hold, will it elapse in a moment, "as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west," leaving the great world to wonder what has become of the saints? In other words, will He be visible to His Church alone at His parousia, manifesting Himself unto them, but not to the world until a later epiphany, when He shall appear in glory with His saints? Already there has been too much of dogmatising on these points; therefore we prefer to leave them for the day to reveal.

The attitude of the Church toward this sublime event is the all-important consideration. That should be one of joyful hope, and not of dread expectation. We cannot think that true and watchful believers will share in that advent wail that which is so graphically pictured in the Revelation (Rev. i: 7): "All the tribes of the land shall mourn over Him." Indeed, they who pierced Him reading their condemnation in His wounds and smiting on their breasts; but they who own those wounds as the credentials of their peace with God will lift up their heads and rejoice, saying: "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him and He will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation (Is. xxv: 9). Eagerly do we summon parable and poetry to picture the exultant scene as we gather it from Scripture. One who stands among us, as the venerable Simeon of our generation, "[illegible] waiting for the consolation of Israel," has, in a recent utterance, made the advent scene so real by the use of a historical incident, that we are constrained herewith to reproduce the picture entire.

"When those that upheld the banner of truth had almost lost heart, and Protestantism seemed failing, John Knox accepted the invitation from the true-hearted ones, and left Geneva for Scotland. When he landed, quick as lightning the news spread abroad. The cry arose everywhere, 'John Knox has come!' Edinburgh came rushing into the streets; the old and the young, the lordly and the low, were seen mingling together in delighted expectation. All business, all common pursuits, were forsaken. The priests and friars abandoned their altars and their masses and looked out alarmed, or were seen standing by themselves, shunned like lepers. Studious men were roused from their books, mothers set down their infants and inquire what had come to pass. Travelers suddenly mounted and sped into the country with the tidings, 'John Knox has come.' At every cottage door the inmates stood and clustered, wondering, as horseman after horseman cried aloud, 'Knox has come.' Barks departing from the harbor bore up to each other at sea to tell the news. Shepherds heard the tidings as they watched their flocks upon the hills: The warders in the castle challenged the sound of quick feet approaching, and the challenge was answered, 'John Knox has come!' The whole land was moved; the whole country was stirred with a new inspiration, and the hearts of enemies withered." Oh, if that was the effect of the sudden presence of a man like ourselves—a man whom we will rejoice to meet in the kingdom, but only a man—what will the land feel, what will earth feel, when the news comes, "The Son of man! The Son of man! His sign has been seen in the heaven! O, wise virgins, with what joy will you go out to meet Him!"—A. J. Gordon in Christian Alliance.

The secret of life is concentration. "Scatter-brained" is a true synonym for "foolish," and the smaller the brain, the more foolish to scatter its powers. A very moderate amount of brain power, steadily applied to one thing, will accomplish it pretty surely in the end. The young man who concentrates is wise; and when he concentrates on the best things, his success is only a matter of time.

Religion is not a thing the world can do without. Some good people seem to consider it a sort of veneer, very nice, but not necessary; admirable in the wardrobe, but entirely unnecessary. This is all wrong. Religion is bread; it is life, for it is the staff of life.—Frank G. Tyrrell.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Little By Little.

Little by little the time goes by—
Short it you sing through it long if you sigh;
Little by little—an hour, a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away
Little by little the race is run,
Trouble and wailing and toil are done!

Little by little the sky grows clear;
Little by little the sun comes near;
Little by little the days smile out
Gladder and brighter on pain and doubt;
Little by little the seed we sow
Into a beautiful yield will grow.

Little by little the world grows strong,
Fighting the battle of right and wrong;
Little by little the wrong gives way,
Little by little the right has sway;
Little by little all longing souls
Struggle on nearer the shining goals.

Little by little the good in men
Blossoms to beauty for human ken;
Little by little the angels see
Prophecies better of good to be;
Little by little the God of all
Lifts the world nearer his pleadings call!

Thinking Better of One's Self.

"I have spent forty years," a professor in one of our theological seminaries recently declared, "trying to make people think better of themselves."

The statement seems a curious one at the first glance. Certainly there are people—we all know them—whose lack of self confidence defeats success in everything which they attempt; but this has never been considered a typical American trait! What did the professor mean? Simply this, that men and women are too apt to think of themselves as parts of a social order, not as individuals with individual claim upon the God whose children they are and individual work to accomplish for him. Put the life in the proper relationship to the Father, and how everything is changed! Is one poor and "left out?" It cannot touch the glad dignity of a child of God. Is one weak and timid and doubtful of self? But the Father is all-strength, and stands behind his child. Is one set apart in lonely places? So were Elijah and John and many another since: are not even the deserts God's?

Oh, to get away from the thought of man's judgment and to stand free and rejoicing and strong in the confidence of one's heritage, child of God—to be glad of life because it is God's gift, and work because it is God's commission, and love because it is God's revelation of himself to us—surely this must make every man and woman who realizes it, "think better of himself."

What drop in the cloud would stay up there, if God would give it the mission to come down here and water some tree and give life to some blossom? What ray starting on its mission from the sun, would stop in the heaven and delay itself there, if it might come to earth and kiss some cold spot here and warm it into spring and summer love and life? Pray God that, if you weep, your tears may give life to some one else, and if your life is full of sunshine, your sunshine may make some one else's life radiant.—Lyman Abbott.

Poetry.

Make Mother Happy

Children, make your mother happy;
Make her sing instead of sigh,
For the mournful hour of parting
May be very, very nigh.

Children, make your mother happy;
Many griefs she has to bear;
And she wearies 'neath her burdens,
Can you not these burdens share?

Children, make your mother happy;
Prompt obedience cheers her heart;
While a willful disobedience
Pierces like a poisoned dart.

Children, make your mother happy;
Oh, her brow the lines of care
Deepen daily, don't you see them?
While your own are smooth and fair.

Children make your mother happy;
For beneath our coffin lid,
All too soon her face so saint-like,
Shall forevermore be hid.

The Rich Man and Lazarus.

WHAT DOES LUKE XVI: 19-31 TEACH.

Our knowledge in regard to this question must come from searching the Scriptures; for the word of God is a lamp to the feet and a light to the pathway, and by the spirit of God we shall be guided into all truth. In love of the truth and in prayerfulness, we submit for earnest consideration some passages of scripture in this connection:

Eccl ix: 10:—Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest.

Gen. iii: 19:—In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return.

Eccl ix: 5:—For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything * * * their love, their hatred, their envy is now perished.

Job. xiv: 21:—His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not, and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

Ps. vi: 5:—For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks.

Ps. cxv: 17:—The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence.

Ps. cxlvi: 4.—His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.

Comment is almost unnecessary on these scriptures. They teach so plainly that in the grave whither THOU—the man who works, who can devise, who has knowledge and wisdom—goest, there be none of this; that they know not anything; their love, their hatred, their envy is perished; that there is no remembrance of God in that place; that they cannot praise him; that every thought perishes when man returns to the ground and dust returns to dust.

Let us turn to Genesis ii; 7, and from this scripture consider man: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." What a creation, how fearfully and wonderfully made—the brain, the arteries and veins, the heart, the nerves, every member of the body perfectly formed and in its place—and note, this that was made from the dust of the ground is called "man" before there is any breath of life in him. Then when God breathes into his nostrils the breath of life, this man becomes a living soul, i. e. the breath of life entering into his nostrils, the lungs fill with air, and as the breath begins to come and go, the life blood begins to course through the arteries reaching every part of the body, carrying life and vitality with it, and the man hears, feels, sees, smells; thoughts come, he reasons, devises, gains knowledge and wisdom; in short has become an intelligent being—a living soul. The coming together, or combination, so to speak, of the two things—breath of life and man formed of the dust of the ground—constitutes a living soul.

Now suppose the breath be taken from man; what would be the result. Obviously, the man will become just what he was before the breath of life was breathed into his nostrils—a perfect formation in every part, a man still; but no sound is heard by the ears; no vision greets the eyes; no sense of smell, nor feeling, nor taste is there; every thought has perished, and there is no more devising, nor work, and soon must he return to the ground from whence he was taken—dust to dust again shall go—and who, unless there be a resurrection, has forever perished.

It is written in Job. xxxiv: 14, 15, that if God "gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together; and man shall turn again unto dust."

The foregoing gives us an idea of what man is according to the scriptures given by inspiration of God.

Now with these thoughts in mind let us earnestly consider the question as to the teaching of Christ's words concerning the rich man and Lazarus. In Jno. iii: 13 the Lord says "no man hath descended into heaven." Peter, also, on the day of Pentecost, being filled with the Spirit said "David hath not yet ascended into heaven."

In the face of these scriptures and of the express declaration that Christ himself "became the first fruits of them that slept," that he was "the first born from the dead," it is evident that the question under consideration has not the meaning generally ascribed to it.

We believe that they were given to teach something not expressly declared on the face of it; that like other illustrations of the Lord Jesus they have a hidden meaning.

The word Lazarus in the Greek is "[illegible] without help" (Young's Analytical Concordance pp. 593) and is used in this connection to illustrate a class of people who were without help and without God in the world. Isaiah in speaking of some of these calls them a "sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers" and further, says, "from the soul of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds and bruises and putrifying sores." (Isa. i: 4-6.) It is in this condition we find Lazarus—full of sores. These people, separated by their iniquities from God, were the publicans, sinners and harlots of the times in which Jesus spoke. They were at the gate of the rich man, and desired "to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover the dogs came and licked their sores."

Let us turn to Mark vii: 20 28. Here a woman, a "prophecian by nation, besought the Lord Jesus to cast a devil from her daughter. Note the conversation which follows: "But Jesus said unto her; Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take children's bread, and to cast it to the dogs. And she answered and said, Yes, Lord; yet the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs."

See how these things fit into the scripture under consideration. Lazarus desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover the dogs licked his sores. Companions of the dogs (Gentiles) and classed with them, so far had they departed from the living God. While this pictures first the outcasts of Israel; it also shows the Gentiles who were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope.

The rich man illustrates the Jews—Israelites "to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises" and to whom the oracles of God were committed. How glorious they were in their privileges—the chosen of God—but, alas, soon counting themselves unworthy of life.

"The beggar died and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." According to the scriptures Abraham was buried in the cave of Machpela with Sarah his wife. It is evident from the words used that a literal interpretation was not intended.

"The rich man also died and was buried, and in hell he lifts up his eyes, being in torments." The word here translated "hell" is the Greek word "hades." In Hebrew the corresponding word is "sheol" and in Eccl. ix: 10 is translated "grave." But the scriptures quoted in the beginning of this clearly show that in the grave there is no work nor device etc., that when men die their thoughts perish. What then is meant in this passage? By referring to Matt. xviii: 27, we read: "Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrites; for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones and all uncleanliness." The sepulchre is the place where men are buried. It is in this likened condition that the rich man is pictured as seeing Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom.

But what about the flame? Turn for a moment to Solomon's Songs viii: 6. We read "* * * jealously is as cruel as the grave, the coals thereof are coals of a most vehement flame." Now turn to Rom. x: 19 and we read, "I will provoke you to jealously by them that are no people. (In Hosea i: 9 God calls the house of Israel "Lo ammi."—not my people,) and by a foolish nation I will anger you;" further, in Rom. xi: 11 it is written "through their fallsal-vation is come to the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy."

Thus we see how the rich man was tormented in the flame of jealousy and anger.

Why are the five brethren mentioned—who are they? We believe that this refers to the five classes of representative Jewish citizens who are spoken of in the gospels as opposing and rejecting Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God; viz: the chief priests, the scribes, the pharisees, the sadducees, and the lawyers. These were the rulers of Israel; and as such, their rejection of Jesus the Christ takes on a national scope. "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not."

We believe then, briefly, that this picture teaches that the Jews, as a nation, rich in possibilities,—who considered that they had need of nothing, rejected the gospel of Christ—chose death instead of life—, and that the outcasts, the publicans and sinners, and the Gentiles, by faith and obedience to the gospel, having put on Christ by baptism were thus made Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promises. (See Gal. iii: 27-29). These who were poor, without help, and aliens were "comforted," having entered into the glorious hope of the promises made unto Abraham. That when the gospel was given to them that were "no people" and to the Gentiles, the rulers of Israel were angered and provoked to jealousy—"tormented in the flame," and, not believing all that was written by Moses and the prophets, and rejecting the counsel of God, they counted themselves unworthy of everlasting life. Thus their unbelief made an impassable gulf by which they were cut off from the promises made unto Abraham.

There is a marked similarity in the line of teaching of the rich man and Lazarus, and that of the prodigal son, in Luke xv. 11-32. Lazarus is representative of the same class of people as the prodigal son; while the rich man is but another illustration of the elder brother. In that parable the elder brother was angered because the wayward son had been received back into the father's house. In this the rich man is provoked to jealousy, because to Lazarus was given the riches of the inheritance through Christ Jesus.

Now, look at the reason for his teaching on this particular line. In the second verse of Luke xv: the pharisees murmured because He received sinners; and ate with them. So Christ shows how much joy there is over one sinner that repenteth. He then recites the parable of the prodigal son, to show just the position the pharisees are occupying. Then, after speaking to the disciples how that they should be faithful in their work, He turns again to the pharisees and gives them the lesson of the rich man and Lazarus, to show them the result of the stand they are taking—they will be provoked to jealousy when these poor ones have repented, and entered into the promises of God, while they themselves are cut off because of unbelief.

How simple and clear the teaching is to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear.

The general conception of the teaching of the rich man and Lazarus—that those who die enter immediately into their reward, the good into heaven and the evil into hell fire—absolutely nullifies the necessity of a resurrection. By their tradition they make the word of God of none effect. For, if every joy is now the participation of the righteous dead, why a resurrection at all? But the word of God shows that they cannot live again except by a resurrection. (See 1. Cor. xv: 16-18.)

God said, "Thou shalt surely die."

The serpent said, "Ye shall not surely die."

The popular teaching today says the real man does not die. Thus, virtually declaring by their doctrine that that old serpent, the devil, whom Christ said was a liar from the beginning, told a most important truth. what a stand for those who profess to believe God to take! Verily, there is need for repentance and a turning from vain traditions to serve the true and living God.—B. W. Waggoner.

The Old Testament View of Sin.

"I said, I will confess my transgression unto the Lord, and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin." Psa. xxxii: 5.

The expression "the iniquity of my sin" sets forth the intensity of sin. Sin is deep, strong, violent and unrelenting in its pursuit of man. The Old Testament gives a sad, vivid picture of sin. It uses a variety of terms to describe moral evil.

1. It is something that is crooked. A sinner is a man who is not straight in his moral makeup.

2. It is evil, indicating something [illegible] rapidly grows, [illegible] multiplies. It is like thistles, when once it gets rooted it is impossible to destroy it. It spreads and becomes a blight and a curse to men.

3. It is simplicity, meaning the simple, natural, undeveloped man—a man without any fixed principles. Multitudes of these simple ones infest our cities. They are blind to danger, are easily tempted and seduced, and are the main support of brothels, saloons and gambling dens.

4. A man who sins is destitute of mind. He is described as lacking understanding, and following a tempter or temptress like an ox going to the slaughter, a fool to the correction of the stocks, or as a bird hastening to the snare. Soon he is wounded and bruised and hurried on to the chambers of death.

5. The sinner is a fool. "The fool hath said in his heart, No God." Such a man conducts his business and carries on his affairs on the assumption that God is so far away that he is absolutely unconcerned in the conduct of this world. Such men abounded centuries ago, and the family is still quite numerous. It is no new philosophy to say there is no God. Agnosticism is as old as the race.

6 Sin is rebellion. The man who has taken up arms against the government of heaven. He is at war with Almighty God.

7. The sinner is a scorner. Such a man regards religion as so inferior as to be unworthy of his notice. It is vain to reprove such a person. Only when he goes to the land of the dying and looks on the bones of the dead will he find anything serious enough to arouse him.

8. Sin is a habit. The drunkard has woe, sorrow, contentions, wounds, redness of eyes, misery and poverty; yet, when he awakes from the stupor of intoxication he exclaims, I will seek it yet again. He is a slave to appetite, powerless in the iron grip of habit.

This picture is enough to to show us that sin is real. It speedily and relentlessly pursues its victim. Our only hope of deliverance is in God and his Son Jesus Christ.—O. S. Jenks, in Our Hope.

His Life for a Sheep.

A shepherd one night, when the storm was fierce, counting his sheep that had gathered into the fold, found that two were missing. Going to the kennel where his shepherd dog was lying with her young, he pointed to the wilderness which was growing darker, and said, "Two sheep are missing; go." She looked a moment at her little ones, then up into her master's face, and hurried away into the night, and came back with one of the sheep that were lost. The storm had grown fiercer and the night darker, and the shepherd came again to his dog and pointing out, said once more, "One sheep is missing; go." Looking down once more at her crying little ones, and up into her master's face with mute despair, she arose and hurried away. Hours passed by, and the shepherd heard a scratching at his but door. Going forth, he found the dog, and she had the sheep that was lost. Leaving the same at her master's feet, she staggered back to her little ones, and [illegible] dead at the kennel door.

And when I read this story, I said, O, the shame of it! Here is a dumb brute, with never a thought of God, and never a hope of heaven, obedient to her master's command when he speaks but a word, and we have permitted our Master with nail-pierced hands, spear-thrust side, and thorn-crowned brow to plead and plead again, and we have refused to do His bidding.

Let us catch one glimpse of His face now, and go where he would send us. —Dr. Chapman.

The secret of success is said to be partly ability, partly ambition, partly environment and partly opportunity. Each of these elements surely help to make up what the world knows as success. It is not always found, however, that each element contributes an equal amount to the winning of success, nor is it possible for any one element alone to be held wholly responsible for it. All are seen to be necessary and all are made more or less possible by the man himself. Ability is acquired, ambition is encouraged, environment is fostered and opportunity is made.—Farmer's Guide.

It takes a great deal of grace to suffer decent honorably and good naturedly. Many people are so defective in self discipline that they can not stand the moral strain of friendly competition unless indeed they are always successful.—R. W. Pickard.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

As we all know this is the first of a new year, and some of us have no doubt thought of the past. We have thought of the joys, the disappointments and sorrows they have had. Some of us have made new friends and some have witnessed with tears in our eyes our dear ones laid to rest in the grave. We have looked back at our life in the past year and have found where we could do better the new year. Let us look to Jesus for our help, "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins—that are past—through the forbearance of God. To declare I say, at this time his righteousness that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." Let us look to Jesus the "beginner and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross." He suffered the agonies of the cross and the tortures and taunts of those who put him to death. God permitted it for the sake of his people. He "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." No love is greater than God's love, for he gave his only begotten Son, that through him it will be possible for any one who will accept Jesus as their Savior, the Anointed One, to receive the gift of God, which is eternal life. And not only the love of God, but the love of his dear Son, "Who gave himself a ransom for all." He endured the terrible sufferings on the cross, that people through him might be saved. "And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." And thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Luke xxiv. 46, 47. Wherefore God also hath exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things under the earth. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord; to the glory of God the Father. Phil. ii. 9, 10, 11. "For God will save Zion and will build the cities of Judah that they may dwell there and have it in possession. The seed also of his servants shall inherit it and that they that love his name shall dwell there." But the meek shall inherit the earth and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Psa. xxxvii. 11. "And behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Dear Bereans it behooves us to watch ourselves more closely, so that we may be ready to receive the reward when Jesus comes.

Your Sister in Christ.
JESSIE M. WILSON.

Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, why forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. How vain and full of disappointment is labor bestowed on temporal affairs. How blessed the assurance, "For ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." What qualifications are required to fit one for labor in Lord's vineyard? 1st to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. 2nd, To be baptized for the remission of sins. No need to make any mistake on the mode, buried with him in baptism in the likeness of death and resurrection, so also we should rise to walk in newness of life, going forth in the footsteps of our great elder Brother who has gone before; and has sent the joyful message back to those following after, To him that overcometh will I give to sit with me in my throne, even as I have overcome and am set down with my Father on his throne. What a blessed assurance.

When shall these things be? Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every one according as his work shall be. Then let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Having our conversation in heaven from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile bodies that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Seeing then that we have a great high priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession, for we have not an high priest who cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. Then let us consider one another to provoke unto good works, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching when all shall give account of their stewardship. Let us watch and pray.

J. A. BARE.

Dear Bereans:

I wanted you to read over and over again from the 9th verse of the 7th of Rev. to the end of the chapter. Read it until you have it well in memory. It is just a lovely picture of what is going to be when Jesus comes into Paradise. You may not fully understand all of it, but you surely understand the closing words, "And God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes," show the end of all sorrow—a state when every one will be perfectly happy. That is not the case now. Think how beautiful that home with its sparkling fountains of life, but not one bitter tear. After trying to see how glorious that will be, go to the 15th verse and notice the word "therefore." All the beauty and happiness and perfection is therefore or on account of something. Because John who had this vision should know and explain to us why everybody was so blessed, his attention was drawn to those arrayed in white robes, and he was asked who they were and whence they came? To his reply, "My Lord, thou knowest," he was told, "These are they which come out of great tribulation and they washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God." Storm and tempest had beset them; but they had put off their soiled garments and were arrayed in robes white as snow. Therefore, "God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes." Sin in God's sight is always black and dirty. So let us be washed in this blood and clothed in his righteousness. Then shall he be our Shepherd and God shall wipe away our tears.

Special Meetings in Salem, O.

From Jan. 1 to 15 we held a series of meetings. In plain and simple readings from Moses and the prophets, we discussed the timely topics of the coming of the Lord, the object, God's promise, the kingdom, conversion, salvation, faith, etc. One or two small meetings on account of weather, mostly well attended, and some the attendance beyond all expectation. The attention given was most encouraging, and some deep interest manifested, we wait the outcome, and pray that the seed sown may find some good and honest heart, where God can give the increase, and fruit come forth to a hope of eternal life to those who said that they were now hearing the truth. We hope that God may continue his blessings to the Indiana Conference at Plymouth, and that those of like precious faith who meet there may hold forth the Word of life to their own great benefit, and to a hope of salvation in some who hear.

All helps are like stairs. No man ever uses stairs to sit down on, but to go up higher with. The ordinances and means of grace are merely stepping stones to something higher, which is the thing—that we may have the lineaments, the disposition and the character of our Lord Jesus Christ. —Beecher.

"Whose God is Their Belly."

These words are found in the epistle addressed by the apostle Paul to the disciples at Philippi. From the connection in which the words stand, strange as it may appear, and very sad as it must be felt by the true disciple, the words plainly allude to certain persons who had at one time been members of the church at Philippi, but who had lapsed from that position; and not to outsiders who had never become "obedient to the faith." The words occur in this way—"Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample. (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ. Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.)"

Paul had no need to inform the Philippians about the vices of the outside world; for these were well know to every one.

With regard to the larger portion of the Gentile population, both Greek and Roman, it is recorded in history that Julius Ceasar, who flourished in the century immediately before the date of Paul's writings, had, "by many sumptuary laws restrained the scandalous luxuries of the rich." In his "Great events of History," Collier records that "to many in the degenerate days of Rome the great ends of life were to eat the most delicious food, and to eat of it as much as possible. Gluttony had grown upon the people from their intercourse with Asia."

These brief quotations from Roman history clearly point to the fact that the vices referred to were largely characteristic of the class of people who were "well to do," that is, those who could afford the luxurious and expensive dietary indicated by the language of the apostle. It may be safely taken for granted that converts to Christianity from the class referred to would be extremely liable to fall away from that "mortifying of the flesh" enjoined by the apostles and expected of the disciples.

While it is evident that some of the disciples at Philippi had lapsed from "the faith" through the "fleshly lusts" of the belly indicated by the language of the apostle, it need not be surprising to find repeated warnings against this danger in the apostolic writings.

It has to be noted here that the allegation "whose god is their belly," included drunkenness as well as gluttony.

In writing to the Galatians, and speaking of the works of the flesh, Paul includes among these "drunkenness and revellings." In the same connection, speaking of the works of the Spirit, he designates one of these "temperance."

The apostle Peter, writing to the strangers scattered abroad in the Roman province of Asia Minor, gives a strong warning against the luxurious habits of the world around them. He speaks of "excess of wine," "revellings," "banquettings," "riot," etc. I Peter iv.

In writing to the disciples at Rome Paul exhorts. "Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness.....and make not provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof." Rom. xiii. 13, 14.

On the same subject our Lord gave a warning to his disciples evidently anticipating their being dispersed throughout the world in carrying out their mission. In this he certainly recognized the vices referred to as a source of temptation to which they might be exposed. "Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." Luke xxi. 34.

There are in the Old Testament certain allusions to moderation in eating and also to the opposite—gluttony. We read, concerning the duty of certain parents—"they shall say unto the elders of his city, this our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice, he is a glutton and a drunkard." Deut. xxi. 20. This points to existence among the Israelites of the vices treated of in the writings of the apostles. We read in Proverbs, "Be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh; for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty," etc. (chapter xxiii. 20, 21). We also read that Agur prayed, "feed me with food convenient for me." A most pointed [illegible] given on this point by the wise man, "When thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee. And put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. Be not desirous of his dainties; for they are deceitful meat."

It has to be acknowledged that there were among the Gentile populations some exceptions to such vices as those mentioned. Certain "philosophers" are recorded as encountering the apostle Paul at Athens—"Epicureans and stoics." The "Epicureans" have in the popular mind been much misconceived. In Chamber's Encyclopedia it is mentioned—"Although Epicurus laid down the doctrine that pleasure was the chief god, the life that he and his friends led was one of the greatest temperance and simplicity." And again, "It is from a misapprehension of this word [pleasure] as used by Epicurus that the term Epicurean came to signify one who indulged his sensual appetites without stint or measure.....among the Romans the system of Epicurus was adopted by many distinguished men." The "stoics" a philosophical sect originating in Greece but whose principles were probably imported from the East and which prevailed widely in the Roman world, had for one of their four cardinal virtues that of "temperance."

But such parties were comparatively insignificant, and could not be expected to exercise much influence on the great mass of pagan society, whose god Bacchus was a principal object of their worship, part of which, according to Chambers, consisted of what he calls "public dinners."

So, much for those in ancient times. What of the moderns? An eminent physician of Edinburgh now retired, George S. Keith, treated his patients, on the assumption that their ailments arose from overeating. This in many instances proved correct. He published two small books entitled "A plea for simpler life," and "Fads of an old physician." In these works he explained and vindicated his practice. He came to be known as the "starving doctor." The late Sir Henry Thompson, an eminent London physician, alleged that more real injury was done by overeating than by the use of intoxicants, great as the latter evil was.

Fast eating was another form of this evil. The late Max O'Rell, the famous lecturer said, with reference to this practice in America, "What is the result of the five minutes dinners in America? The result is the prairies, forests and cities are disfigured every where with advertisements of liver pills."

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send The Restitution to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send The Restitution to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send The Restitution to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

To the Illinois Bereans:

We now have some Berean pins, 20 cents each. Those who have not been supplied. may send to Anna E. Drew, 620 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Ill.

What we Believe.

I wish to say to the brethren and sisters who have sent in their orders for the pamphlet "What we believe" that the work is in the hands of the printer, but it will be several weeks until the work will be ready to send. Your orders have been credited, and as soon as finished will be filled. Price per copy 15 cts; 10 copies $1.00, send postal or express money orders. No stamps—A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co, and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism at the seed of truth has been [illegible] and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

"The Lord Knoweth How." 2 Peter ii. 9.

"I will trust and not be afraid," Isa. xii. 2.
The storm-clouds are rolling across the horizon,
And peal upon peal on the thunder is heard;
The flashes of lightening are vivid and awful;
Yet never a fear in this bosom is stirred,
For is it not written, in every where shown,
"The Lord knoweth how to deliver his own."

The gleam of the sword can be seen in the darkness,
The moans of the wounded and dying we hear;
And warfare and bloodshed are crowding more thickly
But none of these things can awaken a fear,
For is it not written and every where shown,
"The Lord knoweth how to deliver his own."

The foe we contend with is artful and cunning,
And many, full many are the snares he has laid,
We are not ignorant of Satan's devices,
Though of his temptations we are not afraid;
For is it not written and every where shown,
"The Lord knoweth how to deliver his own."

"The Lord knoweth how," though we often are puzzled,
And to our conscientious no pathway is clear;
But since we are guided by Infinite Wisdom,
The word he hath spoken unfolds every fear;
For is it not written and every where shown,
"The Lord knoweth how to deliver his own."

"The Lord knoweth how" is our strength in our weakness,
The promise of sunshine, though storm clouds appear;
A present assurance amid every trial,
The way of escape from each trial and fear;
For is it not written, and every where shown,
"The Lord knoweth how to deliver his own!"

"Orders." No. 5.

Other objectionable features and unsatisfactory conditions arise out of the ministry as it exists in most of our modern denominations. In the Evangelical Association the entire legislation of the church is in the hands of the ministers. The Annual and General Conferences are composed exclusively and entirely of ministers. Men are licensed as preachers on probation, advanced to deacon's and elder's orders, elected to the presiding eldership and the episcopacy by the ministers The confession of faith and discipline, copied from the systems of other denominations, were composed by ministers, The General Conference, the highest court of law in the denomination, is composed of none but ministers, and is the final arbiter of all questions of law for the entire membership. According to a disciplinary provision, the standard of doctrine, which was adopted in 1809 can not be altered, or in any way modified, even by the General Conference. No matter how much light might be obtained on the teaching of the word of God, that light must not, it dare not, go beyond the established standard. So if the denomination should exist in ten thousand years from now, it would teach the same doctrines that are set forth in its doctrinal standard today, no matter how obsolete or inapplicable to circumstances the articles of faith might be. Ministers who hold forth doctrines contrary to the articles of religion, are dealt with by the same process which is observed in cases of gross immorality. They are tried before a committee of ministers, from which the members are excluded Thus almost the entire ecclesiastical machinery is in the hands of the ministers. Is this in harmony with the practice of the apostolic Church? Far from it. What the apostles submitted to men and women for their guidance, whether as a matter of faith or practice, had been directly revealed to them by the Spirit of God (Eph iii: 5), and, having the proper signs (2 Cor. xii: 12), they spoke with authority. Being moved by the holy Spirit in their words and actions, their word was the word of God. 1. Thess. ii: 13. Their apostleship extended to all nations (Rom. i: 5). their mission to all the world. Col i: 6. Though they have fallen asleep in Christ, their words are still living and full of force (John xvii: 20), and their influence going on. Wherever men and women believe the things they preached, and obey the gospel conditions they enjoined, their apostleship extends and their influence is at work.

But with all this in view, it is evident that neither the apostles nor the head of the Church intended that the church should be governed by a select few. Even in the days of the apostles the Church was a democratic institution. When an important doctrinal question was to be settled for the entire Church it was submitted to and deliberated upon by the apostles and elders with the whole Church at Jerusalem. Acts xv: 2, 4, 22, 23.

Another error of our modern clergy system is that only ordained ministers are supposed to have a right to administer baptism and the Lord's Supper. From the the promise that only ordained men have the right to "baptize and to dispense the Holy Supper of our Lord," it has been argued that it was impossible for the twelve apostles to baptize three thousand persons by immersion in one day. Acts ii: 41. All the argument is worth is that, if true, it would prove that the historian related something as having been done which it was physically impossible to do. The record does not state who did the baptizing upon that occasion, but it does say that so many persons were baptized. And I fully believe, without the least mental reservation, that they were baptized according to the meaning of the Greek verb baptizo But see here: If only apostles ha l authority to baptize, who gives our modern ordained clergy authority to do so? Are they apostles? Either they are or they have no right to baptize. Who authorized Philip to baptize at Samaria, and on the way from Jerusalem to Gaza? Acts viii: 12, 16, 26 40. Who Ananias? Acts ix: 17 Who baptized the persons at Cæsarea whom Peter "ordered" (prosetaxe) to be baptized Acts x: 48, and who afterwards constituted the church at that place? Acts xvii: 22. Who baptized "many of the Corinthians" (Acts xviii: 8), of whom Paul baptized only a few? 1. Cor. i: 13 16. On Pentecost they who gladly received the apostles' word were baptized, if not by the apostles themselves, there were other disciples present who could assist in the duties of the day. Acts i: 14. 15. At Cæsarea there were brethren with Peter who could carry out the order of the apostle. Acts x: 48. At Corinth Silas and Timotheus were present with Paul (Acts xviii: 5 8). so that while Paul himself baptized but a few, there were those who could attend to this matter. There were none in the Corinthian Church who had not been baptized into the one body. 1. Cor. xii; 12. It is nowhere taught in the Scriptures that the apostles were the only ones who had the right to baptize, but the record shows that other, who were neither apostles, nor "ordained clergyman," did baptize.

The foregoing remarks will also apply to the administration of the Lord's Supper. Nowhere do the Scriptures teach that this ordinance was committed to a specially ordained ministry. In the absence of any divine or apostolic instructions committing the communion into the hands of a special class, where is the authority for such procedure? Not in the Word of God, but solely in the systems which man have constructed for themselves. The trouble with the whole system is that here is a class of men separated from the rest, who have arrogated to themselves certain functions for which there is not the slightest Scriptural authority. None of the laity, so-called, dares to question the right of the clergy to officiate in the assumed capacities, for, to establish their claims and their rights, they appeal, first of all, to their divine "call" to the ministry, and then to their authority derived from their ordination. The entire clerical system, whether under the title of Reverend, Right Reverend, Very Reverend, Most Reverend, or Bishop, Archbishop, or Pope, comes from, and is a part of Rome. Let the reader peruse the history of the Church from the apostles for three or four centuries, and he will find striking evidences of the truthfulness of this statement.

The apostles left the Church with elders and deacons in every church, each performing the functions peculiar to his own position: The elders with the care of the church as to its spiritual needs, and the deacon in charge of its temporal and financial affairs; but soon after their death men craved authority and arrogated honors and functions which were not a part of the primitive order. The departure from the early practice was gradual. At first one man was made bishop and given authority over one congregation. Later the oversight of a number of churches was given over to a bishop, and later still the bishops of the large cities assumed authority, not only over the smaller congregations but also over a number of [illegible] bishops, and thus the authority of man was gradually extended until, in the year 608, there was a Universal Bishop, who developed into a Father (pope or Pope) No ordination could be celebrated without his consent. The ordination of the English Clergy is traceable to papal authority. Pope Boniface V wrote to Justus: "... We send to your fraternity the pallium, granting you also to celebrate the ordination of Bishops when need requires." Bland's "Who Established the Church of England?" p. 8. The M E Church obtained its ordination from the Church of England, as can be seen by comparison of their Rituals. Others have copied freely from the M. E Ritual, and thus the line of Episcopal ordination is complete and unbroken from the Church of Rome to many modern churches. It is a rather undesirable line of succession.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. While at Bonner Springs, Kansas, I was thrown into company with a Seventh Day Adventist preacher. He handed me a tract, and desired me to express my convictions on the same. Instead of giving it orally at the time, I said I would submit it to the investigation of the Pine Woods Bible Class. This minister's name was L. Neal. I liked the appearance of the man, and think him honest in his convictions.

Our subject for tonight will be

THE SABBATH.

Mr. Neal says: "At creation God made the seventh day a part of creation, that the Sabbath might stand forever."

Will Arlon tell us when the creation was finished or completed, at the end of the sixth, or the seventh day?

Arlon. At the end of the sixth day. We read, "And the evening and the morning were the sixth day, thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them."

Q. Does God give an itemized list as to what was created, up to the end of the sixth day?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the Sabbath named as one of the items of the six days work of creation?

A. No. No mention is made of such a thing.

Q. Then the Sabbath could not have been a part of the six days work of creation like man, beasts, herbs, etc. were could it?

A. Why no. No mention is made of it, and man has no right to add an item to creation, which God has not mentioned in his list.

Teacher. Mr. Neal says: "There is no power in heaven or earth, that can change the least part of God's creation." Certainly not, but Arlon has shown us that the Sabbath is not mentioned as a part of the six days work of creation, and not being a part of said creation, it is not there for any man to "change." All there is of it is that God himself Sabbatized or rested, when his work was done, just like we rest, when our work is completed He did not ask Adam and Eve to be Sabbatized, before they had done any work to rest from. In fact they were never commanded to keep holy any Sabbath. Carrie, how much time has elapsed between creation, and the existence of a command for man to keep it?

Carrie. Some 2500 years.

Q. To what nation was the command first given?

A. To Israel. This is first mentioned in Exod. xvi.

Q What reason is given why Israel should observe the Sabbath?

A That "I may prove (or test) them, whether they will walk in my law or no." The test did not apply to any other people, and it also shows that no test had been given to Israel in the previous 2500 years, which is a very strange thing if the Sabbath law had been in force all those years, from creation down.

Teacher. Mr. Neal says: "God did not make every day a Sabbath, but [illegible] one day only made he holy." What is that, did he make [illegible]

Yes, see Exod. xxxi. "Verily my Sabbaths shall ye keep, for a sign between me and you." We find "Sabbaths" in the plural number.

Q What were the Sabbaths given for?

A A sign between God and Israel. The Gentiles have no obligation in all this.

Q Then if the Sabbaths were a sign between God and Israel, the Sabbaths could not have been a sign between Gentiles and other nations could they?

A. No. God never gave the Sabbath to any other people.

Q When did Israel first learn that there was a Sabbath at all?

A. Not until God gave it to them at Sinai. See Neh. ix. 12-14: "Thou camest down upon Mount Sinai, * * * and madest known unto them thy holy Sabbath." If it was made known to them at Sinai, they could not have known of it previously. How is it thus, if it had been in force from creation, as "a part of creation," as Mr. Neal says.

Q. Was this Sabbath covenant made with Israel alone, or with other nations as well?

A. At Horeb (Sinai). See Deut. v. 1-3: "The Lord God made a covenant with us, (Israel) in Horeb. The Lord God made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." In this covenant he says: "Keep the Sabbath day and sanctify it as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee." This covenant was not made previously with their fathers, but only with those Israelites who were "here alive this day."

Q Who were commanded to keep the Sabbath from creation down?

A. No one.

Q. Now, Mr. Neal says: "The Lord commanded us to keep the Sabbath." Who are the "us," Gentiles or Israelites.

A. Israelites, every time. At no time were Gentiles commanded to keep it. Not one single passage between the two covers of the Bible is there a command given for Gentiles to keep holy the Sabbath. Those who pretend to keep it, assume to do that which is not commanded. It amounts to nothing but a theory with them, for none of these pretenders do in fact keep it.

Q Does Paul speak of "the ministration of death"?

A. He does.

Q. Where do we find "the ministration of death" written?

A. On tables of stone.

Q. Where?

A. 2 Cor. iii, 7: "The ministration of death, written and engraven in stones"

Q. Was written on "tables of stone" which death was administered for its breach?

A. The Sabbath.

Q. Where?

A. See Exod. xxxiv. 1-4: "And the Lord said unto Moses, hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first; and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables." The Lord wrote these words on the tables of stone, in which death was ministered if not observed. "Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh there shall be to you an holy day, a Sabbath of rest to the Lord; whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death." Here we have the ministration of death written and engraved on tables of stone.

Q. What was to become of this "ministration of death" written on tables of stone?

A. "Which was to be done away." 2 Cor. iii. 7.

Q. Could Israel look to the end of that which was abolished?

A. No. "Israel could not look to the end of that which was abolished."

Q. Why not?

A. Because "their mind was blinded." Verse 14.

Q. What blinded their eyes?

A. A vail "in the reading of the Old Testament." Verse 14.

Q. Is the vail really done away?

A. Yes. See verse 14: "Which vail is done away in Christ."

Q. Do many who profess to be Christians, still carry a vail over their eyes? [illegible]

Q. What is the effect of vailing their eyes?

A. They cannot "look to the end of that which is abolished."

Q. Does Christ mark the end of the law to believers?

A. Yes. See Rom. x. 4: "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." See also Eph. ii. 15: "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments (Sabbath is one) contained in "ordinances," or "the law of commandments."

Q What has become of the handwriting of ordinances?

A. See Col. ii. 14: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross."

Q. How does the blotting out of these ordinances affect Sabbath keeping?

A. See verse 16: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath, which are a shadow of things to come."

Q. Before the "ministration of death" "written on tables of stone" (that is where the Sabbath was written) was "done away," judgment inevitably followed the breach of "the Sabbath," or an "holy day" did it not?

A. There was no possible way of escape from the ministration of death.

Q. But now at this time there is no judgment to follow a breach of the weekly Sabbath, or any of those holy days, is there?

A. It says: "Let no man therefore judge you."

Q. This being the case the Sabbath observance is all in the past, and no one has the right to judge of its breach, is that not the case? Yes.

Q. Was not the law burdensome to the observer?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did Paul find some who still wanted to hang on to the old law?

A. He did.

Q. What did he say to them?

A. "How turn ye again unto the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto do ye desire again to be in bondage? Ye observe (Sabbath) days, and months, and times and years."

Q What did Paul fear would be the effect of observing these "days," etc.?

A "I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." Gal. iv. 14.

Q What was Paul's advice about this yoke of bondage?

A "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled [illegible] the yoke of bondage." Gal. v. 1.

Q Do Sabbatarians teach that we must observe the Sabbath law in order to be saved?

A They do, the Sabbath observance seems to be a second gospel to them.

Q What was Paul's opinion about justification coming on account of the observance of any part of the law?

A "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law." Gal. v. 4.

Q Why of no effect?

A Because "ye are fallen from grace." Verse 4.

Q Where was the Sabbath law given?

A At Mount Sinai.

Q What does the Mount Sinai covenant do for us?

A "The one from Mount Sinai gendereth to bondage."

Q Paul speaks of two women, who were they?

A One was a bond woman, and the other a free woman.

Q Who are the children of the bondwoman?

A Ye that desire to be under the law.

Q Who are the children of the free woman?

A "The free woman was by promise."

Q Can we be children of both mothers?

A "The son of the bond woman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman." Verse 30.

Q Is the observance of the Sabbath one of "the works of the law"?

A Yes.

Q Does salvation come through any of the works of the law?

A "By the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."

Q Do the Scriptures divide the law into two parts, one called the ceremonial law, and the other the moral law?

A Not one word of it, the division is purely human, and has no divine sanction.

Q Where are the ten commandments found?

A. In the Book of the law.

Q How many are saved by the deeds of the law?

A No flesh shall be saved by the deeds of the law.

Q. What message contains eternal salvation?

A The gospel. See Rom. i. It is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe and obey it. There is no salvation in that which gendereth to bondage.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB. 15, 1905. NUMBER 7.

Walter Trautman
626 Woodland av

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

2 Cor. x. 1.

Now I, Paul myself beseech you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in presence am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forebearing one another in love. Put on therefore as the elect of God holy and beloved, bowels of mercy, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, Forbearing one another and forgiving one another. If any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient in meekness, instructing them that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth, to speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but be gentle shewing all meekness unto all men. For where envying and strife is there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy, and the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

Christ in all his teachings taught meekness, obedience and submission, he was meek and submissive even unto the death on the cross, yet he never boasted of himself, he seldom spoke of his own goodness. In Matt. xi. 28, 29 we find "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light. The meek shall increase their joy in the Lord and the poor among men shall rejoice in the holy One of Israel.

"Discouragement is just what its derivation means—the state of being without courage. Napoleon's marshals came to him once, it is related, in the midst of battle. 'We have lost the day,' they reported, 'and we are being cut to pieces!' The great soldier drew out his watch, unmoved. 'It is only two o'clock in the afternoon,' he said. 'You have lost the battle, but we have time to win another. Charge!' and victory followed the order. We should enter into our battlefields of trial and difficulty with the same unconquerable spirit."

Sweden and Norway are again talking war. The old jealousy of Norway is at the bottom of the difficulty. Separation would make each weaker, and less able to stand out against the influence of Russia, which country is, as usual, fostering the trouble between the two.

Nothing of special interest has taken place in the far eastern war. In Russia there have been small gatherings in different places, and the troops have had to put them down. Strikes are on the increase. The Czar has issued a decree for a congress to investigate the labor troubles, and take necessary steps to stop the dissatisfaction. This congress will have a representation of working men. The government is making promises, that if carried out, should give all classes relief.

Referring to the article in the last issue by Brother B. W. Woodward, where he mentions the offer we make to send The Restitution to new subscribers for one year for $1 00, we wish to say, that taking the number of persons to whom our brethren sent the paper on this offer last year, and noting the number who were enough interested therein to still desire it sent to their address, we find that on average of 12 to each 100 were continued on our list. Now brethren and sisters, if such a proportion can be influenced in this way to study and endeavor to learn more fully their duty toward God, it shows that the work is a good one. If an evangelist or a minister was assured that such a proportion of his audience were taken an interest, and making note of what he was saying to them, and went home with determination to study God's Word, and learn all they could of his will, that minister would be perfectly delighted. He would feel inspired to continue his efforts so long as strength held out, and if he fell fainting by the way, his last cry would be to urge some other one to take his place that the field might be fully worked. In view of this, and the shortness of the time we have still left to labor, what is our duty? Have YOU done all you can possibly do in this direction? All you ought to do? If the Lord should come this year, would you be able to report to him that you had done your very utmost? If the Lord does not come during 1905, your life may be cut off. When the trumpet sounds, and you hear the summons to awake and enter the presence of your Lord, can you report that the last year of your earthly life you did ALL—every thing—that you possibly could to extend his truth? Our offer still holds good. One dollar for the year to a new name. Ten dollars and we send to thirteen new names, and we make a new rate now. Five dollars and we will send to any six addresses you name.

"Higher Criticism," "modern scholarship" "refined infidelity," as now exhibited in the world, all mean the same thing. For some years the Protestant denominations of Christendom have been largely affected by them, but it was thought that Romanism would prove strong enough to resist any encroachment on her domains, [illegible] concerning the work of this modern thought upon even Rome:

"The conclusion—painful as it is—that one is compelled to draw is that Rome regards the maintenance of her absolute authority, unlimited in its sphere and exercise, as the one thing to be fought for at all costs, even at the cost of the loss to the church of the great majority of her children. This is the spirit, and this the temper, which brought about the Reformation; it does not spring from 'incredible confidence' in the future of the church, but rather from a well grounded fear that the claim of Rome to absolute, infallible, and unlimited authority in all matters will not stand the test of history, and can not be maintained except by the rigorous repression of individual initiative and independent thought.

The position in which the individual Catholic is placed by the policy of his rulers is one of grave difficulty, and nowhere is the situation more acute than in France. In the English Catholic body few of the laity, and fewer still of the clergy, take any interest in intellectual matters; but there are signs of grave mischief among the younger laymen even in England. They have been trained to draw no distinction between the Catholic faith and its scholastic expression, or the insecure historical basis upon which their teachers have founded it.

The natural consequence is that, in so far as those who have been educated in this way become convinced of the strength of the critical position, their hold on the faith is liked to be weakened. Rome has weakened it still more by declaring that any attempt to find a synthesis between the critical position and the faith is unlawful for Catholics."

An Open Letter to Miss Ruth Asher.

Dear Young Friend and searcher for truth:

In Restitution of Feb 8 [illegible] notice your three letter, with some questions which I am disposed to answer. Possibly you might prefer an answer from one of near your age, but as an excuse I will say I am, and have been for over two years, incapacitated from work on account of rheumatism. Therefore have plenty of time to read and write, though writing is difficult. My age is three score and three; and an immersed believer in the "Abrahamic faith," or Gospel of the Kingdom of God, two score and four years. If you do not understand this, possibly papa or mamma can help you. Quite a while do you say? yes, and still a learner, we can never know, in this life, the full depth of God's love, and can never serve him too long. But to your questions: and by the way, may be you have a trap set, and I will "get my foot in it." Well we will chance it, and if you catch me, the laugh will be on me. As to the longest name, I at first thought of that great King of Babylon, who had a dream of a wonderful image Dan ii, a name of fourteen letters, but on searching, I find one of three letters more, which you will find in Judges iii: 8-10 It occurs four times in these three verses, and I do not find it anywhere else. You will please notice here, who he was, and what he did.

You will find the word "busybody," in 2 Thess. iii: 11, 1 Tim v: 13, 1 Pet. iv: 15, and you will notice they are not a model pattern. And now may I turn questioner and ask for the shortest name, and as you are probably busy with your school studies, I will aid you in your search a little; the pronoun I stands for the person speaking, and leaving this out, I find eight words of two letters; five are nouns, two are verbs, one is an exclamation, now if this is too much grammar for your young mind, ask papa, mamma, or teacher. Now what are they and where found? And as a further help, they occur in the Concordance alphabetically A, D, G, H, O, O O I". Please note the connections of each.

My first Christian name is the fifteenth book of the Bible.

Yours searching for truth.

Signs.

One of the most palpable "Signs of the Times" to the disciples of Jesus is the falling away of believers of the truth. Some of these follow after such as have turned away from the truth, and are following cunningly devised fables. Some deny part of the Bible; and not a few stand on the brink of the chasm, not knowing which way to go. O my brother! My sister! why not [illegible] assertion that parts of the Bible are not inspired, nor be in union with those who would mutilate its pages. Verily, according to Psa. xii 6, 7 God has kept, and will preserve his Word. The apostle Peter was a witness to the life mission of Jesus, and if the history of him given by the evangelists were not inspired, the aged apostle would not have linked this part of the Word with his epistles. Especially emphatic is this in 1 Peter i. 16 18. Jesus said, I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me. Jno. viii. 18. Is it not safe to follow in his steps? Safe to sit at his feet and learn of him? Is it not well to be in union with such as follow closely the Word of the Lord?

Our beloved brother Wagoner warns us against t[illegible] is false doctrine. Our aged Bro. Joblin has spent time, and given us the benefit of his talent for years. He now offers us in tract form an array of testimony in behalf of the truth; but he is weary in [illegible] Can we not "hold up his hands" he labors in God's vineyard? [illegible] to him at 624 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, and say how many of the tracts you will want, will be encouraging.

A Lover of Truth.

Ed Restitution:

Will some brother write an article on our proper attitude toward the sectarian churches. I am often criticized quite severely for not affiliating with them, and especially when they are engaged in a revival effort. I am reminded that a man who professes to be a Christian should meet with Christians, and help to push the work, and that the Golden Rule is violated if I withhold my aid, and sympathy, and hearty co-operation. That I would want an appreciating audience, and be glad to have them join in the singing and prayer and exhortation, if I was conducting a religious service. What ought we to answer to this gentle impeachment, and what does our Guide Book tell us to do? Of course [illegible] as when we are engaged in [illegible] set forth the Truth, as we understand it, nor manifest any great interest in the things most surely believed among us, yet this does not answer as an excuse if we fail in our proper attitude as Christians toward them. I am not in any doubt as to the matter, for there are those whom we would like to convince and satisfy in harmony with the truth as it is in Jesus. I desire that Bro Zittner write a short article on the subject.

The Remission of Sins.

It is a sad truth that "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." It is recorded that John the Baptist "preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Mark i. 4; Luke iii. 3 And also that he "came preaching.....and [illegible] Repent ye, for the kingdom [illegible] above testimony [illegible] that baptism (of [illegible] with the antecedent belief on the part of the baptized) and positive relation to remission of sins;" and that an agency of divine appointment is also recorded that after John was put in prison Jesus came "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God.....and saying, The kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel."

It ought to be conceded that there was perfect identity between the preaching of John and Jesus although "baptism for the remission of sins," was not recorded of Jesus, that element as it really belonged to the gospel of Jesus as it did to that of John, is a figure of speech where a part is put for the whole; and this should be kept steadily in mind in studying Bible histories as those of evangelists. An example of [illegible] of our Lord to his contemporaries when he was told of persons killed by the fall of a tower—"Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Luke xiii. 3. "Repent" here certainly is put as a part for the whole—and signifies compliance with the terms prescribed by our Lord in his public preaching. The truth advanced here is amply corroborated by the commission which our Lord gave to his apostles: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned." Mark xvi. 16. R. V. It cannot be doubted that "being saved" embraces "the remission of sins," inheritance of the kingdom of God, everlasting life, etc.; and that it is dependent on baptism and the antecedent repentance and belief of the baptized. In Luke's report of our Lord's directions to his apostles on the eve of his departure just before he ascended, he only mentions "preaching repentance and remission of sins in his name among all nations;" omitting the gospel and the belief of it, as well as baptism. But here again no one can reasonably doubt that both the [illegible] and baptism are all implied that the assent of the careful reader of the various reports of the commission is compelled.

The same remark will apply to Matthew's report. Matthew omits any mention of the gospel and belief of it, as also repentance and remission of sins, but without doubt these are certainly implied.

There is a strong probability that our Lord in giving his commission used language fully justifying the reports of the three evangelists, although each gave the substance of the commission in his own way, and in accordance with the circumstances of the occasion of his writing.

In accordance with what has been advanced above we have a statement recorded of our Lord, John xx. 23, "Whose soever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them." Here our Lord regards his apostles as the bestowers of remission of sins, although in strict matter of fact they were only the ministerial agents in conferring it, the real bestower of that blessing being God himself. Our Lord was evidently anticipating the faithful carrying out of his commission by his apostles, with the result of the name in the baptized believers.

In the first discourse by our Lord's apostles after his ascension as recorded in Acts ii, we read that in reply to the question of those assembled Jews who had come to believe the things set forth by Peter, that apostle said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Verse 38.

It has been attempted by some to separate the remission of sins from baptism as one of the procuring causes of the same, and to limit remission to the name of Jesus Christ.

One way of doing this is stated as follows: It is urged by many that the word for in this passage means because of; that Peter commanded the people to be baptized because their sins were already remitted. We readily admit that the word for is sometimes used in this sense, of which may be given as an example. Paul says to the Roman brethren, "for I long to see you that I may impart to you some spiritual gift." But another example may be given in which the opposition are bound to admit it means in order to. Jesus says to his disciples: "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many, for the remission of sins." No one, I presume will contend that Christ's blood was shed because sins were already remitted. Gospel Banner, Vol. I, p 78.

Another writer says, "Instead of in [illegible] preposition is not on but epi, on or upon.....On is not related to the word baptized but to the name of Jesus Christ. Baptized on does not make sense, however, therefore we require, as is often the case to supply a word...resting or believing on the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

To establish this construction of Peter's words this writer quotes Luke xxv. 47, where remission of sins is connected with "the name" of Jesus. Also to the same effect Acts x. 43 R. V. He continues: "The Lord Jesus Christ, he is the ground of a sinner's acceptance with God. It is through him, through his blood we receive the remission of sins; and none who put their trust in him shall be put to shame."

The writer says, "For the main idea in the foregoing I am indebted to Mr. J. M. Denniston, M. A. of Jamaica, in his work, The sacrifice for his sin.

It has to be noted that the writer of the article of which the above is an extract, has laid himself open to when he says the supplied word "resting" which he seems to prefer to the word "believing" cannot be allowed to apply to the persons addressed by Peter for the simple reason that it implies a knowledge and a mental attitude on their part which they certainly could not have possessed. That is, that at that time they were consciously "resting" or depending on the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins. The alternative word suggested to be supplied, namely "believing" is not open to the same objection. Those persons had become true believers. Peter closed his address with these words: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ."

It was their sincere belief of this important statement of the apostle which impelled them to say, "Unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

If a word be really required to be supplied the alternative term "believing" suggested by the writer quoted, might be adopted. Peter's command would then read: "Repent and be baptized every one of you [believing] on the name of Jesus Christ, (as ye now do) for the remission of sins."

It fails to be observed here also that the reasoning of this writer would not only exclude baptism but also repentance, as procuring causes of God's appointment of the remission of sins. The reader is referred to what has been advanced as to the preaching of John the Baptist and our Lord himself, as to repentance and baptism with the corroboration of the same by our Lord's commission. The writer quoted refers to Luke's report of the commission but overlooks the fact that "repentance" is prominently mentioned as an essential element in the bestowal of remission of sins. It is also worthy of note that repentance occupies the foremost place in Peter's command. Firmly conjoined with repentance by the conjunction "and" is "be baptized," showing that baptism is equally indispensable with "repentance" as conditions of remission of sins. "Repent AND be baptized."

Further corroborative of this, if corroboration be necessary, we find that Peter on an occasion shortly afterwards addressing Jews thus: "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out" etc. The command to "repent" here will not be denied to have a potential bearing on the "blotting out of sins." The term "be converted" finds its explanation in the use of the noun "conversion" by Paul and Barnabas when they went to various places declaring "the conversion of the Gentiles." Acts xv. 3. This has reference to what took place in the house of Cornelius as recorded in Acts x. In the case of Cornelius and his friends there was undoubtedly belief in the Word spoken publicly by our Lord, and this followed by baptism. This was equivalent to what was termed the "conversion of the Gentiles." Hence the command of Peter—"Repent and be converted," implied in the strongest manner compliance with the terms prescribed by our Lord in his commission to his apostles, and their fullest and most emphatic sense.

An illustration of the sense in which baptism was understood by the first preachers as having a close relation to the remission of sins is seen in the baptism of Saul of Tarsus. He was addressed by Ananias a disciple of Damascus, appointed by the Lord, to visit Saul. "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon the name of the Lord."

Preserve Your Strength.

Every person born into the world has a certain amount of strength, which may be nourished, increased, preserved, squandered or destroyed. In young persons there is an apparent superabundance of strength. Persons of vigorous, wakeful, alert, and sometimes hardly know what weariness means; but the strength thus bountifully bestowed is sometimes prodigally expended, and men and women who in early days were full of strength and vigor, become enfeebled, and perhaps end their lives prematurely with weakness, weariness, and pain. They had all the strength they needed, they wasted and abused it, and when they came at last to the great tests of endurance were unable to bear them, and sank down into feebleness, helplessness and disease. Such persons, whose native vigor should have made them able to do much for themselves and the world, come in after days to be helpless, and dependent, and a burden to all around.

No man or woman has a right to be thus needlessly burdensome. It is the business of men and women to be strong, and to bear burdens; to be able to help those that have need, and to do valiant service in the cause of the heavenly Master. But if through gluttony, intemperance, sensual excess, rash activity, and needless exertion, they come to be crippled, helpless, and mere encumbrances in the world, they have sad account to give to Him who has entrusted to them strength, talent, and ability.

Strength can be wasted as money can be wasted; it can be saved as money can be saved. He who spends more than he gains every day, is on the road to poverty and distress. He who gains more than he spends, is on the way to prosperity So he who spends to day more strength than he gains, is in a bad way, and on the downward road. He who gains more strength than he spends, is on the road to health, and vigor, and activity.

A man to conserve his strength should know just how he stands. The man who borrows money and spends, keeping no accounts, and never balancing his books, will have flush times for the present, and ruin and disaster come at the end. The man who earns his money before he spends it, and who knows just how he stands, is in a much safer position.

One great cause of physical decay and overthrow is the deception caused by stimulation. A man or woman works till weariness is felt, and it is time to rest, and then instead of resting commences to stimulate. Tea, coffee, beer, wine, cider, rum, gin, brandy, etc., are thrown into the system and lash the jaded energies, and the person feels as if new life and vigor were imparted, and is ready then for another struggle. But the end is utter exhaustion and bankruptcy; and persons who thus stimulate and go beyond their natural strength, find it out the following morning, when they are more weary than they were at night.

There is little danger from hard work, provided persons will see to it that they are thoroughly rested in the morning; but if they become so weary that they cannot sleep at night, or that a night's sleep does not rest and refresh them, then they are on the road to physical ruin. Any person who feels excessive weariness in the morning is on the wrong road, and needs to stop; and it is the duty of every Christian, and of every intelligent person to carefully consider these things, and not rush blindly on until arrested by some sudden shock, or by a fit of sickness which often proves fatal to one who is "all run down." It is the duty of sensible people to guard in season against these break-downs. Many people will do anything when it is too late to do anything. They will travel, spend money, diet, rest, and do a dozen things, any one of which done in season would have been amply sufficent for the protection of their health. Prevention is better than cure. It is easier to save money while it is going, than it is to regain it after it has been wasted. It is easier to save health while we have it than it is to wreck our health, and then try in vain to restore it. We may think that necessity is laid upon us now, to work beyond our strength, but we are almost sure to see a day when the need will be greater than now; hence we must save our strength and prepare ourselves for those emergencies which are sure to come.

[illegible] and well oiled. Do not allow it to run creaking and rattling. If there is a pain or a lame spot work over it and cure it. Take as much care of yourself as you would of a horse after a hard day's work, you will find yourself repaid for your labor when you see others crippled and broken down, while your eye is not dim, nor your natural force abated.—Safeguard.

"A Little While."

"A little while and ye again shall see me."
Surely thou tarriest long,
Bridegroom, beloved! When shall this night of weeping
Be turned to song?
With heaven so far beyond us
And earth so near to love and grieve us,
How long? Oh! thou didst promise but to tarry
"A little while."

"A little while;" the sorrowing and the leaning
Are not forever;
These arms that now should somehow have wound around me
Thine hand shall sever
How long ere I awaken
Where nothing enters that can me defile?
I hear the voice of my Beloved say gently—
"A little while."

"A little while;" my flesh and heart are failing,
So long the night;
My feet are sore, mine eyes are dim with straining
Toward the light.
Oh! when will thou array me
In glorious body, me in weakness clad?
Come quickly! Then didst promise but to tarry
"A little while."

"A little while." I say with wistful glances
At yon bright skies.
"Where is the promise of thy Master's coming?"
The world replies.
How long shall I be weary
With bearing sum thy sorrow and thy evils?
Oh! teach them that who didst but mean to tarry
"A little while."

"A little while;" the whole creation waits these
In hope and fear;
Surely the sound of that swift-driven chariot
At length I hear.
Dearth! call thy armies forth
We kneel in thy tears, put on thy glory-smiled
Surely he comeths and he will but tarry
"A little while."

The Two Witnesses.

We do not expect to explain all about those two prophets. But will give our explanation. And there was given me a reed like unto a rod; and the angel stood, saying, Rise and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given to the Gentiles, and the holy city shall they tread under foot, forty and two months Rev. xi 1, 2. And at the end of this treading down of Jerusalem is where the two witnesses begin their work. And their time is twelve hundred and sixty days. And when they shall have finished their testimony the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie on the streets of the great city three days and a half. At which time they ascend up to heaven, by life from God entering them. And the same hour there was a great earthquake And the tenth part of the city fell. And this ends the second woe. And the third one comes quickly, and is ushered in by the sounding of the seventh trumpet which brings the kingdom of Christ to view, and his reign forever and ever. This earthquake was the same hour, that the prophets ascended to heaven; and those events are too closely connected together in the book, to be separated. For it was the same hour, and when Christ predicted the destruction of Jerusalem, he said, Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. Lu iv. 24 And if Gentile times are in the past; then the two witnesses time may be, but I think not.

But as to who the witnesses are, we think they are Enoch and Elijah, as they are the only prophets that we have any account of in the Scriptures, who have not passed under the power of death. And the prophet said, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Mal. iv, 5. It is claimed that John the Baptist fulfilled this, but what does he say about it? When the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, who art thou? And he confessed and denied not; but confessed I am not the Christ. And they asked him what then, Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Jno. i. 19, 20, 21. Is not this as plain as words can make it?

And by reading the twentieth verse we find they understood him to deny fulfilling the prophecy concerning the coming of Elias spoken of in Mal. iv. and v. But he did fulfill the angel's announcement. He shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. Luke i. 17. For this is he of whom it is written, Behold I send my messenger before thy face which shall prepare thy way before thee. Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there has not risen a greater than John the Baptist, notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by forces. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear let him hear. Matt. xi. 10 15 We have ears to hear, and believe every word of this. And yet we do not believe that John fulfilled the fourth chapter of Malachi. For I think many one will turn to that chapter and begin at the fourth verse where it says, Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel with the statutes and judgments. Behold I will send you Elijah, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. They will find this prophecy prefigured on the mount in Matthew xvii. And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart. And was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And behold there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with them. Here is a representation of his second coming. Taking his own word for it, in Matthew xvi. 27, 28, and read what he had promised them six days before, for the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works, verily, I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom.

And in Mark ix. 1, we find the same event with Moses and Elias on the Mount. Here is the lawgiver, and the messenger of the law covenant, both represented. And it represented the school master that was to bring them to Christ. Gal. iii. 24. 25 And he will condemn every one who has not come to Christ through faith in God's promise. And it was not John the Baptist that was represented on the mount. For he was dead, his work was finished, and Christ was representing his second coming. And the appearance of Elias on the mount gave rise to the question, Why say the scribes that Elias must first come? And he did not give them a direct answer, but simply said, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall the Son of Man suffer of them. This proves conclusively that the scribes had rejected John, and permitted him to be executed; and were going to do the same with Christ himself, and yet this does not answer why the scribes said Elias must first come. God had promised to send Elijah, and they had sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him who he was, and he denies being Christ or Elias either, and it would be about as safe to call him one as the other so far as his testimony goes. Jno. i. 19 22.

But blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. Rom. xi. 25 For they thought that the Elias represented on the Mount was to precede Christ's first advent, in fact they knew nothing of the second, and consequently they rejected Christ as the promised Messiah, because John had said that he was not Elias. Jno. i. 21. But when the Elias of Malachi fourth chapter comes they will remember the law of Moses by the force of circumstances, for Christ was born King of the Jews, and King of the Jews he will be, Matt. ii. 2. For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ, and those who will not accept grace and truth will suffer the penalty of the law. And when the kingdom is established, the law shall go forth of Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Mic iv. 1-7. And under the pouring out of the sixth vial of God's wrath, we read, And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. The dragon is the old serpent, called the devil and Satan Rev. xii. 9 The beast is the new. ish comes out of the pit and kills the witnesses, Rev. xvi. 13 and xi. 7. The false prophet is the one who comes up and tries to persuade people to accept him as the true prophet, when he cannot do the works pointed out to be done by the one sent of God. And I think if we look around we may see the works of two of those powers at the present time, the dragon and the false prophet. And when the beast comes out of the pit, the dragon will give him his power, his seat, and great authority. Rev. xiii. 2. Concerning those three characters, the record says, they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold I come as a thief, blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying it is done. Rev. xvi. 14, 17 Read on to the close of chapter, and we find the wrath of God is there poured out without mixture. But as to the prophets, we have pointed out to, fulfil this prophecy, they were taken from the earth once with the same body that they brought into the earth. And I can see no reason why they should not take the same body again. And not only so, but Elijah consumed his enemies in the same manner, that those witnesses are going to theirs by fire proceeding out of their mouth Rev. xi 5, 6; 2 Kings i. 10, 12. Here we have the type and antetype embodied in the person of Elijah, and promised in the line of prophecy. Mal iv. 5. And what could be more fitting than that those witnesses should receive their final reward for sacrificing their lives in defense of the truth of God's Word. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it Matthew xvi 25 And the two witnesses are to find theirs in three days and a half, just the length of time that Christ laid in the grave. On the streets of the same city he was crucified in, for confirming the same covenant, the establishing of God's kingdom on the earth, as we find by reading the fourteenth and fifteenth verses of this eleventh chapter of Revelation. The second woe is past; and behold the third woe cometh quickly, and the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. And the manner that they were to destroy their enemies was not permitted under the gospel. For Christ rebuked his disciples sharply for requesting the authority to command fire to come down from heaven and consume their enemies. Luke ix. 54, 56 Consequently it is evident that their time is after gospel preaching is ended. That is, has ceased by virtue of limitation, or the end of Gentile times having come.

You will notice that we have pointed to the transfiguration as a signal of Christ's second coming, with John Baptist placed under the altar of the fifth seal by execution. Rev. vi. 9 Who will be crying with a loud voice saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth. But he will rest for a little season until their fellowservants that should be killed as they were, are fulfilled, perhaps the witnesses. And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake. See Rev. xi. 13. The one that follows the work of the witnesses. And the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth and the great men and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman and every free man hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains. And said unto the mountains and rocks, fall on us and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come and who will be able to stand. Rev. vi. 12-17.

And Christ said, Immediately after those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. The earthquake of Rev. xi. and xiii. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and he shall send his angels with a sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. But he said, I will send you Elijah, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. And he was represented at the transfiguration as a messenger of that momentous day, the coming of the Son of Man with power and great glory. Matthew xvi. 27, 28; xvii 3. And behold there appeared unto them, Moses and Elias talking with him. This was not John the Baptist, or the apostles would have said so, for they knew him better than they did Elias.

How Jesus was in the Beginning.

In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him and without him was not any thing made that was made. Jno. i. 1. Heb. i. 1-2. God who at sundry times and in diverse manners, spoke in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds. I John i 1-2. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life; for the Life was manifested and we have seen it, and bear witness and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father and was manifested unto us. Heb i 9 Paul tells the Hebrews that Jesus was made a little lower than the angels, and also tells why. But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death.

Phil. ii 8. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. John i. 10. He was in the world and the world was made by him and the world knew him not. God spake the Word and everything was made just as he spake the Word. 14, And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. Luke tells us how and when the Word was made flesh. Luke i. 26, And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women. And when she saw him she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be, and the angel said unto her, Fear not Mary; for thou hast found favor with God, and behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. The throne is to be given Jesus at his second coming, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke ii. 3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city, and Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn. And the angel said unto them (the shepherds) Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. 21, And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcision of the child, his name was called Jesus, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb. Luke i. 15, For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost even from his mother's womb. Luke ii. 40, And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon him.

God bless you all.

A New Name.

We all love new things, but in order for us to get the most value and beauty out of the new we must see to it that in some degree at least they must blend and harmonize with their surroundings, or else the contrast with each other would be ridiculous in the extreme. Christ has warned us against putting new wine into old bottles, or trying to unite new clothes with old garments. Should we attempt to unite the old life with the new, the old nature with the new, the old desires with the new, what we now love with the things we once hated, what confusion would follow. Before the new name can come to us and we be fitted to bear that name and the same blend and beautifully harmonize with all it means to the possessor we must have several other new things, new desires, new hopes, new character, new life and a new nature.

There are but three ways of getting anything. First, to steal it; second, to receive it as a gift; third, earn or pay the price demanded. We cannot steal this new name. It will not be given to us without a personal effort on our part. In a certain sense we must earn it for ourselves. We must pay the price demanded for it. What is it? "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna and I will give him a white stone, and in that stone a new name, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it." Will we pay the price for this name by overcoming?

L. S. BRONSON.

Dear Restitution:

The years come and go, and no Master appears. I wonder how many who professed to love our blessed Savior one year ago are faithful still. I wonder if any have turned scoffers, and are saying "where is the promise of his coming for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were." I hope none; nothing seems more sad to me, than to gaze into the eyes and look upon the features of one, who only a short year or so ago, was radiant with the hope of an eternal inheritance in the glory land; but who today are without hope and without Christ. Having trodden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing; and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace. What a fearful condition it is to be in, for it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Again it is written, "The Lord shall judge his people." Heb. x. "For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith, but if any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him. "But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul." What a joy it will be in that day, if the language, and sentiments of the apostle, in the winding up of this chapter can be ours.

We are living alone in the Cascades with no one with whom to commune but nature, and nature's God. It is grand; but sweeter by far is the communion and fellowship of those of like precious faith. We can study God's Word and pray, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought to us at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

Yours in hope of coming glory.

Obituary.

In fond remembrance of my dear nephew H. Raymond Updike. Died Jan. 23, of Pneumonia after a short illness. He was the youngest of four children, and the only son, aged two years two months and eight days.

He was the son of our much esteemed Bro. Ashby and Sister Alice Updike. He was a sweet child and loved by all that knew him. May our dear Heavenly Father bless and strengthen and comfort the bereaved family, during life. They have the Promise of the Savior, "I am the Resurrection and the life."

Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there sometime we'll understand.

We'll catch the broken threads again
And finish what we here begun;
God will the mysteries explain,
And then, oh then, we'll understand.

We'll know why clouds instead of sun
Were over many a cherished plan;
Why some has crawled when some begun,
'Tis there, sometime we'll understand.

Why what we long for most of all
Eludes so oft our eager hand;
Why [illegible] fall,
'Tis then, sometime we'll understand.

God knows the way, he holds the key,
He guides us with unerring hand;
Sometime with tear-wet eyes we'll see;
Yes then, oh then, we'll understand.

AUNT AND COUSIN.

It is with an aching heart we tell of little Henry Raymond's death, aged a little over two years. The enemy has visited our home and ties are now broken. How tenderly we cared for him through the weary days and the lonely nights only to see his lovely face grow pale and his sparkling eyes grow dim. All that loving hearts and willing hands could do would not stay the icy touch of death, and with breaking hearts we saw the last ray of hope vanish the fleeting breath depart. His life was like a bright ray of sunshine, so soon went behind the clouds. Oh, the reaper death is ever present, and reaps the bearded grain at a breath, and the flowers—yes, the little flowers that grow between.

But it will not always be thus. Jesus the Life Giver, will soon appear and banish all sorrow, pain and all death, and little Raymond, with the loved and lost of all ages, shall live again and receive the smiles and tender care of him who hath said "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom." Sorrow not as those that have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Even in the darkest hour of sorrow we can trust him who gave his life for us; and in the morning of the eternal spring flowers of immortal bloom will spring from those lowly mounds in which our loved ones now repose.

He was only sick ten days with the dreadful pneumonia.

Christ and Death.

We are frequently told that death is equivalent to the coming of Christ; and many passages which speak of his coming are used with reference to the death of individuals. Thus, if a man be crushed by a collision, blown up by an explosion, killed by accident, or slain by violent hands, these words are often uttered: "Be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." The spirit of the warning is excellent, but in point of fact the coming of Christ is not a steamboat explosion, nor a railway collision, nor yet any instrumentality which produces sudden and unexpected death.

The whole Scripture discountenances and contradicts such an idea. Death is called an "enemy," Christ is certainly a friend. He does not say, "I am the way, and the truth and the death," but "I am the way the truth and the life!" "The thief cometh not: but to kill and destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." "As the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." He gives his flock eternal life. "When Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." "I am the resurrection, and the life." "Because I live, ye shall live also." Such is the current testimony of Scripture concerning Christ, as "the life and light of men." On the contrary death is called an enemy, a foe that is to be abhorred and destroyed. Christ is the great conqueror "who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

It is a remarkable fact that during all Christ's ministry, and in all the records of his work, no instance is ever related of any death occuring in his presence. If death and Christ's coming were the same, we might have anticipated numerous deaths in connection with his personal ministry; but from the beginning to the end there is not one instance on record. Even the thieves who hung upon the cross by his side did not die until Christ himself was dead; and though he was appointed "to comfort all that mourn," yet there is no account in all the records of his ministry, of his being present on the occasion of a burial, or administering comfort to the mourning ones. When he came where the sick were they were restored; when he came into the presence of the dying, they were turned back again to life; when he stood by the side of the dead, it was as a conquering king, and the destroyer fled discomfited from before him.

The Jewish ruler came earnestly beseeching Christ to heal his little daughter; but ere he had reached the house it was said: "Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master;" but he went thither, and hushing the wail of the mourners, he waked the child from death, and gave her back once more to life. Entering the little city of Nain he met the funeral procession accompanying to the grave a weeping widow's only son. With his word he broke the palsying power of the destroyer, rescued the captive from his grasp, and sent the mother home rejoicing with her child.

"If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died," was the united testimony of Martha and Mary of Bethany. They did not regard Christ's coming as equivalent to death. Death had robbed them of a brother, Christ's presence would have averted the calamity, but when Jesus went to the grave and shouted into its silence: "Lazarus, come forth!" how quickly the bondage of death was broken, how soon the brother rose to life again!

And when Christ himself arose and came from the grave, "many bodies of the saints which slept, arose" also, to signalize his victory over the destroyer, and his bursting asunder of death's prison doors.

These instances illustrate Christ's attitude towards death, death being our enemy, and Christ our Almighty friend.

They also give us intimations of the blessings that await the followers of Jesus when he shall return to conquer death, and give them everlasting life. A little while and their pains and sufferings and bereavements shall be over; a little while and he who raised dead Lazarus from his grave shall wake the dead both small and great, and call them from the tomb; a little while and death shall be shown to be a conquered foe, and Christ shall wear his robes of victory.—The Common People.

Truth Triumphant.

It is a blessed assurance which the Christian enjoys, that truth and righteousness are eventually to triumph. That, though falsehood may prevail, and iniquity exalt itself; though truth may be fallen in the street, and judgment turned away backward; yet the time will come when out of all this error and confusion, truth and righteousness will be triumphant in the end. He who was the Way, the Truth, and the Life, suffered as bitterly as any one, from the hatred, and falsehood, and malice of this world. But now all this has passed away, and at the right hand of God, in glory everlasting, far above all principalities and powers, and every name that is named, He sits in the sereneness of his omnipotent majesty, "from henceforth expecting until his enemies be made his footstool." And "if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him," and shall partake his glory as we have also partaken his shame.

Even in this world "the triumphing of the wicked is short;" and sometimes, ere we are aware, God vindicates the right, and judges and punishes the wrong. But this is only the beginning. The eternal years of God are before us, and the outcome of all time and all eternity shall be to glorify the heavenly King, and exalt his truth and righteousness, and utterly destroy and crush out the infernal serpents of sin, and falsehood, and iniquity which swarm around this sin-cursed earth.

Let us then be of good cheer, and work with good heart and hope, assured that God shall bruise Satan under our feet shortly, and that in due time our Master will remember and reward our toils, and crown his faithful followers with honor, strength, and victory.—H. L. Hastings.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and [illegible] the seed—God will give the increase.

An Appeal.

To brethren of like faith scattered abroad:

We are very much in need of a church building in which to hold our meetings. There is a small band of us here at Corvallis, Ore., and we meet each Sunday at private houses for Bible study and worship. It is impossible to get a church or rent a hall. A little help from brethren or churches who have something to spare will enable us to obtain lumber and thus get the building ready for use by early spring. The lot and a greater part of the work will be donated. Corvallis is a growing town of 2500 inhabitants, with perhaps as mild a climate as well as the most healthful that can be found in the United States. We are poor in this world's goods, but we trust rich in faith, working together in peace and harmony, trying to carry out the instruction of the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. i. 10. Contributions may be sent to either of the undersigned.

Joblin, 620 Woodland avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, saying how many you will buy when the work is out. Due notice will be given when to send money.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in other of the above ways is at risk; money sent loose in letters is at the sender's risk. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope,
W. L. Cnowe.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Complete in Jesus.

"Complete in him." Col. ii. 10.

Complete in Jesus! O how full
Of heavenly peace the thought,
Our souls redeemed—our pardon sealed!
Since Jesus' blood hath bought.

Complete in Jesus! have our souls
In bitter anguish cried?
'Tis Jesus hears and gives relief,
'Twas for our souls he died.

Complete in Jesus—blissful thought!
'Tis ours, whate'er befall;
Our Jesus is our Savior, Friend,
Our Life, our Hope—our All.

O let us place our hand in his,
As on through life we go,
Like little children, trusting all
To him, come weal or woe.

Thus shall our trembling hearts be filled
With love which grows not dim,
If "Jesus only" be our peace
And this—"Complete in him."

Church Discipline.

We as a people have been trying to impress upon the world, especially the so called religious world, that we do not endorse a creed and Church discipline as most of the denominations have. Unless we are very careful we are apt to convey a wrong impression both to the world and those who have not become established in the faith Let no one for one moment think that the Church of God is a mob in which there is neither law nor order, where every one may follow his own notions of what is right. "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all the churches of the saints." 1. Cor. xiv: 33. "The Churches of God" are governed according to a well defined "custom." 1. Cor. xi: 16.

In the first place, what is the Church of God? Church is from the Greek ekklesia, which means briefly the called out. God calls. Rom viii: 28; ix: 11; 1. Thes. v: 24. In this calling there is a definite purpose. 2 Tim. i: 9. The call is out of darkness into his marvellous light. 1 Pet. ii: 9. Men are called to be saints Rom i: 7; 1. Cor. i: 2; to holiness 1. Thess. iv: 7; 1. Pet. i: 15; to glory and virtue 2. Pet. i: 3; to belief of the truth 2. Thess. ii: 13, 14; to fellowship with God's Son 1. Cor. i: 9; to his kingdom and glory 1 Thess. ii: 12; to inherit a blessing 1 Pet. iii: 9. and to eternal life. 1. Tim. vi: 11, 12 God calls to men by means of the gospel. 2. Thess. ii: 14. This gospel must be believed and obeyed. Mark xvi: 16; Rom x: 16. Those who render such obedience constitute the Church of God. On Pentecost they who gladly received the word were baptized and thus added to the Church Acts ii: 38, 41. These, with others already members, constituted the Church at Jerusalem. At Samaria men and women who believed Philip's preaching of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ were baptized. Acts viii 12 At Corinth many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized. Acts xviii: 8. They constituted "the church of God at Corinth." 1. Cor. i: 2. The same is true of every church of which we have a history. There were no persons at that time who had joined the Church in any other but the Lord's own way; in other words, there were none in the Church who had not come in by obedience to the gospel in baptism. How is it today? There is a great variety of ways in which persons are taken into church,—all of them alike unauthorized because un-Scriptural. Is there any rule by which to govern this matter, or must they who insist upon a conscientious application of the apostolic rule, justly come under the condemnation of being uncharitable and narrow? Those in the Church at Corinth, as elsewhere, had all in one spirit been baptized into one body. 1. Cor. xii: 12, 18. They had not brought with them from an organization holding to the immortality of the soul and kindred theories equally repugnant to God and subversive of the truth, a letter of recommendation expecting to be recognized as being of the one body. Even the religious leaders of the people at Jerusalem—the priests—, if they desired to participate in the blessings of the gospel, had need to be "obedient to the faith." Acts vi: 7. However humiliating such an act might be, the obedience of the gospel was an essential, an indispensible step in coming into the body of Christ.

If such care was exercised in guarding the door of the apostolic Church, how careful should we be today when there are so many dangers of introducing foreign elements into the Church. The writer was formerly a minister in full standing in an organization which holds to the immortality of the soul. Could he have been received into the fellowship of the Church of the living God upon a recommendation from that body? Would he have been received upon presentation of such credentials? It is not presumable that he would, though he should not have asked it. It seemed needful to him, notwithstanding his six years' service as a public preacher, to begin with the very first principles of the doctrine of Christ. If he could not be recognized without such obedience to the gospel, upon what reasonable grounds could those who were or became members of the organization to which he belonged, be received into the Church of God as members in good standing? It is a rule which will not work both ways. Logically, it does not work at all except where it is forced to do so at the sacrifice of a principle

The Church of God has received its Book of Discipline, not from fallible men, but from Christ the Head of the Church. His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. 2. Pet. i: 3. That we need many such things pertaining to life and godliness, is a fact which is recognized by all. But not all seem to be aware or appreciate the fact that his divine power (ability) hath given us those things. Hence their efforts to construct a system of church government of their own. Why it has never occurred to the framers and executors of the various forms of church discipline that the word of God furnishes a sufficient guide both as to faith and practice, has often been a matter of surprise to me. Even while they volubly say that the word furnishes such a guide, they contradict their saying by their own actions. Do we need a doctrine to preach? Do we need instruction (paideia-discipline) in righteousness? Do we wish to know how to come into the body of Christ? Or what is the relation of the members toward each other? Or their relation to the world? Or what to do in case of disagreement between members? What to do with one unruly? Or what officers to appoint? What are their duties? Or what the relation of the Church to the officers? What meetings to hold? when? how often? what to do? Who shall preach? what? when? and how? All these and similiar questions find a satisfactory answer in the oracles of God. The divinely inspired Scriptures give full and explicit instructions on all matters pertaining to life and godliness, "that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works. 2. Tim iii: 15 17.

While the Church of God does not have and does not need a man-made book of discipline, it must not be inferred from this that any ecclesiastical derelict, or doctrinal heretic, or moral reprobate can find an asylum and safe harbor within the Church of the living God. The Church has received an authoritative standard of doctrine and morals, and has been made the custodian, "the pillar and ground of the truth." 1. Tim. iii: 15. Directions have been given in the word of God as to how to proceed against the immoral person and the false teacher. If any are guilty of an offence affainst the doctrinal and moral standard, they are to be admonished in the spirit of meekness, and that repeatedly. Gal. vi: 1; Titus iii: 10. They are to be borne with, "if peradventure God will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." 2. Tim. ii: 25. But if they stubbornly refuse to heed such entreaty, and persist in such wicked practice, their presence in the body will become a festering sore which not only hinders its growth, but will soon eat out the vitals of the Church. Such persons are spots, as Jude so aptly says Jude xii.

Willfully and persistently immoral persons are to be put away from among the brethren. 1. Cor. v: 2 7, 13 They have no inheritance in the kingdom of God 1. Cor. vi: 9. 10, and no right in the body of Christ.

Heretical persons who create dissentions and discord contrary to the doctrine of God are likewise to be dealt with. The apostle Paul wrote to the Romans to "mark them" and "avoid them." Rom. xvi: 17. "Their words," says he, "will eat as doth a gangrene; .....who concerning the truth have erred." 2. Tim. ii: 17. The brethren are commanded in the name of Jesus Christ and by apostolic authority to withdraw yourselves from every brother who walketh disorderly, and not after the traditions which he received of us 2 Thess. iii: 6 And if any man obey not our word note that man by an epistle, and have no company with that man, that he may be ashamed. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother. 2. Thess. iii: 14, 15. Charge him that he teach no other doctrine. 1. Tim. i: 3. Admonish him repeatedly. Titus iii: 10. If he then refuses to heed such repeated admonition, he is to be rejected as a person who is subverted, and sinneth, being self-condemned. Titus iii: 11. He then becomes to the Church as a heathen man and a publican. Matth. xviii: 17. As the Jews had no religous fellowship with Gentiles Mark vii: 26; John iv: 9; Acts x; 28, and no social intercourse with the publicans or taxgatherers Matth. ix: 10. 11, so the Church is to withdraw from the willful violator of God's order. To retain him in the fellowship of the Church is equivalent to an endorsement of his disorderly conduct of which the Church cannot afford to be guilty

A glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish, is to be presented to the Lord. Eph. v: 26. 27. The means to be employed with a view to such presentation have been given to the Church. Every man is to purify himself according to Christ the example of purity. 1 John iii: 3. The Church must purge out from her numbers the immoral and disorderly members.

One word more. If a brother tells us of our fault with a view to gain us to the Lord's order and way, let us heed such earnest and tender word of admonition. We are to exhort one another daily Heb. iii: 15. but no one can exhort except there be some one to heed the exhortation. The Church is not a mutual admiration society for perfect beings, but a school of discipline for weak and erring mortals; it is not a place of torment, recrimination, and recrimination, but a body of earnest and devout men and women who do all they can to help one another in their efforts to know and do the Lord's will.

Revelation xiii

John standing on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, sees "a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy." The chronology of this beast, and its "ten horns," identify it as a phase of Daniel's fourth beast of (chap. vii. 7) "Like a leopard,"—Grecia; "feet as the feet of a bear," Medo Persia; "mouth as the mouth of a lion," Babylon; all these nations were absorbed by Rome, therefore the description. "And the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority." That this beast is a symbol of Rome, there can be no doubt. Rome absorbed the territory of Babylon, Medo Persia, and of Greece together with their inhabitants. Therefore it was like the Grecian leopard, and had the feet of the Medo Persian bear; and the mouth of the Babylonian lion. And if this be not enough to identify him, it is added. "And the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority." This beast got the dragon out of power, and has took his empire to himself, and became a persecuting power like the dragon. Thus paganism "that hindered" in Paul's day was taken away to make room for the rise of "the man of sin" under the guise of Christianity. Verse 3. "And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death, and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast." The wound was by a sword; the instrument by which nations rise and fall. About the middle of the third century pronounced the war that inflicted the mortal wound, and caused the fall of Rome A. D 476 For more than two hundred years the Gothic sword continued to wound the imperial head —or government of imperial Rome, until finally Augustulus could no longer command respect, but was compelled to ignore clemancy of the barbarian Odoacer, who became the king of Italy A. D 476. The northern invaders of the empire were in religion Arians and on that account were hated by the orthodox bishops of Rome. The Arians upbraided the Catholics with the worship of three Gods.

As the wounding of the head of the beast was by the invasion of the northern Goths, the healing of the wound must be by the expelling of the invaders from the territory of the empire. This work commenced in the sixth century, Justinian being the emperor of the west, "who piously labored to establish with fire and sword the unity of the Christian faith." And who by the aid of the rising power of the papacy destroyed the power of the Arians. Mosheim says, "About the commencement of the sixth century, the Arians were triumphant in several parts of Asia, Africa and Europe..... "The triumphs of Arianism were however transitory, and its prosperous days were entirely eclipsed, when the Vandals were driven out of Africa, and the Goths out of Italy, by the arms of Justinian; for the other Arian princes were easily induced to abandon themselves, the doctrine of that sect; and not only so, to employ the force of laws and the authority of councils to prevent its progress among their subjects; and to extirpate it entirely out of the dominions ...From this period, the Arian sect declined a pace, and could never after recover any considerable degree of stability."

What have we in the text as the result of the healing of the wound: "And all the world wondered after the beast." By the destruction of the Arians we see the fulfillment of the little horn of Daniel, that came up among the ten, "before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots." Dan. vii. 8. And why did the emperor and the bishop combine to destroy the faith of the Arians? Because they bitterly opposed the doctrine of the trinity, the mark of orthodoxy. Verse 4, "And they worshiped the dragon which gave power unto the beast; and they worshiped the beast, saying, who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him?" After the destruction of the faith of the Arians; the three horns—that the little horn that come up among the ten on the head of Daniel's fourth beast, plucked up by the roots; after this the orthodox party—the emperor and bishop had things all their own way; the wound was healed, the Arian Goths were expelled from the empire, or forcibly converted to the orthodox faith, thereby healing the wound. Verse 5, "And there was given unto him (the beast) a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months." By an examination of the blasphemy uttered by the little horn of Daniel xii. and that of this beast, after the receiving of the mouth; it will be readily seen, that the "mouth" and "the little horn" are identical, with the civil power of the State. This is evident by the horn coming upon the head of the beast, and by the mouth being given to the beast. Remember this "beast" is not the Papacy until the giving to him the mouth, neither is the fourth beast of Daniel the papacy until the rise of the little horn among the ten, on the head of the beast. Therefore the papacy is neither of the seven heads, or governments of Rome, but as John is informed by the angel, Rev. xvii. 11, "And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven." Instead of the papacy in the south part of the empire, the woman riding the beast—the civil power. In these different phases of the Roman empire, we perceive the fulfilment of this Scripture. Dan. vii. 7, "And it (the fourth beast) was diverse from all the beasts that were before it." Now how natural that the unconverted, unregenerated, selfish human nature of the bishop, should exalt himself so as to speak blasphemy. He says, am I not the successor of saint Peter; and did not the Son of God say that on Peter I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven. I am also Cesar—all the world worships me. Who is able to contest my authority? This spiritual tyrant was to continue forty and two months. (Margin makes war). Therefore in symbolic prophecy—a day for a year—his civil power was to last 1260 years Now we know that it came to end in A. D. 1870. Therefore the decree of Phocas 608-610 must be the time of its beginning. During this period he was to make war with the saints, and to overcome them. No Protestant will deny that he has fulfilled the prediction. Verse 10, "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity. He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and faith of the saints." This tyrant led multitudes of the saints into captivity; and killed with the sword of those kings that did his biding, witness the massacre of St. Bartholomew. But when he had reached the end of his reign foretold as 1260 years, the sword of the king of Italy took from him the states of the church with the city of Rome. This took place A. D. 1870 since then the Pope has claimed that he is a prisoner in the vatican. Thus bearing testimony to the truth of the Word. "Here is the faith of the saints." During the ascendancy of this persecuting power was the time when the faith and the patience of the saints were put to the severest tests by the malignant hatred of their enemies in an age when men thought they were doing God service, when they were putting to death as heretics the followers of Jesus, the saints of the Most High. The balance of this chapter is left for another communication.

Faith Must Abide.

Many are saying, It matters little what we believe in regard to God's Word, and some say it matters nothing, "Only be good and all will be well." This is a very plausible declaration, but when carefully examined it is too attenuated to bear its own lack of weight. No one dares to charge God with folly when making known his will to us, but this they virtually do when they attempt to work out their salvation without giving ear to his voice, when he assigns them the very duties and service that he will accept.

How can man discern what is good unless he gives ear to God's Word. God is the source of all goodness. Nothing could be more absurd than to imagine a servant of God refusing to hear God, or refusing to heed His word. Obedience consists in carrying out the orders of another, and is the direct result of faith. Disobedience is a neglect of carrying out the orders, and is very nearly related to unbelief.

Those who say it does not matter what we believe, if pressed for an explanation, usually reply that they had reference to the doctrinal portion of the Scriptures, and more particularly those things that are to take place in the future. But is not our hope based upon some good thing that is to come? Why should any one be indifferent to the thing he most desires to obtain? This indifference is not real, it is only a pretense. Every man that has a hope of some future good thinks he has a good reason for his hope, whether it is based upon the promise of God or not. Wether he has complied with conditions upon which the blessings are offered or not. Desire and expectation are both there the former [illegible] But in order that hope may be realized something more than simply indulging the natural emotion is necessary. If it be eternal life we hope for we must give heed to the word of him who offers it, and not neglect the conditions he imposes, in other words we must believe what he says and obey it from the heart. When we do this we will not be found saying, It matters not what we believe; but we will rather say, "Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth."

The faith that justifies comes only through giving heed to the word of the Lord. The Hope that saves is anchored firmly to the promises of God, and there is no true charity in dispensing error to hungry souls, more than there is in giving them a stone when they ask for bread. Many things are attractive that are worthless and hurtful. Truth abounds in beauty and utility. By all means let us "buy the truth and sell it not."

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the restoration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

An Epitaph.

"Many years ago," says Oliver Wendell Holmes, "in walking among the graves at Mt. Auburn, I came upon a plain white marble slab which bore an epitaph of only four words, but to my mind they meant more than many of the labored inscriptions on other monuments: 'She was so pleasant.' That one note revealed the music of a life of which I knew nothing more. How much good can be done in church, home, and society by just being pleasant; how many acerbities it will sweeten; how many obstacles it will brush away! All our virtues must not be of the heroic and strenuous type; we need also the gentler, finer graces. The Bible has much to say in praise of pleasantness."

You can no more "regulate" the saloon system into a temperance measure than you can regulate poleçats into respectable parlor ornaments. The radical remedy for intemperance is not regulation, but decapitation, extermination, annihilation. The legal prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors is the only effectual cure for the dire disease —A. A. Phelps.

I ought not to pronounce judgment on a fellow creature until I know all that enters into his life; until I can measure all the forces of temptation and resistance; until I can give full weight to all the facts in the case. In other words I am never in a position to judge another.—Hamilton W. Mabie.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5 00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10 00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

M. JOBLIN, Special Contributor.

Plymouth, Indiana, Feb. 22. 1905.

On account of Sister Wince being sick, Brother J. L. Wince could not fill his appointment at Plymouth last Sunday.

Friends who have a little to spare, should remember the poor that are unable to pay for their papers. Our Helping Fund is now overdrawn, and we do not like to stop papers to our worthy ones. Please make note of this, and if you can help a little, do so soon. It is for the Lord—not us—we plead.

Brother Joblin writes that Sister Joblin is not much improved. She has now been in bed ten weeks unable to turn herself, and is extremely nervous in consequence of her suffering. Of course the constant care takes all the strength and energy of Brother Joblin, and he cannot write at any length. The address that he gave at the Salem Conference last summer will be given in two numbers, beginning next week.

"The East Brookfield (Mass.) Congregational church, with a membership of 400, changed its faith by unanimous vote and united with the Episcopal diocese of western Massachusetts. This is believed to be the first time in this country when so large a church body changed its faith without a division among members."

The above item is clipped from a daily of Feb. 16. Instead of this being a rare instance, there is really no sense in very many of the "Orthodox" denominations remaining separate. They all believe the same things. The faith of each is built upon the immortal soul theory, which was pronounced false by God in the very beginning of creation, and which still remains false, in spite of the fact that the adversary in the Garden of Eden taught it to our mother Eve, and that a large number of people believe it. If people who make a profession of being religious, and are really good morally, would but rid thier minds of this one error, they could soon be brought to understand what God's plan is, and could learn to do his will. Voting themselves singly or in 400 lots from one heretical denomination to another will afford no relief, nor will it in any way please God.

Another chapter in the history of the Russian empire was written last Friday, Feb. 17, when a man at Moscow threw a bomb under the carriage of the Grand Duke Sergius, blowing him to pieces. He is the uncle of the Czar, and also his brother-in-law, as his wife the Princess Elisabeth, is a sister of the Czarina. This man was the most hated man in Russia. The society of revolutionists to which his assassin belonged had passed sentence on him Dec. 12, 1904, and had sent word to him repeatedly that he was to die that day. Letters had been also sent to his wife warning her not to ride out with him, lest she be included in the tragedy. Duke Sergius is given credit for exerting the most powerful influence over the Czar, and as the instigator of the bloody deeds of the last few weeks. He has been styled the "Ivan the Terrible" of modern Russia. The history of his life would include the filling of prisons, persecution of Jews, robbery of the Red Cross Funds, and savage butchery of helpless peasants. It is by his orders that even now, a Jew, rich or poor, cannot pass a night in Moscow. He was the leader of the war party of Russia, and his death may have a bearing on the further conduct of the present conflict with Japan.

There are others of the Grand Duke party that are marked for death as he was, including Grand Duke Vladimir, General Trepoff, the Dowager Empress, and several others. There is a reign of terror for the rulers as well as the workingmen of Russia, and what the end will be cannot be told. It is a serious time, and the army in the Far East cannot be supported and increased if this trouble at home continues. We can only watch for the outcome, knowing that the head of God is in control of the destiny of the Russian Empire.

Impotent People.

The International Sunday School lesson for last Sunday was concerning the healing of the "impotent man" at the pool of Bethesda. Webster says impotent means "not potent; wanting power, strength, or vigor, whether physical, intellectual, or moral; deficient in capacity; destitute of force; weak, feeble, infirm."

Are there any "impotent" people in our churches now? Let us see. We will suppose that from necessity a teacher is absent from her class. Some one must take the place. The superintendent says "Will you take that class today, Mrs. A——?" "No, I cannot teach a class satisfactorily. I have not studied the lesson for the day. I really cannot do it. I am no hand to get on with children."

"In the absence of the preacher will you prepare something and conduct the Sunday service, Brother B——?"

"You must excuse me. Really my own voice would frighten me. I dare not attempt it, lest I break down. You will have to get some one else to do it."

We might go through with a list of duties that pertain to the Christian work and life, and for each we would find some who wish to be excused.

Why be excused? Blind, halt, withered; "wanting in power, strength or vigor: deficient in capacity: destitute of force," "impotent." There is a way to remedy this condition. Jesus told the man in the lesson to "Rise up and walk." He speaks the same words to you and me. He does not ask that we go in our own strength, for he says "Without me ye can do nothing;" so he wants us to draw on him for aid, and then we can say "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me."

Who wants to be excused from doing some service in the Lord's cause? Let us change the order of things, and not only be ready to serve when asked but ask if you may not perform some service. Be real anxious to get into the work. Feel sleighted if you are not asked. Feel honored when you are asked. Matters will move on better very often if we cultivate this spirit some.

The Bible. No. 4.

The Bible is the oldest book written that has come down to our time. The Pentateuch antedates the clay tablets found in the ruins of Babylon. It speaks with authority concerning things that no human eye saw, of events that occured before man came on the scene. In its vision it sweeps the far distant past, and the ages of that glorious future that hides from mortal sight the final goal of the church; its history bringing to view the one and its prophecies unfolding the other; both alike being matters of faith. In these two features it differs from all other books. An uninspired author, rejecting the story of Genesis, can give us no light on the order of creation, and the origin of man, and the introduction of sin and death into our world. We have read some of the speculative theories of men on these subjects. They all sound silly put alongside of the Bible narrative. The difficulty of forecasting the future even for a few months or years, and the absolute certainty of being proven a false prophet, deter men from giving out predictions of events to come. So men of reason in speaking of the future qualify what they say with the words "probable" and "possible."

That the Bible impresses me as no other book does or can, will be attributed, by the infidel, to my belief; that I first believe it to be a supernaturally inspired book, then my impressions follow as a natural consequence. That my faith in it as God's inspired book, has something to do with my impressions, my emotions of admiration, of reverance, and even of awe, in the presence of its statements, I will honestly admit; but these may in part be traced to that wide difference between this marvelous book, and books conceded to be, without question, but human productions. The moment I begin to read, this difference forces itself upon my attention. I have read the Koran, or rather started to read it, and soon lost interest in it, and finally became disgusted.

Swedenborg's revelations were likewise disgustful to me. It was by force or dint of will power that I read portions of these works; but as compared with the Bible they appeared like the aberations of an unbalanced mind. The Bible starts out by stating facts concerning which it is to our highest interest to know. We wish to be made acquainted with the origin of things as they appear above beneath and about us. The opening pages of this book afford us the necessary information. Man's origin and fall and the entailment of both sin and death on his progeny are here brought to view; and here too we find the first promise; given in mercy to the stain[illegible] ground of hope to them and the [illegible] generations of their children. A system of religion adapted to man's need begins at this date to unfold. The seed of the woman (some pre-eminent seed) was to bruise the serpent's head. Bush renders, crush the serpent's head, which implies victory over the opposing power. It is written, "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil". 1. John iii; 8. In obedience to the revealed will of God, Abel made an offering of the first lings of his flock; thus typifying, at this early date, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." This Book, then, gives a history of the fall and a promise and prophecy of redemption completed through the mediatorial work of Jesus the anointed one, the seed of the woman and the Son of God. He is the hero of the story, the Person that pervades the whole book. Viewed in the light of his character and mission how could this book be other than the most interesting book in all the world. From its opening sentence, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth" to its closing "amen," it holds our interest undiminished. We read and reread a thousand times and still there is about it a charm and fascination that is lost in the repeated readings of other books, though written by the most gifted authors. In the words of Chrysostom, "There is here food for lambs and deep waters for elephants to swim in." Revelations adapted to the uncultured mind of the child, and those to tax the powers of a Sir Isaac Newton; and yet depths beyond, unexplored mines rich in the treasures of wisdom which later students will bring to light. More than once I have thanked God that he gave his word to us in the style in which we find it—in plain language, in parable, in figures of speech or rhetorical embellishments and in symbols as in the books of Daniel and John. Here is spread before us a rich variety of style in the medium of communication, in the style of composition, varied by the subjects treated, and by the mental traits of the several writers. There is no monotony in the Bible any more than there is in the great book of nature. Both are alike books for study and not for guessing. "Search the Scriptures" was the Great teacher's injunction to his Jewish auditors, and the necessity of study on the part of Timothy was Paul's instruction to his younger evangelist. Every Christian should study the Word to learn what the will of the Lord is. It is here that the duties of life are enjoined; it is here that man's sinful nature is reflected as in a glass; and here, also, he may read of mercy and pardon through a risen Redeemer.

John L. Wince.

Dogma and Ethics.

Roughly speaking it may be said that the New Testament concerns itself most with Christian ethics, particularly the discourses of the Savior and the epistles of the apostles, and it may also be roughly stated that the Old Testament deals largely with dogma, if dogma be understood as a statement of facts to be believed. The story of creation, the histories of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the Judges and the Kings may be thus classed, even the prophets who deal with future history—facts in anticipation—may be classified as dogmatizers setting down statements as indubitable and irrefutable. But woven in with these dogmas of the Old Testament is "the science of human duty"—as Webster defines ethics—and interlaced with the moral teachings of the New Testament are clear statements of facts and histories we are to be believed.

In our day there is a great deal of talk about "New Testament gospel" "Gospel ethics," "Cutting loose from dogma" and so on. "Is not the sermon on the Mount sufficient for every purpose in religion?" they ask. Well, possibly it is, indeed it must be when understood in its widest scope, but look at the scope. It begins with the celebrated beatitudes that discipline the spirit to tractability—to the receptiveness of truth, the hunger and thirst for knowledge and righteousness. It was no new revelation that closed the book of the prophets, it was but the key to open the door, the lamp to throw new light on the prophetic idea. It was a spiritual tonic to help digest the spiritual food that "at sundry times and divers manners" was delivered to God's people. There is really not such a thing as a "New Testament gospel" or such a thing as "New Testament ethics" in the limited sense implied by the usage [illegible] the terms. The gospel, the one gospel, the only one that was before preached to Abraham, and was abundantly set forth in detail by psalms and prophets and in further detail by the writers in the New Testament, but in fact the gospel is not so much preached or stated in the New Testament as it is referred to—mentioned as a foregone conclusion—as an understood thing of which the then happening events were items or fulfilments in part—important items—"chief corner stone" parts but yet only parts of the eternal and universal gospel design that had been running, that was running, that is now running and that will run until the whole is complete.

What is the ethic without the dogma? What is virtue without reward? What is life without hope? The gospel dogma is the statement of human hope—the telescope of faith that reveals the rest that remains for the people of God. And what is the dogma without the ethics? What is man without character? What would even this world be without the blessed presence here and there of the innocent, the pure, the upright, to make it tolerable, and what would the next be without the elimination of the evil and the base and the brutal? And so the gospel of the kingdom of God is a dogma in so much as it is a statement of fact to be believed, and so the kingdom of God is an ethical kingdom in so much as the citizens thereof in training for "the science of human duty" have "washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" and "nothing entereth therein that defileth or maketh a lie." So dogma and ethics are blessed twin sisters, that go hand in hand helping each other along.

Mental Food.

Very much, if not all, the spiritual growth of a Christian depend upon the nature and amount of the mental food that is chosen and digested by them. God has not left us without mental material for the minds to feed upon. He has given the Christian food and raiment in abundance that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. His raiment or armor is described by Paul in the 6th of Eph. His mental food is also suggested by him.

Let me call your attention for a moment to a portion at least of the Christian's bill of fare as given in Phil. iv. 8. "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Here are six different articles given as food for the Christian. But says one, these are very small portions of food for the mind to dwell and feed upon. Is that true? If our mind is in the right condition would we ever tire of the truth? Would honesty ever become stale to us? Would justice ever lose its value? Would purity pass from our mind as a virtue of value to us? Could the lovely and beautiful become as naught and fade from our mind? Could there ever come a time when we would not care to listen to and enjoy things of good report? Are these six items of small value for the mind to feed upon? Even if they were the Scriptures teach us not to despise the day of small things. O, if we would be more thoughtful of and value small things more than we do, and look after great ones as much as we do, this world would be far better off for our living than it is. We are rewarded not because we do great things but because of our fidelity. There are people who will not do any thing because they cannot do some great thing. The victory of Santiago, it is said, was won by small guns. The great 13 inch guns hit the mark only twice. The smaller rapid fire guns wrought havoc on the enemy. We often over-estimate the importance of big guns. Many a man fails in life because he is waiting to land a 13 inch shell. One Niagara will do for a continent but we need 10,000 rills and rivulets to beautify and make fruitful our land. A nation is great and strong, not because it produces a few great men, but because the multitude is ennobled. In contrast with the faithful servant of the parable is the unfaithful servant, and the beauty of faithfulness appears in the dark background of unfaithfulness. The unfaithful servant was paralyzed through fear, "I was afraid and hid thy talent." Cowardice is sin. Fidelity is faith plus courage. "Add to your faith courage." We will then grow, be strong in the Lord and our life be of some value to the world.

Make Much of Your Life.

Perfect men are not abundant; it requires more than one man to meet the highest demands. One may be equipped in one direction, another in another, but universal geniuses are very rare. It is therefore needful for each man to make the most of himself and of his opportunities. His life may run in a single line of action; his work in a narrow sphere: he may be a specialist in some one department of action or investigation, but where-ever his lot, in case he should make the most of his life.

A man must choose for himself, or the providence of God may choose for him a course which he is to pursue; and if this course is well chosen, then by patient, presistent effort he may accomplish great things for God and for humanity. Many lives run to waste for lack of self development. Many a man pines for an education, and yet will not take the trouble to educate himself, as he might in odd moments, with persistent inquiry and hard and careful study. Many a man might be skillful in his chosen occupation, an expert in his fields of investigation, if he spent the time in reading, not idling, nor smoking. Many a man wastes enough of his life and vigor in laziness and lust and gluttony, to make him intelligent, able and useful; wastes enough of money in extravagant and useless expenses to make him comfortable, prosperous and even wealthy; wastes enough of opportunity in dawdling and trifling to make him a power; and then wonders and murmurs at the success of others, and complains at his own lack of prosperity. Let every man do his best for himself and for God, and the world would be a very different world.—H. L. Hasting.

Why Don't You?

Why don't you answer your friend's letter at once? It will have double value if written promptly, and will take no more time now than by-and-bye.

Why don't you make the promised visit to that invalid? She is looking for you day after day, and "hope deferred maketh the heart sick."

Why don't you send away that little gift you've been planning to send? Mere kind intentions never accomplish any good.

Why don't you speak out the encouraging words that you have in your thoughts? Unless you express them, they are of no use to others.

Why don't you try to share the burden of that sorrowful one who works beside you? Is it because you are growing selfish?

Why don't you take more pains to be self-sacrificing and loving in the everyday home life? Time is rapidly passing. Your dear ones will not be with you always.

Why don't you create around you an atmosphere of happiness and helpfulness, so that all who come in touch with you may be made better? Is not this possible?

Why don't you?

Healthy Religion.

Religion, to be worth possessing, must have a life-giving, life-molding, hope-inspiring power. If it consists only in the observance of forms and ceremonies, counting beads and attending early masses; in other words, if it only imposes weary burdens upon its votaries, or fails to cure the soul of doubts, fears and evil propensities, then it is utterly worthless. Some one has well written:—

We want religion that softens the step, and turns the voice to melody, and fills the eye with sunshine, and checks the impatient exclamation and harsh rebuke; a religion that is polite, deferential to superiors, considerate to friends; a religion that goes into the family, and keeps the husband from being cross when dinner is late, and keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly-washed floor with his boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and amuses the children as well as instructs them; cares for the servants, besides paying them promptly; projects the honeymoon into the harvest-moon and makes the happy home like the Eastern fig tree, bearing on its bosom at once the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit. We want a religion that shall interpose between the rute and gullies and rocks of the highway and the sensitive souls that are traveling over them.—Religious Telescope.

Prophesy Proves Inspiration.

As we examine the Old Testament, we find six hundreds predictions, more than three hundred of which center upon the person, character and career of Jesus Christ as the Messiah. These prophecies cover the line of his descent, the time of his birth and manifestations, the place of his nativity, and all the great leading circumstances of his life, death, resurrection, and ascension, with man's subordinate details. These prophecies were in their complete form at least four centuries before his birth, inasmuch as both the Hebrew Scriptures and the Septuagint, or Greek translation, were both in the hands of the Jews, one about two, and the other five centuries, at least, before Christ was born. The circumstances which these prophecies describe are not only unprecedented in character, but there was no possibility, humanly speaking, of these predictions being fulfilled. In fact, they were largely couched in paradoxes or seeming contradictions. God has designed to present a mystery wholly inexplicable until history proves itself the key fitted to the lock.—I. T. Pierson.

Quite Significant.

"What is it that makes the rich man richer and the poor man poorer?" shouted a socialistic orator, as reported in the New York Tribune. In this orator's way of thinking the answer should have been "Monopoly!" and for this he waited; but the answer came from a new member, who had not been properly instructed in the socialistic theory, who disgusted the orator by shouting: "Beer!"

Coal in the cellar, potatoes in the bin, flour in the barrel, a piano in the parlor, beefsteak for breakfast, a roast for dinner, hats for the head, shoes for the feet—comfort, clothing, content—all these are possible in the homes of workingmen, when the bar is prohibited.—A. A. Hopkins.

Dear Restitution:

I will answer Edith Asher's questions.

The longest name in the Bible that I found was Jonathelemrechokim, and it is found in the title of Psalm lvi. and occurs but once.

The word "busybody" is found in 1 Peter iv. 15.

I am ten years old today, Feb. 12. I go to school, and have not missed a day. I attend Sunday School at the Baptist church. There is no organization of the Church of God in our community. We love to read The Restitution.

Dear brothers and sisters.

I want to tell all the dear ones that we are both strong in the faith. We are getting feeble, but we want to be ready when death or the judgment comes. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for us, that we may so live as becometh Christians, so we can meet all the dear ones that are sleeping in Jesus, and all that are alive when he comes.

From your brother and sister,

Obituary.

Fell asleep Jan. 25th at his home in Frederic Co., Virginia, Jacob Good. He was 82 years old. He was a kind husband and father and neighbor, and will be sadly missed by all who knew him. He was one among the first reformers of this country in an early day, and as the light shone brighter he delighted to walk in it, and as the truth unfolded to his mind he became obedient to the faith, and was ever ready to give a reason for his hope with meekness and fear, and it can be said of him, that he delighted in the law of his God. He leaves a wife and four daughters and two sons to mourn their loss, but let us not sorrow as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him, then let these precious words comfort us in our sad trials.

And may his bereft companion find,
This friend on whom she can depend,
And serve him with a willing mind,
Until this mortal life shall end;
And may his children one and all,
Be ready for the heavenly call.

Then at the resurrection morn the dead in Christ will rise again, and join in praises one and all, in honor to our heavenly King.

Poetry.

The Walk of Faith.

My child, I send thee far upon a journey,
A journey very desolate and lone,
Go forth, believing, though thou canst not see me,
That I am watching and will guard my own.

Father, it seems so very dark and stormy—
The clouds are gathering thickly in the sky—
I dare not venture out into the darkness,
Unless thou'lt promise I shall see thee nigh.

My child, how is it that thou can'st not trust me?
Have I not kept thee all the days of old?
Have I not loved thee when thy heart was failing,
At times when other hearts proved false and cold?

Father, I know it all, and my own weakness;
But oh! I long to feel thee at my side,
To clearly see thee 'mid the stormy darkness—
Then should I never fear my steps should slide.

My child, if thou beheld my actual presence,
Thy walk would merely be a walk of sight;
'Tis nobler far to venture forth, believing
That, as I send thee, everything is right.

Father, I go; fulfil in me thy pleasure,
Do what thou will, but give me faith to know
That all things for my good shall work together,
Though tempests rage around and fierce winds blow.

My child, I will; and often 'mid the darkness
Thou'lt hear the accents of a still, small voice
Saying, in tones of gentlest consolation,
"Lo, I am with thee! trust me and rejoice."

Random Thoughts. No. 14.

Dear Restitution:

After quite a long delay, chiefly through sickness, I now resume my random thoughts. We have seen that the Israelites, the twelve tribes, will be gathered out of the nations where they have long been scattered, to their own land, where they will be subjects in the kingdom of God, Jesus then being in fact the "King of the Jews," the saints, including the apostles, sharing with Jesus in the government. That they will then be a happy people, blessed of the Lord, as per Psalm lxxii.; Isa. lxv. 17-25. The kingdom will then be a Jewish kingdom. But it will not always be confined to the Jews. The kingdom may be at first very small, like a grain of mustard seed, but it will grow and spread till it covers or fills the earth. This may be seen by the very first dealings of God with Abraham. Gen. xii. 1-3, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. With some little difference this is several times repeated to Abraham. Gen. xiii. 14-17; xv. 7-18; xvii. 1-8; xviii. 6. To Isaac Gen. xxvi. 2-5. And to Jacob Gen. xxviii. 12-14. From all of which it is clear, that not only Israel, but that all families or nations of the earth are to be blessed in, by or through Abraham and blessed, which is the Christ. Gal. iii. 16. And that again, not the one person Jesus, but Christ, including all the members of his Body, the Church. All of whom "are children of God by faith in the Anointed (Christ) Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ, there is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ (the Anointed) Jesus. And if you be Christ's, then are you Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise, to wit, that in Abraham and in his seed shall all nations or all families of the earth be blessed. It will be seen that the saints, the heirs, are not the nations or families to be blessed, but the means or seed of Abraham that shall bless the families or nations of the earth. It is one thing to bless another, but quite another thing to be blessed. The less is blessed by the greater. The form of expression too is quite general "all" families or nations of the earth to be blessed. That would seem to leave none upon the earth not blessed. And so from this some hold that those who die not having had an opportunity to hear or obey the truth, will live again and have the gospel preached to them! Thus emphasizing the word all, that all the families, etc. shall be blessed. They seem to me to forget what God said to Abraham, "I will bless (not all, but) them that bless thee, and curse (that is not bless, is it?) him that curseth thee." For myself I do not think to curse means to bless, nor that to bless means to curse, but that some will be blessed and others will be cursed. The wicked or the disobedient will be cursed, cut off from the earth, rooted out of it, etc., and will not then be of the families of the earth. After that the earth may be filled with God's glory. All may be righteous, all will be blessed under the seed of Abraham. But that word all ever means all that ever were, are or will be, I have yet to learn. But I am getting away from my subject. I am saying that not only will Israelites be subjects in the kingdom of God but that all the Gentile nations will be subjugated one after another till God's kingdom shall cover the earth. Is. xi. 10; xlii. 1 6; xlix. 6; lx. 2-10, etc. Those saints who have heard the gospel and obeyed, Acts x. and xv. etc., are included in the seed, Galatians iii. 27, 29, and will not be subjects but rulers like the Lord, will be spiritual beings equal to the angels. Lu. xx., but the mortal nations will be subdued. This we will see from Dan. ii. Let my readers read the whole chapter. It will be seen that Nebuchadnezzar was a great king, a universal monarch. Having conquered the world and knowing that even he would have to die, he was concerned about what would become of it after he had gone. And so God caused him to dream, and in his dream he saw a great image very peculiar, and he could not understand what it meant. And what was more, he forgot even the dream! And required his great and wise men to tell him what it was and what it meant, which of course they could not do. But Daniel, a captive from the land of Israel, finally tells him both what the dream was and its meaning. In substance it gave the history of the world till the Lord comes. It shows that his kingdom would not stand for ever, but would be conquered, and merged into a second kingdom, and that again into a third kingdom, and again that into a fourth, and that this fourth would not merge into a fifth but would be divided into ten kingdoms, and that "in the days of these kings would the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Thus it was made known to the king what should come to pass, and the dream is certain and Daniel's interpretation sure. Thus we see there will be war after the Lord comes. Time will come when the sword shall be turned into pruning hooks and the nations learn war no more, but peace will be obtained by war. How long this will take I know not, but the nations must be conquered first. The kingdom of God (or its armies) must break in pieces and consume all these great kingdoms. It may be said breaking to pieces and consuming them does not mean that all the people are destroyed. When Babylon overcame Medo-Persia she did not destroy all the people, but conquered the army and overturned the government. So when Greece conquered Medo-Persia she did not kill or destroy all the people, but overcame the armies and overturned the government, same with Rome to Greece. And so with Rome the people were not destroyed, but the kingdom of Rome was divided into ten kingdoms, some, if not the ten, we have today, and before they pass away, the God of heaven will set up his kingdom, which will break in pieces and consume them all, not destroy all the people, but overturn the governments, conquer the armies, and consume them all by annexing them to the kingdom of God. The subjects and territories of these kingdoms will become the subjects and territory of the kingdom of God.

Thus in time all the nations or families of the earth will be blessed with a righteous government. All nations shall serve the Lord, and be blessed, and shall call him blessed. Again I would ask my readers to again read Psalm lxxii. as describing the condition of the people and kingdom at that time. Some have supposed that because the Father said to the Son, "Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool," that the Father would subdue all his enemies before the Lord's coming. This is a mistake. If all his enemies were destroyed or subdued before he comes, how could it go on to say, Ps. cx., "The Lord shall send forth the rod of thy strength out of Zion. Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies." If his enemies were all put out of the way before he comes, how could he rule in "the midst of his enemies"? But I feel like giving the whole Psalm as translated by Dr. Boothroyd. Psa. cx. "To my Lord Jehovah said, Sit at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool. From Zion Jehovah shall extend thy powerful sceptre, and thou shalt rule amidst thine enemies. Most willing shall be thy people in the day when thy power is displayed on these hallowed mountains; thy progeny shall be as dew from the womb of morn. Jehovah hath sworn, nor will he repent; thou (said he) art a priest forever, according to the order of Melchizedek. The Lord at thy right hand, Jehovah, shall in the day of his wrath, smite kings, shall execute judgment among the nations, and fill the field with carcasses, and smite the chiefs of many countries. He shall drink of the stream by the way; and shall therefore, be exalted as chief."

Though our Lord will be "King of righteousness and King of Peace," he will also be a mighty warrior, and will go "conquering and to conquer." And this will he do till he has put all enemies under his feet—even death, the last enemy will be rendered powerless. But we see that the day of the Lord, or the millennium will not be all universal peace. True in God's kingdom there may be peace and joy and glory, yet in the world there will be war and troubles. God's judgment will be poured out and the great day of his wrath will come, the heavens shall melt with fervent heat the earth also, and the works therein shall be burnt up, but afterward there will be new heavens and a new earth in which dwelleth righteousness, All things will be new! In view of all these things what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy living and godliness, etc. Put more anon.

GEO. ELTON.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Dear Brother Wilson:

Will you please give us the benefit of your knowledge on this all important subject, viz: "And Jesus approaching spoke to them, saying, All authority has been imparted to me in heaven and on earth. Go, disciple all the nations, immersing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Matt. xxviii. 18, 19. Em. Dia.

I have seen the authorship of the above formula attributed to the Pope of Rome, and it grieved me.

Yours truly.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Teacher. I will name the topic for our investigation in answer to the above question, as follows:

DOES MATTHEW'S FORMULA REQUIRE BAPTISM INTO THREE NAMES?

I will ask George to give us his convictions.

George. My convictions are that Matthew's formula requires the use of only one name.

Q How so? Does not the commission mention three names?

A No. It does not say names in the plural, but uses the singular number, "name."

Q It mentions three parties, does it not?

A Yes, but the three parties all bear the one name.

Q How many persons are named in this commission?

A Two.

Q Is not the gift of the Holy Spirit a person?

A No.

Q What is it then?

A It is a gift from God, which can be poured out like a liquid, and fill a place as well as a person. The gift of a person cannot be the person making the gift. It can appear in various forms, like a dove, or like cloven tongues of fire. An electrical appearance.

Q What is this Holy Spirit?

A Gramatically, the word is a noun, a name of the gift.

Q One would hardly expect to be baptized into (a common noun) the name of a gift, would they?

A I should say not.

Q Does the Son bear the Father's name?

A Yes.

Q How does he get it?

A By natural inheritance just the same as any other son bears his father's name. See Heb. i. 4, 5: "He hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." He says he is "my Son," I have "begotten thee," and no one else has; and on this account, he has my name by inheritance, as his legal right.

Q Then the name of the Father, and the name of the Son must be one name, must it not?

A Certainly. As a son inherits the father's name, both names must be alike. The name Yahveh is the Father's name alone, and not the name of any other Elohim, or Theos (God). The abreviated name Yah, is used of the Father, fifty times in the Old Testament. The word Yah also enters into the make up of the Son's name, Yah Shua.

Q Then when a person is baptized into the Son's name, the name of the Father is incorporated, is it not?

A Yes. It must be if the Father and Son bear the same, and not different names.

Q Then we are baptized only into the one name, are we not?

A Yes.

Q Now, when the word Spirit is used, as designating the person of the Father, it could not indicate two personalities could it?

A It could not.

Q Then only two persons are indicated by the three names.

A That is all; and the three names are practically but one name.

Q Do the same words as given by Matthew, occur in any other place in the New Testament as a baptismal formula?

A No.

Q Is it not then antagonistic, and contradictory to the simpler formula given elsewhere?

A No.

Teacher. In the first instance of baptism recorded after the disciples were filled with the Holy Spirit, what name was used? Carrie, will you tell us?

Carrie. We find that recorded in Acts ii. 38: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." We have no evidence that the formula given in Matthew was ever used by the disciples of Christ.

Q Were they commanded to be baptized in that one name?

A Yes. See Acts x. 48: "And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord."

Q Why did he not command the use of a triune name, if that was the proper thing?

A It was quite evident that the form given in Matthew was never intend to be used as a formulae. It simply taught the unity of the three names, and the use of the singular "name," in place of the plural names, by Matthew shows this.

Q Do other quotations show that it was the custom to use only the one name of the Lord Jesus?

A Yes. See Acts viii. 16: "Only they baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Q Do you find the name of the Lord Jesus to be a saving name?

A Yes. See Acts iv. 12: "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Q Is the name of Jesus the all important name in which all our Christian work must be done?"

A It is. See Col. iii. 17: "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." This includes baptism. The apostasy would have you do everything in the name of a socalled Triune God. "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost."

Q Is the name of Jesus a life-giving name?

A It certainly is. See John xx. 31: "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the (not a) Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name."

Q Is this name the all important name to the believer?

A There is nothing like it in all the wide world. That name is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, even the commencement and the culmination of the Christian's faith and hope. To the authority of that name every knee must bow.

Q Did he as Adam the second, have a higher origin than that of Adam the first?

A Yes. See 1 Cor. xv. 47: "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven."

Teacher. I find the preponderance of evidence in Holy Scripture, is to use only the one name in the ordinance of baptism. Arlos, have you a Scripture to the point in this point?

A Yes. See 2 Tim. ii. 19: "Let every one that nameth the name of (the) Christ (in baptism) depart from iniquity."

Q Have you a direct reference where the Lord's name is called on in baptism?

A Yes. See Acts xxii. 16: "And now why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Q Is not that one name Supreme over every other name?

A Yes. See Eph. i. 21: "He raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavens, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come."

Q What did Saul do to those who named the Lord's name before his conversion?

A. See Acts ix. 13, 14: "I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem; and here he hath authority to bind all that call on (them) thy name."

Q Where is that name called on them?

A In baptism.

Q Did he put them to death for daring to call on that name?

A See Acts ix. 21: "Is this not he which destroyed them which called on this name?"

Q Did he afterward become a name-bearer?

A He did. See verse 15: "He is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel. For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." All who have had this name called on them in baptism, become name-bearers, and woe to the one who dishonors that sacred name.

Teacher. The commission as given in Matthew, in no way conflicts with the balance of Scripture, but it is evident that the phraseology was never used in the apostolic days. I do not use it, because I find the name of Jesus to be more expressive and more in harmony with the preponderance of Scripture evidence, and less liable to be confound with trinitarianism.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

The Bereans Column.

(Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.)

Dear Bereans:

I will take for my topic the angel's message to Philip, found in Acts viii. 26, "And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert." This was surely a strange messenger with an obscure message. The angel told him to go away from Jerusalem, where there were other disciples and many advantages, go south toward Gaza and he would find himself on a road that passed through a desert. There were no disciples there and but few people, it would seem as though Philip would better remain in the villages and preach Jesus to the nations. But Philip never questioned, or even reasoned about the matter. We are only told that he arose and went. And so when the Ethiopian came by reading the Prophet Esaias, "The Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot." And we read in the thirtieth verse that Philip ran to join him and they talked about the Scriptures. You and I would have been more ready to obey the command, directing us to go from the desert way up to Jerusalem, because we work for results and like a more promising field. One of the greatest needs of a Christian life in these days is more devotion. Philip's silent walk on the desert road left him ready to teach Jesus so zealously, truthfully, that the convert was eager to be baptized at once. Let us be guided by the Holy Spirit and do whatever he wants us to do.

MINA KNODLE.

Dear brethren:

It is with a very grateful heart I try to write a few words of thanks. And do not judge from what I write how thankful I am to you all, who have been so interested in me, for I cannot find words to fully express how thankful I am. The operation was a fine success, I had the best of care, both from the hospital and by the brethren here, who visited me almost every day. I tell you it pays to be one of God's children, I have found all along since Brother Woodward baptized me into the one faith, and I took Christ as my helper, no matter what trouble or pain I had to bear, it was not so hard for me to bear as those around me, who seemed to have their mind upon everything but Christ and his teachings. I noticed this more while I was in the hospital. Little did I think when I went into the hospital, I would have an artificial limb so soon. It was a grand surprise to me. I have never seen or heard of a church that took such an interest in each brother's and sister's welfare, as does our church, and I am proud to be one of the "little flock," looking forward to Christ's second coming, when there will be no more death nor lame. Though I must say, even though I do not get around as well as do those who have their two good limbs, or as I shall after I get used to the artificial limb, I do not believe there is any one who enjoys every day of his or her life as I do, something happens every day that at night I am thankful I have been spared to enjoy. I thank all the brethren who have been so kind in helping to get the limb. I hope some day to be able to help others as others have helped me. I am trying to live so I will be ready when Christ comes and hope to be one of his chosen.

Your Sister in Christ.

RUTH L. SMITH.

A SURE FOUNDATION.

Every one, therefore, which heareth these words of mine and doeth them, shall be likened unto a wise man, which built his house upon the rock; and the rain descended, the floods came, and beat upon that house and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth words of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat that house and it fell and great was the fall thereof. Matt. vii. 24-27.

In building any structure the first important thing is a strong and lasting foundation. Character is the greatest of all buildings, and in order to stand it must be built upon Christ's teachings, which is the only sure foundation for a Christian to build upon. Then when the floods of temptation and doubt come the building will stand unmoved. Then there are those who reject the foundation Christ has prepared and who go out after worldly pleasure, or for their own gain in this life. These are the ones who build their houses upon the sand. They may be as beautiful in outward appearance as those built upon the rock, but when the test comes they are sure to fall.

RAYMOND SMITH.

Dear Bereans:

Having been requested to write for the column this month, I wish to call your attention to the similarity in the events of the lives of David and Christ. We find that David was anointed by Samuel, but it was some time after this before he really was king. Christ was anointed with the Holy Ghost on the day of his baptism, but his universal reign has not yet commenced. Another point of resemblance is seen in the fact that both were from Bethlehem, and both were chosen by God. David was chosen king over Israel, and Christ was chosen to be the Redeemer of his people. Also, when David was first proclaimed king some opposed him, while others knew he was anointed of God. Christ's apostles and disciples and a few others knew he was the Son of God; but the Jews bitterly opposed him, and it was they that crucified him. David loved to do the will of God, and also did Christ. God says, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," which shows the love of God to his obedient children.

BERNICE A. PHELPS.

Obituary.

Sarah Jane Cuffel was born Sept. 27, 1835, in Miami County, Ohio. Was united in marriage to Lewis Cuffel, Nov. 12, 1854. During a period of over fifty years no death has occurred in this family. The children of this union are, William H., Mary J. and Ezra. W. H. resides in Akron, Ind., Mary J. in Chicago, and Ezra in Chicago Junction, Ohio. In the year 1893 Sarah J. Cuffel and husband became obedient to the faith of the gospel. Both being baptized into the name of the Anointed One, thus forming a union with the Life Giver, and through all the years since this union has been faithfully maintained by a godly walk in humble obedience to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. Our sister after patiently enduring severe physical pain fell asleep in Jesus Feb. 10, 1905.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the strongest foes.

The highest compliment inspiration pays to the dead in Christ is, "they died in faith." To secure this blessing an essential pre-requisite is to "live in Christ" thus securing our title to all the blessings that result from our union with him. I ask no better epitaph than "he died in faith."

J. F. WAGONER.

Unbelief is the height of presumption. It plainly proves that we are seeking for some cause of God's love in the creature, which can never be."

Five Popes.

The "London Truth" says that there are five popes in the world, and catalogues them as follows: First, the pope of the Latin Church; second, the Schismatic or Orthodox pope; third, the Father of the Faithful, ruling at Constantinople; fourth, the pope of Tibet, who has 500,000,000 subjects, and fifth, the Schismatic pope of the Mohammedan world, who reigns at Morocco.

All five of these popes, it is said, are just now threatened with hard times. The pope at Rome is making strenuous appeals to the American people for contributions to make good the loss of income from France.

The pope at Constantinople is almost always having trouble, both financial and political. The pope of Tibet recently fled from the city at the approach of a British expedition. Of the five popes, Pius X. is said to be the most venerable, Nicholas the most feared, the Sultan the most terror-haunted, the Dalai Lama the most mysterious, and the head of the Moslem Schismatics the best natured. The latter is said to be the son of an English mother. None of these popes recognize any of the others.

Sometimes we are inclined to think, however, that the number given in this London paper is vastly understated. We seem to have met a few popes in the course of our life even in America,—if by the word pope we understand a person claiming to be infallible, and a judge or ruler of his fellows. Perhaps our readers may be acquainted with a few such.

Unfinished!

An unfinished obelisk lies in the ancient quarry in upper Egypt. It may have been intended as a sister obelisk to the four great ones now at Heliopolis, London, Paris and New York. But this one never was brought to completion. The mason's marks are plain enough. The column is massive enough. The stone is strong enough. Yet the obelisk was never lifted into its place. To-day it is half buried in the sand, a monument, not to the greatness of royalty, but to the sadness of unfinished toil.

The story of this unfinished obelisk is the story of many a life. Good material, good intentions, good opportunities, good beginnings; but no execution, no completion, no finishing touch, no lifting of the life into its true and destined place. Unfinished!

We do not believe for an instant that there is a higher revelation or evolution of truth and destiny in the universe than is contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ. The whole earth seems filling up with all sorts of isms, "ethics, revelations and philosophies." With all due and kind consideration for those who differ from us, we are compelled to regard all these things as fungi and mistletoe gathering around the live trunk and branches of the green and growing tree of God's old and eternal truth. We have heard the claims of them all, but God's love and power and wisdom abide in the gospel.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning, and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

W. L. CROWE.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

While here and there men speak in dread
Of the impending troubles in our world?
Even men without one spark of Christian faith
No longer keep a secret of their fears,
While o'er the land among the common folk,
Who used to chant the glories of our times,
The word more often now upon their lips
Is that the world is near its end.
Nations are arming to prepare for war,
And terror in the tide of human things
Were rich and poor arrayed against each,
And men in search of some cure for earth's ills,
The statesmen of the world look out
Upon the troubled clouds that come and go,
Uncertain what may come as doom or fate;
Deep trouble marks the problems of our age,
In strikes, disasters, and the rush of crime,
Till e'en the wisest have no certain clue,
To solve those problems that perplex men's souls.
Six thousand years of culture and of toil,
Of prayer and labor for the good of men,
And still its burden scarcely has been fringed,
While the dark calendar of human crime,
Of vilest murder, theft and lust,
Is not one whit diminished in our world;
Then might man hide his head in shame,
Devoutly wishing he had never been born
Or knit so closely to this awful band
Of men who breed the evils of our time.

THE EXPLANATION.

What can it mean, I ask it once again,
To those who scorn the message that we bring,
Naming us crank or of disordered brain.
It can but mean that we have spoken truth,
Or else our world and race are out at sea,
Drifting, yes drifting, till at last,
Unless God intervene, may it not end a wreck?
Behold the King of love is the door
To cure this deadly ulcer of the world;
He can, he will—yes, he and he alone
Holds in his power the remedy and cure.
'Tis love divine, 'tis perfect love!
He cometh soon, O bride of Christ awake,
Enrobe thyself befitting such a King;
Yes, I can see his tender hands of love
Press all the sorrows of this weary world,
Restoring back to earth her vanished charms,
Nor leave one trace of ruin wrought by sin.

Communicated.

Notes by the Way.

The time arrived when we must separate from the dear loved ones in Christ Jesus, who sojourn at Winter, Oklahoma. They are anxiously waiting for the coming of the King. I find them to be true, honest servants, serving God with a singleness of purpose.

I rejoice that I can communicate the the glad news to the household of faith, that the dear ones at Winter have concluded to observe the apostolic order, and meet regularly each week to remember the dear Lord in the breaking of bread. God does bless those who do this, far more than those who forsake the assembling of themselves together, "as the manner of some is." I have observed that those who meet regularly have more spiritual life in them. They are more zealous in the work. They have greater zeal and vigor than those who feed on only one meal a year. I baptized one earnest believer at this place, and may he keep his steadfastness in the Lord Bro. E. Randolph rigged up his prairie schooner, and conveyed Sister Nancy Barber, and myself to Quinlan, Oklahoma, a distance of twenty miles. We had quite a novel experience riding over those great hills, and down steep slopes, into canyons below. Sometimes the ascent of these hills was so steep, that it was with difficulty that the horses could pull the schooner to the summit of the hill, especially as melted snow made the ground so slippery that the horses could not get a firm foothold.

Soon after arriving at the home of Sister Gates and husband, at Quinlan, the curtain of night fell, and hid from view the picturesque landscape.

We were all hospitably received, and made to feel perfectly at home. When we meet one of the dear ones of the precious household of faith, the formality of getting acquainted, is altogether unnecessary. There is a natural affinity which at once draws heart to heart. We are all members of the same family, and the kinship is at once felt, and recognized.

Meetings were commenced at the school house, and a blessed time we did have. The attendance was fine and the interest close. Sister Gates and husband had their organ moved to the school house, and Sister Gates' daughter presided at the organ during the services.

The people who attended the services, came from long distances, I am told varying from five to fifteen miles. The interest was all that any one could desire. Earnest invitations came to me from the people to return and teach them some more. It is my purpose to do, God permitting.

Sister Nancy Barber was a great help to me in the work, both at Winter, and also at Quinlan. She frequently addressed the audience at the conclusion of my lesson, enforcing what I had said. She studies her Bible a great deal, and is much interested in evangelical work, and also that believers should meet regularly to remember the Lord, on the first day of the week.

When the time arrived that we should part with each other, Sister Gates and husband conveyed myself and Sister Barber to the depot at Quinlan, where I took the train for Arkansas City, Kansas, and Sister Barber took the train for Higgins, Texas. I was delayed for some hours at Mayfield, by the wreck of a freight train between Mayfield and Wellington, Kansas. The monotony of waiting was somewhat relieved by two ladies singing religious songs. Other passengers joined with them, which made it quite interesting. We arrived at Wellington, at about 9:30 p. m., where we had to remain all night. In the morning I resumed my journey to Arkansas City, and arrived there at about 11 o'clock, a. m.

I then took a carriage to the residence of Bro. and Sister Chaplin, where I received the usual welcome. Had a pleasant visit with them, until near night fall, when Sister Hadicke sent her carriage for me. She lives some five miles out on the Geuda Springs route. Meetings were started in the school house. But very few meetings could be held, on account of severe cold weather, the thermometer ranging from between five and fourteen degrees below zero. This was a disappointment to all.

Sister Eliza Rohe, from Blackwell, Oklahoma, came down to see me, and hear the Word preached. The meetings being hindered by severe cold weather, was a disappointment to her as it was to the rest of us. We had a pleasant visit, however, with her, Sister Hadicke, Bro. and Sister Reed, and Bro. Vickery. They are not holding regular meetings in this locality. However, I spoke with several of them, about the necessity of having regular weekly meetings on the first day of the week for communion to remember the loving Savior who has done so much for us, and to encourage and build up one another, in our most holy faith. They expressed a desire to have it that way. I expect to return there shortly, and shall endeavor to have them set in the apostolic order.

On Sunday afternoon, Sister Hadicke sent her carriage to convey me to the home of Bro. and Sister Chaplin, at Arkansas City. We spent a pleasant night conversing on the topics which go to make up the glorious Blessed Hope, which is such a comfort to us all.

On Monday morning Bro. Chaplin conveyed me by his carriage to the depot, where I took the train for Higgins, Texas. Arriving at Woodward, Oklahoma, at about six o'clock, p. m., I had to lay over until about two o'clock in the morning. I went to a hotel, and got supper, and then took a room, and went to bed for a short rest. Rose up at about one o'clock a. m., and started for the depot, at one forty-five in the morning. Train being late we did not get away before three o'clock in the morning. I arrived at Higgins, Texas, at about 5:30 a. m. Met Sister Long and husband, and also Sister Nancy Barber.

The Methodist Church was secured in which to hold our meetings. The meetings started off with a good attendance and interest. Cold weather again set in, and for two days we could not hold meetings, the thermometer registering between ten and fourteen degrees below zero. This was somewhat unusual for Texas weather. The Methodist church was too large to be properly heated, and so on this account, we moved our meetings to the Baptist Church, which could be made more comfortable. While I have had satisfactory attention, in most all places that I have preached in, yet in Higgins it was specially manifest. One lady who was too sick to attend the meetings, sent for me to visit her at her own home. When I left her home, she told me that my talk had been so comforting to her. Since then she sent a request that I would explain the Thief on the Cross to her, which I did. After my address on the immortality question, a Baptist lady, came to me, and expressed her appreciation, by saying it was a great treat.

I am fully convinced that seed has been sown at Higgins, as well as other places along the line of my trip, which will not be lost. Praise ye the Lord!

I endeavor to present the truth in such a manner and spirit, so as to avoid all offence, and I find that I have very rarely created prejudice among any other denomination. I can go back to any locality where I have preached, and still hold the respect of the people. It is often the spirit in which the truth is presented, which creates offense, more than the truth preached. I never shun to declare the whole counsel of God, to please the people. If we treat every one with due respect, they will likewise respond to it.

The president of the Baptist Young People's League at Higgins, asked me to address them which I did for a short time.

I am interested in the young people, and especially in our young Bereans, God bless them, they are doing a splendid work. They are the life and hope of the church of God in Christ Jesus. It is from them that our future evangelists must come, if the Lord should delay his coming much longer. They are growing in numbers. I speak a word for them everywhere. I have been instrumental in having organizations put in in several States. Isolated young people have put in their membership with the Illinois State organization, until a sufficient number has been organized in the several States to form a National organization. Push the work, and let us have a National organization as soon as possible.

I started for Quanah, Texas, on Monday, Feb. 20. I will report the work in this place in my next Notes by the Way. The vista of futurity is revealed in the grand old gospel of the kingdom. The world has never dreamed of the good things revealed in that sublime message of life. It tells us of a day that shall come when anxieties, vexations and tormenting fears will have passed away, hearts will no longer bleed in secret, and cold shadows will never again blight sensitive affection, and killing frosts will never again destroy the flowers of human peace and happiness. This glorious era is near, the night is far spent, in the east omens of the coming day appear. The swelling buds revive hope, and give promise that winter with its fierce storms, and icy reign, will vanish before the genial breath of spring.

The Morning Star is in the ascendancy. Gleams of glory gild the mountain peaks, and soon the Sun of righteousness will rise from behind the colossal mountain banks, and bathe the world in glory. See him coming in clouds of glory like burning billows, or the lightnings flash. Hark! the angelic trump, with its dead-awakening blast, the earth casts out the sleepers in Jesus with shouts of victory. The glorious era is right upon us. Are we all ready?

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

"I doubt," is the language of the skeptic; "I don't know" is the language of the agnostic; "I don't care," is the language of the scoffer; but "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded," is the language of the Christian. Among these four it should not be difficult to know how to choose.

What Do These Things Mean?

In these days things transpire very rapidly. Nearly all the modern improvements come into use in an incredible short time. The last century has been a very busy one. Inventions have become very numerous and useful to the human family. Have these things been thought out and made useful that at the end of this age to be destroyed? We think not. We believe that God's hand is in all things.

The following was clipped from one of our daily papers:—

"The sum of $100,000, allotted by the trustees of the Carnegie Institute to Luther Burbanks, the California agriculturalist, will be paid to him in annual installments of $10,000, it was announced today. This will enable Burbank to devote his entire time for that period to experiments with new grasses and vegetables, and it is expected that he will relinquish temporarily his business interests. Many important discoveries have been made by the Californian at his home in Santa Rosa in the last 25 years. He has worked along the line of seeking imperfect products in fruits, flowers, etc., in order to make them of full value. He declares there is no weed which will not sooner or later respond liberally to good cultivation and persistent selection."

The following is taken from Everybody's Magazine for February:—

"Luther Burbank of Santa Rosa, Cal., who marries old fruits and makes new ones, who robbed the apple of its seeds and the plum of its stone and has lately invented the 'fadeless flower,' the crimson-blossomed Australian star-flower. Wonder-working Burbank has produced, after ten years experiments, the spireless Cactus. It is described as half as nutritious as alfalfa and yielding more forage to the acre. By many crossings and re-crossings of many varieties he made the plant hardier, richer of leaves and fruits; and at last he stole the thorns and made it 'soft as silk.' If this Arabian Tale be true, this is Mr. Burbank's greatest work. For Cactus will grow even in the desert, and its leaves and fruit are food for man and beast. What will the Santa Rosa improver of nature do next?"

If coming events cast their shadows before we may begin to look for the desert to blossom as the rose. In our imagination too vivid when we say we think these things are for the future age as well as this? "God works in a mysterious way." Man's works are made to praise him. Our government is at present engaged in reclaiming for cultivation nearly 2,000,000 acres of desert land and will sell it for $28.00 per acre, the mere cost. When this land is irrigated it is very fertile and will yield its increase. This land can be bought of the government on 10 annual payments. The poor may here get a home. We are taught that heaven must retain Jesus until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Acts iii. 21. Jesus promised his apostles that they should sit on thrones when he sat on the throne of his glory. Matt. xix. 28. This is to be "in the regeneration." Christ will sit on the throne of his glory when he comes with all his holy angels with him. Matt. xxv. 31. Mark the event that follows,—he will gather before him all nations and will separate them. The sheep he will preserve, the goats he will destroy. Does not this teach that there will be a cleaning up time?

What have the prophets said of these times. "In the last day it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow into it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come Let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more." Micah iv. 1–4. I wish to note a few things in this Scripture. The things named here have never taken place and must yet be in the future The mountain of the house of the Lord (The kingdom of God,) shall be established and exalted. Many people will flow into it. They will be taught the ways of this kingdom. The law shall go forth of Zion. The word of the Lord from Jerusalem. He shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off. What will they do? Learn war no more. They will have adopted agricultural implements. The war alarum will no longer be sounded and none shall make them afraid for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it. I was informed not long ago that all these things took place on the day of pentecost, when the apostle quoted from Joel.

Let our readers compare the two Scriptures and they will see that they are in no respect similar. The prophets are describing two different events. It was claimed that the expression "In the last days" made the two Scriptures relate to the same events. If they would read the original as found in Joel they will find it reads. "It shall come to pass afterward," etc. Note what follows. "I will pour out of my spirit upon all flesh: your sons and your daughters shall prophecy and your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams." It is taking great liberty with language to make these two Scriptures read or mean alike. He who does is not rightly dividing the word of truth. The religious world has nothing to do with these Scriptures, except to apply them to the church. Their thoughts are not concerned with a future for this earth. It will be utterly destroyed and God will give them a home in heaven.

In God's Word we read of the new birth for man also the new birth for old mother earth. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the myrtle tree, and it shall be to the Lord for a name; for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Isa. lv. 13.

When man was driven out of the garden the earth was cursed for his disobedience. "Cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat of the herb of the field." Gen. iii. 17-18. Previous to this nothing of this kind has existed. When this earth is renewed there "will nothing harm in all my holy mountain," thus saith the Lord.

"The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Hab. ii. 14. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." "Nevertheless we, according to his promise look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." "And hath made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." "And I (John) saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away." Matt. v. 8; 2 Peter iii. 13; Rev. v. 10; xxi. 1. The following Scriptures should be read as reference. Psa. xlviii. Isa. xi. lv. lx. lxv. Micah iv. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne as I am overcome and am sit down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21.

My dear reader, do you fully realize the promise herein made? It means this, that we, if faithful, shall reign on the earth and help restore all things. We will be one of the rulers during the time of restoring. Then we shall reign with him forever and ever. Is it not worth laboring for dear ones in Christ? Let us so live that when the Master shall come we will be one of his jewels.

Yours in hope.
D. C. ROBSON.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Power of Faith.

"Faith overcometh the world," saith St. John. "Walk in the spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh." Here are two of our great adversaries prostrate—the world and the flesh—the two are overcome by faith. The apostle Paul says "Take the shield of faith, and resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Thus by faith we may overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil; for greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world. Do you believe this? If so, go and wrestle, and fight, and pray: and at length you shall obtain the victory; the victory shall certainly be yours, and your triumph shall be glorious.

EUGENE B. WILLARD.

Prayer.

We are warned in Scripture against one very common fault which people are addicted to in praying: "When ye pray, use not vain repetitions as the heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking." People not unfrequently approach the Lord in their prayers as though he were deaf to their petitions. They are loud and noisy and say over and over and over again what they want, as if determined to wring from the Deity by sheer force the granting of their requests. But we are told: "Be not ye like unto them; for Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him." Prayer ought to be wise as well as earnest. It should be regarded not as a dictation to the Lord, but as the expression of a desire to have nothing more than His holy will fulfilled in us. When the spirit of true prayer is ours, we shall not fail to pray in accordance with its injunction. Our prayers then will not proceed from impatience, but from confidence; not from a misdirected zeal, but from a heart which is guided by the dictates of heavenly truth. And praying thus, our souls will indeed be opened to Him who knows our wants far better than ourselves know them; and we shall ask and receive, because we ask not amiss.

The mightiest force in the world today is Christianity. It used to be worth a man's life to confess Christ before the world—and it is yet, if the men would only see it in the right light. For nothing short of a whole life is pleasing or acceptable to Christ. There never was a time in the history of the world when a man could lift his head with greater gladness or with more justifiable pride to say, "I thank God I am a Christian," than now. Thank God for Christ, Christians, and Christianity—it led a Savonarola to submit to gibbet and flames; it led a Cranmer to thrust his right hand into the flame that it might burn first because "it had written contrary to his heart;" it led a Luther to face an angry council—"an empire against a man"—and to exclaim in words that will never die: "Here I stand; I can not do otherwise, God help me." It has led apostles to suffer lashes, imprisonment and death. It led Stephen to be bold enough to face the Sanhedrim and condemn it to its teeth, though his denunciation is immediately followed by his execution. It supports a Carey in India, a Livingstone in Africa, an Ashmore in China. It sends the brightest and best of our fair land to the worst part of it, and only offers fever and trial and death as an inducement. Thank God that we are Christians engaged in Christian work!

Prohibition is morally right. It is God's philosophy, and it ought to be man's. God is the most radical prohibitionist in the universe. The first sermon that he ever preached to man was squarely prohibitive—"Thou shalt not." Why should we not seek to stand upon those basic principles that underlie the eternal throne?—A. A. Phelps.

God is Love.

AN ADDRESS AT THE OHIO STATE CONFERENCE.

Brethren, and Sisters, and friends,—As a foundation for remarks I have selected the words found in 1 John iv. 16, "God is love; "God is Love." The brevity of this sweet assurance is most sublime. It is not an appelative,—it is not an epithet,—it is not a quality. It is not only his name and memorial! It is his nature! It is his being. It is himself. Love is the crown that emits all his attributes, like gems emit their varied luster.

The history of those countries having Gods many show that the character of a people correspond with their ideas of a God. And it is my earnest desire to so exhibit the character of our God, that some may fall in love with him with all their hearts,—obey him with every power of body and of mind,—commune with him till they reflect his moral image here,—and hereafter partake of divine nature itself. But what a task! "God is love!" "With one stroke of the pen we have a portraiture of Deity such as man never furnished. It eclipses every conception of the Supreme Being found in the writings of poets, philosophers, statesmen or historians! God is love! How unique the axiom!

HOW SIMPLE!

Yet how sublime! How compressed, and yet how comprehensive! So self-evident as to require no argument! Transparent without any analysis; beautiful without any embellishment, and pure without a taint! And no wonder. This is God's description of himself. It is intended to arrest attention, excite admiration, generate affection, kindle adornation, afford consolation, and to facilitate imitation. I approach it with fear and trembling, lest I darken counsel by unmeaning words, or mar it by any attempt at explanation. O let us all take our shoes from our feet as we come near to see this great sight. God is love! I would be happy if I could confine myself to the grand old Book of God for proofs of God's love. Duty impels me otherwise. And with Chamberlain we say, "Whether all realize it or not, an era of skepticism is upon us." To say nothing of skeptics as a class, I find by observation that almost everybody appears to judge of God from the standpoint of his laws and threatenings, rather than from the

GIFT OF HIS SON,

and the offer of eternal life, and the saint's everlasting rest. Little attention is given to the Word, and by degrees they begin to suspect God, and almost dislike him,—and never think of studying his character in the face of Jesus Christ although the brightness of his glory shines there as nowhere else,—hence, the necessity of unveiling the enmity by all kinds of arguments, rational, as well as Scriptural, in order that no room be left for either dislike or dread, and no excuse for indifference, when the great God makes a supreme effort to commend his love to us, he never takes his stand by the side of any bounty or beauty of nature and says to man, "Herein is love!" or "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed." O friends, his eye is upon and his hand points to him as he hung on Calvary, or, as the conqueror of death seated beside him on the throne. Many profess to love nature, and yet hate the Scriptures,—and when we point out that numerous things in nature prove the benevolence of God, they say these things are beyond their province, and belong to theology. But, we have to accept existing conditions and make the best of our opportunities. We should never forget to show these scientists whenever we can, that God was loved as love, before science, or the taste for it existed, which now sets up their own discoveries and conclusions, as rivals to revelation and substitutes for devotion. Neither patriarchs, prophets, apostles nor martyrs waited for natural philosophy in order to convince them that "God is love;" God did not wait for any of the sciences to commend his love, or claimed to be love, and called for love. Nor did any of his servants labor or favor in schooling his claims because none of them were naturalists, chemists or astronomers, I am not undervaluing science or art, by any means; I only want to show that rests its own truth upon grounds wholly independent of all human discoveries and abstract reasonings. And who has a heart not hardened by vice, can wonder at this? Who, that had given an only Son to redeem enemies would rest his proof of love on anything else? This is the principle upon which God claims to be "Love," and to be loved. Love is a matter of the heart, and can only be won or awakened by something that comes direct from

THE SLAIN LAMB,

DIVINE BENEVOLENCE

THE HEART OF GOD,

breathing and burning with loving kindness which admits of no doubt and defies all comparison; such is the unspeakable gift of God's Son. O how could God go on beyond that, in commending his love to the world or to the church? That demonstration of it was infinitely high, infinitely strong, infinitely sure, infinitely warm! This can be said of nothing else in the universe. Nothing else brings home to the heart a melting sense of the love of God except in connection with this. Whoever sees and feels from this, that God is love, will be forcibly reminded even to tears, by a beautiful flower, or landscape, by a morning in summer, or a mother's tenderness, or a father's smile,—ah, dear ones, any thing lovely will send one who is warmed with the love of God and Christ, up to the very top of the gospel ladder instanter, and make them weep with joy over the

PATERNAL LOVE OF GOD.

But, apart from that, these things only please, or soften, but leave the heart just as they found it. I now trust you will not misunderstand me, as I proceed to argue the matter on other and general grounds.

First, then, I hold it highly probable that God is love; and so any one who likes can now close the Bible for a few minutes. The strong probability that God is love, is a rational conclusion from the absolute independence of God. Nothing can be more self-evident than the Author of all creatures is "over all"—above them, and independent of them. He can control and dispose of them as he pleases,—and therefore has no motive whatever for being malevolent. He could gain nothing by it; and he could lose nothing by love. Unless, therefore, he feel and act without any reason, motive or end, he cannot be malignant: so it is only fair and rational to conclude that God is love, because in that character he can gain and keep every object he wishes.

This truth may be argued from the perfect happiness of God. By the vastness and variety,—by the grandeur and beauty of the material creation, God says to all intelligent creatures, "Behold my happiness! It was perfect when nothing that is seen existed." As God was happy from everlasting, independent of all things, of course nothing can impair that happiness. He has therefore to injure any one, seeing it could not benefit himself in any way. And besides, from all we know of malevolent feelings, they are incompatible with happiness, and embitter true enjoyment. That "God is love," is highly probable from the omniscience of God. Even with our limited fore-sight it is not difficult to perceive how it would sink our character and be a canker in our bosoms to cherish a malevolent spirit. That being the case, how clearly must an omniscient God see! How powerfully a holy God would see that malevolence would be out of harmony with all his declarations respecting himself.....This truth of God's love may be argued from his omnipotence. This power can do all things, whatever principle it acts from, and whatever feeling or motive influence it. Malice could not strengthen omnipotence,—nor could love weaken it. So the Almighty can have no motive to be tyrannical or a hard Master. He could reach no farther, and could do no more under passion than under love. And beyond all this we have seen that

GOD LOVES TO BE LOVED.

Love cannot be forced; it has to be won, in the very nature of things. We have, therefore, in ourselves an essential and inseparable element which is both a proof and pledge that God himself is love. This line of argument may be drawn out to any length, and made to include the whole round of the divine perfections, until it was seen that each of them repels alike, all suspicion of the divine character being either unjust or ungenerous. It were easy to show that neither present nor future suffering are incompatible with perfect love, but rather proofs of its perfection. I cannot begin to enumerate all that love is; but I can tell you it is to vices and faults, nor indulgence to fleshly desires. It would have been anything but kindness to us in childhood had our parents winked at our faults or gratified all our wishes. We indeed thought it hard, if not harsh to be chastened when we did wrong,—and to be refused when we set our heart upon improper things. But we know better now than to blame our parents, or doubt their love because they did so. Men are just as imprudent in judging of God's conduct, as children are in judging of parental kindness, and need both checks and chastisements. But there is a phase of this subject that those who seldom care to consider. They suffer much, at times, I know. But do they not know that they daily and hourly violate the laws of life recklessly, even after experiencing the ill effects of such a course themselves, and have seen scores of others come to an untimely end from the same course of conduct? Do they not know that the gratification of evil desires or appetites soon develops unconquerable habits in others, and yet take no warning? What an anomalous state of mind to be in, when men know that a penalty attaches to every violated law of nature, and yet persistently choose the pleasure derived from sinful practices, although they know it will bring them to an untimely end? What right have they to complain of suffering, when they know that the wages of sin is death? Surely it is the prerogative of the

NOT WEAKNESS AND LENITY

FIND FAULT WITH GOD

GOD OF NATURE

to make laws to regulate it, and attach the penalties. And it should be borne in mind that it was because of man's sin that the earth was cursed, and nature disordered. When dominion over all was given to man everything was pronounced very good. Why blame the Almighty for the thousand ills introduced by sin? What is there in the objection so frequently and flippantly drawn from the ills of life against the love of God? In all soberness I ask of such why they deliberately gratify appetites and passion which contribute to, and intensify the ills of life? It will have to answer that question from the book of God. It says the carnal mind is at enmity with God; that explains it. They dislike God and love the pleasures of sin without regard to cost, and at the same time, throw the blame upon God. To come back to my text: when it says "God is love," it proves his existence. There is a God, what the fool says in his heart to the contrary notwithstanding. His existence forms the broad on which our hope of immortality rests. If there be no God the pilliared firmament is rottenness, and earth's base is built on stubble. If God is, he must be our moral governor,—the Being with which we have to do; and to whose scrutinizing eye our thoughts, words and actions are exposed, and to whom we are personally accountable. Many use his name to point coarse jokes and emphasize their blasphemies, and there are philosophers who profess to believe there is a God; but their God is not our God. They deny his providence, they impugn the wisdom with which he governs. They snatch from his hand the balance and the rod; they rejudge his justice; they try to be God of God and shut him out of his own world. No! that is not the God whom we serve. The text tells us in three words, not only that God is, but what he is!

"GOD IS LOVE;"

not lovely, or loving, but emphatically love! It has not, as already seen, been implanted from without,—but inherent; not something attached to him, but himself unoriginated, underived, and of which we cannot divest himself. He can no more cease to be love, than he can

CEASE TO BE GOD!

God, then, is eternal love! Whatever is essential to a being must be co-existent with that being. In whatever point of immensity of space God is, there he is in all the fulness of his love! It is a vast unfathomable sea, bottomless, shoreless, illimitable, unconfined by friendships, relationships or boundaries, forgetting none, passing by none, whatever their color or outward condition, but embracing every creature he has made, "Do not I fill heaven and earth," saith Jehovah? And permit me to add here, that when the thoughts of men about God pass in review before us,—we find that no God of love is found where there are Gods many. What do we find? We find Gods cruel, Gods careless, Gods capricious,

GODS LUSTFUL,

Gods with pity mingled with contempt for the sorrows and follies of mankind. But nowhere do we find a loving or merciful God. Apart from the Word of God, the devout believer can see ten thousand proofs of his love. By the response of his own love to that of God, and God in him. Everything seems to speak to him in some degree of God's love; and at the risk of being tedious I will run over some of the manifestations of his love. The love of God was manifested in a wonderful degree in providing

A HOME FOR MAN.

For myriads of ages before man was, the creative energy of the Eternal was exerted in his behalf. When one rock formation after another took place, when the rack floras of the dump ages was being changed to coal,—when the bowels of the earth became the vast storehouse for iron, and tin, and copper and lead, and gold and silver, and chromium, and cobalt, and zinc, and bismuth, and mercury, and platinum, and oil, and gas, and numerous other things,—it was all mercifully and graciously done with reference to the wants and convenience of the creature man not yet formed. By infinite power the hills were thrown up, and the valleys and water-courses formed and the earth caused to bring forth abundantly all kinds of trees for timber and endless varieties of fruit, this was all provided for man before there was any man. When thousands of beautiful flowers and fragrant shrubs were brought forth, it was to delight the senses, and all before man was. When the season for growth and rest, summer and winter, seed time and harvest, sunshine and rain were appointed, the great Jehovah was fitting up a home for man that would just suit him. And in view of these facts, it seems to me, every reflecting person should be ready to exclaim with the apostle, "O the depths of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God."

THE situation in Russia is far from settled. In the Caucasus region there have been revolts, destruction of property and life. All the Russian railways except the Central Asian have been placed under martial law. In some sections the reserves have refused to come out when called. Some even leaving a train after being started to the seat of war in Manchuria. Among the peasants in the rural districts, the report is circulated that the Czar will on March 4 issue a decree dividing the land. Of course this is absurd, but when once the idea is in the mind of the ignorant peasantry it is a hard matter to get it out. Hence the trouble in store for the land owners is apparent. Strikes in all industries are called. Even the police of Moscow are ready to strike, and each man is accompanied by a soldier. The police are now getting $6 00 a month, and ask for the same pay as is given in St. Petersburg- $12.50 a month. With all these internal influences paralyzing the empire, the difficulty of sending supplies to the army in Manchuria is increased largely, and sending more men well nigh impossible.

REPORTS from the Far East indicate that a battle is being fought, and every effort is being made by the Japanese to make it decisive. The Japanese have turned the Russian left, and are forcing the fighting on the other lines. A few days may decide the issue. If Kouropatkin's army is broken up and beaten in this battle, or compelled to retreat, it is not likely that fresh troops can be sent to his aid in numbers sufficient to hold in check the victorious Japs. Should the Russians be the gainers, it may inspire the home government with hope, and put off the peace proposition.

A SERIES of destructive conflagrations are among the items of news. Indianapolis, Boston, Hot Springs, and New Orleans, each had fires that destroyed property reaching into the millions of dollars. Some few lives are reported lost. Besides this there have been reports of two mine explosions that have cost some hundreds of lives.

The Lord Gave the Increase.

For a number of weeks we have had excellent attendance at our Sunday morning services, at the Church of the Blessed Hope. The countenances lit up by hope, and the hearty handshakes at the close, and the frequent remark that it was "good to be here," etc, indicate that they are having a foretaste of what is to be revealed in them, if faithful to the end.

We have found it a profitable change to hold the mid-week meeting at the houses of brethren and sisters, who can frequently induce near neighbors to attend, who would not go to the meeting at the church house. Occasionally some when present requests that the next meeting be held at his or her house, and in this way doors are opened, and hearts too.

We last Sunday evening had the unspeakable joy to induct three more into the Saving Name, after an address to a full house. Brother P. Grief and his sister-wife Grace—both neutral before; and Sister Jessie Herron, from the Enquirer's class in the Sunday School, were buried with Christ, after, we trust, they had died to sin: and then rose to walk in newness of life.

We hope and pray that they may be able to war a good warfare, and finally obtain the victor's crown.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me," seemed to be the language of every one, because of the eleven recently added to our number by immersion, two reunited, and two by letter; and because at least four others are under instruction, with that end in view. This is inspiring all to redouble their diligence to win souls.

Meditation.

Sitting in our invalid chair, looking through our chamber window, we witness the hoar frost as it gathers on tree and vine, withering the leaves and causing them to fall to the earth. We behold the naked branches as but dead twigs. We see the fleecy snow as it begins to cast a curtain of pure white over the ground. Hour after hour, day after day, until days have chased themselves into weeks, and weeks numbered into months, we see the little white flakes as they gently fall to the ground, piling up deeper and deeper.

We look again, and lo, the fierce Arctic blasts are drifting the snow hither and yon. Here the ground is swept bare as the winds whirl around our sick chamber. Yonder the snow is banked and piled deep. Business is almost paralyzed by the rude blasts of winter. Now for a little season the mercury rises; the Polar storm abates and the rifting clouds reveal a warm gentle sun; but soon again the orb of light and heat hides behind the winter's cloud, and thus we behold storm and sunshine as they chase each other by, until the bleak wind and snows of winter finally yield to the soft balmy breezes and showers, and warm sunshine of spring.

Still we sit in our helpless condition. We behold nature reviving, the apparent lifeless twigs are again taking on their new robes of verdure. The migratory birds return, and field and forest once more resound with their sweet warbling and cheering whistles. In yonder tree near by a mocking-bird is perched, and sending forth his notes loud and shrill, as if to cheer us up as we listen to him through our half open window, and from the open window too, we feel the warm exilerating breezes of spring.

At the early dawn of day comes the lovely notes of the oriole, as perched near he seems to say "Mighty-sleepy-children, mighty-sleepy children." We witness the leaves as they increase in size, until foliage is complete. Here we notice a cluster that imagination forms into a man's face. Now the gentle breeze causes his lips to move as if talking. Again a stiffer wind, and he is jesticulating wildly. Yonder outlined against the horizon, we seem to see animals of various kinds, in the calm they are docile, but with the stiffening breeze, they dash at each other in mad fury, and time in our idle moments imagination takes on many forms.

Still we sit and ponder. Winter has come and gone—springtime, that season of love, of hope and of joy is now passing into summer. The warm rays of the sun beam down, the balmy breezes are blowing, and those leafy boughs offer a tempting shade which we creep out to enjoy. I see about us all nature seems to be lively and happy. The feathered tribe are nesting in the trees about us, the honey bee is going from flower to flower gathering his sweet stores, and at the same time carrying pollen from plant to plant which produces fruit.

Among the pleasant things are some not so pleasant. The fly and mosquito seem to delight in taking advantage of our helpless rheumatic condition and present their bills as merciless collectors. We see the innocent child running and playing in merry glee, and the thought comes, O that we were a child again. The youth passes by agile and strong and we almost envy him his activity. The laborer and business man are hurrying to their work and desk, and we can take no active part.

The summer goes by and autumn, the season of beautiful tinted leaves, but which presage the approach of winter's chilling blasts, comes and goes; the bountiful crops are garnered: the feathered songsters have hied away to the warm southland; only the jay and the sparrow remain to flit by our gaze or come occasionally for the friendly crumb. Hoar frost has again stripped tree and vine, the cold wintry winds have shut us in one chamber, and again we peer through our now closed window at the white mantle cast over the earth, and with our frame worn weary and hearts depressed we cannot cheerily vie with the merry lads and lasses as they sing of the "snow, the beautiful snow."

O child of earth! why gloomy and depressed? Look beyond this "dark night of tears." The cloud has a silver lining. Soon will the full light of God's eternal day rest upon us; a day when all will be joy and gladness.

"Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads. They shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away." Isa. li. 11. "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xvii. 15.

The Seven Unities.

These seven unities are to be found in Eph. iv: 4:

1. One Body.
2. One Spirit.
3. One Hope.
4. One Lord.
5. One Faith.
6. One Baptism.
7. One God.

Seven in the Scriptures is a symbol of completeness. The above seven unities represent the Christian system in its completeness. Examine closely, and see if we can remove any one of the above seven units and still have a system left that will save a sinner. It cannot be done.

The "Body" of Christ is one, and not many bodies. This "One Body," depends for its vitality and life, upon the one life-giving "Spirit."

The "One Body" whose life depends upon the "One Spirit," recognizes but "One Hope," and is loyal to only "One Lord," the recognized head of the "One Body," which subscribes to only "One Faith," and yields obedience to the demands of the "One Faith," in the "One Baptism," and serves only "One God." Remove any one of the above seven, and you will have a defective system which cannot save anyone.

Show me a person, who understands, believes, lives up to the requirements involved in each of the above seven units, and I will show you a person who is not merely a theoretical follower of the Lord, but a practical Christian in every sense of the word.

Study accurately each of the above Seven Units.

Yours in the Blessed One Hope.

The Sower.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that or whether they both shall be alike good." Eccl. xi. 6.

In the dim dawning sow thy seed,
And in the evening stay not thy hand,
What it will bring forth—wheat or weed—
Who can know, or who understand?
Few will heed,
Yet, sow thy seed.

See, the sunrise before thee glows,
Though close behind thee night lingers,
Flapping their fatal wings come the blackforms,
Following, following over the hill.
No response;
Sow thou thy seed.

We, too, went sowing in glad surprise;
Now, it is twilight; and shadows fall,
Where is the harvest? Why lift we our eyes?
What could we see here? But God seeth all.
Fast life flies;
Sow the good seed.

Though we may rest it with trembling hand,
Spirit half broken, heart sick and faint,
His winds will scatter it over the land,
His rain will nourish and cleanse it from taint,
Sinner or saint
Sow the good seed.

"Take Heed to Yourselves."

"Take heed to yourselves that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside and serve other gods and worship them; and then the Lord's wrath be kindled against you, and he shut up the heaven that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruits and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the Lord giveth you. Therefore, shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes. And ye shall teach them to your children," etc. Deut. xi. 15-19.

"And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments, which I command you this day, to love the Lord your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul. That I will give you the rain of your land in due season," etc. Deut. xi. 13, 14.

There is in these days an almost universal belief, that God has nothing to do with drouth and storm and if perchance he has, it is dreadfully cruel to destroy the works of our hands by either. But the Old Book teaches otherwise. It warned Israel, nationally, as to what would happen, if they "turned aside and served other gods," and worshipped them. It bade them "Take heed that their heart be not deceived," intimating that idolatrous religions could wear so thick a cloak, and bear such close semblance to the true, that unwary persons could or would be deluded and led astray. Idolatry does not always take a gross form nor does it always leave God out of its worship.

The same warning that was given to Israel holds good today in a national sense.

Then why write of this matter to the Church of God? Because it is through her that the warning must come. Her members are to witness for God. They are to proclaim to the world that he alone is the true God. They are to stand for the purity of the gospel against all false religions and practices and are to protest against these, though the result be banishment or death. If the Church does not do this, there is danger that even her feet may slide, and if not her feet, that of her children, and with the slide of these, the loss of that liberty bought by the martyred myriads of the past, bought by the Reformation heroes, bought by many a hard and weary struggle of the English people with Rome, bought by brave Hollanders on battle-fields, bought by the Pilgrim fathers, "on wild New England's rocky shore."

It is the province of the Church to "rebuke her neighbor and not suffer sin upon him," and to "warn the sinner when the sword is coming, lest he perish and his blood be required at her hands.

But have our people "turned aside to serve other gods and to worship them?" Have their hearts been deceived?

We know that they have, that hundreds of our young men, many of them belonging to the wealthiest, oldest and most aristocratic families deluded by the seeming piety and tender (?) charity of the papal idolators have intermarried with them and have given their little ones to that church, to be taught and brought up in its doctrines and practices. Our married women embrace her faith, [illegible] young girls go into her [illegible] and give the accumulated wealth of generations into her keeping, that she may the sooner be able to enthrall our country. And this is now thought to be no sin, the Papal Roman Church having come to be looked upon as a Christian Church! Oh! if our forefathers could but see how all their work is being undone by their children, would they not cry out in agony and in tears? Catholic priests lecturing in our colleges, Catholic priests preaching in Protestant pulpits, radical rationalists occupying University chairs! Radicalism, lawlessness, socialism, infidelity, jesuitism, tractarianism and spiritualism, with an overflowing influx of heathenism, "Which is the very essence of popery abroad in the land!" And no doubt the Higher Criticism, that is whittling away at the Old Book, is one of her children in disguised clothing.

But are Roman Catholics idolators? If so, in what does the idolatry consist? First and foremost in paying to a man the honors and the worship that belong to God alone. Every Roman Catholic worships the Pope. They say "he cannot err;" that "he has full power to forgive and retain sin arbitrarily;" that "every thing instituted by the Pope, whether it be contained in the Scriptures or not, is true, divine and saving, which the common man must value more than the commandments of the living God," that "the Pope is to be honor, just as is due to Christ himself; that "we cannot appeal from the Pope to God;" that "the judgment of the Pope and the judgment of God are the same;" and that "to believe that our Lord God, the Pope had not the power to decree, what he has decreed is heresy." Is not this idolatry of the rankest kind? Is it not treason against the great and glorious Creator? The whole fabric of this anti-christian church was patterned after Pagan Rome, and literally swarmed with its idolatrous practices, doctrines and superstitions. The one was made an exact image of the other, and the entire retinue of officials—priest, bishop, cardinal and Pope are to have their due portion of worship, and to be obeyed as if it were God himself who was speaking.

John the Revelator, says "the image causes the death of those who refuse to worship it." Mark the words, "worship it," that means the entire official system, just as I have told you. It takes in the whole hierarchy—priest, bishop, cardinal and pope. We know that the pope and his followers did do just what John said they would do with those who would not worship them, as the equal or superior of God, and would not accept their infamous doctrines; 50,000,000 persons having suffered martyrdom at their hands, rather than pay divine honors, to the Moloch seated on the Tiber. But the idolatry does not stop with the worship of The Man; Mary, the mother of Jesus, a mortal human being like ourselves, is worshiped as if she were a divine and immortal being. Her gold and gem-bedecked images are the shrines to which the multitudes flock with their offerings and prayers in many a costly temple in both the old and the new world. She is placed even above Jesus, and more looked to than God, though for hundreds of years, she has been but a handful of dust.

Then the adoration of the dead, of the crucifix, and of the mass, are other forms that this hydra-headed idolatry takes. Are we sinless when we make no protest? When we suffer this giant power to go out in battle against our people, however warily, and give no note of alarm? A few years ago the very air was resonant with voices, showing from the prophetic page the vice, the character, the time of continuance, and the final doom of the Antichrist and the dangers threatening the true church and our country from his encroachments. Those voices are hushed in death. The Duffields, the Newtons are no more. Fuiton, Seiss, Gordon and Hastings are gone. Few are rising up after them who dare imitate their example. Our patriotic American papers have been strangled into silence, and in one instance at least the publisher of a journal that stood up for the truth of God against the errors of Rome, fell at his post, with his wife and her sister—not actually murdered—and yet just as really martyrs to the cause they loved, and to which they gave their all, time, strength, wealth and life.

We cannot reach the people, the preachers will not uncover the Image. Our rulers are in collusion with him. Catholics boast that "they elected Roosevelt" and that "when all Catholic organizations of the country are united under one great federation, they will have fifteen million under its banner, and that then no nation on earth will dare refuse to give them audience when they raise their voices on any question of State or on any question in which they are interested. Who will warn? The religious press in common with the secular is muzzled, save with few exceptions. Who need wonder when drouth smites the land and the wheat fields wither? Who need be surprised when fierce storms and devastating floods, and flames destroy the works of man? God has warned through his servants and the warning has been unheeded. He has commanded that it be taught to the children, that if he be forsaken and other gods worshiped, the rain and the fruits are withheld. He has not been obeyed, and the result—though not as yet in oppressive degree—has followed. his judgments have gone forth that we may learn righteousness. Will we?

In all the years of our nation's history and with abundant opportunities at hand, with myriads of emigrant servants in our homes few attempts have been made to teach them to go directly to Jesus for pardon of sin. We are not blameless and must reap as we have sown. Roman Catholics conceived and carried out the plan of the great World's Fair at Chicago, with its Congress of all religions, since which Buddhism, whether veiled as Christian science, or openly taught, has spread with alarming rapidity among our people; idolatry is so much more fascinating than the worship of the true God who can pardon and save! But how many who are worshiping the God of heathendom know that they are worshiping that which is no God? Christian science papers will not tell them: the Journal of Mysteries will not tell them; the writers in these will talk just as many Protestants talk of God, and only those who are close students of the Bible can detect the sham, and can see that it is only principle, and not a real being that they are talking about. "Take heed to yourselves that your heart be not deceived." Flee from idolatry as you would from the plague, keep protesting, keep the bells of prophecy a ringing! We need not look for another antichrist, this one is bad enough and answers all purposes of Satan "in all deceivableness and unrighteousness." Never can more skillful snares be set than he has set to catch unwary souls. Infidel at heart himself, with infidel bishops and priests under him, (as Chiniquy plainly shows in writing of the state of Catholic affairs in Canada), and caring only for the honors and emoluments of place and power, he is missing all evil forces, infidel, heathen and Catholic into one great federation, that he may, if possible regain his lost dominion over the kings of the earth. We can see how the matter stands by remembering that the whole Catholic population of the United States cannot exceed 10,000,000, while the federation of all Catholic societies is estimated at 15,000,000! The figures tell their own story. Will the final part of Washington's dream come true? Is a dreadful battle to be waged here and our cities to go up in flames? Such a time will surely come if God is forsaken and the Bible thrown away. Men may turn away from God; they may tear the Bible into tatters, and "love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil," but it is a fatal mistake for themselves. Turning to serve idols, that they may commit every manner of sin and crime, will not by and by make a very pleasant world to live in, and something worse than the withholding of rain will be the ending. The Roman Catholic Propaganda carried on now so vigorously among the blacks and Indians and all weak-kneed Protestants may draw hosts under that standard, but the final outcome will be that the vine of the earth will be gathered and cast into the great wine press of the wrath of God." Again I say, "Take heed that ye be not deceived!"

Old and the New Interpretation.

"As we said before so say I now again. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received let him be accursed."—Paul to the Church at Galatia.

When you think how various, and in many cases, diametrically opposite have been the opinions and the teachings of those who have undertaken the task of informing the community on the above subject perhaps a little free consideration of it will not be vain. There need be no reflections on the intentions or characters of the many noble but mistaken men who have spent their lives and often shed their blood and filled martyrs' graves in defence of their many and contradictory ideas. They walked according to their light; they will be judged according to their walk and their light, but we, who have entered into the fullness of a brighter day, will be judged according to our time.

A bright and advanced Episcopal minister once related to a little party of us how, when he was a young man just from college, he undertook on one occasion to preach a fiery hot, old fashioned scorcher, with the "hot place" right in sight, and after the discourse the old bishop, who happened to be present, came up to him and said: "look here, young man; its bad, and bad enough and there's no use of your making it any worse than what it is." Now the word "gospel" means good news or glad tidings, and so that sharp criticism pulled this gentleman up short as it were, and from that day forth, he revised his opinion and altered his preaching.

Raw and callow young gentlemen are turned out of the various sectarian institutions for theological education that were founded a century or more ago and that are still settled on the "old foundations," and it takes these young men some time to learn that the world moves. Few well read people now-a-days credit the horrible doctrines that were considered all-right "gospel" even fifty years ago, and the present educated generation would not, in any wise, tolerate the crude ranting of Jonathan Edwards, Whitfield, or even Wesley. In the dunedom of illiterate England and her colonies under the Jameses and the Georges, these men were considered and considered themselves wonderful messengers from the throne of the Majesty on High, but we look now-a-days with other eyes and hear with other ears, and the crude mixture of nonsense and blasphemy rubbed in with Bible truth can be detected.

It is related of Jonathan Edwards, for instance, that on one occasion he stationed a boy with a big cow horn up a tree, where he preached in the open air, with instructions to blow when he heard the mention of the "Angel Gabriel." Then when his audience had assembled the orator drew a harrowing picture of the last judgment, concluding his peroration with "what if the Angel Gabriel should sound his trumpet now?" To-o-o-t, to-o-o-t, to-o-o-t! blew the boy on the horn. Then women fainted and men turned pale and there was a time of terror, until the cause was known, and Mr. Edwards had trouble to keep his little hireling from being lynched. Among a certain class that kind of thing goes still. Some time ago a priest in Italy had an assistant under the pulpit to groan and rattle chains while he preached his crude gospel. The alarmed audience rushing out in terror, killed and mangled several people, and the police notified the reverend gentleman that that kind of thing must stop. So also in Baltimore not long since a negro preacher had a woman go into a trance and narrate her experiences in the infernal regions. He had a great gospel revival and collected ten cents admission as well, but the police interfered for the public safety in this case also. These belated specimens illustrate by contrast and contact and show us what our poor forefathers had to endure—as well as their other troubles—at the hands of their "religious instructors."

Benjamin Franklin in his biography gives us an interesting account of the great preacher Whitfield, and some of his methods. He says: "It was a matter of speculation to me, who was one of the number, to observe the extraordinary influence of his oratory on his hearers and how much they admired and respected him, notwithstanding his common abuse of them by assuring them they were naturally half beasts and half devils." At the same time the celebrated philosopher bears him this witness: "But I, who was intimately acquainted with him, being employed in printing his sermons and journals, never had the least suspicion of his integrity but am to this day decidedly of the opinion that he was in all his conduct a perfectly honest man." As to Wesley and his gospel, that can be judged of from some of the old editions of his hymns, for it is noticeable that the hair-raising terrors may be looked for in vain in the modern selections in use in the Methodist churches now—a moderately good sign.

Now these changes in the conception of the gospel are all open and palpable, so much so, that the very shame of them has caused a demand in some of the leading fashionable sects for "creed revision," which seems to amount in the long run only to a sort of apologetic "crawl out" and in no case may we expect an open avowal that anybody on their respective sides has ever made any mistakes, at least there will be no corporate action to that effect. So, that, after all, the question as to what the gospel, the original gospel, the glad tidings, from the gracious Father to his wandering and erring children is, has to be left for each man to judge for himself with the kindly proffered aid of that Father's guiding spirit and the "Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." "Let the dead bury their dead." "For now we know that they never did know and couldn't understand."—J. L. Gillett in Boston Journal.

The Living God.

How many times we find this expression in the Holy Scriptures! And it is just the very thing we are practically prone to lose sight of. We know that it is written, "The Living God;" we may speak about Him as "the living God;" but in our daily life their is scarcely anything we practically so much lose sight of as the fact that God is "the living God," and that he is now whatever He was 3,000 or 4,000 years ago; that He has the same sovereign power, the same saving love toward those who love and serve Him as ever He had, and that He will do for them what He did for those 2,000, 3,000, 4,000 years ago, simply because He is "the living God," the unchanging one, the same as ever He was.

O how, therefore, we should confide in Him, and in our darkest moments and in our greatest trials and in our heaviest difficulties and afflictions should never lose sight of the fact that He is still "the living God" and ever will be "the living God."—Geo. Muller.

Food for Thought.

"Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. iv: 8.

If a man will follow Paul's six whatsoevers in thinking, he will not be apt to have anything whatsoever to say, or do that which is not all right. The Lord cannot regulate a man's talk with the devil running his thinking machinery. "As a man thinketh so is he." What comes out of a man's mouth in the form of communications will be the product of his thoughts. If the goods delivered at the door are not what they ought to be there is some trouble in the factory that should be remedied—a new manager installed perhaps. "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh" (James iii: 11, 12). These things are all straight in the natural world; they will be in the spiritual realm when rightly regulated.

You cannot feed a machine with wood pulp and expect silk as its product. Feed boys' minds with trashy literature, there will likely be accounts in the papers of runaways from home with pistols, adventures and imaginary Indians. Give them what they should have to read and you may expect something better.

The same is true of the children of a larger growth. What they get from pulpit and press molds their lives. "Like priest, like people." What a fearful responsibility to be instrumental in shaping human destinies! Christ reported back by prayer to the Father concerning this solemn charge carried out in his ministry: "I have given them thy Word" (John xvii: 14); and the lives of his disciples were evidences of its effects.

Are you following in his footsteps? If men turn their ears from the truth [illegible] that is not your fault. Don't you turn your tongue from preaching the truth unto fables on that account. Truth will have its effect; it will make free those who accept it; it will bind over to the judgment all those who willfully reject it.—C. E. Copp in Crisis.

The Silent Pastor.

The religious paper is a silent pastor. The editor does not ring the door bell and wait for some one to ask him in, take his hat, and to invite him into the parlor and to a seat. He does not meet each member of the household, shake hands and ask about the health of each, and report how the folks are at home. He enters like an invisible spirit, or is received as a bundle from the postman, to be opened at pleasure, and examined by each one at any time, morning noon or night. His communications and instructions are to the whole family together, or to one or more at a time, in the parlor, the dining room, the kitchen or the bed room. When the family have received all he has to communicate, and are so edified and pleased as to desire him to visit some distant friend, he will go to the post office and into the mail, and visit another family and repeat everything to all that can hear or read.

What he has to communicate is very interesting and profitable. It has respect to Christian doctrine and duty, the meaning of the Scriptures, church history and Christian work, missions and Sabbath schools, temperance and the Sabbath, literature, education, art, science and government, vice and sin, and whatsoever is useful in this life and that which is to come. Every wise head of a family should welcome his visits. Whoso shuts him out does his own soul an injury and denies his family knowledge, culture and the bread of life.—Herald and Presbyter.

There is life under the snow; Greek fire burns in water; and it is possible to be beset with cares and troubles, to live in the hardest of hard times, and yet have a pure fountain of joy welling up in the soul, sweet amid the bitter waters.—Henry M. Sanders.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send The Restitution to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send The Restitution to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send The Restitution to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

...fortnight of the Church of ... been a necessity for funds with which to discharge certain duties upon the Church. The poor brethren and sisters had to be supplied with food and raiment, and those who owned real estate sold such possessions, thus creating a fund from the proceeds which at the first was in charge of the apostles Acts iv: 34-37; v: 2, but was later at the direction of the apostles, given in charge of the seven deacons. Acts vi: 1-6. These funds had to be faithfully administered and conscientiously appropriated for the purpose intended by the donors.

It appears from Acts iv: 34, 35 that this fund was no small amount, for in the large congregation of believers at Jerusalem Act ii: 41; iv: 4: v: 14 there was no one that lacked, as distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. This speaks well for the Church at Jerusalem. They were of one heart and one soul. iv: 32. They had a genuine love for one another, and for the cause of the truth. It did not seem to cause them any heart pangs to part with their possessions and goods and devote them to succor those who were in need.

Let it be remembered that this was done under the supervision and with the sanction of the apostles. There was some system about this matter. How different this from the modern methods for raising church funds. Entertainments of almost every kind and description, from a "box-social" to a petty dance, are made to do service for raising money to build churches, pay the preacher, and send missionaries to foreign lands to convert the heathen. Is it any wonder that a church which has entered into competition with the world to furnish entertainment in order to wrest from the unsympathetic but pleasure seeking crowd the sheckels with which to conduct the Lord's business, has almost wholly ceased to be aspiritual force in the world? Is this according to apostolic precept and example? Is it in accordance with the Lord's will? It is manifestly in total disregard or total ignorance of the spirit and principle which animated the Church at its beginning. The apostle Paul gave orders (diatasso) on the matter of raising money for use by the Church. Every first day of the week, let each of you lay something by itself, depositing as he may be prospered, so that when I come collections may not then be made. 1. Cor. xvi: 1, 2, Diaglott. Here we see the divine order: 1. Every one of you, the Church, is interested in this matter. Not worldly persons who must be reached by an appeal to the stomach and not the heart. 2. The thing to be done is to lay something by itself (so Diaglott and Rotherdam) as every one has been prospered. This is proportionate giving. 3. This is to be deposited or treasured with the persons in charge of the Church funds —the deacons or treasurers. 4. This is to be done regularly on every first day of the week, thus insuring systematic giving. 5. It has this overwhelming advantage in its favour that when the emergency for the use of funds arises, the treasury will not be empty but well filled. Where this method is neglected there is a violation not only of Paul's order, but of the Lord's order as well.

The Church at Jerusalem was, in many respects, an exemplary Church, and served as a model for other churches. The brethren in Macedonia and Achaia became followers of the churches of God which in Judea were in Christ Jesus. 1. Thess. ii: 14. See also Acts xv: 2. This was due, no doubt, to the fact that the apostles had their abode there, who could see that the divine order was properly executed. The apostles and elders at Jerusalem sent decrees for to keep to other churches. Acts xvi: 4. The brethren at Jerusalem sold their possessions and goods to assist the needy. With this plan there was no need to make elaborate and expensive preparations requiring long weeks of time and labor which might be otherwise employed to better advantage, but paid directly out of the proceeds of the sale of their possessions into the Church treasury. In this way they were spared the humiliating spectacle of a church being rent to pieces over jealousies arising out of a slight in the honors of position and place in the entertainment. Somehow, the church fair, the bazaar, and the church dance do not contribute to the success of the word and do not heighten the esteem of the church in the neighborhood. Where a church goes into the amusement business, more or less extensively, it has the tendency to ... giveth he him do it with simplicity" (liberality). Rom. xii: 8. The churches of Macedonia had the witness that they first gave their own selves to the Lord, unto us by the will of God. 2. Cor. viii: 5. "If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2. Cor. viii: 12. Where this willing mind exists there is no need to reach a man through his stomach or his capacity for being entertained; he gives liberally according to that he hath without such coaxing. If that ready mind be wanting when he gives, his giving is not an act of faith. It is often said in favour of modern methods of raising funds that this is the only way to get outsiders to give. Have we any right to demand outsiders to give us money before they have first given their own selves to the Lord? If a bit of fun is the motive for giving to the Church, how indeed must be the conception of that person as to the calling of the Church, and lamentable the condition of the Church which thus panders to the flesh.

Brethren and sisters of the Church of God, it may be when you read these lines you will wish I had not written thus, but do not dismiss the subject without looking into this matter seriously. It means more than the name to be identified with the Church of God. Do not tell me there is no harm in things which are done by modern churches and church people. That is not the question. The question is, Has the Lord given a safe rule to govern the Church in all its interest during His absence, or has He not? If he has and these things conspicuously absent from that rule, then why improve on the Lord's plan by adding that for which there is no authority? If not, how do we know such methods will meet his approval? Written in love of the truth,

A. H. ZILMER.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope,
W. L. CROWE.

Wishing.

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do—
Set a watch upon your actions;
Keep them always straight and true;
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thoughts be clean and high,
You can make a little Eden
Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser?
Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrapbook of your heart.
Do not waste one page in folly;
Live to learn and learn to live;
If you want to increase knowledge,
You must get one you can give.

Do you wish the world were better?
Then remember day by day
Just to sow the seed of kindness
As you pass along the way.
For the pleasure of the many
May oftimes be traced to one,
And the hand that plants the acorn
Shields the armies from the sun.

Is There a Religious Decline Among the American People?

On the pages of history we find most wonderful agencies and powers, working out the development and destiny of the human race. A culmination is now seen in America's present advanced civilization and religious freedom. God's guiding hand has been the propelling motor in so arranging the broad plans of human existence, by which man can now feast on a few of the universal truths of an infinite design.

We, as American people, have the opportunity to gain the heights of the world's enlightenment, and certainly we enjoy greater religious toleration than any other known people. We are free to think, believe and express any religious sentiment. To the American youth has come, from his forefathers, a legacy of freedom, but with it, a much greater responsibility for wise judgment and prayerful action.

Before entering into a full discussion of this subject, let us notice a few requisites which the people of a nation must exemplify before they can be said to be imbued with a strong religious feeling. A very large per cent of the moral virtues in connection with a reasonable amount of intellectual judgment must dominate the character of the majority of its citizens. But above all, the religious feelings of each individual must be sincerely regarded as a sacred intuition direct from God. The people must be enthusiasts over the things which pertain to the spiritual life and live lives in accordance with a high standard of morality. In short, the essentials to a well-balanced religious life are; first, a measureable degree of intellectual certainty; second, a moral conduct based on fundamental principles; third, a sense of personal relationship to God. With these component parts of a strong religious character clearly stated, we wish to see if present religious tendencies stand in greater, equal, or less proportion to the religious impulses of fifty or a hundred years ago.

The religious phase of America is like all her other institutions, an amalgamation of European forms and customs. The different beliefs in Europe were transplanted into this country, only as elements which when thoroughly coalesced, produced new substances. The Puritan, the Quaker, the Huguenot, the Catholic, the Established Church of England, the followers of Martin Luther and John Wesley, were all elements brought from the Old World to the New, only to be revised and changed into new forms. Although we still have these creeds in name, their respective doctrines have been greatly altered by coming in close contact with each other, in a country blessed with an almost perfect type of religious toleration. The Roman Catholic is perhaps the only one that still retains an unchanged creed.

Moreover this amalgamation has and is still producing many new sects and so-called fraternal insurance organizations which are playing no small part in the religious life of our people, especially in the Middle West. Earnest Hamlin Abbott says, "These organizations show that men, when left free to chose their own ecclesiastical belief, are strongly governed by their religious conceptions, however vague and mystical. They illustrate how widespread and spontaneous is the impulse to express religious and ethical ideas by ritual, however crude and artificial. They express concretely, though often in a rather one-sided and selfish form, that social consciousness too often left by the churches without any religious or moral expression."

Commonly accepted as religious bodies they generally do not represent people striving to gain salvation through self exertions, nor do they connect the ethical action of man to the spiritual impulses. These new sects with their distorted or extreme doctrines are helping to confuse men's minds and lead honest but blinded people into a chaos of opinion. The Zionist, the Christian Scientists, the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints, The Salvation Army People are all leading men and women into directions astray from the real true path which the Revealed Word would have us know. Their influence upon the religious feeling of America has under some conditions resulted in good, yet they in a larger number of cases have deluded men's minds into avenues of varied misconception as opposed to the whole armor of truth, that God would have his children bear. However the Young People's Christian Associations show a marked interest in religious matters. The tendency in these organizations is toward generalization. They are the product of the last fifty years and are destined to play an important part in the history of the Church.

To Roger Williams we owe the religious freedom of America. The different sects of the early pioneer days came to this country with the same hindrances rooted and grounded in their minds which controlled the actions of their parents in their native lands. Our true founder of religious freedom nobly exerted his influence in asserting convictions by deed, and enduring much in the hope of being allowed free worship of God. His was the principle which underlies the many different phases of religious feeling in America. Other brave men took up the same principle which resulted and ripened into a people who can produce every type of religion known to highly civilized nations.

The door to our liberal views was unlocked when Cornwallis floated his flag of truce above the British forces at Yorktown, and today our religious life presents a very different aspect from the narrow minded sternness of those early days. But this absolute freedom is not without its degrading influences. With our broadened views naturally comes a less enthusiastic devotion. Men have become satisfied with any creed, and as a result, have failed to search the pages of the Bible carefully and prayerfully to see if the things taught them be true or not. In this age we have but very few Bereans.

With a growing insight into the laws which govern man's existence, come new temptations. Men strive to gain the mystical and vie with each other in points of doctrine, but lack moral fiber, thus they are not rich in spiritual life. In gaining what is popularly called religious breadth, one is apt to lose distinctiveness of ideas. While we do not admire the stringent, iron clad rules of the early settlers yet in seeking our much prized freedom some of the Higher Critics have gone to an opposite extreme as dangerous as the one which so pervaded the minds of the Cavalier, and especially the Puritan.

Religious liberty in America is thoroughly an American idea. Its is distinctively of American origin. But the long continued religious tolerance which its people have enjoyed has caused them to look upon it as a natural inheritance of life, just as the air we breathe. The people have lost deep conviction or rather the lessened care and thought has resulted in lessened real, religious devotion. Our people are not bound up by caste so much as in other countries, yet there seems to be a feeling abroad that we should follow the majority, which is a very grievous barrier to the promotion of strong sanctity and sacred purity.

In the settling up of the great West plains and mountainous states, religion has suffered a severe blow. Immigrants too often have left behind them in the East, all religious observances and worship. When a man goes into a new country away from friends, freedom from religious duties seems to be the first thought that takes possession of his mind. He sees around him no friend or critic to point the finger of shame at his negligence. He feels that he is away from those whom he respects, and will thus easily fall into the dangerous habit of leaving off religious duties.

The numerous strikes in this country have been a detriment to the advancement of Christian influences. When the minds of the people are diverted from their regular routine of daily work, the material things entirely blot out religious impulses. The wage-earners are brought into the fold of Christ largely through the influence of the Christian Associations. If the laborer be seeking to gain some advancement in this world's goods, when opposition comes, then religion is abandoned for the time being and much of the newly awakened interest is lost which often takes years to regain. Not only do strikes affect the religious inclinations of the laborer but of the employer and all with whom he may come in contact.

Another evil feature which is becoming more strongly marked every day is, the way in which American people in general seek to raise funds for the support of their church and the foreign mission field. If financial aid is needed the most successful way to gain it, is to arrange some unique, sensational entertainment to be held in church, or if the consciences of the people be too keenly awake to the wrong of mixing up worldly lust with spiritual good, then the entertainment is carried to the town hall or some public building nearby. In a religious publication we find the following. "To say that the church of Christ cannot be sustained without the aid of such contrivances is to confess that christianity is a failure. No indulgence is right which unfits us for holy communion with God. Contemplate the gossiping, joking, fun in such meetings and then attempt to pray. The sacredness of the sanctuary is forgotten in the roars of giddy laughter, the stamping of feet, and the rehearsal of silly anecdotes. These entertainments lead to a forgetfulness of God and beget in the mind of the young a taste for amusement elsewhere."

This is but the expression of the views of many of our greatest ministers. Man is created a reasonable being and should under no circumstances sacrifice his spiritual worthiness for worldly pleasure, a thing which is surely done when the church is made the home of theatrical performances. Such things sap the very life of the church and leave her powerless.

Again our people seem to have lost just and proper respect for the Sabbath day. In the rush and bustle of city life, men use their Sundays for recreation. The wanton abuse of the Sabbath is surely a sign of religious decline. The more man performs physical labor or follows worldly allurements on the first day of the week, set apart by God, as the day on which his people might meet in worship of him, the less is he going to pay heed to the things that are spiritual. Around and about us every day are an increased number each year who thus profane the Sabbath.

The commercial spirit of our people is perhaps the greatest cause to which we can attribute the decline of religious feeling. The present age is known as extremely materialistic. Every one seems to be striving to possess and accumulate money and earthly fame. This alone confirms the fact, that our people are straying from the spiritual side of life. People in general are placing before themselves ideals in the form of the coin of the land. City men have run mad in worldly affairs, wholly neglecting their spiritual natures. Any one may be fully convinced of this fact if he enters the large city churches, he will find the congregations largely composed of women.

The spirit of worldliness, the rush [illegible] over and partially blotted out the former devoutness in spiritual life. The great masses, men especially, are moving in a worldly direction at an appalling momentum; the reason of which may be found in the lack of real sacrifice and felt self-denial. There is much need of spiritual awakening. America needs a plentiful baptism from a divine source.

Parents are placing ideals before their children not made up of the things which money cannot buy, but are setting before them the God of mammon and a craving desire for popularity. This age is so full of this spirit that even if a youth be blessed with a well directed spiritual training in the family circle, when unprotected by the parental roof he enters life's battle with some high and noble purpose, unless unusually strong in character, this heavy materialistic current will sweep him away from his religious moorings into the broad sea of indifference. Many follow the customs and fashions of the world even to an extreme. They adorn themselves in their best apparel and go to church with the sole aim of being admired of men. A large majority have ceased to be a people peculiar to God. The worldly Christian cannot be distinguished from the man who does not profess to follow the precepts of Christ. Startling as it may seem, there are said to be forty million of people in America [illegible] attend any church services. Reliable statistics affirm that only five per cent of the young men in this country are members of any church and more than half of these are only nominal Christians. The empty pew is surely a sign of declining religious feeling, especially when able and educated ministers fill the pulpit.

Though America can boast of as many renowned preachers as any other country, she is now calling, and calling for more consecrated men to come into active service of the Master. Other professions are crowded, why not the ministerial, the highest and most sacred of all professions. Undoubtedly the spirit of the age has much to do with this negligence and passivity on the part of our young American men, and women as well.

Family worship is the source of spiritual reinforcement to the church. The home altars are to the church what the little fountains are to the lakes. The pure, fresh water is emptied into the larger bodies so it is with family worship. Power and strength is imparted to the church by the revivifying and resuscitating influence of the young people who every day surround the family Bible in worship of their Creator. Diligent seekers of Christ and ready workers in his vineyard make the pleasant home circles and send many a comforter out into the sinful world to encourage the faithful and help others find a peaceful rest. During the past few decades, the church has failed to receive the support from individual members which characterized the co-workers for Christ in the earlier days. In view of this fact the minister has been compelled to work single-handed. No wonder there is a cry for more men to fill the pulpits of our land. Every profession demands the co-operation of the people. If the minister fails to get this necessary support, he naturally becomes discouraged and finally abandons the profession. Moreover he causes his younger brother to decide upon some other line of work for life because of his unfruitful efforts. Much of this spiritual decay can be traced back to the home circles, hence it behooves each Christian parent in America to pay more heed to the family prayer-circle, so that the church may be fed with pure, wholesome, effective food.

Another interesting fact might be noted concerning the change in the ministerial profession during the last century. In times past the preacher displayed far greater intellectual ability than did the politician. Political power was in the grasp of the successful minister but in this age it is far different. A man who professes to be God's messenger and to succeed in accomplishing good, must keep himself isolated from the political and commercial world. This shows that men in dealing with each other are becoming more treacherous every day, and the man who would follow Christ must be relegated to the rear in all political affairs.

The decadence of religious feeling in America is real. In New England the decline is perhaps due to social customs rather than to a laxity in theology or a revolt against Puritanism. Fathers and mothers try to make a good time socalled for their children and thus do not keep them under rules that are morally and religiously adequate for their proper development. They endeavor to make them beaux and belles in society ere they have attained the age of sound judgment and mature thought, hence in this manner their religious natures are badly neglected. Many of the people of the north are broad in their views, even to the extreme of being satisfied to leave religious services out of their misdirected education which has made them skeptics and agnostics. While on the other hand the people of the south are more simple in belief and adhere more closely to the literal meaning of the Bible. All over America there is a lessening tendency to the emotional. Especially is this true among the negroes. Our churches are gaining more dignity in this direction, yet to suppress the display of feelings too much is to diminish the spirit which causes emotionalism.

In Kansas, the people guided by Charles M. Sheldon's views, ruled by the maxim, "What would Jesus do"—think in the concrete in the place of the abstract. This discourages the Pharisaical spirit but instead engenders a devoutness of conviction. Their motive and spirit bid fair to rule instead of mere precept.

The revolt against conventionalism is quite noticeable in every part of the country but more active in the middle west. There is great hope that this general reaction against ceremony and form will overthrow the deadening spirit of religious pretense and substitute the real thing in its place.

When once the standard of the church begins to fall, the non-church members are degraded much more than the professed followers of the lowly Nazarine. The church is measured and criticised much more severely than any other known institution. It does not easily adjust itself to the intellectual world as learning progresses, however it falls to the lot of the church to bear unjust conditions. It has had to fight a fierce battle against Satan for lo, these centuries. It looks now as if he were gaining ground but it will only be for a season, when he shall be bound for a thousand years and cast into the bottomless pit. Surely we are living in the closing scene of the world's great drama. We hear of wars and rumors of wars. Suicides are increasing each year. Even in our own America, supposed to be Christianized, we have millions of men who have no relations binding and sealing their future lives to Christ. False prophets have arisen in our land. Dowie, who claims to be Elijah restored, is a good example of those who would deceive the very elect if it were possible. Fires and disasters of almost every conceivable kind are happening every day. Are not all these decaying tendencies in our Christian religion but signs of the coming of the Son of Man? Surely it behooves the faithful few to be ready, and have their lamps all trimmed and burning. Watch, for you know not what hour your Lord doth come. One thing is sure "he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." "When we shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory," let us be able to say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 8, 1905. NUMBER 10.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Eternal Life.

"For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, therefore, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."—Col. iii: 3, 4.

As the full manifestation of this life is reserved, as it is hid with Christ in God, it is a proper object of hope. No mortal can bestow even temporal life, save in the mere acts of animal reproduction. There is not enough of power and wealth and wisdom and science and experience in this wide world to give life to a worm, a cricket or a fly. Temporal life is from God; how much more so is eternal life. To him in whom even now "we live and move and have our being," I look for the life that is to come. Upon the promises of the living Father, upon the strong assurances of the Lord of life and glory, I securely rest in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the ages began.—H. L. Hastings.

Let us rest while we are at work. All the worry and fret which addle our brains have their origin in unfaith or forgetfulness of God. As a familiar story teaches, he managed the world before we came into it; he will be here to take care of it after we quit it. It is even possible that he can get along with it while we are in it.—C. G. Ames.

Obituary.

Bro. John Arthur McLeland was born Sept. 5. 1849, and died at his home at Scircleville, Ind., Feb 21, 1905, leaving his widow, four sons and one daughter, besides brothers and sisters, and a large circle of relatives.

Bro. McLeland became a member of the Church of God a great many years ago and was a consistent and faithful member of the church at the time of his death. The writer became acquainted with the deceased while the latter resided at Indianapolis. Later he moved to Scircleville, where he was engaged in the mercantile business. Whenever possible he attended the meetings at the Church, about four miles distant. I called on him during his last illness, and found him, as always, cheerful, and hopeful of speedy recovery. But death came after a heroic struggle against its encroachments. He died in the faith and hope of the gospel.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

God is Love.—No. 2.

AN ADDRESS AT THE OHIO STATE CONFERENCE.

In the next place I would remark that the love of God shines forth amazingly in the formation of man, the nature of his existence, and his possible destiny, and the conditions under which he was placed. He was taken out of the dust. The rest of the animal creation had preceded him. Many of them had stronger arms, swifter limbs, more powerful teeth, finer ears, sharper eyes than man. They could go where he could not go, and live where he would die; but in the realm of mind man was supreme. They had strength without knowing how much and just intelligence enough to obey man. And so dominion over the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, the fish of the sea and every living thing that moveth upon the earth was given him. Of his special endowments I may mention love for the beautiful,—and beauties were presented to him. He had love for harmony of sound and melody, and he was endowed with vocal organs calculated to gratify that ennobling faculty, and hosts of feathered songsters to warble the Creator's praise. He had capacity for admiring the wonderful in nature, the heavens above and the earth beneath and the vastly deep,—and here infinite fields for observation and contemplation are furnished him. He had the conjugal faculty and a help-meet was provided for him. He had love of offspring,—love of home and many more faculties contributing to his comfort and happiness. He was endowed with keen perception and inquisitiveness, so that he can pry into the when and how and

WHY OF THINGS.

He can reason from cause to effect. He can store up all known facts, including his own experience and that of others till he has a veritable treasury of knowledge to draw upon. These endowments place man high above the rest of the animal creation. But while many of the above faculties in a small degree, are possessed by animals; but there is yet to be noticed in man a cluster of faculties that widen the distance between him and other creatures almost infinitely. I have reference to veneration, spirituality, that almost compels him to worship something,—i. e. unless the faculty has been bred out of him, or is starved to death, or shriveled up by disuse. He is endowed with intuition, power of faith, conscientiousness and benevolence. It is by virtue of these endowments man is responsible to his Creator, for his conduct. Because he is capable of believing, loving and obeying God, the proper use of those faculties was made the condition on which man could be lifted to a still higher and nobler state of existence!

Obedience implies that disobedience is possible. This is how character is formed,—doing the right and rejecting the wrong. So you see that fearfully and wonderfully as man was made, he was not to be wound up and run down like a perfect little

LIVING MACHINE.

That is precisely what man would have been if obliged to do just so, and nothing else. Under these circumstances he could have no character at all,—good or bad, except it were a mechanical character. He would have been an irresponsible thing, in whom the moral and religious could have no place. There could be nothing in him to approve, nothing that would make him a fit recipient of eternal life as the gift of God, through faith and obedience and patient continuance in well doing. Well doing could not apply to a being that was incapable of ill-doing. Overlooking this fact, people often say, "Why did God allow the introduction of evil?" They never cease wondering why man was not made

INCAPABLE OF SINNING?

Just as if ignorance and innocence constituted righteousness! Do you not see that the beasts that perish would all be righteous on that principle. It is he who decides for right and rejects the wrong that places himself where God can lift him up to a higher plane of existence, and wrap him all about with an immortal and incorruptible nature. When puzzled about the existence of evil you must remember it is a question of glory, honor and immortality; and, that it can only be obtained by a patient continuance in well doing. God made the terms. He decided to bestow his own divine ever-living existence upon those of the human family who believe, love and obey him. The gift of God is eternal life. He was under no obligation to offer this gift. It grew out of his love. It means redemption from death to which as a sinner he had been sentenced; it means unending life in glory, honor and blessedness. It is just what he needs. It is offered to him as a gift, because he is not able to purchase it, and is in no sense worthy of it; and, so here again we have the proof that "God is love!"

If any still deplore the existence of evil although the reward for well-doing is so great their consolation should be that the wickedness of the wicked shall come to an end, Psa. vii. 9; and that the dwelling place of the wicked shall not be, Psa. xxvii. 10, in all the universe of God, no matter what men say about it. God says there will be no place for the wicked to dwell in. And having made that discovery, I remind you that it is sinners that need saving; and that it is God's love for sinners, that we are now specially interested in; and that the first manifestation of his love for sinners was made when as yet there were but two sinners in all the world. It began in the very infancy of the race, for then it was, that the germ of all the gospel promises was given; the promise that the Seed of the woman should crush the head of the serpent, made to our parents before expelled from Paradise, was the promise of the Redeemer. Yes; an actual from death before the sentence of it was pronounced on them. Humanly speaking, it looks as if the great God was in a hurry to manifest his love by providing a Savior to rescue men from the power of the death sure to overtake them. But blessed be God, his children know their Father is never in a hurry, because they read in Col. i. 16, that all things,—those in the heavens, and those on the earth, the visible and the invisible have been created on account of him, and for him. He saw the end from the beginning. He was not taken by surprise by the introduction of sin and death. Let me call attention to the next notable manifestation of his love to man.

Man had sinned! He had been sentenced to eat in sorrow all the days of his life, and then return to dust as he was before he was man at all. But a tree in the midst of the garden yielded medicinal fruit that would prevent his death if he had access to it. Was he permitted to eat of it? No! Why not? God had said he should die; and he cannot lie. Besides that, and his love alone, methinks, would prevent it. From the testimony of the Spirit it is clear that if Adam had partaken of that tree as a sinner, he would have toiled on and on for ever,—sweat on and on for ever;—and sorrowed on and on for ever, out of harmony with his God, and afraid of him,—would have no communion with him, and be without one gleam of hope for a bright tomorrow; and denied even the very extinction of being threatened them. But what a crisis! Placing myself away back there, I shudder as I realize it! What will be done to prevent a world of immortal rebels? Something will be done, I feel sure of it, for God is love! The crisis passed, dear friends; something was done,—Thank God; and we read: "The Elohim said,—Behold man is become as one of us to know good and evil, and now, lest he put forth his hand, (that is, to prevent his putting forth his hand) and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever,—therefore, (to prevent such an awful catastrophe) the Elohim sent him forth from the garden of Eden to till the ground out of which he was taken. So they drove out the man and placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of and so prevented man from becoming immortal in sin. I should think no honest person believing the Bible could entertain the thought of immortality in sin while this Scripture forms part of God's will. I deem this evidence of God's love second only to the gift of his only Begotten Son. Let us praise him, and magnify his holy name, because he drove out the man. And it seems to me that all fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, who have, or have had loved ones who lived and died in disobedience should praise the holy name of God, [illegible] all such wind up their career in the Scores of Scriptures testify to this great truth.

GOD IS LOVE

This next manifestation of Jehovah's love for man took place by selecting a man some two thousand years after the first promise of a Redeemer in Eden, to found a race through whom that Redeemer should come. His name was Abram. God promised him and his seed the whole land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. After his faith and obedience had stood the extreme test of offering up the long promised and long delayed son through whom the Redeemer was to descend, God made a covenant with him and to perform it, that in his seed all the nations of the earth shall be blessed. Abraham's seed was surely to be the world's Redeemer, and Serpent-Bruiser. This covenant was confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, and some 860 years later when David was king over Abraham's descendants in the very [illegible] promise, God covenanted with him that he should have a Son who should be forever King on that throne; and that means that he would be an immortal Son. But I must not omit to say David was told that that ever-reigning king descended from him would have

GOD FOR HIS FATHER;

and marvelous to relate, this mysterious statement has not only been explained to us; but the veritable Son promised, has been identified for us, and pointed out to us, by Gabriel from heaven. In Luke i. we read that the Jewish maiden was informed that she should have a son by the overshadowing power of the Highest, who would give his Son the throne of his Father David; and should reign on it for ever. And that his name shall be Jesus. Moses, the prophets and the Psalms abound with sublime poetic pictures of the glorious reign of that Son made of a woman. And, unless they refer to the kingdom and King Gabriel speaks of, the Prophets and Psalms and Moses are of no value to us. But they are of value. Jesus himself said he was born to be a King of the Jews. He tramped over hill and dale to let his people know the long predicted kingdom was coming, and called upon them to repent in view of it. And to prove it will be the real throne and kingdom Gabriel promised we have assurance in Matt. xix. 28 where Jesus shows that when he sits on the throne of his glory, the 12 apostles will each have a throne and reign over a tribe of Israel. This is the kingdom Jesus said it was the Father's good pleasure to give; the same kingdom he had taught us to pray for, "thy kingdom come, thy will be done, (by means of this kingdom) in earth as it is in heaven." This is the kingdom we look for, the kingdom we are heirs of, the kingdom Jesus speaks of in Matt. xxv. 34 showing his descent from heaven with all the holy angels, taking his seat on the

and saying to all the redeemed Hosts, Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. All this is to take place here on earth; for Jesus says, The meek shall inherit the earth. And Daniel says the people of the saints "will take the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven, and possess it forever, even for ever and ever." And when we realize that Jehovah's oath to Moses, that all the earth shall be filled with his glory, is to be accomplished by means of this kingdom which the God of heaven is to set up upon the earth, and occupy all the territory, after breaking in pieces and consuming all the kingdoms of men, and stands for ever, yea, —when we realize all this, we are or should be prepared for a thousand other evidences of God's love that I cannot even enumerate. The whole creation as described by Moses once pronounced good has been marred by the sin of man, and with him cursed, disordered and defaced;—man, himself the cause, is almost universally alienated from the life of God through ignorance. But the God of heaven has informed us that the time is coming when a stupendous change will take place and the former things shall have passed away,—physically, morally and politically. A period of a thousand years has been set off, and called the Lord's day, and the mightiest of all revolutions I have hinted at, is the work before him when he comes again. It includes the abolition of all the kingdoms of this world as independent sovereignties, and the setting up of the kingdom of God to occupy all territory and stands for ever. The people all and the once-cursed earth yields its increase. Convulsions of nature, such as destructive tornadoes, floods, droughts, earthquakes and ravaging insects and mildew will no longer blight the husbandman's prospects and cause him to sweat his life away to get bread. Under the beneficent reign of God's King and his saints, men will obey the laws of life, and escape disease and sorrow; children will not die in infancy, men will live to the age of trees, and "the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." Universal peace will obtain, and men will learn war no more, for the Lord will be King over all the earth. I am just mentioning a few things among hundreds of others to see if some one will not see in this, abundant evidence that the God who would devise such a beneficent scheme for rebel man, and speak to us about it through holy men and by his own Son, in order to woo us to love him, is a God of love, —or rather, is love itself. I will just bring up one other evidence that has been only incidentally mentioned as yet. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life;" and commends his love to us in that way. We saw him sentenced to death; this is to redeem him from death conditionally. And

SINNER, IF YOU ARE HERE,

I must say to you, this is heaven's last argument. When God gives his Son to die, there is no greater gift in his treasury to demonstrate his exceeding love to man. We have reached the grand climax of God's love at last. God is about to deliver his Son up for us all.' And such a death of infamy. The infuriated mob clamors for his blood,—he is betrayed by a false friend; he is seized by his foes, deserted by his disciples and confronted by those thirsting for his blood!

It is night,—with indecent haste they begin the mock trial. False witnesses can fasten no crime upon him. And when the vile arts of flattery, intimidation and perjury fail, he is condemned to die for confessing that he is the Son of God.

It is high-day, and the scene of shame and sorrow begins. The victim is led forth. The cross on which he is to hang, is laid upon him although he was lacerated with cruel stripes,—doubtless he soon sank under the awful burden, for, one Simon was compelled to carry it. The living tide presses on toward the city gate,—the priest, the scribe, the publican, the Pharisee, soldiers, civilians, rich, poor are all in the throng, animated by the same thirst for blood, joining in bitter execrations,—and striving to fill with bitterness the cup of agony he has to drink. But no malediction falls from his lips; no bright-armed legions are called from above,—but as a sheep led to the slaughter, with painful step and slow, he climbs the rugged road. The goal of his course in the flesh is reached. He is nailed to the accursed tree; the spotless victim hangs on high, the power of darkness

SEEMS TO TRIUMPH.

The turbaned priests mock him in his bitter agony; the Pharisee smiles in scorn, the rabble revile and insult the dying victim,—

"Still from his lips no curse hath come,
His lofty eye hath looked no doom,
No earthquake's burst, no angel hand,
Curses the black, blaspheming band,"

No! Blessed Lamb of God; but from those pale lips, quivering with anguish, issue the kind compassionate words,—"Father, forgive them," and bleeding, suffering, dying, he said, "It is finished," bowed his head and died. This is where we must look for the full import of the words, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son." But why all this divine compassion, all this love,—all this woe? The answer is, "That whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." Must not the heart be harder than a rock that is not melted by such love? But I cannot conclude without a word to the household of faith. Beloved, do not doubt the love of God and Christ. We have been drawn by its cords. We have accepted the invitation to taste and see that the Lord is good. By faith and obedience, through God's favor we are what we are. It found us rebels, and not only made us friends, but sons and daughters. Grace devised a scheme of redemption, justice never would, and reason never could. We were wandering stars today, for whom the blackness of darkness would have been reserved for ever, had not God's love and favor constrained us. Have not every one of us been a Peter, forsaking the Lord, and been brought back to him by the same means? Why did we not BECOME DEMASES OR JUDASES?

Might we not take to ourselves the words of the Lord to Peter, "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not?" Let us realize our dependence upon God's favor now; remember that we have no claims upon God but what springs out of his favor. Let us bear in mind that prayer is the key to the treasury of God's grace, and we can use it always and everywhere. Let us not forget that he waits to be gracious, and assures us it is sufficient for us. What a loving Father we have! How we should adore him! How we should live to his praise! How dishonoring to be indifferent to the cause of his truth! How hateful to the Lord who bought us it must be when he threatened to vomit all such out? Passing for living members of his body when really dead. But the dear Lord makes a loving appeal, and knocks at the door of their heart for admittance that they may sup together again. How like him that laid down his life for the sheep that is! But we cannot deceive him. He is always walking amongst the churches. He knows all about us. The appearance of life when there is none reminds me of a ship in the Arctic Sea, which fell in with another for years frozen in the ice. She was boarded,—on looking into the cabin an appalling scene presented itself. 50 years had come and gone, but the crew were all there, in the exact form of flesh in life. The captain sat at the table pen in hand, and the log spread out before him and he had written of the suffering and death of all the rest. The visitors shouted with terror, but it awakened no one. They were corpses,—but looked just like live men. A dismal story,—but its horror is nothing in comparison with those in the Body of Christ who have a name to live but are virtually dead, and to whom the Lord will come as a thief. The signs of his coming fairly stream upon us daily. Let us set our houses in order,—watch and pray, and dwell upon the love of God and Christ and the exceeding riches stored up in him for those who endure to the end. And dear ones there is one qualification for readiness absolutely necessary—It is a hope of glory when Jesus comes. What is that? It is the hope of glory. An indwelling Christ is the pledge or ground of the hope of glory. If we have him we have all that is in him. He is the link that binds the-here-and-now to the hereafter. This places us on high and holy ground—brings us into the innermost sanctuary and near to the throne of God where he sees every one of us in the face of Jesus Christ!

CHRIST IN YOU,

WHAT BOUNDLESS LOVE!

Blessed Jesus! How we should long to see him. He said he would come and receive us, and he will! His word was never known to fail. And, unworthy though I am, and unfruitful, I am glad to tell you I want to see Jesus and be made like him. Yes; I want to see him, and this reminds me of an eminent French surgeon who told an American gentleman that his eyes were naturally good, and he could have given him sight by an operation 20 years ago, and it was barely possible he could yet, but it would cause much pain. "I can bear that," was the reply, "so you enable me to see." The surgeon operated and was gradually successful, first he had faint glimmerings of light, then more distinct vision. He was handed a rose; he had smelled roses but had never seen one before. He looked into the face of his dear wife, that he had never seen before and then the children he so often fondled, but whose beaming faces he had never seen. All at once he exclaimed, "O why have I not seen the man who gave me sight? Show me the doctor!" When he was pointed out to him, he embraced him with tears of gratitude and joy no pen could depict. And then I bethought me, I was once blind, you were blind, and you, and you, but now we see, thank God! We have been operated upon by the great Physician, and we can all see; at first we had faint glimmerings; a little more enabled us to see men as trees walking, and presently we could stand the full blaze of gospel light. O, we rejoiced with unspeakable joy then, and often since, but we have never seen the doctor yet! O are we ardently longing to see him and cast our crowns at his feet,—are we?

We have a blessed and glorious hope, we must keep our title clear over a rough and thorny road,—but we have vast privileges as children of God and must avail ourselves of them,—and if we do we have the satisfaction of knowing life parallel with the life of God—life as shoreless as eternity. And I think the redeemed will ever explore the depths and breadths of the grandest truth, That God is love! And as eternity rolls on, and they take new soundings on the sea of his love, they will still shout, O the depths of the riches,—and, as wave after wave rolls over them, they will sing unto him who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we could ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory by Christ Jesus, throughout endless ages; and methinks the grand chorus will echo and re-echo through the universe—God is love, and every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth, shall join the triumphant song. And tried ones, we shall hunger no more, nor thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on us, nor any heat, for the Lamb in the midst of the throne shall feed us and lead us to fountains of living water, and God shall wipe away all tears, for God is love! My last word, beloved in the Lord is, when the Good Physician operated upon us we were doubly afflicted—morally and physically—but after one successful operation we can afford to trust in him again. After being cleansed from sin, we only need him to change these vile bodies and fashion them like to his most glorious body. He has promised to do this when he comes,—if we are Ready! Let us, one and all prolong the apocalyptic welcome, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.—Amen.

Brother A. H. Zilmer has held some interesting meetings at Scrieville, this state, and is now at Roll, similarly engaged. He will be at Plymouth, next Sunday, March 12, and will speak morning and evening. Brother Neill, has been at Sisteraville, W. Va., with Brother Farley for a week, we do not yet know the result of his meetings. Bro. W. H. Wilson writes March 4, from Avery, Okla. The brethren in Cleveland, Ohio., are starting a two week's series of meetings. So we see the work is progressing some in various parts.

Our young folks at Plymouth have organized a Berean Band, have chosen officers, adopted rules to govern their meetings, and had their first devotional meeting last Sunday afternoon. This first meeting was highly entertaining and instructive, the subject being "Search the Scriptures." They meet every Sunday afternoon, and for next Sunday have chosen the subject of "Giving." The start they have made is most excellent, and we trust they will persevere and that others will join them and render aid. Sister Nettie Kauffman is the President.

Last Sunday was to have witnessed another demonstration by Russian workingmen, but it is postponed a week, pending an explanation of the meaning of the Czar's decree. It seems that at the last moment the Czar has agreed to receive an elected body of representatives from all parts of the empire, to devise a plan for the adjustment of the existing difficulties. The people want a representation that will give them a voice in the affairs of the government. The Czar and his advisers only want a statement from representatives, and consultation as to the way to act to satisfy the people, and yet give the representatives no voice in making laws. We will watch and see who wins in the contest.

Regarding affairs in the far east, for the past week the greatest battle of the war has been fought, and is still in progress. The Japanese have driven in both flanks of the Russian army, to within a few miles of Mukden. At the center there has been desperate fighting with little ground gained by either. Of course the flanks giving way necessarily imperils the whole army. Should they be driven back to Mukden, it is not likely they could defend the city. Hence it will be necessary for the Russians to retreat above Mukden before the Japs cut their line of railroad. Reports are rife that already they have waited too long, and that a strong body of Japanese are near Tie pass above Mukden, the only way for Kouropatkin to move his army back. Should this be true, it will not take many weeks for the war to end, as Russia cannot move troops fast enough to get another army on the ground to meet the Japs. Full details are not yet known, but enough is given out to indicate even from Russian sources, that Kouropatkin's army is in a most serious position.

Poetry.

Still, Still with Thee.

"When I awake, I am still with thee." Psa. cxxxix. 18.

Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh, and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am still with Thee!

Alone with Thee, amid the mystic shadows,
The solemn hush of nature newly born,—
Alone with Thee in breathless adoration,
In the calm dew, and freshness of the morn.

When sinks the soul, subdued by toil, to slumber,
Its closing eye looks up to Thee in prayer;
Sweet the repose beneath Thy wings o'ershadowing,
But sweeter still to wake and find Thee there.

So shall it be at last, in that bright morning
When the soul waketh, and death's shadows flee;
Oh, in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious thought, I am with Thee!

The Assembling of Ourselves Together.

The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews exhorts believers to "consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb. x: 24, 25. The apostle does not exhort to hold assemblies at intervals and for certain purposes, but merely cautions against the neglect of the assemblies that were being held, as some were doing. The members of the early Church had frequent gatherings for receiving instruction (Acts xi: 26), for exhortation (Heb. x: 25), and for observing the Lord's supper. 1. Cor. xi: 26. The chief object of these gatherings was mutual edification. 1. Cor. xiv: 26. True, here and there abuses crept in, but these were corrected, and thus the purpose as well as the proper conduct of those gatherings was duly set forth by the apostles.

The Church as the body of Christ is to be edified, built up. 1. Cor. xiv: 4; Eph. iv: 12; 1. Thess. v: 11. The apostle Paul exhorts to a following after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another. Rom. xiv: 19. We have not been left to guess what those things are, nor need we invent such for ourselves. The divine power has given us all things which pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. 2. Pet. i: 3.

The first essential toward such edification is charity, or love. "Knowledge puffeth up," says the apostle, "but charity (love) edifieth." 1. Cor. viii: 1. This is the love of God which is shed abroad in our hearts. Rom. v: 5. Where this disposition prevails, the believers will be, as at Jerusalem, "of one hearts and of one soul." Acts iv: 32. What high regard, what tender solicitude, for the other's well being. What willingness and readiness to help in every way possible.

One of the means toward such godly edifying is the Word of Christ which is to dwell in us richly in all wisdom. Col. iii: 16. This Word is read at the gathering of the brethren and sisters, appropriate remarks are made upon it, and lessons are drawn from it for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for that discipline which is in righteousness, so that the man of God may be completely fitted for every good work. 2. Tim. iii: 16, 17. The praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His wonderful light are held up in their proper light, and brought to bear on the conscience of the believers. As those virtues are understood and appreciated for their real value, they are apprehended and acquired by the members of the Church, and these so shine as lights in the world.

Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs enter into the conduct of these gatherings. Eph. v: 19. That these things pertain to the one body of believers is evident from Col. iii: 15, 16, where the apostle says, "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful." Then the apostle exhorts to "let the will of Christ dwell in you richly," ending with admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. The singing of truly spiritual hymns can and does contribute much to heighten the fervor of devotion. Even in David's time the singing of psalms and hymns constituted a considerable part of worship, and why should it not today? What are spiritual songs? They are songs in which there is a predominant spiritual element, and we can have nothing that is spiritual without the Spirit of God. Spiritual songs then are songs which are permeated with the Spirit of God, and are sung, as the apostle said, "with the spirit and with the understanding also." 1. Cor. xiv: 15. Right here let me call attention to a feature of singing which, though much in evidence, is not spiritual. There is a hymn which begins with,

> A charge to keep I have,
> A God to glorify,
> A never dying soul to save,
> And fit it for the sky.

In the same hymn it is also said

> Help me to watch and pray,
> And on thyself rely,
> Assured if I my trust betray,
> I shall forever die.

It is true, we have a charge to keep, and also a God to glorify; and so far the hymn in question is spiritual—it is in keeping with what the Spirit of God has revealed. But as to having a never dying soul to save, and fit it for the sky, no such sentiment is on record in the Word of God. Besides the hymn is self-contradictory. If we have a never dying soul, it surely is not in danger of dying as it can never die. If the soul needs to be saved, as the hymn says, it must be in danger of dying. The last stanza says, "If I my trust betray, I shall forever die." If the soul never dies it can not forever die. If it forever dies, it can not be never dying. In that case it would be proper to say, "An ever dying soul to save." The "soul" of which Scripture speaks, so far from being never dying or immortal, if it sinneth, shall surely die, Ez. xviii: 4, 20, and may be saved from death. Jas. v: 20. As to fitting a never dying soul for the sky, this is subversive of the uniform and unvarying tenor of Scripture teaching, "The meek shall inherit the earth," Ps. xxxvii: 11, 29; Prov. ii. 21, 22; x: 30; Matth. v: 5; Rev. v: 10. A song which thus palpably contradicts itself and the plain teaching of the Word of God can not be regarded as a spiritual song. It is quite as possible to create a wrong impression by singing what is not Scriptural and not true, as by preaching. While there should be a high degree of fervency of spirit in our singing (Rom. xii: 11), we should be careful to sing with understanding also. 1. Cor. xiv: 15.

Prayer is another act of worship, and was engaged in by the early believers, as may be seen by reference to 1. Cor. xi: 4, 5, 13, 17, 18. Prayer in the church, as well as prophesying (or speaking to the church, 1. Cor. xiv: 4), is not restricted to men, but may be engaged in by women as well.

As with singing, so also with prayer, Paul would engage in it with the spirit, and with the understanding as well. 1. Cor. xiv: 15, 16. We should not only watch unto prayer 1. Pet. iv: 7, but also in our prayers. Let it be borne in mind, prayer consists of more than merely informing the Father in heaven of all the things which ought to be done. Giving of thanks for favors received, should enter largely into our prayers. See 1. Tim. ii: 1. One has said that "to be thankful is to be thankful." When we recount all the blessings the kind Father's hand has bestowed upon us collectively and individually, blessings of a temporal nature, and spiritual blessings, what reasons for devout gratitude to Almighty God have we. We have heard prayers which seemed to have the purpose to inform the Lord of all the things which remain undone and which He ought to do. We should watch in our prayers to pray according to his will. 1 John v. 14, 15.

How can we pray according to his will, if we do not know what the will of the Lord is. Eph. v: 17. In our prayers we should not use vain repititions. Matth. vi: 7. Much speaking is not always a sign of deep devotion. And as to the Lord, He has no pleasure in repetitions; therefore they are vain, empty. Neither should we pray merely to be seen (heard) of men. We are not praying to men, but to our Father which is in heaven.

All should be quiet while prayer is being offered so that all may hear the petition, and then be led in their thoughts into the presence of God, and joining in the prayer, may say the Amen. 1. Cor. xiv: 16. When all have been led into the august presence of the Maker of heaven and earth, when the spiritual faculties have been awakened by fervent, spiritual prayer, the minds of the hearers will be in a receptive frame, so that the Word of God may effectually work in those who believe. However, let no one think that our prayers are to be limited to the gatherings of the Brotherhood. Appropriate petitions are to be sent to the Father in the home. But above all else, we should pray without ceasing. 1 Thess. v, 17. Pray always. Eph. vi 18. Be instant in prayer. Rom. xii: 12. Pray every where. 1. ii: 8. While it is not required that we should do nothing but say prayers at all times and in all places, we should ever and always be in a prayerful frame of mind, remembering with gratitude the Giver of the blessings we enjoy, and in humility our dependence upon Him for the things we constantly need.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed find renewal for one year. We cannot think of doing without it here where there are so few of us. Why don't some of the preaching brethren come here? I know we have the best country in the world, and all others are represented by churches, and we have a few of the One Faith here who would gladly welcome any who will come. Think about it, brethren and sisters, and come here to Spearfish, S. D., if you are wanting homes. Come and look for yourselves, or write and we will help you all we can.

Yours with love.

C. W. & S. E. PETTIGREW.

Dear brothers and sisters:

We are very much in need of some one that is able to preach the gospel. We have a small organization of believers here, and it is a good field in which to sow the good seed of the kingdom; and if we could get some one with ability to locate here that could partially support themselves we would respond liberally in proportion to our means to make up the deficiency, so that I do not think a worthy man would have cause of complaint. There is less prejudice against us as a church here than in any place I have been, and I have heard the truth sounded for over 50 years.

Can you not make our wants known to some of our preaching brethren that are not permanently located, and come and enjoy the finest climate in the world, the Rogue River Valley. My address is Central Point, Oregon.

Yours in hope,

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Dear brethren:

Am I too late for the love feast? Well, it is better late than never. I will say that we are still strong in the faith once delivered to the saints and that we are still striving for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus, still trying to run with patience the race set before us, still looking for the return of the Nobleman, God's dear Son from heaven. "Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" 1 John v. 5. In the 20th verse it says, "And we know that the Son of God is come and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, even his Son Jesus Christ." Some may reject this but I believe it all. It does not say "the son of Joseph," but it does say, "the Son of God." Let us not deny the Lord who bought us with his precious blood, for the Word tells us in Matt. x. 32–33, "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." It all looks plain if we will only step over the line.

Dear brothers and sisters, pray for us that we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. We are isolated in the blessed hope, and sometimes we long for the fellowship of kindred minds, but THE RESTITUTION and the Guide Book are consolations for which we are thankful, also the many good tracts sent us from time to time are also a great help to us. Finally we hope to meet you all in the kingdom, when God's will will be done in earth as it is done in heaven. Will that not be good enough for us? It will be for your sister in the household of faith.

Joy is love exulting. Peace is love in repose. Longsuffering is love untiring. Gentleness is love in society. Goodness is love in action. Faith is love on the battlefield. Meekness is love at school. Temperance is love in training. Love is the greatest thing that God can give us—for Himself is Love; and it is the greatest thing we can give to God, for it will give ourselves, and carry with it all that is ours.

...the many gospels which men are preaching today. There is the gospel of intellectualism, making its appeal to the intellect. There is the gospel for moralism, making its appeal to the ethical nature. There is the gospel of estheticism, making its appeal to artistic nature. There is the gospel of symbolism, making its appeal to the imagination. In their extreme forms each of these gospels exaggerates a part of man's nature which cannot be dominant without disaster; and even in the less extreme and more admirable forms they attempt to minister to the spiritual nature of man through some subordinate faculty, with a foreordination to failure. Man needs God. Dying man needs the living Christ. The intellect can bring us only thoughts about God, not to God. Morals can bring us only to determination for God, not to God. Symbolism, however exquisite and suitable, can bring us only to symbols, and not to the Deity symbolized. The gospel of Jesus brings ... In the central realm of spirit, the living Christ comes to us, demonstrates himself to us. Therefore, let the first thing be first. Christ within, and thoughts, feelings, volitions, thenceforth spring from a new life, while intellectalism, moralism, estheticism, and symbolism, cease to be dangerous.—Dr. Forsyth.

ARTICLES cannot be used unless the author is known. If you do not want your name signed to your article or poem, you can have it so, but you must send your real name to the office so we will know who you are. Otherwise your communication goes to the waste basket. We have a poem and two such articles now, and can not use them.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were stereotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 8 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

Resolution Considered.

The Church of God in Salem, Ohio, do fully appreciate the value of the resolution passed by the Central Washington Conference held at Wenatchee, Dec. 30 to Jan. 1, and published in THE RESTITUTION Feb. 8th. We believe that the resolution faithfully complied with, will add great value to THE RESTITUTION, and much help to the management.

We therefore fully endorse and sustain the said resolution of principles as set forth in the upper right hand corner of the paper shall be strictly adhered to, and all doctrine contrary to such be excluded from publication in THE RESTITUTION, no matter by whom written. We can then heartily commend the paper to the unconverted.

Obituary.

At Garwin, Iowa, Feb'y. 25, 1905, Elizabeth Jane Kennedy, beloved wife of C. F. Kennedy, aged 36 years, 11 months, 26 days, leaving a husband, three daughters and two sons to mourn her loss. In 1885 she united with the Welch Presbyterian Church at Columbus, Ohio. In 1889 she was married to C. F. Kennedy and moved to Garwin, Iowa.

She united with the Seventh Day Baptist Church, but soon afterward embraced the promises made to the fathers, and died in the glorious hope of the resurrection from the dead to immortality, and an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, where there shall be no more parting, no more crying.

She was unselfishly devoted to her family, and seemed only to desire their happiness. As we looked upon this little family, so much in need of a patient mother, a cry went up from our heart, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

We laid her away in the beautiful cemetery just east of Garwin, to wait the call of him who said "I am the resurrection and the life.

Words of comfort by the writer, from 1 Thess. iv. 18.

The Gospel of Life in the Book of Acts.

In a paper by the present writer in THE RESTITUTION some time ago, entitled "A Half Gospel," an extract was given from the Rainbow magazine, in which the sacrifices of Christ, with related subjects, was characterized as only a "half gospel;" the Millennial Reign, Personal Advent of Christ, etc., being by the mass of the religious world left out of their preaching. It was with a feeling of some satisfaction that the writer of the present paper found that later he had been afforded an opportunity of bearing a testimony to the friends of the Rainbow in its pages in favor of the "gospel of the kingdom of God." A paper entitled as the heading of this had appeared in the Rainbow treating on the four instances of the occurrence of the term "life" in Acts iii. 14, 15; v. 20; xi. 18; xiii. 46, 48. A letter to the Editor consisting of some remarks on the heading of said paper fortunately found insertion. This testimony was followed by two criticisms, one by the editor (J. B. Rotherham, who had succeeded to the editorship on the death of Dr. Leash, and one by a contributor. Feeling confident that his testimony was not invalidated by the criticisms alluded to, the writer has copied the entire correspondence as an article for THE RESTITUTION. He asks the reader to bear in mind the important distinction between good news of any kind and THE gospel of the New Testament. He trusts the editor will excuse the length of the same as it will not suffer condensation.

LETTER FROM JAMES CAMERON TO EDITOR OF RAINBOW.

Dear Sir:

I do not for one moment suppose that the writer of the article in Rainbow for February with the above heading had any intention to misuse the phrase "The gospel" in penning the words "The gospel of life" etc. Everlasting life in the strictly literal sense, is, in one aspect, the central blessing provided in the mercy of God for our dying race. Forfeited through disobedience by the first human pair, and that forfeiture inherited by their descendants, the mere possibility of attaining to everlasting life becomes all-important, although a false philosophy has blinded thousands of the best minds to its true value.

No one knowing the preciousness of life eternal would dream of ignoring the fact that the divine provision of it for any of our race is glad tidings in the most literal sense of that term. In our days, however, when the gospel is grossly misunderstood, and the habit of reading into the language of the Bible ideas that do not find definite expression in its pages, it is sometimes needful to give a word of caution. I therefore venture to offer one or two remarks, which shall be as brief as possible.

What struck me on reading the above heading, was the fact that the phrase "The gospel of life" does not occur in the Scriptures. "Gospel" with the definite article "the" prefixed is found in numerous places; but is never once applied to life, either everlasting or temporary. The first use of the phrase "the gospel" was to describe the message publicly proclaimed by our Lord to the people of Israel. It was variously termed "the gospel of the kingdom," with a reference to "the kingdom of God," or "of heaven." The belief of this gospel, on the part of Gentiles as well as Jews throughout the subsequent mission of the apostles sent by our Lord was the essential condition of deliverance from sin and from death; and by necessary consequence, of attaining to everlasting life. "This gospel of the kingdom," said our Lord, "shall be preached in all the world." "Go ye, (my apostles), and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark xvi. 15.

This gospel consequently became the prominent subject of apostolic proclamation. "When they (the Samaritans) believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 12. It is sometimes termed "the gospel of the glory of Christ;" literal rendering of 2 Cor. iv. 4; sometimes the gospel of the Christ Greek of Rom. i. 16; xv. 19, 29; 1 Cor. ix. 12, etc. Sometimes "the gospel of Christ;" sometimes more simply still, but not less certainly, "The gospel." The gospel of the Christ may import (1) the gospel preached by Christ, or (2) the gospel concerning the Christ; which latter term, the Christ, Mr. Rotherham in the article under consideration, properly enough describes as "the Anointed Monarch of the world;" although, strictly speaking, "the Anointed" relates to the Hebrew monarchy to which, however, shall be appended the nations of the world. Take it either way, the primary and prominent element of "the gospel" of Christ is that kingdom which Jehovah, the great King of all the earth, has purposed to set up in the hands of his delegated Messiah when "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom; under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." Dan. vii. 2.

The name of Jesus Christ, the name "above every name" conferred on him by his Father on account of his obedience as far as to death, "even the death of the cross," and vindicated by his resurrection from the dead—became necessarily connected with the proclamation of his coming kingdom. This is seen in the first apostolic preaching on the day of Pentecost, where the crucified one is declared to have been received up to sit on David's throne. But surely there is no reason why such points as sacrifice and resurrection should be allowed, as in fact they have been allowed, to usurp the place of the "gospel of the kingdom." The gospel of sacrifice, the gospel of resurrection, the gospel of justification, etc. might severally find admirers, being in a certain sense "glad tidings." But I fail to see Scripture warrant for such usage. So as regards the gospel of life; as a blessing life is glad tidings, as all blessings are; but this a different matter from the gospel of the kingdom, which is definite and unique in relation to all other divine blessings. Edinburgh, March 8, 1885.

THE EDITOR REMARKS ON THE ABOVE.

The watchful care of our esteemed correspondent is much valued, and his concern to have the kingdom of God kept in its central place in the gospel abundantly warranted, especially in view of the almost universal habit on the part of public teachers to ignore altogether that phase of the good tidings, or else of forcing down into the present what can only receive its accomplishment in the future. Notwithstanding this it may be questioned whether our brother has not rather overstated his case in one or two ways which need not be particularized just now. As regards the title "gospel of life," etc. to which he objects, his own frank admission that the revelation of eternal life through the Messiah is in fact good news, narrows the question to a single point, which is this: Is gospel in the New Testament a common term applicable to all sorts of good news, or is it so strictly appropriated, not only to the tidings of redemption in general, but to the tidings of the kingdom in particular, that it is misleading, or (for any less potent reason) inexpedient to attach it to anything else? Now we are persuaded that our dear brother knows that the Greek word for gospel is by no means a sacred or exclusively appropriated word, that it was a word in common use in apostolic days to denote glad tidings of any kind; and that the apostle Paul uses a cognate verb to gospelize or evangelize all other good news than that of the kingdom, namely, in 1 Thes. iii. 6. of the faith, love and affection of his young converts of Thessalonica. We would rather remind him that our Lord himself, on occasion of the visit of the rich ruler, practically identifies the gospel of life and the gospel of the kingdom, for in that context "entering into life" and "entering into the kingdom," are recorded as synonymous. For these special reasons, then, as well as on the broad ground that words are but stepping stones to things, it is respectfully submitted that the inclusion of eternal life in the embrace of the divine good news to man is abundantly warranted.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR BY W. LAING.

Dear Sir:

The observations in your correspondence columns this month regarding the phrase "the gospel of life," leads me to express through the Rainbow a wish I have often felt, viz. that the Revised New Testament had substituted glad tidings or good news for gospel in all its occurrences. The cause of this desire on my part arises from the fact that the old word "gospel" which we are all aware means "glad tidings" of any kind, has come to have a technical signification attached to it, in such a way that it of itself without any regimen attached to it, indicates the subject to which it relates. The different theological parties differ as to what matters gospel properly relates to. For example, the question "What is the gospel?" is answered differently by different parties. One class limits its application to the use made of it by the apostle in 1 Cor. xv. 1-4, "I declare unto you the gospel.....how that Christ died for our sins.....and that he was buried, and that he rose again, etc. Maintain that whatever else may be announced in Scripture as true or gladsome—that, and that alone is the gospel. Another class adverting to the fact that Jesus went about preaching "the gospel of the kingdom" (Matt. iv. 23) and foretold that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world (Matt. xxiv. 16) contend that it is incorrect and unscriptural to apply the word gospel with the definite article prefixed, to any other news whatever. And yet another maintains that "the gospel," even the gospel of the kingdom is neither more nor less than this, the kingdom of God is at hand; only "this and nothing more" is embraced in the gospel that was to be preached among all nations for the conversion and salvation of sinners.

Now sir, it seems to me that if for the term "gospel" as it occurs in Scripture we always had our word glad tidings the limitations just referred to would pass away; and the question, What is the gospel? being resolved into What "is the glad tidings"? would call forth the inquiry, glad tidings concerning what? And the announcement of John, the kingdom of God is at hand, repent and believe the glad tidings, would appear in its native simplicity, so would the phrase the glad tidings of or concerning the kingdom; the glad tidings how that Christ died for our sins, etc. !

It is true that in some instances the terms "the gospel" occur without mention of the subject related to but the substitution of the terms "the glad tidings" would render the language no more indefinite than it already is, for the one phrase is the equivalent of the other; and the proper application of the language "the glad tidings" in such a connection as "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," would be ascertained from what the apostles did preach, as recorded in the book of the Acts, and alluded in their letters to the churches. A careful reading of these sacred records would show that the joyful message which the ambassadors of the Messiah were sent forth to proclaim to the world related to his coming kingdom and glory, and the forgiveness of sins, and life everlasting through faith in his name. So I think Paul viewed the matter when he spoke of himself as an apostle "separated into the glad tidings of God.....concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. i. 1-3. W. Laing. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

Poetry.

The Gifted.

I am glad for the gracious gifted souls
That brighten the world today,
For I catch the shine of their light sublime
As I journey along life's way.
The painter's brush that is steeped in flame,
And the sculptor's subtle art,
The poet's strain and the sweet refrain
Of the singer, thrill my heart.

But I turn with joy to the hallowed soul
With a gift of love divine
And a tenderness, where a tender grace
Doth kindly purpose shine.
For the choicest gift that heaven bestows
On its favored ones alone,
Is a tender heart that can feel the smart
Of a sorrow not its own.

Glad Tidings.

"For the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off; even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Act ii: 39. This declaration was made by Peter to those who had been witnesses of the miracles and outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. Our Savior had been taken and subjected to a mock trial by his accusers, and condemned as a malefactor, and executed on a Roman cross. Was taken down from the cross by the rich man of Arimathea, and buried in his own new tomb; and had on the third morning risen again from the dead, and had shown himself to his disciples, and was seen of others, and of above five hundred at one time.

Forty days had passed during which time he went out and in among his disciples, preaching the Kingdom of God, until the day that he was taken up into heaven. Having given commandment to them that they should tarry in Jerusalem to await the descent and baptism of the Holy Spirit. When as yet the excitement caused by the events of that day was fresh in the minds of all who had witnessed these things, and representatives of all nations still remained at Jerusalem, and were anxiously questioning to know the issue of this day's happenings, Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit stood up, and rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and showed this occasion to be a fulfillment of God's purpose to unfold his will concerning the great salvation offered from henceforth, not alone to Israel; "but to them also afar off even to as many as the Lord our God shall call." Three thousand had asked the way of life and recieved the one divine answer, and had obeyed the one divine mould of doctrine, and were thus made heirs to a common inheritance according to the promises of God. Thus it had come to pass "That whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." And the "Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved." Then follows Peter's discourse recorded in Acts iii, upon the occasion of healing the man who was lame from his birth. In which he boldly charges the men of Israel with having killed the Prince of Life, when Pilate was determined to let him go. But he declares God raised him again from the dead, and that it was by faith in his name that this man was made whole. And since they had done it ignorantly, as did also their rulers, Peter calls upon them to repent and be converted, that their sins might be blotted out when the times of refreshing should come from the presence of the Lord.

At which time God would again send Jesus, "whom the heavens must retain until the times of Restitution." Thus we see with what exactness and harmony the things concerning the name of the Lord Jesus, and the things concerning the kingdom of heaven agree and constitute the glad tidings, proclaimed for the obedience of faith to both Jew and Gentile. To believe on the Lord Jesus is to believe that God has raised him from the dead, and made him both Lord and Christ, and hath exalted him to his own right hand in the heavens, and given him power to remit sins, and give repentance to all that call upon God through him, being ordained a priest forever. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way that he hath consecrated for us through the vail, that is to say his flesh, and having an high priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised."

To believe on the Lord Jesus Christ is to believe also that "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall rule over the house of Jacob forever," and of his kingdom there shall be no end. And whatever things beside that relate to that kingdom, are glad tidings to his saints. Whatever remains to be fulfilled relating to man's redemption any deliverance from sin and death, requires the return and personal presence of God's Anointed One, and is in the highest sense Glad Tidings, and is essential to be believed, and is preeminently our ground of hope. Does it speak of the resurrection from among the dead? Our salvation is nought without this event. Does it relate the change of mortality to immortality? Who does not feel the need and cry out in the anguish of his spirit, "Who shall deliver me from this dead body?" Is it the promise to fill the earth with the glory of God, and to cause peace to flow as a river, and violence to cease unto the ends of the earth? This is also part of the gospel and was written for our consolation, and to cause our hearts to respond to the love of God our Heavenly Father.

COVENANTS OF PROMISE TO ABRAHAM.

'In thee (Abraham) shall all nations be blest." Gal. iii. 8. Paul declares the above to be the gospel preached before unto Abraham. We are often asked the question, Are not the nations blessed through Abraham's seed today, and has not God been blessing them since Christ made his first advent? Permit me to give you the testimony of the Apostle James, Acts xv. 14-17, "Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof and will set it up; that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." This Scripture declares that God is visiting the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. As it is written, after this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, etc. After what? After taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name. What then? I (Christ) [Abraham's Seed] will return and build again the tabernacle of David, etc. Nowhere in the Bible does it say that in this Gentile age men and women are being prepared for heaven. Peter in Acts iii. 19-21, says, "Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." The heaven must retain Christ until the time of the restitution of all things; etc. Let me quote farther from Matt. xix. 27, 28, "Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold we have forsaken all and followed thee; what shall we receive therefore? And Jesus said unto them, verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, or restitution, when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." The reward for following Christ is (to the apostles) to be received "in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory." Matt. xxv. 31 tells when he shall sit on his throne, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Then will the apostles sit upon thrones and the times of regeneration begin. Then will David's tabernacle be built again and his throne be restored. What strange doctrine this is that [illegible] shall yet occupy David's throne and rule over the nations of the earth. It is indeed strange to many, yet the angel said to Mary, the mother of Jesus, Luke i. 32, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Where was David's throne? I answer not in heaven but on earth. Christ is now on his Father's throne. See Rev. iii. 21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Do not the above Scriptures prove that Christ will remain in heaven until the time of rebuilding, or the restitution of all things, of regeneration and the judging of the nations shall begin? Is not this in connection with the restoring of the kingdom to Israel? In Acts i. 3, we read, "To whom he showed himself after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God."

Now notice the request the apostles made of him. 6th verse, "When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" His answer was, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power." Their request was that the kingdom be restored at that time. His answer was that it was not for them to know the times or the seasons of the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. Under the power of Holy Spirit Peter in Acts ii. 30 spoke of this same promise, "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him (David) that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his (David's) throne." Peter here quotes from Psa. cxxxii. 11, and applies it to Christ, so we see it could not have been Solomon. Further, let me quote from Paul in Acts xiii. 34, "And as concerning that he raised him (Christ) up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, and will give you (Christ) the sure mercies of David." Are the sure mercies of David here spoken of those things belonging to the former kingdom of Israel? We have seen in Acts ii. 30, that God raised Christ up to sit on David's throne; and in Acts xiii. we read that he was raised up to receive the sure mercies of David, the holy or just things. You must remember that David died without having received the promises. Heb. xi. 39, "And these all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise." David is among this number for Acts ii. 34, says, "For David is not ascended into the heavens."

Thus far I have quoted from the New Testament, as many think that these truths are found only in the Old Testament and are therefore not binding, believing as they do that it is as an old almanac which is out of date, and therefore no good. But I wish now to show you that it is some good, as the root of the whole matter is found there. Please turn to 2 Sam. vii. 12-18, I will not quote these verses in full so you should read. "And when thy (David's) days be fulfilled; and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers (that is die) I will set up thy seed after thee, and I will establish his kingdom (David's kingdom, the kingdom of Israel or the kingdom of God.) He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever." Now what does this mean but "to build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down; and build again the ruins thereof, and set it up." Acts xv. 11. When Christ shall have built it up, it will be an everlasting habitation. But my mercy shall not depart away from him (David's seed) as I took it from Saul whom I put away before thee." "And thine house and thine kingdom shall be established forever before thee: thy throne shall be established forever." You may contend that this was fulfilled in Solomon and therefore [illegible] that this [illegible] also notice that Solomon reigned or sat upon the throne of Israel before David's death. 1 Kings ii. 4. When the prophet Nathan spoke unto David, 2 Sam. vii. 2-17 notice how David rejoined, "Who am I, O Lord God? And what is my house that I have brought me hitherto? But thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come." Read the remainder of this chapter and compare it with 1 Kings ii. The entire chapter should be read.

In this article on the covenants of promise we have tried to show you that they are intimately connected with the gospel that Christ preached and commanded his followers to preach, viz. the gospel of the kingdom of God, and that the gospel related to the seed of Abraham and of David. It comprehends not only the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, but his reigning on the throne of his father David and over the nations of the earth. Then peace shall be universal and all shall know the Lord and obey him because he rules justly. Then thank God the poor shall be judged by a righteous Judge. Isa. ix. 6, 7, speaks of his reign, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever." Soon may it be.—Selected by Request.

SUFFERING WITH CHRIST.

"If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also be glorified together." So to be glorified with Christ depends upon our suffering with him now. No cross, no crown. If we do not strive to be like Jesus in our every day life now, we will never be like him hereafter. How can we be like him now? Study him out as an example, place our feet in his footsteps. 1. Pet. ii; 21-25; illustrates this: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps. When he was reviled, he reviled not again."

It brings no end of trouble to preach the sacred truths which brought Jesus to the cross, and we may rest assured that if we follow in his steps we will surely have to carry a daily cross. Jesus said: "Take up thy cross and follow me." In 2. Tim. 3-12 we read: "That all that will live godly in Christ shall suffer persecution." Peter says: "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation." To follow Christ we will have to proclaim him as the Son of God, the Christ, the King of Israel. Jesus suffered because of his confession before Pilate when Pilate asked him the question, Art thou the King of the Jews? He answered that was the object of his birth. Then they clamored for his death. So it is with those who strive to walk after the spirit. Many will be offended, and hate you for your religion. That brings in the saying "I am killed all the day long for thy sake." If we follow Jesus, how will it end? We read: "If we suffer with him we shall reign with him, for we know that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." May we all be found worthy to be led to those living fountains of water, and shall wipe away all tears; then all our tears and sorrows will be over. Blessed be the King of Israel, Hosanna in the highest. Amen.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

LET EVERY MAN PROVE HIS OWN WORK.

How prove it? By the Word of God. If it stands the test it will be accepted of God. We are commanded to work. Paul says, "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work neither should they eat. Eph. iv. 28. Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the things which are good, that he may have to give to him that needeth. This shows that if we are able we should not be idle. 2 Chron. xxxi. 21. Speaking of Hezekiah it says, And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law and in the commandments to seek his God, he did it with all his heart and prospered. This is how our work must be done, if we would prosper, we must have our heart in the work. And the main thought in our daily work should be, that we may be able to do more work for the Master. Prov. xvi. 3. Commit thy work unto the Lord and thy thoughts shall be established. James ii. 17. Even so faith if it hath not works is dead, being alone. We should not only labor with our hands for the things of this life, for they all perish, but for things eternal. Jesus said in John xix. 4, I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work. Let us take this to ourselves and work while it is day. We all have some work we can do. Eph. iv. 11. And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. Phil. ii. 12. Wherefore my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

MARY KNOWLES.

GAL. VI. 4.

Let every man prove his own work. How can we prove our work? By what standard can we measure ourselves? Examine yourselves if ye be in the faith; prove your ownselves by the measure of the Word of God. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. As many as are led by the Spirit, they are the sons of God. God has given us this measure, the Word of truth, to teach us that by its precepts we can live soberly, righteously and godly in this world, and that his Son, which he sent into the world is our perfect example, he came to do his Father's work, he proved by his work that he was of God; so we must not be just hearers of the Word, but doers. Be ye doers of the Word, not hearers only, deceiving your ownselves. Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the Word, this man shall be blessed in his deeds. If any man among you seems to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. So to prove our own work it must be according to what God requires, not work without faith, or faith without work. But have our work made perfect by faith.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Being made free from sin and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness. We find in Eph: v. 9, that the fruit of the Spirit is all goodness and righteousness and truth, which embraces all the virtues spoken of in Gal. v. 22, 23, namely love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Phil. i. 9, 10, 11. Paul says, And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgments, that ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be sincere without offence till the day of Christ, being filled with the fruits of righteousness which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. In Rom. vi. 11, 12, 13, Paul says, Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin. And in the 23rd verse, The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

MRS. S. CRAWFORD.

PHIL. II. 13.

For it is God which worketh in us when we have believed the Word and obeyed it and have been baptized. Then it is that God will help us, for we have accepted him and he can work in us. In John v. 19 we read the Son can do nothing without the Father, nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father do, for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son. God set the example for the Son and the Son for us, and if we love him and obey him he will work in us, and give us the right spirit to do all things pleasing to God.

MRS. M. COLE.

The Prayer-meeting Habit.

Despite the fact that there have been men who have abused the confidence inspired by the "prayer-meeting habit," it is still time that it is accepted as a fairly safe criterion of a man's character. The man who goes regularly to prayer-meeting during the dog days is seldom a hypocrite or scamp. Worldly men recognize this fact, and the Interior instances some recent cases. A large corporation asked a correspondent in the country to recommend to them a man for a lucrative and very responsible position. The reply was, "A young man passes by my house every Wednesday evening on his way to prayer-meeting at precisely a quarter to eight. I like the looks of that. Shall I enquire further about him?" The result of which was a position for life at a large salary. Again, a city pastor was in a large establishment of the wholesale section of a city, "What?" said the superintendent, "have I any of your men here?" The pastor looked around, and said, "I see six." "Are any of them in the Sunday school?" "Yes, four." "How many of them are Christian Endeavorers?" "Two." "Do any of them go to prayer-meeting?" "One." The next morning that one was called into the office and sent an errand of special responsibility. Upon his return having satisfactorily discharged his duty, he was told to prepare to take charge of the interests of the firm in a neighboring State. "I cannot afford to break up my new home," was his frank reply. "I think you can," was "since your salary will be quadrupled." All this is exactly in the line with the spirit of religion; its law is, "not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The young man is free to go as he wills; if he chooses the prayer-meeting from amid all the attractions that press upon him, he reveals a strength of character that any firm must respect.—Christian Evangelist.

Nothing will take the sunshine out of a little fellow's sky so quickly as a harsh word from father. Do not speak it. Cheer: lift up; keep the love and confidence of the young folks. There will surely come a day when you will be thankful that you have done so.

"Refinement is more a spirit than accomplishment. All the books of etiquette that have been written can not make a person refined. True refinement springs from a gentle, unselfish heart. Without a fine spirit a refined life is impossible."

The Battle of Mukden.

Mukden is the capital of Manchuria. The city is walled, and the Russians fortified it, and made the place a base for supplies for their vast army. Since they were driven from Newchwang, Liaoyang, and further south, they have strengthened their position below Mukden, deeming it impossible for Japan to bring up to that point sufficient force to dislodge them. They seemed to aim to hold the Japanese back from further advance until they would have sufficient aid from home, be able to take the offensive when the spring opened, and force the armies of Japan back to the sea. With their ships then coming in sufficient force to defeat Togo, they would be able to prevent further Japanese reinforcements, and so have the making of peace in their own hands.

The story of the battle of Mukden, as it will go down in history, will tell how terribly mistaken was the Russian estimate of their foes.

General Oyama, the commander-in-chief of the Japanese forces, has shown that he is able to conduct the largest body of fighting men that modern history tells of, along one hundred miles of front, and have each division do at the right time the task assigned it, never weakening, or missing a cog in the great machine of which it was a part.

One writer in analyzing this mighty battle says, "Nodzu gripped Kouropatkin's army and held its shoulders in a vise, while Kuroki broke its back, and Nogi crushed its head." So he tells the story of the battle of Mukden.

Oyama had what Kouropatkin seems to have lacked—generals. There was Oku with his men, whom neither bursting ground mines nor electrically charged barb-wire entanglements could stop as they swept the Russians from the fort-crowned slopes of Nanshan heights. And Nodzu who with his men won the redoubts in front of Liaoyang. General Kuroki, from the commencement of the war, has plowed with fierce battle the Manchurian landscape from the Yalu to the Hun. Added to these there is Nogi, the man who inch by inch, fought his way, blasting and tunneling, until fifty of the strongest forts ever constructed were captured, and Port Arthur fell. The Japanese commander set this man the task of turning the Russian right flank. He entered for his battle ground a treeless plain, twenty miles long and seven miles wide, and there he received without shelter, the pick of the Russian army, Kaulbars and his men. Six days and six nights did Nogi cling to that frozen expanse of earth. Inch by inch extending his lines. The frozen ground could not be used, and behind piled up heaps of their own dead comrades these veterans fought. They reduced Russian divisions to brigades, then to regiments, and these to companies, then swept the remnant from the field, shouting "Out of the way for us. We are Nogi's men. We are from Port Arthur."

In front, and on the other flank, was the same determined, irresistible onslaught. They just would not be denied. If they only gained a foot a day they held that and made it two the next. Their supplies could not be kept up, so they went without food, fighting for eighteen days. It never was in the power of the Russian soldiers to keep them back.

After burning immense quantities of stores, Kouropatkin with the remnant of his shattered forces endeavored to retreat through Mukden and reach Tie pass. Detachments of Japanese have cut the railroads and are hindering his retirement in every way. His army of 350,000 to 400,000 men is well nigh crushed. He may succeed in carrying a fourth of them through to safety. He has tendered his resignation as commander to the Czar, and it is sure to be accepted. On March 12, 1904, Gen. Kouropatkin said that within a year he would drive Japan's forces from Manchuria and Corea, overrun their little islands, and if he had his way the terms of peace would be signed in Tokio. This great man has failed with all the forces it was possible for the Russian empire to dispatch to his assistance, to win one single battle, and now attempts the task was too much for him.

The Battle of Mukden will be set down at the head of the column as the greatest battle in the history of war. What effect it will have toward making peace is yet to be seen. One thing is sure, there will be no more great battles this year, even if hostilities continue.

The internal troubles in Russia continue about as last week. In some of the provinces paid agents of the government are said to be stirring up anti-Jewish feeling, to attract attention from other things.

"Christ's Righteousness."

It is remarkable how easy it is to forget, and depart from the simplicity of the gospel. "When we are babes in Christ, receiving in meekness the engrafted Word the simplicity of the truth is refreshing to us; but when we become exalted in our own estimation, and imagine ourselves to great and high to look at the simplicity of God's plan of salvation, what was once thankfully received as wholesome and satisfying truth becomes distasteful and smells of Papal smoke, it is well to re-read the lessons we learned in our simplicity. We were acquainted with an old gentleman, who was a great temperance worker. He had passed through great trials in business life, having been reduced from plenty to poverty to such an extent that he had not so much as a table for himself and family to eat their scanty meal from, being compelled to use an old tea tray. Subsequently prosperity began, when the children began to be proud and to put on style; so much so, that the old gentleman was fearful of hard times again. As a means of checking the pride and growing extravagance of the family, he would fetch out the old tea tray, and call the attention of the family to it. This is a good example in many ways. We may fetch out the old tea tray often to advantage; and it would prevent us from taunting those who in their simplicity talk like they used to when they learned the truth in its simplicity. The question of the righteousness of Christ, and its relation to us is one of those simple things that some have forgotten: "Seek first, said Jesus 'the kingdom of God.'" To seek a certain thing first implies that there is something else to be sought afterward; we may then enquire: What next shall we seek? To this the great Teacher replies, "And God's righteousness!" What is that? It is that robe of righteousness he has provided for the covering of those who have sought the kingdom of God and found it. And it is beautifully expressed in Isa. xli. 10, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee,—yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." It is God's sin-covering, Psa. xxxii. 1, 2, the robe made white in the blood of the Lamb, Rev. vii. 14; xix. 8; the righteousness of God witnessed by the Law and the Prophets, through belief of Jesus Christ, for all and upon all believing the gospel." Rom. i. 15, 16; iii. 21, 22.

"The righteousness of God is the redemption which is in Christ Jesus, which he has appointed for those who believe the gospel of the kingdom. He has sent him forth as a blood-sprinkled mercy-seat, through faith in which they have received remission of past sins, and are thus invested with the wedding garment. Matt. xxii. 11-14. Those who are not covered with the robe of righteousness which God has constructed; or, being covered, do not keep their garments,—that is, preserve their robes from defilment—are said in Scripture to walk naked. Rev. xvii. 15; iii. 17, 18. Believers and unbelievers who have not put on the robe of God's righteousness, are clothed in filthy rags of scarlet and crimson dye, and may say with Israel, as at present circumstanced, "We are all unclean, and all our righteousness are as filthy rags. They are not covered with the garments of salvation, and having no clothing, but things of their own invention, are naked before God and certain, if they remain so, to be put to shame at the coming of his King.

"Jesus the Anointed King of Israel is the righteousness of those who, believing the gospel of the kingdom and its mystery, put him on. Gal. iii. 27. Hence in regard to them he is styled, "Jehovah our Righteousness." Jer. xxiii. 6. "When a believer puts him on, he is said to be in him, and when in him to be constituted the righteousness of God in him." Col. v. 21. We should seek, then in the first place, the Word of the kingdom, Matt. x. 8; xxiii. 13-15, and other [illegible] that, seek to be constituted [illegible] ousness of God is its Kingdom [illegible] things shall be added to you." Matt. vi. 33. This is the order laid down by Jesus, an order which can not be improved.

The Russian Defeat a Blow to Turkey.

While we watch the conflict between Japan and Russia, we must remember that all this is a mere incident in the real struggle that has been going on for years, and will go on between the two rivals Britain and Russia. When England was fighting in South Africa, Russia did not fail to take full advantage of the turmoil into which the British Empire was plunged, to further her schemes in Asia, and the Far East. This war with Japan is but one of the moves being made on the chess board of nations with the view of checking the great Northern power. In the Chicago Tribune is an article written by "Ex-Attache," which gives a very full idea of how matters are progressing, and we give so much of it as bears on the question, that our readers may be informed of what is happening, and is likely to occur in the near future.

Abdul Hamid has fallen upon evil days. Russia's disasters in Manchuria and her internal disturbances are filling his heart with apprehension. For he realizes that Ozardom will be compelled, by popular sentiment, to seek reparation in the Balkans and in Asia Minor for the injury sustained by its prestige in the far east, and that it has now no longer the power, nor yet the desire, to hold in leash the insurgent activity of Bulgaria, of Macedonia, and in his other Christian dependencies. Besides this there is so much analogy, from a western point of view, between the essentially oriental forms of government of Russia and of Turkey that the sound of the waves of popular revolt now sweeping over the Muscovite empire re-echo through the length and breadth of the padisha's dominions—nowhere more loudly nor more ominously than around the walls of his palace of Yildiz kiosque, at Constantinople. Although Russia has always been looked upon as the hereditary foe of the Turk, yet there is today no one who is more anxious for the success of her arms in Manchuria and for the settlement of all her troubles near home than Abdul Hamid.

It is England that has supplanted Russia as the object of his principal dread. It is in Great Britain that he sees the gravest peril, if not to the Ottoman empire, at any rate to his dynasty, and he appreciates the fact that Russia's misfortunes constitute England's opportunity, and that czardom, overwhelmed with disasters, military as well as domestic, becomes with every new catastrophe less capable of acting as an obstacle to Great Britain's designs.

Lord Curzon is the instrument of these designs. Some credit him with being the originator thereof. But I should be far more inclined to ascribe their conception to that wonderful department at Calcutta which is the Indian counterpart of the foreign office in London, and of which Sir Mortimer Durand, now British ambassador to the United States, was for several years the chief. This belief is strengthened by the fact that it is especially since Lord Lansdowne became secretary of state for foreign affairs that the oriental policy of the English government has become more active and more aggressive.

Lord Lansdowne served for a term as viceroy of India, and while there became profoundly interested in the work of the foreign department at Calcutta, and imbued with a great admiration for its officials, men who are the pick of the Indian civil service. Moreover, he identified himself with the aims and the ideals of this department, and since he has been foreign secretary has done everything in his power to promote their development and to foster their execution. In fact, today the foreign departments of London and Calcutta are working together in the most perfect harmony, with immense advantage to English interests, and it is pretty well known in well informed circles that the member of the cabinet to whom Lord Curzon looks for support at home is Lord Lansdowne rather than St. John Broderick, the secretary of state for India.

Speaking broadly, the principal aims of the foreign department at Calcutta are to strengthen England's hold on India, as well as her predominate influence upon all vassal and independent rulers within what may be described as the Indian sphere, and to counteract any effort that might be made by European powers, either to endanger the line of communication with the mother country or to foment anti-English intrigues among the native rulers and races of Asia.

The most powerful element in India is undoubtedly that which accords spiritual allegiance to Islam. England has probably some 80,000,000 Moslem subjects in the Deccan peninsula, and at least 30,000,000 more in Africa. Indeed, Great Britain is without exception, the greatest Mohammedan power of the world, and has won the confidence and the good will of the followers of the prophet to a degree enjoyed by no other Christian power, through the religious tolerance displayed by her government, through the respect shown alike by state and people for the religious prejudices and practices of Islam, and through her refusal to force the Bible upon those who build their hope of salvation on the koran. Since the English crown took over the administration of Hindustan from the old East India company it has been able to place implicit trust in the loyalty of the Mohammedan princes and people of the Deccan, and it is the 80,000,000 of Mohammedans that constitute, so to speak, the backbone of India in a military as well as in an economical sense. The confidence is mutual, and the only clouds by which it has been momentarily obscured have been traced to the influence of the present sultan at Constantinople.

For many years the English believed in the pretensions of the Sultans of Turkey to the dignity of caliph; that is to say, to the spiritual supremacy of the entire Mohammedan church throughout the world. It was, indeed, this even more than the dread of seeing Constantinople fall into the hands of Russia that led Great Britain to champion the cause of the sublime porte and to expend vast quantities of British blood and treasure in its defense. The English thought that they owed it, as a great Mohammedan power, to their Mohammedan fellow citizens in India to protect the chief of the latter's church.

But Abdul Hamid, by his readiness to lend himself to every anti-British intrigue at Constantinople, and by his reluctance to accept English advice, ere long convinced the statesmen at Calcutta and in Downing street that as the spiritual head of Islam he constituted not only a perpetual source of trouble but likewise of serious danger to the Moslem possessions of the English crown. Realizing the hopelessness of the situation at Stamboul, where the Sultan with his policy of playing off one European power against another, was always certain to find some foreign government ready to outbid England for the sake of temporary advantages at the latter's expense, the foreign department at Calcutta, while Lord Lansdowne was viceroy and Sir Mortimer Durand its chief, proceeded to investigate the pretensions of the Turkish Sultan to the caliphate, and after a most exhaustive inquiry in which the most learned members of the Moslem creed in India took part, came to the conclusion that his claims were unfounded and based entirely on usurpation and on false assertions.

The Koran that is to say, the khadissei shereef portion thereof, strictly provides that the caliph of the Mohammedan church—its supreme pontiff—must be a lineal descendant of the prophet who founded the faith. Now the grand shereef of Mecca fulfills these genealogical requirements, being a lineal descendant of Hassan, the grandson of the prophet. Sultan Abdul Hamid, on the other hand, has none of these qualifications, his ancestors having belonged to a tribe distinguished for its enmity to the prophet. He cannot even be considered as being even in the remotest degree descended from Mahomet, and the only foundation on which he bases his claim to the caliphate is an alleged, but by no means authenticated, cession of the dignity to Sultan Selim, the conqueror of Egypt, by the last Fatimite caliph at Cario in 1516.

The Fatimite caliph, so-called because descended from Mahomet's daughter Fatima, had no authority whatsoever to bequeath the title to any one, least of all to one who was by race and ancestry legally and theologically disqualified. No sultan ventured to lay any particular stress upon the possession of the title of caliph until Abdul Hamid, who, with the object of strengthening his claim thereto, has actually had the audacity to eliminate from the copies of the koran published in Turkey those khadissei shereefs which contain the inspired injunction regarding the caliphate, a sacrilege which excited horror even among the ecclesiastical authorities at Constantinople, where numbers of ulemas have been banished for denouncing the indignity thus done to their holy book.

Some time ago the sultan, in an ill-advised moment, conceived the idea of uniting the entire Mohammedan world into a sort of pan-Islamic union of which he, as the organizer, would naturally be the chief. Taking his claims to the caliphate altogether too seriously, encouraged thereto by flatterers bent on serving their selfish interests through his favor, he assumed that if he could but secure recognition by the entire Mohammedan world as its chief he would be treated by the great powers of Europe and by the United States with a great deal more respect than as the mere sultan of Turkey.

For some years he devoted himself to the propagation of this pan-Islam movement, sending emissaries to all parts of the Mohammedan universe, even to China and to the Philippines, to Java, and to Central Africa, to Morocco, and to Persia. This had the effect of bringing the leaders of the Moslem faith in the various quarters of the globe into communication with one another. But the result was detrimental to the sultan.

Among the questions with which it felt itself called upon to deal were his policy and conduct as a Moslem ruler and his claims to the caliphate, and now, to his dismay, and in defiance of his wishes and of his interests, the men who have assumed the leadership of the pan-Islam movement have summoned a congress to meet, of all places in the world, at Constantinople. The sultan would have prevented it if he had been able, but did not dare to do so on account of the great religious influence of the men at the head of the movement.

The avowed object of the impending congress, in which 200,000,000 Mohammedans—several millions of them subject to American rule—will be represented by delegates, is to bring about, through religious influence, a common accord among Mohammedans of all countries and races, whether under rulers of their own faith or subject to heretic rule. In the programme laid down special emphasis is given to the necessity of preserving good relations with those governments and countries which are friendly to the interests of Islam and which protect the faith of its adherents, while Moslem rulers are warned that those among them who may become a cause of weakness or of injury to Islam by their policy and by their council will be held responsible before the sacred law, from the action of which there is no escape. The sultan himself, as well as many others, sees in this programme an attack upon himself, and construes its provisions as an intention on the part of the congress to call him to account, and to divest him of the lofty dignity of caliph which he has usurped.

These fears are justified; for it is now known that the men who will dominate the congress will come from India, from the British portions of Africa, and worse than all for the sultan, from Arabia, where, thanks to the extraordinary activity of Lord Curzon and his able subordinates of the Calcutta foreign and political department, English influence has entirely supplanted that of the sultan, even in the holy places of Islam. In fact, it is the grand shereef of Mecca who is Lord Curzon's and Lord Lansdowne's candidate for caliph, as the lineal descendant of the prophet's grandson, Hassan.

When some time ago Lord Curzon caused a Moslem sheik to be invested with the administration of koranic law at Zeilah, which, with the surrounding country, is almost entirely populated with Mohammedans, he addressed to the grand shereef of Mecca a letter through one of his Indian Moslem agents requesting him to give his approval to the appointment, in his capacity as the head of the Mohammedan church throughout the world.

It is no longer any secret that Lord Curzon has in view the proclamation of Mecca, of Medina, and, in fact, of all that portion of Arabia in which the holy cities of Islam are situated, as the dominions of the grand shereef, assuring to the latter the revenues of the sacred cities, entire independence from the sultan of Turkey, as well as freedom from interference on the part of any other foreign power. The whole of the Arabian peninsula, in which the holy places of Islam are situated, constitutes, theoretically, a Turkish province under the direction of a Turkish governor, who, making his headquarters at Hanaah, maintains garrisons at Mecca, Medina, and at the Red sea port of Jeddah, for the purpose of extorting money, which would otherwise flow into the coffers of the grand shereef, from the pockets of the pious pilgrims who flock each year in countless thousands to the holy cities from all quarters of the Mohammedan world, no less than 70 per cent of the entire number coming from British India alone. The authority of the sultan of the Turkish governor is restricted only to those spots actually occupied by the Ottoman troops, and the remainder of Arabia is in a state of permanent insurrection against the sublime porte on the part of more or less powerful chieftains, who are, one and all, on the most friendly terms with Great Britain and who derive, not only money, but likewise arms and supplies from their co-religionists in India.

Since Lord Curzon has been viceroy England has been rapidly extending her influence among the various Arab tribes of the peninsula, has taken a number of them, both in the south-western corner near Aden and on the shores of the Persian gulf, under her protection, and is steadily winning their confidence and their good will in the same degree that the British government enjoys on the part of the Mohammedans in India. Meanwhile the sultan, dreading the loss of the holy cities, and of Arabia, upon the titular possession of which his throne may be said to rest, is straining every nerve to complete the wonderful railroad now in course of construction from Damascus to Mecca, and a third of which has already been completed. Once finished he would be able to pour troops into the holy places. But it is probable that before the two years which are needed for its completion are brought to a close the policy which Lord Curzon is so actively pushing will have been crowned with success, that the mysterious land known as "Happy Arabia" will be entirely free from that Turkish thraldom by which it has been blighted, and that the caliphate of Islam, wrested from the unworthy and blood-stained hands of Abdul Hamid, will be vested in the grand shereef of Mecca, the only lawful heir of the Founder of the Faith.

Brother Zilmer's new tract "What we believe," is out, and a copy has been placed on our desk. The title gives indication of what the work is—"An exposition of the faith of the Church of God." Brother Zilmer has gained a reputation for clearness of thought and ability to present a subject in a plain and concise manner, so there need be no occasion to misunderstand what he sets forth. Anyone who wishes to have an explicit statement of our belief, either for self-information or to give to those outside, should secure copies of this tract at once. Order them of A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind. Price 15 cents each or 10 for $1.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 3 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

RESTITUTION.

Truly God will yet restore
Eden, as it was of yore.
He will judge the poor aright,
The oppressor break with might.

Righteousness will flourish then,
Peace and safety be as when
In the garden Adam gave
"Life" her name, who all life gave.

This of "corn" a "handful" is,
In the "mountain" where it lies;
But its fruit shall shake the earth,
'Tis to God of bounteous worth.

Aye, its fruit like Lebanon,
Shall to Eden blessings bring!
Here the elect—chosen—ones
Shall proclaim—God's kingdom's come.

Its dominion it shall be
Boundless—e'en from sea to sea:
And his glory shall increase,
Till all earth be filled with peace.

They who overcome shall be
First in this great victory.
First the New-Song they will sing,
And will reign with Christ, the King.

On Mount Zion they shall stand,
A royal throng, a heavenly band,
To proclaim his will divine,
Everlasting-gospel-time.

Who hath Healing at his side?
God, our God doth it provide.
In the Stream and in the Leaves,
'Tides the Balm he to them gives.

He will lift the Ensign high,
Nations then with eager eye
Will behold the Standard there,
Which to God will bring them near.

"Come," they say, "and let us go
To God's house." Him we now know.
Let us prostrate unto him,
Who doth us salvation bring.

Year to year will we go up,
Drink we from the blessed cup;
Offering gifts unto our God
Who did this blest stream provide.

Thus his mercy doth appear,
While they're speaking he will hear;
He will answer ere they call,
Way of Life to show to all.

His dominion, it shall be
Boundless, e'en from sea to sea.
And his glory shall increase,
All the earth be filled with peace.

The Bible. No. 5.

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." 2. Tim. iii: 16. This passage affirms the inspiration of the written word, that the writers while writing were under the control and direction of the Holy Spirit. Scripture in this text means the written word, the "graphe," in Greek. Theopneustos is defined by Green divinely inspired. So we have divinely inspired writings to teach, convict, correct, and discipline us. The Spirit dictated the thoughts and the words which were written by these men. The thoughts are God's thoughts, and the language employed as the medium of communication was of his own choosing.

The inspiration of the Bible writers was something very different from the inspiration of the poet and the impassioned orator. The inspiration of these, if it may be so called, is the subject each is treating and the interest he feels in it. This kind of inspiration falls infinitely below that of God's prophets. The impulse of poet and orator, call it what we may, does not transport them into regions of truth in the past, nor does it lift the vale that hides the future from human gaze. However wrought up in thought and feeling they can not go back of written records, nor forward beyond what is foreshown on the pages of the prophets.

The inspiration the Bible claims for itself is supernatural. The revelations made by means of it are not the discoveries of man's unaided powers. "Prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." 2. Peter i: 21. They did not speak of their own private (individual) ability and will, but what was revealed to them alone by God. They did not always understand what they spoke or wrote.

Daniel did not understand his own vision recorded in the 8th chapter of his book. A voice between the banks of the Ulai said "Gabriel make this man to understand the vision." v. 16. From v. 20 to 25 is given the explanation by the angel. The concluding verses of the 9th chapter completes the explanation of the vision. The prophet's vision of the four great successive kingdom with the last divided into ten kingdoms, as recorded in the 7th chapter was all a mystery to him and over which he was perplexed and troubled. It was necessary for him to enquire of one endowned with the requisite wisdom to make plain the meaning of the mysterious symbols seen in vision. So he says "I came near unto one of them that stood near and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things" v. 16. It is taken for granted, commonly, that the prophets being inspired knew what they were talking about, or understood the meaning of those strange pictures seen while in the ecstatic state, so to speak. But not so. It was necessary to appeal to an interpreter whose business it was to describe in words the things denoted by the symbols. This was not always done. In many cases these mysterious characters as seen in vision were placed on record without any explanation. We have the description of the symbols in words simply telling us what the prophets saw. What each particular symbol represented by its acts (if active) and effects, as an agent, was an unanswered question with the prophets, and we to day still raise the question, what does this or that symbol denote? It is not to be supposed that the prophets understood fully all that was communicated to them verbally instead of under the medium of symbols.

They wrote for later ages as well as for the time near at hand. It was not so much for the benefit of generations unborn. They would be dead and unconscious at the date of Christ's first advent, and know nothing of his sufferings. A long stretch of years lay between them and the first thrilling scene in the drama of salvation. It is written "Of which salvation the prophets enquired and searched diligently who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them, did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow, unto whom it was revealed that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with (by) the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven." 1. Pet. i; 10-12.

The apostles and others under the operation of the Spirit re-announced the things ministered by the long line of Hebrew prophets; giving additional revelations suited to the further and fuller development of God's plan of the ages. Later prophets read and studied earlier ones. Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeramiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem. Dan. ix: 2. How often New Testament speakers and writers quoted from Old Testament writers, thus showing in what light they regarded the ancient Scriptures, that they were inspired and perfectly reliable. The apostles were not "Higher Critics."

Inspiration was intermittent. God's prophets were not at all times under the operation of the Spirit. When not under its power they were errant like other men. When David contemplated building a house for the "ark of God." Nathan said to him "Go do all that is in thine heart; for the Lord is with thee," 2. Sam vii: 3. The night after the prophet said this the word of the Lord came unto him revealing God's purpose that, not David, but Solomon his son should build the house. "There says the higher critic Nathan was wrong, though doubtless he thought the first advice to the king was prompted by the Spirit." This word "doubtless" is very convenient for these critics. On it they build their theory that inspiration is "errant." Nathan did not think that his first advice was prompted by the Spirit, but he knew that what came to him that night was the word of the Lord, and said so. How silly the notion that the prophet did not know when the Spirit was operating on his brain, dictating the thoughts and language he was to utter! If the prophets did not feel the impulse of the revealing Spirit then they never knew that they had a revelation from God, and could not know that they were prophets.

Somewhat varied phraseology is employed to denote the influence of the Holy Spirit, more frequently the result of its operations is stated; as "the word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord." Thus spake the Lord; thus saith the Lord. Isaiah, for Christ says, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me." He then tells us what he saw and heard in vision. Ezekiel's usual introduction to his prophecies, "The word of the Lord came to me." In chap. 40 he says, "The hand of the Lord was upon me."

JOHN L. WINCE.

An Appeal to all the Faithful in Christ Jesus.

To those of like precious faith:

Do we all realize that we are now living in the perils of the last days, and that Satan is working with all signs and lying wonders, and if possible will deceive the very elect? There never was a time when the cause of truth needed faithful, true and pure advocates more than now. It is lo here, and lo there. You can hardly think of a doctrine however presumptuous but you are asked to believe it, and if possible the very elect would fall into these wild speculations that are extant today. There is no safe place but the eternal rocks of truth, and from that rock every lover of truth should sound out the clarion notes of warning. This rock is Christ Jesus, and the truth uttered from his lips is "The gospel of the kingdom of God," which is the power of God unto salvation. One mistake might cause our eternal ruin, as in the case of Hymeneus and Philetus who had overthrown their own faith and that of others by preaching a falsehood. 2 Tim. ii. 17-18. That would be considered a very small offence at the present time, but it proved fatal in the apostolic age, and when we read the apostles' words in Gal. i. 8, 9, "But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," it would seem to me that every teacher of the Word should be very careful what they teach. I would be very charitable, but we must not allow our charity to encroach on the plain teachings of God's sacred Word which I am commanded to earnestly contend for. There seems to be at this time a determined effort to force certain doctrines into the "Church of God." My object is not to argue any given point, but simply mention them as they appear to me. I believe the Bible teaches beyond successful contradiction that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and I must worship him as such. If I were to endorse the human paternity idea what would the effect be on my mind? I could not pray through him to the Father, as I would have just as much respect for any other respectable Jew as for him. Then if all those texts relating to the Christ as being "The Son of God" be false or interpolations, what confidence could I have for the rest of the book? I think as the Irishman did when the infidel told him of what a fraud Christ was as the Son of God. Said the infidel, his mother was nothing but a common Jewess, and his father Joseph was a common Jew, so you see his parentage was no better than mine. The witty Irishman replied, "Well, allowing your father and his to be equal men, I am sure there is a mighty difference between the two sons." I remember well dear old father Chaplin's remark to me. Bro. Woodward, I have no respect for this idea, or any doctrine which belittles my adorable Redeemer, or takes one honor from him, and I could heartily say, Amen.

I want to ask Bros. Wagoner, Hatch, Chase, Wince or any of the old vetrans of the cross, if they ever knew a person who was made any more humble, more honest, more devoted to truth, more Christ-like by making Christ less than God's dear Son? It answers one purpose very well—to bring division. And the man or woman who has this doctrine in stock, waits just as patiently and stealthily for the evangelist to get away, so they can if possible undo the hard work of weeks, that he has so faithfully done, and the unsuspecting flock listens while he tells them that he has great respect for their evangelists, but they have failed to tell them all the truth. The gospel of the kingdom which the Word tells us is the power of God unto salvation, he tells them is not enough, but it is very necessary for them to keep the Jewish Sabbath, the gospel alone is not sufficient. As one cannot be justified without the law, you must put some old wine into those new bottles, some new cloth into old garments, but he has accomplished his object, sown discord, distrust, divided the flock and like all wolves among sheep, scattered the flock and hastened into some other fold to continue his work, while devils laugh over his victory. I have never seen a person yet made better by embracing these doctrines, but I have seen many made self-righteous. Am I wrong? Is it not a fact that any minister who starts out with these two messages—the law and Josephitism—do it with the intention of bringing division? Therefore I would appeal to all, cling close to the dear old [illegible] is God's power to save, [illegible] if one husband fails to love [illegible] not help the matter. Now, I [illegible] you brethren, mark them [illegible] those divisions and offenses [illegible] to the doctrine which ye have [illegible] and avoid them. Rom. xvi. 17. We have very dear friends and brethren whom we respect and love most dearly, who believe in what they term the "Larger Hope." I want to say these brethren if they think it would be a good thing for the evangelist to go into a promiscuous crowd and tell them that all men would finally be saved? Would not the tendency be to remove all obligations from them and they would very naturally think and say, Well, if God purposes to save the world, I need not worry, I am all right any way. That was not what Christ said but, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15, 16, "Except ye repent you shall all likewise perish." Now brethren, let us be honest, to be damned does not [illegible] to be saved, does it? To perish does not mean to have eternal life, and without the gospel we are lost. George Washington once said, "United we stand, divided we fall." It is just as true of church as state. What a power for truth the "Church of God" might be if we would all live up to the Apostle's injunction in 1 Cor. i. 10, "Now I beseech you brethren by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions (schisms) among you, but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." What a glorious spectacle such a church would be, perfect love by which all men might know they belonged to God. We would then avoid foolish questions and genealogies, and contentions and strivings about the law, for they are unprofitable and vain. Then dearly beloved in the Lord, let us stand strongly for the truth, fighting the good fight of faith, thereby being able to lay hold of eternal life.

Yours in Christ.

B. W. WOODWARD.

A Separate People.

Why should God's people be a distinct, and separate people? In answer to this question, numerous reasons can be given, as for instance:

1. They are a specially called out people, for a special purpose.

2. They are called out by a special message, which message relates to the special purpose for which they are separated.

3. They are a special people, separated by a special message, and so must conduct themselves in harmony with the principles and rules contained in the special message.

4. All that they are and possess must be consecrated toward the advancement of the principles and cause for which they were separated by the said message.

5. When a separated person shall commingle again with that from which he was separated, and at the same time expect to be used for the purpose for which he or she was so separated, they are practicing self-deception.

6. The separated ones are required to draw a distinct line of demarkation between the darkness of Old Babylon, and the Ecclesia of called-out-ones. "What communion hath light with darkness?" None whatever. We who have been separated, can not possibly hold brotherhood and fellowship with the children of darkness, and the children of light, at the same time. It has pained me to see some try to accomplish this feat. If they are not willing to separate themselves from their brotherhood, and fellowship, they can have no fellowship or brotherhood, with the Ecclesia or separated ones.

7. The children of darkness, from which the children of light must separate themselves, are known and described as "Gentiles in the flesh," and as long as they remain "Gentiles in the flesh," their condition is described as being "without Christ, having no hope, and without God in the world." The separating message relates to the re-organization of the commonwealth of Israel. The message is contained in the covenants of promise, which covenants relate specially to the above covenants.

When we become "fellow citizens," in the said "commonwealth of Israel," then we separate ourselves completely from "Gentiles in the flesh." There can be no fellowship, brotherhood, or communion, between "Gentiles in the flesh," and "fellow-citizens in the commonwealth of Israel." All associations, ecclesiastical or [illegible] Otherwise, remain "Gentiles in the flesh," until they have complied with the requirements which will transfer their allegiance from "Gentiles in the flesh," to fellowcitizenship in Israel's commonwealth. Between the two there can no fellowship or communion. If you accept a "church home" with the uncircumcised (circumcision made without hands) Gentiles, then you belong to, and must accept the reward of an "uncircumcised Gentile."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Russia to Fight Britain.

Under the above heading is a special cable to the Chicago Tribune of March 9, in which a Russian of high authority makes the statement that sooner or later Russia and England must fight it out. He says it is not possible for Russia to sit idly by while England continues to intrench herself in Asia at points where Russia is most vitally interested. In reference to the action of Russia in reinforcing her forces in the Southeast, which is now being pushed so energetically, he says:

"Russia has not any designs on India, as England is so fond of alleging. If Great Britain would only let us alone we would not trouble her; but we are not blind to the manner in which Great Britain has seized the occasion of the present war to buttress all her interests in central Asia, where we have as vital interests as she; nor can we Russians get over the idea that sooner or later a conflict with our traditional enemy is inevitable, and we realize that our only path to victory lies in the direction of India.

Without going back to Lord Curzon's bombastic proclamations or anything prior to the war, and omitting consideration of the manner in which she has sought to embarras and discredit us in its prosecution, we recall what Great Britain has done in Asia since the outbreak of hostilities, and ask whether Russia would not be justified in making a counter move to Younghusband's expedition to Tibet, which was in direct violation of Great Britain's solemn assurances to us.

Younghusband negotiated a treaty which so closely approached a protectorate over Tibet that the British government was obliged to administer a public rebuke to him. Then Lord Kitchener's scheme for the reorganization of the Indian army blossomed and a so-called commercial expedition was sent to Persia. The son of the ameer of Afghanistan was next brought to Bombay. Then pressure was put upon Turkey to settle the Aden hinterland question, and now there is a project of autonomous Arabia.

Great Britain has been making hay while the sun shone. But Russia cannot hold her hands and see Tibet and Afghanistan converted into Bhutans or Nepals nor Persia placed completly under British influence. I have no personal knowledge of what if any steps have been taken in Turkestan, but Great Britain will find Russia is not so engrossed or helpless as to be obliged to relinquish border states to her mercy without a struggle."

Sensational rumors of the dispatch of reinforcements for Russian Turkestan were current two months ago, but they were then denied. These reports now are affirmed on the authority of a traveler of unimpeachable veracity, who has just arrived from Tashkend, and who was a personal witness of military activity on the recently completed Orenburg-Tashkend and other strategic railroads through Merv to Krasnovodsk. Troops, guns, and munitions of war have been moving southward for two months. Between the middle of January and the middle of February fifty-six military trains, mostly carrying artillery, arrived at Tashkend.

The guns were mostly sent from Merv, from whence a purely military railway line goes to Kursk. The traveler in question was informed, although he had no personal knowledge on the point, that Russian troops had crossed Pamir through Terek pass and garrisoned Kashgar. The Orenburg-Tashkend railroad was so crowded that the traveler was forced to return by way of Krasnovodsk.

The informant states that the greatest secrecy is observed. Travelers, who are rare, must be provided with special permits from the minister of war, and are kept under the closest surveillance. The baggage of this traveler twice was seized and searched, although his papers were regular. It is most significant that local officials have been ordered not to permit Englishmen to travel in Russian Turkestan, and steamship captains on the Caspian sea have been forbidden to allow Englishmen to land on the eastern shore. At Krasnovodsk the informant was told that two English officers who were traveling in disguise are languishing in prison.

The informant said the greater tranquility prevailed in the Turkestan region. At Bokhara there were only vague rumors that a war was in progress, and absolutely nothing was known regarding political developments in European Russia. The only explanation of the renewal of Russia's military activity there is that it probably is a demonstration to impress Afghanistan.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

The Parable of the Hidden Leaven. Matt. xiii. 33, 35.

"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened; all these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables and without a parable spake he not unto them, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet saying, I will open my mouth in parables. I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation," (margin of R. V. many ancient authorities omit of the world).

"Why speakest thou unto them in parables, And he answered and said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. For whoever hath to him it shall be given and he shall have abundance, but whosoever hath not, from him shall it be taken away, even that which he hath, therefore speak I unto them in parables. But blessed are your eyes for they see and your ears for they hear, for verily I say unto you that many prophets and righteous men desired to see the things which ye see, and saw them not, and to hear the things which ye hear, and heard them not." Matt. xiii. 10, 17.

Now there are several things to take note of in this parable, the woman, the hidden leaven, and the three measures of meal, and the time given, until the whole was leavened, all these as related to the kingdom of heaven.

We find in the explanation of the good seed and the tares, that the harvest does not come until the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. So there is a set time for the kingdom of heaven to appear, and the preparing of the field, the sowing and the growing of the seed is in the world or age preceding the kingdom. A woman is a symbol of the Church of God. This woman or church hid leaven in her meal. Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, was Jesus' warning to his church—but we must eat the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth, and not the leavened bread of malice and wickedness. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8. The disciples understood Jesus how he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the teaching of the Pharisees and Sadducees. "I am that bread from heaven," he taught, "I am the Son of God." This the Pharisees and Sadducees denied, "For they eat the bread of wickedness." Prov. iv. 17. "Is not this the carpenter's Son and is not his mother called Mary; and they were offended in him." Matt. xiii. 55. "The Jews then murmured at him because he said, I am the bread which came from heaven, and said, is not this Jesus the Son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know?" John vi. 42.

It is evident from the Scriptures of truth, that the Sonship of Jesus was the great disturbing question between the Jewish church and Jesus and his disciples. He questioned his disciples "Whom do you say that I the Son of Man am? Simon Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." Jesus answered and said unto him, "Blessed art thou Simon Bar Jona for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." Will not every member of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, eat with Peter of this bread from heaven, the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth and believe in Jesus of Nazareth that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God?"

How different this from the teaching of the rulers, the scribes and Pharisees and high priest of the Jewish church as they eat the leavened bread of malice and wickedness. "Is not this Joseph's Son?" Luke iv. 22. Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God." John v. 18. "By our law he ought to die because he made himself the Son of God." John xix. 7. The high priest asked Jesus of his doctrine and his disciples. John xviii. 19. After his arrest the high priest exclaimed, "I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ the Son of God. Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said, Nevertheless I say unto thee, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven. Then the high priest rent his clothes saying, he hath spoken blasphemy, what further need have ye of witnesses, behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy. What think ye? They answered and said, He is guilty of death." Matt. xxvi. 63, 66. "For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy and because that thou being a man makest thyself God." Jesus replied, "Say ye of him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, thou blasphemest, because I said I am the Son of God."

Thus we find that this question of whose Son, the begotten Son of God the Father, or the begotten son of Joseph which of them that Jesus was, sent him to his death, and this question has been before the church, throughout all this time. It troubled the early church in John the beloved apostles' time, through its Jewish converts, and the sect of Ebionites that followed the teaching of Theodotian of Ephesus and Aquila of Pontus throughout the earlier centuries. While the Unitarians of the later centuries have also eaten the leavened bread of the Pharisees and Sadducees. This same wicked teaching, is troubling the Church of God in this last hour, "whereby we know it is the last hour" of time that we stand in now. And it is this wicked one that shall be destroyed by the brightness of his coming. The proof as to this being the wicked one is found in the 50th Psa. "But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth, Seeing that thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee.....Thou givest thy mouth to evil and thy tongue frameth deceit, thou sittest and speakest against thy brother, (our elder brother) thou slanderest thine own mother's son, (Behold thy mother) said Jesus to John, These things hast thou done and I kept silence, thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thyself, but I will reprove thee and set them in order before thine eyes (to write unto thee in order most excellent Theophilus) see 1st chapter and 3rd chapter included. This pen picture of the wicked in the fiftieth Psalm describes the Josephites of today perfectly—that Jesus the Son of Joseph was a perfect Son of man, "thou thoughtest I was altogether such a one as thyself."

God says of them, "What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth? Seeing that thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee. This they do in casting out the genealogy of Matthew and Luke, and beginning Jesus of Nazareth's life history at his baptism in the river Jordan.

John calls this wicked class The Antichrist. Little children it is the last hour and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists, whereby we know it is the last hour, they went out from us but they were not of us, for if they had been of us they would have continued with us, but they went out that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us. But ye have an unction from the Holy One and ye know all things—who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ. He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son. 1 John ii. 18, 22.

This relationship of the Father and the Son, "I will be his Father and he shall be my Son" is denied by the Josephites, and in denying this "truth as it is in Jesus" they are proven antichrist by John the beloved. Turn to the last of the 50th Psalm.

"Now consider this ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces and there be none to deliver. Whosoever offereth the sacrifice of thanksgiving glorifieth me. And to him that ordereth his conversation aright, will I show the salvation of God."

In my next I will take up the three measures of meal in which the leaven was hid until the whole was leavened.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan.

Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

W. L. Crowe,

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor,

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 22, 1905. NUMBER 12.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Delight in the Lord.

"Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart."
—Psa. xxvii. 4.

O how good it is to delight in the Lord,
And on his care depend;
To him in every trouble flee,
Man's best, man's only friend.

When all streams are dried,
The Lord's fullness is the same;
O may man with this be satisfied,
And glory in his precious name.

Why should man's soul a drop bemoan,
Who has a fountain near;
A fountain which will ever run,
With waters sweet and clear.

The Bible. No. 6.

As originally written what was the measure of its inspiration? Some say the thoughts were inspired, but the language was left to the choice of the several human writers. This theory is at variance with what the word claims for itself. "All Scripture," given by inspiration must mean the revelation of God in its written form—the thoughts of God in written characters or symbols chosen by the Holy Spirit. The thoughts of God in the language of men are what concerns us. When we wish to know God's will touching our duty and destiny we must learn it through the medium of words, the meaning of which we understand. This is the only possible way. The language and thoughts are inseparable. Jesus the Great Teacher frequently said, "It is written." God graciously put himself in communication with man by means of human speech. Let us be thankful for the revelation that makes us wise unto salvation.

Some theologians, as M. Tweaten while conceding that inspiration extends even to words says "but only to these, when the choice or employment of them is connected with the religious life of the soul." These affirm that "one ought to make a distinction between the Old and New Testament, between the Law and the Gospel, between history and prophecy, between narratives and doctrines, between the apostles and their apostolic assistants. All such distinctions are fantastical. There is no ground for them. The inspired writers themselves where they had occasion to quote from earlier inspired documents (as they often did) make no distinction based upon such a classification. They treated whatever they quoted as "inspired," and gave themselves no concern about what bond their quotations might fall under whether law or gospel, history or prophecy, narratives or doctrine.

In this way the higher critics began their destructive work of undermining faith in the Scriptures. They have gone on, and today they hand us out a Bible that is a kind of crazy quilt, or ill-matched patch work. They tell us the Bible contains a revelation from God. They also tell us that it contains a vast amount of error; that whole books, as Joshua and Judges, regarded as reliable by our fathers, possess no historic value; but must henceforth be viewed in the light of romance or legendary stories. Sometimes it is chapters or verses they choose to class as uninspired; and so no one knows when he is reading the word of the Lord, and when that of man. In the light of this it turns out that the truth of God is the needle in the haystack, it is hard to find among so much human rubbish.

Now unless the critics can give us some absolutely certain rules by which to distinguish the inspired from the uninspired, the divine from the human, the Bible will remain to the common people a sealed book. And I may just as truthfully say, sealed to the critics themselves, for so long as they are not agreed as to what parts of the Bible are inspired they are in the same sad condition. They are not agreed. Indeed they have made no discovery of the system of truth which they claim the Bible contains. So the question of "what is truth?" is still unanswered by these boastful critics.

Such a Bible as these higher critics propose to give us cannot be a ground of faith, but on the contrary a source of doubt and perplexity. No one can approach it with that mood of mind so characteristic of the ancient Psalmist, Said David, "Shew me thy ways O Lord, teach me thy paths." Ps. xxv: 4. And another; "Open thou my eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." Ps. cxix: 18. The Great Teacher said "Thy word is truth." John xvii:17. The miracles wrought by Jehovah in Egypt, were recounted in the history of Israel and faithfully taught, in compliance with the divine command, to future generations of their children, as an essential part of their education. Call the attention of the higher critics to the things done in Egypt, "the wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red Sea;" Ps. cvi: 22, and the narration of wonders only provokes their criticism, and elicits from them the opinion that the things recorded were merely the mistaken conceptions of the writers, and that these writers lived and wrote along after the Mosaic age. These men summon the word before the bar of their judgment and condemn it. They can have no faith.

JOHN L. WINCE.

[For Our Children.]

The Man Who Prayed on the Field of Battle.

"He regarded their affliction when he heard their cry." "They cried unto the Lord in their trouble and he saved them out of their distresses. He brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death and break their bands in sunder."

Thus does David discourse in reviewing the history of ancient Israel. And is it not meet that we in like manner take a backward glance at the beginnings of our own nation, and that we note how they gave thanks for mercies, and cried to God in time of danger? We are commanded to "make known the deeds of the Lord among the people," "to talk of all his wondrous works; to remember his marvelous works that he hath done; his wonders and the judgments of his mouth." We do remember how God was with our forefathers, when they "gat themselves out of their country and from their kindred" and came into this land, that they might have freedom to worship him. We have not forgotten that he sent an early spring after that first long winter of suffering and of hardship, a happy omen of the summer-time prosperity that was to be the inheritance of the mighty nation which should rise from that barren Plymouth Rock—our stone of destiny. They had just laws, they respected the rights of others, they lived virtuous lives, they were faithful in their religious devotions, and were prospered in all their doings. God had caused them to grow and increase until they numbered 16 States. Then the testing time came, and they were called upon to surrender their principles, their liberties, their God-given rights.

England's rulers had decreed that they were to be taxed without representation, in direct violation of the Magna Charta at the bloodless battle of Runnymede in 1215 A. D. Under the Magna Charta there could be no such taxation, nor could there be "proceeding against any freeman," in any way, "unless by legal judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land." But the kings of the British realm, had paid so little regard to this law; had taken such defiant attitude against it, that the people had been forced to have it renewed no less than thirty-two times!

The resistance to tyrrany and the renewal of the law was to be re-enacted for the thirty-third time, but this time not in the mother country, but in the colonies. The Pilgrim fathers and their children had taken the charter for granted.

God's government as established over Israel had been representative. The chief of the tribes, "wise men and known," were made their heads, and were to "judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him;" not fearing the face of man, the judgment being God's. There was no oppression. So the Colonists resolved to hold fast their devotion to principle and to human rights as outlined by God in his holy Word. To have done otherwise would have been treason to him.

Still loyal to their king they petitioned in a manly way for "a more just and humane policy." But the wicked, stupid, stubborn George the Third would not listen. He declared the Colonists rebels, and commanded Gen. Gage to reduce them by force, he having brought a regiment of 700 regulars from Halifax on the 1st of Oct. 1768, wherewith to invest Boston. The 5th of March, 1770, the Boston Massacre occurred. The 18th of April the battle of Lexington was fought. Then Ticonderoga and Crown Point, with a vast quantity of military stores, were taken by the Americans, the 10th and 12th of May, and Washington was made commander-in-chief of the army the 15th of June. Generals Howe, Clinton and Burgoyne had already joined Gage in Boston on the 25th of May, increasing his force to more than 10,000 men, on our side there were 20,000.

The battle of Bunker Hill with 1500 Americans, against 8000 British was fought the 17th of June, where though our foes gained the victory it was with the loss of more than a thousand officers and men.

It was here that occurred the incident to which I refer in the heading of my article. Our patriot forefathers having been forced to take up arms, did not go out to battle depending on themselves. God's great angel was in the cloudy pillar, going before them. They had prayed and there would be no "ifs" about the answer. God's intent was that there be two nations instead of one—the custodians of his oracles, and his agents to carry on just such missionary work as Miss Spence has been telling us about in All Nations Monthly, and he overruled the struggle that his own beneficent purposes might be accomplished through Great Britain and the prospective United States.

Dr. Samuel McClintock was the chaplain of our army in the battle of Bunker Hill. He was a man of prayer. He believed as David did that "God would plead our cause with them that were striving with us," that "he would take hold of shield and buckler and stand up for our help," that the Lord would give strength unto his people and would bless his people with peace, if we but implored him to come to our rescue and deliver us.

Acting out his faith he knelt in the midst of the battle, with bullets whizzing all around him, and uncovering his head, and raising his hands toward heaven in deepest reverence, prayed that God would give success to our little provincial army and "deliver our country." The battle was so near a victory, that the Colonists were inspired instead of being discouraged, and sent the news flying every where to rouse opposition and to encourage their brethren. Soon the people began talking of "The United Colonies of America" and at Charlotte, North Carolina, a declaration of independence was actually made. The battle of Bunker Hill had "showed that America was invincible," she was trusting not in the arms of flesh, but in him who "ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomsoever he will." The prayer of McClintock on the field of battle and the prayers of her dauntless leader, and of other godly men were to be answered, the nation was to be free.

The sceptic may scoff, but to the Christian the miraculous interpositions of divine Providence are just as evident in the preservation of our forces as they were in preserving ancient Israel, and more than one writer has commented on the strange parallelism of events, in the history of these people and that of our own.

Let us see what happened at Boston in the spring of 1776. Washington had been besieging the city all winter, and at last at the instance of his officers resolved to seize Dorchester Heights and drive the British out. The night of the 4th of March was set for the purpose. When evening came on crowds of inky blackness hid everything in their folds, and under their protecting cover, the detachment sent out reached the Heights unnoticed by the foe. On rising in the morning and reconnoitering the British General saw what had taken place, and knew at once that he must either drive our forces from the position they had taken or get out of Boston in a hurry. Parties of 2400 each to storm the Heights before night came on, feeling certain of his prey. But the wind rose and blew all day. The harbor could not be crossed, the attack could not be made. While the British waited for the wind to go down, the Americans had time to so strengthen their fortifications, that Gen. Howe was forced to give up all thoughts of an assault and to leave the capital of New England.

Independence was declared on the 4th of the following July. Only a little before this King George had hired thousands of Hessians to fight against us and had greatly increased his own forces. Until this action was taken the Colonists still considered themselves loyal subjects of the mother country. Heretofore they had been fighting on the defensive and for their rights. They saw now that reconciliation was impossible, and hence took the step that made them a separate nation. Rather than be slaves, they would fight to the bitter end. And all through the struggle the mass of the American people were "firm and determined." Nor did Washington ever falter in the periods of gloom and disaster that followed the declaration of independence, "The fearful and afraid" might "return and depart;" victory would be given to those who remained, and the glory would be God's. And to the Continental Congress, it mattered not about the defeat at Long Island, the loss of the strong places around New York, the loss and the capture of the best of their troops with the troubling question of finances to perplex; for there was a goal set before them by God, and on its towering spires was written liberty! Never in the darkest hours did they betray any symptoms of despair, nor loss confidence "in the cause of their country."

We cannot help but feel in looking at the matter, that "their arms were made strong by the arms of the mighty God of Jacob." Successes were given us at Trenton and at Princeton; a thousand Hessians were taken prisoners; the faint-hearted roused from despondency, and the army largely augmented by the militia and by the re-enlistment of the men whose terms of service had expired. God's provident care can be seen not only in these events, and in the coming forward of Robert Morris and his friends to tender their fortunes for the support of their country, but also in the events that were to follow. The surrender of Burgoyne brought France into alliance with the Colonies, and France being an ally of Holland, she too became a friend and supporter. But who could have guessed that the nation who had fought against the Colonies for eight years—1755 to 1763—who had enlisted the Indians on their side and who had "swept every cabin where English was spoken out of the Ohio Valley," who I say, could have guessed that this nation, —these Frenchmen would come to our aid? And yet they did—with money, with arms, with ammunition and with men—two hundred thousand dollars worth of the sinews of war being sent over on one vessel. The treaty of France with the United States was made Feb. 6th, 1778, that of Holland in 1780. Both nations at once declared war against England.

The action of France made George the Third willing to treat with his American subjects and to concede everything they had asked! Do you see how wonderfully the chain was hung together? But congress now demanded something more—and this was the acknowledgment of our independence. Nothing short of this, it assured him, would satisfy us. He stubbornly shook his head, braved the consequences and went on with the war. In the meantime our financial matters had been placed on better footing, another loan having been obtained from France, and a national bank established. In the South God had raised up Sumter and Marion, who like the judges of Israel, became the protectors of the people, with their "audacious partisan warfare," sweeping as they did out of "the swamps at midnight" to dart suddenly upon the foe, and by day making "incessant onsets," and cutting the enemy's lines of communication. And now we come to the miraculous interpositions of Providence on our behalf that took place in South Carolina in 1781. Morgan's men had held their position against Tarleton at the Cowpens until Colonel William Washington could charge against the British dragoons with his cavalry, and scatter them like a pack of school boys chased by an infuriated goat. Cornwallis heard of this battle and hurried up the river to stop Morgan in his retreat—General Greene having taken command of our army in place of Morgan. On the 28th of Jan. the Americans crossed the Catawba to its northern bank. Two hours later the British reached the ford and found the river impossible! It had rained in torrents all night and the inpouring waters from all sides had swollen the river to a flood. It was days before the British could cross. The same thing was repeated at the Yadkin, sixty miles farther on, Greene and his men were nearly all over when they saw the British approaching. But for some unknown reason Cornwallis delayed crossing until the next morning Only the God who is in all history can tell why, that God held back the foe, and in the night sent the rain and saved our little army from destruction! If such a thing had happened, but once, or at most twice, we might be willing to concede that it was accidental, but when we find the third instance, we can but say, "He regarded their affliction when he heard their cry."

Our army had raced with the British to reach the river Dan and had won the race and were over when the British came up, and found the stream a roaring flood, Feb. 18th. Patterson gives all three instances in his "Fables of Infidelity," Ridpath the two first in "Cyclopedia of Universal History."

October 19, 1781, the allied armies of Washington and Lafayette, compelled the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Virginia and on the 3rd of September, 1783, a final treaty was made "between all the nations that had been at war," our Independence had become a settled fact, our bands had been broken, the goal had been reached, and liberty was won! We might now "serve him without fear in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our lives." He has given us a wonderful heritage, a great and a good land, he has redeemed us from all our enemies round about; no foreign foe dare set foot on our soil. We can learn this truth, we can study his book. We can hold up the light, and there is no to forbid. Let us ever be grateful to him for these inestimable blessings and use them only for his glory. "O give thanks unto the God of heaven, for his mercy endureth forever!"

The Power of Forgiveness.

The power of forgiveness even for an offense against human law is well illustrated in the following incident:

A soldier was about to be brought before his commanding officer for some offense. He was an old offender, and had often been punished.

"Here he is again," said the officer, on his name being mentioned; "flogging, disgrace, solitary confinement, everything has been tried with him." Whereupon the sergeant stepped forward, and apologizing for the liberty, said:

"There is one thing that never has been done with him yet, sir."

"What is that?" said the officer.

"Well sir," said the sergeant, "he has never been forgiven."

"Forgiven!" exclaimed the colonel, surprised at the suggestion. He reflected a few minutes, ordered the culprit brought in, and asked him what he had to say to the charge.

"Nothing sir," was the reply, "only that I am sorry for what I have done."

Turning a kind and pitiful look on the man, who expected nothing less than his punishment would be increased with the repetition of his offense, the colonel addressed him, saying:

"Well, we forgive you."

The soldier was struck dumb with amazement; tears started in his eyes and he wept like a child. He was humbled to the dust, and, thanking his officer, he retired to be the old refractory, incorrigible man?—No! from that day forward he was a new man. He who told the story had him for years under his eye, and a better conducted man never wore the Queen's colors.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 8 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

Will All Men be Saved?

I have written and published, and now offer for sale at ten cents per copy, a book of 60 pages, which is intended to be, as indicated in the sub-title, "A Consideration of the Doctrine of Universal Salvation." Some of the divisions are, An Introductory section, A section treating the historic origin of the doctrine, Tendencies and effects, God's methods of dealing with men, The Savior of all men, Who will have all men to be saved, The paid debt, the sovereignty of God.

Brother Zilmer has commenced a protracted meeting at Argos, Ind.

There being five Wednesdays in March our next issue will bear date April 5.

Brother W. H. Wilson writes very encouragingly of his meetings in the southwest, and we trust he will see some results of his labors.

"Since our last issue the gloom at St. Petersburg has increased day by day. General Konropatkin has been relieved of his command, and General Linevitch placed in charge. The Russian army is endeavoring to escape to Harbin or any other point north on the Siberian railroad. The Japs are pressing them so hard that they have to abandon guns and supplies. Besides the Japanese are able to move faster, and forces are hurried ahead to cut the roads and block the retreat. Russia is doomed to see this army dispersed if not killed or taken prisoners. Without supplies they cannot exist as an army. In the meantime the government still talks of continuing the war, while many advisers ask for peace. French bankers have "postponed" the raising of a new loan for Russia, and she has had to turn to bankers of her own lands. This is a significant "straw," showing how the tide has changed. One writer of note says that peace with Japan must be made speedily, that Russia may get ready for the next war in India for Tibet.

These words of Jesus, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world," are very precious to true brethren and sisters of Jesus. How very near he seems to us. It makes us realize that he really meant it when he said, Henceforth I call you not servants but friends, so familiar and intimate is it. "Be of good cheer," is just the way we cheer one another on in any difficult pursuit. In this case his word of encouragement is based upon the fact that he had done already what they had yet to do; overcome the world. It would be well, indeed, for us if we could keep his words in mind, in connection with his promise to be with us always, if we steadily maintain the conflict with the world and the flesh; so that we never have to fight alone. He knew what awaited himself—well knew how they would scatter every man to his own, when the crisis came, and would leave him alone; but he adds, "And yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me." And it is just this way with us. If we are in him we have peace; although apparently alone, he is ever near to succor us. And dear brethren and sisters, may our conduct ever be such that we can be sure of his presence and blessing—and then, too we shall overcome the world too and enter into his joy.

Church of God in Ohio, and all Concerned.

I left home Jan. 30, to hold meetings at the Peterson School near Piqua. My wife having attended the Indiana State Conference at Plymouth, joined me at Lima, Ohio, from where we went to Piqua. Were met by Brother Westfall. It is due to state that we had a kind and warm welcome from Sister Eidemiller and husband, a friend of all who preach the gospel of the Kingdom. He took charge of the School, kept it warm and clean during the two weeks we were there. Our meetings were not a success on account of severe winter weather, though there was much encouragement in the first two or three meetings.

We had much pleasure in the company of Brother and Sister Daniel Lehman, Sister Emma Nelsley, and a number of others who visited at Sister Eidemillers. We spent part of the time at the home of Brother and Sister Westfall. It did us good to meet the few faithful near Piqua.

Wife went home, and I to Brush Creek for a week. Brother and Sister John Lehman took me there. I was made welcome by the brethren. From my stand point the meetings were on the whole excellent in every way; they were timely, and all seemed to enjoy them, and as before, we parted wanting to meet again soon, if the Lord does not come. If he does come we hope to meet the sooner, to begin—with our Lord—the great and blessed work of restoration.

On Feb. 24, I landed at Sistersville, W. Va., was made heartily welcome by Bro. and Sister Farley. We repaired to the City Hall where Bro. Farley had advertized the meeting. We held there for a week, and as the interest increased we kept on for some days longer. The meetings were so generally satisfactory that Bro. Farley asked me to make an effort to come back in May or June. Much of the interest was due to the active labors of Bro. Farley during the past year or more. He does not miss an opportunity of speaking the truth, and giving The Restitution and tracts. He and Sister Farley are examples of the power of the gospel when sincerely believed.

An advertisement of the meetings brought a Brother Wilcox who lives 20 miles south of Sistersville, where he says they have had a church for 40 years. There are still a few faithful there. He wants me to come down when I again visit Sistersville. He was visiting a married daughter in Sistersville, she is also a Sister in the Lord. Bro Farley and I called on her next day and found her rejoicing in hope of the Kingdom coming. We spent a pleasant and profitable hour with her and her father. It was a glad surprise to Bro. and Sister Farley to find one of like precious faith in their town.

May the Lord bless all the faithful I have met in the past five weeks, and all everywhere. My anxious, earnest prayer is that not one of us may be left when the blessed Lord comes to gather those that are his.

On my way home I visited Bro. and Sister Juergensen at Barberton, O. They have been doing what lay in their power to have meetings at Barberton or Akron, but so far no definite action had been taken. Will let me know as soon as possible. I called at Cleveland and rejoiced to meet the household there last Friday night at one of the special meetings they are now holding. It was a short season of refreshing for me. I met my wife there. She had taken part in the meetings. We came home together and found the little flock in Salem rejoicing in hope, but sorry that our beloved Bro. W. D. Townsend is not better. May the Lord be pleased to hear our prayers on his behalf. This is a very brief account but trust all will accept it.

It is not out of place, nor too early, for me as president of the Ohio Conference to say that it will be held in Cleveland Aug. 17 to 21. Please all take notice and get ready to come.

Loving Allegience.

There is nothing more commendable or to be admired than true loyalty to our profession. If we love our country as we claim we can never become a Benedict Arnold. If we are true to our claim as being friends to one another we will not betray that friendship. We shall need this love as much tomorrow as today. What a beautiful example of loving allegiance Mary Magdalene manifested for her Savior, even after his death and burial. On the morning of the first day of the week while it was yet dark, alone she had taken her journey to the Savior's tomb, and finding the stone taken from his grave she ran and cometh to Peter and the other disciples whom Jesus loved and said unto them, They have taken away the Lord and we know not where they have laid him. After the disciples had made an examination of the tomb, they went away again to their own home. But Mary staid without the tomb, weeping and stooping down and looking into the sepulchre she saw two angels, and they said unto her, "Woman, why weepest thou?" She said, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. And when she had thus said she turned herself back and saw Jesus. She supposing him to be the gardner said unto him, Sir, if thou hast borne him hence tell me where thou hast laid him and I will take him away. Jesus said unto her, Mary. She turned herself and said unto him, Master. How full of meaning that word Master. It calls for loyalty and service on our part. As another has said, "When that word has truly gone up from the soul to God we have felt what we can never put into another word." It includes the whole attitude of the soul towards our Lord and it is cast at his feet forever. It brings confidence to our soul. We have put our love and our lives into his hand. We have burned the bridges behind us because we are quite sure he is the Captain of our salvation. I know in whom I believe and therefore I say, Master. This loyalty must bring obedience. Without this all is a sham, a mockery. Not only our lips but our lives must say Master and exclaim with Thomas, "My Lord and my God."

John Third Chapter.

The International Sunday School lesson for Jan. 29th, embraced the discourse of Jesus with Nicodemus, relating to the Spiritual birth in 3rd chapter of John's gospel. The golden text was, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." I have seen comments on the lesson, from points on the Mississippi river to the Pacific Coast; all laying particular stress upon the necessity of belief in the words of Jesus; a very commendable attribute. And yet, in each and every case teaching an error in regard to the plain and positive statements of Jesus relating to the Spiritual birth. To my mind there can be no greater responsibility resting upon any one, than in teaching children as to their future life beyond this present existence. The impressions made upon the youthful mind, are so deeply rooted, that it often requires years of patient labor to eradicate an error gained from some one, in whom they reposed confidence; and I have often asked myself the question, what will be the result to the teacher in the future, that has caused one to reject the truth as it is in Jesus? These children were taught that when they were converted, they were "born of the Spirit," and that by joining the church, and being good, they should see, or be in the kingdom of God. In some cases baptism was a necessary adjunct, while in others it was not mentioned. The teachers conveyed no knowledge to the children, or any idea of the nature of the kingdom, for possibly they knew nothing about it themselves; therefore could not be expected to teach others. Herein lies the crying error, the great sin, if I may so speak, in placing themselves in a teacher's place. I am led to believe that these International Sunday School lessons are a delusion; they are not selected with judgment to lead the young into a progressive knowledge of the Scriptures, as notice the present lesson. It is too deep for little children to understand; it is beyond their years; why do they not select little lessons, couched in language they can comprehend. Lead them gently, step by step, beginning at the lowest rung of the ladder, the creature, and let them learn something of their own natures; have them to realize what sin is, and how it came to be in the world; teach them that though God has punished mankind, yet he loved them as taught in the golden text of this lesson. Teach them of the great love of Jesus and what he did to make it possible for us to eventually reach a life that will never end, and thus faithfully continue so that by the time they have reached an age of accountability, they may be ready to understand how and when the Spiritual birth will occur.

Nicodemus had become interested in the miracles performed by Jesus, and wished to learn more of him; yet he did not want his friends to know that he had visited him, therefore he came by night. Jesus was greatly surprised that Nicodemus did not understand him, as he had used a natural event to make clear his meaning. He had told him that the "wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou heareth the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it comets or whither it goeth, so (likewise in the same manner) is everyone that is born of the Spirit." Jno. iii. 8. It looks as if the above language was sufficiently clear, so that any one could understand it, unless their minds were blunted with prejudice; but Nicodemus was not alone, for there are unnumbered thousands today, that claim to be spiritually born when they join the church, but fail to manifest it as Jesus did after his resurrection (never before) by appearing to the disciples, when they were in a room with closed doors, and vanishing away as he sat with them at meat. See Luke xxiv. 31; John xx. 19, etc. It was not necessary for a door to be opened for him to pass in, for he had gone down into literal death, and was raised, quickened, made alive, born of the Spirit, and became the first born from the dead. Rom. ix. 29. And all those that are so fortunate as to be born of the Spirit shall do the same as he did, for we shall be like him. 1 John iii. 2, and as we have borne the image of the earthly, so shall we bear the image of the heavenly, 1 Cor. xv. 49, and will be partakers of the divine nature. 2 Peter i. 4. In order to see or enter the kingdom there are three births brought to view; (but it is only apparent) the natural birth of water and of the Spirit. Notice the language of Jesus to Nicodemus: "Except ye be born of water and of the Spirit;" the conjunction connects them so closely that one cannot ever become complete without the other. Having been begotten by the gospel 1 Cor. iv. 15 by the Word of truth, James i. 18 we believe in the Lord Jesus, but our faith must be proven by works; for faith without works is dead, being alone, James ii. 17. Baptism is a symbol of the death, burial and resurrection of the Lord Jesus. In baptism we are literally buried in literal water and really raised up, born into the Church of the living God, and have become new creatures in Christ Jesus. We have left the sins of the flesh behind, buried in the watery grave, "and are no longer to live the rest of our time in the flesh to the lusts of the will of man, but to the will of God." 1 Peter iv. 2. Though we have been adopted into the church by obedience to the gospel, we are still in our fleshly nature, and are subject to the sins and vanities of life. We cannot say we are born of the Spirit, for "he that is born of the Spirit cannot sin for he is born of God," 1 John iii. 9, and God is a Spirit; and if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. 1 John i. 8. But if we fight the good fight, and keep the faith until we have finished our course, we shall find at the coming of our Savior from heaven, that then, and not until then, we shall be born of the Spirit, and have an abundant entrance ministered unto us, into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 2 Peter i. 11.

False Prophets.

False teachers have always had a strong hold on men. They often have a larger following than true teachers. The followers of the great and good Shepherd are a little flock, while the followers of the hireling are a great multitude. Men do not seem to be able to discern between the true and the false. There is a sure test by which we may readily distinguish whether one is a mere pretender or a true prophet.

Jesus contrasted his own mission and work with those of false teachers in his day. The latter were no better than thieves and robbers. When the thief comes to your home it is not to add to your possessions, to supply your need, and to protect you from harm. "The thief cometh not but for to steal, to kill and to destroy." He seeks plunder. He comes to serve himself, and to lay hands on your property and carry it away. He does not hesitate to kill you and burn your house if it seems necessary.

So do false teachers and selfish leaders of the people act. They are seeking gain. They do not care for the people. They make their burdens heavier, their lives more bitter, and their comforts less, and give nothing in return.

Over against this picture Jesus shows us what he is. He is the good Shepherd who knows the sheep, cares for the sheep, loves the sheep, and gives his life for the sheep. He came to make our burdens lighter, to remove the trammels of life and set us free. This test should be before our minds constantly in these days. False teachers never flourished more than they do now. The world has made great progress. One would think that the light of this age should dispel all superstition and weakness, but it is not so.—Christian Advocate.

A Useless Member.

"Yes," said Aunt Sarah, surveying her bandaged wrist, the doctor says it's a bad sprain; and the minister says I know how the church feels, in not having the use of all its members. The minister didn't mean that just for a joke, either; he looked as if he wanted to see how I'd take it. I had sense enough too, to feel I deserved to have him say it to me. A word like that comes home pretty straight when one of your own members is useless, and worse.

I've never thought just what being a member of the church meant before, though I've been one for thirty-five years. I've never felt obliged to do what the church wanted done. I felt it was a favor, my doing it at all, and half the time I let some one else do it instead. When I was through with work at home, and with what things I liked to do outside, then I was willing to do something in the church—if it was the kind of work that suited me. I guess I've been just about as useful a member to the church as the sprained hand is to me, all sprained and crippled, and refusing to bend more than an inch or two.

There's lots of things I need to do, but I can't use this member to do them—that's certain. That's the way the minister has felt about me, I guess. I've been a useless member for thirty-five years, that's the long and short of it; and, if the rest of the members had been like me, the church would have been as paralyzed as old Cousin Josiah Jones, that can't move hand nor foot. I'm ashamed of myself—I truly am—and things are going to be different from now on," and Aunt Sarah nodded her head with firm determination, as she looked at the church spire from her window.—Forward.

Evil Thoughts.

Who is responsible for our thoughts? Much of our thinking is not of our deliberate choice. Often we find ourselves perplexed or disturbed by thoughts that we would fain be rid of. Thoughts not in the line of our actions or desires come in and draw us away from thoughts to which we would gladly give ourselves, or by which we would help others. How comes this? The poet says:—

"We do not make our thoughts: they grow in us
Like grain in wood; the growth is of the skies,
Which are of nature; nature is of God."

But many of the thoughts that most annoy us are evidently not from God or from the skies. They seem to have come from below rather than from above; they are rather from God's enemies than from God. But, however they come to us, how are we to be rid of them? That is to us the practical and important question. An old divine said of evil thoughts that come unbidden and undesired: "Although I cannot prevent birds of evil omen flying about my head, I can keep them from building nests in my hair." The best way to be rid of evil thoughts is to welcome and enjoy good thoughts, and to have the mind so full of them that there is no room for the other kind.

"Be Ready."

These are the words of the Lord himself: "Therefore, be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." "In such an hour as ye think not." Reader, Jesus Christ may come this year! Then let us "be ready." Let us get the oil, and let us keep the oil in our vessel with our lamp. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." "Be ready," then, is the Christian's watchword. Let all remember it, let all think of it!—Eugene B. Willard.

In Norway drunkenness is punished by imprisonment. As soon as a man is incarcerated, the delinquent has a loaf and wine morning and evening. The bread is served in a wooden bowl full of wine, in which it has been soaking for an hour. The first day the drunkard swallows his allowance willingly enough. The second day it seems less pleasing. At the end of eight or ten days prisoners have been known to abstain altogether from the food thus pitilessly presented. This course of treatment finished, the drunkard, except in rare instances, is radically cured.

Winona Lake.

Winona Lake this season will be particularly attractive for an outing. The summer of 1905 is to be an especially attractive season at Winona Lake, the beautiful resort of Northern Indiana on the Pennsylvania Lines. The Presbyterian General Assembly will convene there May 18th. Noted speakers and musicians have been engaged for the summer entertainments. There will be conventions and social and religious conferences from May until September. The literary representation will be prominent. In brief, it will be a most profitable season educationally. Teachers and students who attend the Summer School will derive much benefit.

Winona Lake has golf links, tennis courts, baseball and cricket grounds, boating, fishing, swimming and camping facilities. The Pennsylvania Lines run direct to the park entrances. Season and fifteen-day excursion tickets may be obtained from ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines. Obituary.

With the death of Sarah Roby, widow of James Roby, there was rounded out into completeness a life of exceeding richness, beauty, and sweetness. She had been a member of the Church of God for many years.

Her last illness was only of short duration. Her death occured Sunday evening, Feb 5, at the home of her daughter, Mary Ballard, Springview, Neb. Had she lived until the next day she would have been 91 years old.

She was born in Washington Co., Maryland, Feb. 6, 1814, and was married May 13, 1832, to James Roby, who preceded her to the grave 8 years ago. To this union were born 11 children, nine of whom are living, and two dead. She was the maternal head of 70 persons.

In 1850, herself, husband and six children emigrated from Maryland to Illinois and located near Mt. Morris in Ogle Co., where they lived for 16 years, and it was here at Silver Creek that they embraced the glad message of the promised Kingdom, and made so many fast friends, and many readers of The Restitution will kindly remember them.

From here they emigrated to Marshall Co., Iowa. In 1884 they moved to Holt Co., Neb., and in 1888 they moved to Keya Paha Co., locating with a daughter Mary, near Springview, where she resided until the death of her companion. After which, she visited, and lived a time with all of her children, returning to Springview about a year before her last illness.

Yes, grandma Roby, has closed her life work. She was a noble wife, affectionate mother, and exemplary Christian, modest and unassuming in her daily life. She lived a great deal more than she professed, and could say with Paul "For me to live is Chris, and to die is gain." She was an earnest and faithful Christian, a tried and true veteran of the cross of Christ. God, his his service, his word, the church, were dear to her heart. She was thankful that her eye sight allowed her to read the Word of God, and do the needlework, which helped her to while away so many hours, until so near the last. Although it may be little else, she leaves to the remaining sons, daughters and friends, she will leave them the rich legacy, of a devoted earnest Christian example.

She was patient with the many ills which accompanies old age until the very last, and the sunset of such a life can only be bright and blessed.

Her life was one of love, sympathy and sacrifice to others. Grandma Roby never refused to go where duty called, and many are those who remember her kindness, when sickness was reigning in a household, and a traveler was never turned from her door without words of cheer to help him on his way. Her life motto was "Industry and love."

To the faithful and loving sons and daughters who have in so many ways lifted and lightened the burden which rested on her shoulders, from declining years for this mother, may God grant them grace and determination to answer the hand that is beckoning them along the paths that lead to righteousness. May comfort abide with the bereaved ones.

LIFE.

The days of life are swiftly rolling on,
The years are flying, soon they will be gone.
Life is fleeting, meted out as span,
The years are few allotted here to man.

The boisterous youth let loose from school,
Right glad to miss the teacher's rule;
Eager to be a full grown man
And run the race his father's ran.

He oft aspires to a height of six feet three,
As sturdy as a giant tree.
But he may cease to grow at five feet two,
As many another one has had to do.

He seizes quick his vain hope's load,
And rushes down life's thorny road.
His load too great, his strength too few,
He sinks premature from mortal view.

Some still rush on with greater strength,
Their life drawn out to better length.
And still they drop one by one,
Till all the generation's passed and gone.

Few there be that tread the narrow way,
And walk in it with care each passing day.
Few there be that shun the paths of sin,
And choose the narrow way to enter in.

But when at last the final end we reach,
A full reward shall be meted out to each.
Some have built upon the solid rock.
Those will belong unto the little flock.

Others took the broad way, built upon the sand;
When storms shall come, their mansions will not stand.
Then ponder well your future estate,
And choose the right before it is too late.

Teacher. Our study for tonight will be a

CRITICAL STUDY OF BAPTISM.

The occasion which suggested this study on baptism, was the remarks of a Chicago pastor, on the above topic. He said: "This is a question over which there ought to be no controversy. And the fact that there is, is due, as we believe, to two unwarranted and unscriptural assumptions, viz: (1st) that the mode is an essential, in the place of an incidental part of this sacred rite, and (2nd) the New Testament teaches only one way for its proper administration—by immersion. Now, they are right or wrong. If they are right, then I, who was sprinkled in my baptism am deluded, and was not, as I thought, baptized; nay, more, I am not a member of the visible church, nor is my ministry, to which I have been set apart by ordination, authoritative, and therefore, everything done by my office, is invalid. Grave, indeed, is this question, of how we are baptized, if to the mode God has attached such importance as this. We give candidates wishing baptism, their choice of the three modes, believing that they all are valid."

Now, Carrie, this minister said: "This is a question over which there ought to be no controversy." What is your opinion?

Carrie. There certainly is no Scriptural ground for controversy.

Q. How so, simply because the Bible says nothing about modes of baptism? Do we read anything about the disciples baptizing any one by either sprinkling or pouring?

A. Not a word. There is no example of anything of the kind in the Scripture records.

Teacher. This minister also says: "We give candidates wishing baptism their choice of three modes." And he does this, saying "Believing that they all are valid."

Lud. What gives validity to a Christian ordinance?

Lud. Divine sanction and direction.

Q. Can you cite any divine sanction or direction to call sprinkling or pouring baptism?

A. We have no instance of anything of the kind in any portion of the Holy Scripture.

Q. Then what kind of authority have we by which to make valid sprinkling or pouring as baptism?

A. Nothing but human direction or sanction.

Q. Have we any right to practice as a Christian ordinance, that which is solely of human devising?

A. We have not. God is not a man, that he should require human help in devising an ordinance for the obedience of faith.

Q. Is sprinkling when used as Christian baptism, purely of human devising?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Have you historical testimony to show that sprinkling when used as baptism, is of human devising?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Please give it?

A. I will. Mr. Calvin, the founder of Presbyterianism, while commenting upon the baptism of the eunuch, [illegible] "If we see from this instance what was the baptismal rite among the ancients for they plunged the whole body in the water. Now 'tis the custom for the minister to sprinkle only the body or the head. * * * The church did grant liberty to itself to change the rites somewhat."

Q. What did the change consist of?

A. From "plunging the whole body into the water," to "sprinkling only the body, or the head."

Q. Who made the above change?

A. "The church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat."

Q. What gave them the liberty or authority to change a divine ordinance?

A. "The church did grant liberty to herself." The above change is due to human Doctors of Divinity. There is one thing sure Divinity needs none of these human divinity doctors to change God's ordinances to suit the convenience of their fleshly desires.

Q. The Chicago pastor, whom we are criticizing, says: "If they are right, (who teach that immersion only is valid baptism) then I, who was sprinkled in my baptism, am deluded, and was not, as I thought, baptized." Is he "deluded," by trusting sprinkling to be valid baptism?

A. He is sadly deluded.

Q. How so?

A. Because he is trusting in a "change" a lot of human divinity tinkerers, called "the church," took upon themselves to make. The validity of his baptism is based solely upon the authority of a lot of human tinkerers of God's ordinance as ordained by Christ.

Teacher. I will ask Arloa, can you give other testimony, from a learned minister, showing that sprinkling is a human change?

Arloa. I can. We have the evidence of Dean Stanley, who was formerly a minister to the late Queen Victoria. He says: "The change of immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word baptism.

Q. How did these human tinkerers, change God's ordinance from immersion to sprinkling?

A. By "setting aside the larger part of the Apostolic language, regarding baptism."

Q. It is easy enough to effect any change human flesh may desire, if they may take "the liberty" to "set aside," the language of those who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," and "alter the very meaning of words" to suit their change, is it not?

A. Certainly.

Q. But do you suppose God will recognize and make valid the changes and alteration of words these human tinkerers may make?

A. He never will; they will find themselves as "deluded" as our Chicago pastor.

Teacher. Now, George, do you find the words sprinkle and immerse, used interchangeable in the Scriptures, which must be the case, if the word baptize will cover both the words sprinkle and immerse.

George. I do not, in either the Old or the New Testaments.

Q. Give some examples of the use of these words in the Mosaic ordinance?

A. See Heb. ix. 10, 13, 17, 21. In verse 10, we have, "Divers washings, and carnal ordinances," etc.

Q. What is the original for the words "Divers washings?"

A. We have the words "diaphoris baptismois (divers immersions). See Grotius, Macknight and Whitby.

Q. Now, suppose we use the words divers sprinkling; how would you express it in Greek?

A. I would use the words Diaphoris Reantizousa (divers sprinkling).

Q. In verse 20, we have the words, "he sprinkled with blood." What Greek words would you use for the words "He sprinkled"?

A. I would use the words, Errantise (he sprinkled).

Q. How is it, would it be proper to use Errantise—he sprinkled, to express another action, he immersed?

A. It cannot be done. Each word expresses its own action.

Q. What other words have we which express an entire different action from each other?

A. We have bapto—baptizo—(to dip, plunge or immerse). And also, rainо—rantizo. (Sprinkle or asperse). These words also express an action so different, that we cannot use the one for the other.

Q. When a minister performs what he calls baptism by sprinkling, how many actions does he use?

A. He uses three different actions, and these three actions he calls three modes of baptism.

Q. Name the actions.

A. The first act is to pour water out of a pitcher into a basin. The second act is to dip his fingers into the water, and the third act is to sprinkle water on the candidate.

Q. What was baptized in this case?

A. Only the preacher's fingers.

Q. What did he do to the candidate?

A. He only rantized the candidate.

Q. Did the candidate suppose that he was baptized?

A. He did.

Q. What did the preacher do to him?

A. Deluded him.

Q. How?

A. By rantizing him, and making him believe he was baptized, which in fact he was not.

Q. Do leading ministers whose churches practice sprinkling declare that the meaning of the word baptize is to immerse?

A. They do.

Q. Give a few quotations?

A. Dr. Chalmers (Presbyterian) "The original meaning of the word baptism is immersion."

Charles Anthon L. L. D., (Episcopalian) Professor of Latin and Greek, "The primitive meaning is dip or immerse. Sprinkling is entirely out of the question."

Dr. Augusti, (Lutheran): "Baptisma denotes plunging, dipping and the like."

Dr. Trenon (Catholic): "Plunge into the water. Baptize strictly conveys this signification, as all the learned are agreed."

Joseph Mead, says: "There was no such thing as sprinkling or rantism in the apostles' days, nor many ages after them."

Calvin (Presbyterian): "The word baptize signifies to dip."

Dr. Owen says: "No honest man who understands the Greek tongue, can deny the word (baptizo) to signify to dip."

Bousuet says: "To baptize signifies to plunge, as is granted by all the world."

Dr. Adam Clark, (Methodist) speaking of Rom. vi. 4: "The apostle here alludes to the mode of administering baptism by immersion, the whole body being put under the water, which seemed to say the man is drowned—is dead, and when he came up out of the water, he seemed to have a resurrection to life; the man is risen again, he is alive."

John Wesley, (Methodist) speaking of Rom. vi. 4, says: "Buried with him—alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion."

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

Let us labor therefore to enter in into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of Heb. iv. 11. In this Scripture we are exhorted to labor to enter into that rest. Yes, it takes labor to overcome the trials of this world with sin on every side. It takes constant watching of our thoughts and words and deeds to keep in the path that Jesus and the apostles have set before us. But if we overcome, and we can, and endure to the end, then we shall enter into that rest. We must also believe, and have faith in what we believe, for it says, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. If we study the Scriptures faithfully, we cannot help but have the right belief. In Acts xiii. 39, we read, By him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. So we see it is belief first, then faith, then obedience in baptism, then patience and endurance to enter into his rest. O may we all labor and pray for those favors and blessings that will help us along the paths in this life. So we can enter into his rest, the rest that is promised to those that labor and are faithful to the end. Amen.

MRS. M. COLE.

PHIL. II. 13.

For it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves. But our sufficiency is of God. Paul says by the grace of God I am what I am, and yet in his zeal he thought he could put down anything that opposed the customs of the Jews. But when God worked in him through his Son Jesus how humble he became, how earnestly he tried to do just as God would have him do. By grace I am what I am, it is by the grace of God that we came into the marvelous light of the [illegible] Jesus was [illegible] Christ, then if we are called by the gospel to be followers of Christ it is by God's grace or favor, and if we come to him and obey his Word he will accept us. But he never commanded us to come. But God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life, thus he shows his great love for us, and if we obey him he will work in us that which is well pleasing in his sight. Of ourselves we can do nothing, is this what men are thinking today? Is their thought, our sufficiency is of God? Are the nations working for that which is well pleasing in his sight? Let us not think that of ourselves we can do that which will be to his glory, but let each one ask wisdom of God for he giveth liberally to all, and upbraideth not, for every good and perfect gift is from above. May the God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

ELLA KNOWLES.

HEB. IV. 11.

Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest. There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God. God promised the children of Israel rest, a glorious land of rest, if they would obey his voice. They disobeyed, they wandered and died in the wilderness. The journey was long, their children grew up and Joshua led them into the land of rest promised. It was a beautiful land. The land whither thou goest to possess is a land of hills and valleys, a land flowing with milk and honey, a land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year. If ye diligently keep the commandments, which I command you to do them to love the Lord your God and to walk in all his ways. Then will the Lord drive out all nations from before you, every place wherein the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours, there shall no man be able to stand before you. Beloved I set before you this day a blessing and a curse—a blessing if ye obey the commandments. Did they choose the blessing and inherit the land of rest for an everlasting inheritance? No, for Paul speaking to the Hebrew brethren tells them how God was grieved with their fathers, because they had failed to keep the commandments and had not known his ways, how they could not enter into his rest because of unbelief. But God in his loving kindness and mercy still offers a land of rest, a land of eternal rest, not just for a long life but for eternity. Labor therefore to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God, for I create new heavens and a new earth, and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice for ever, for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy. Take heed brethren, lest there be in any of you a heart of unbelief. But exhort one another daily, exhort, labor, strive to make your calling and election sure. Keep the faith, for we must labor to enter into that rest, lest we fall after the same manner of unbelief. Let us strive to keep the commands of God. Labor to enter into that rest, the city whose maker and builder is God, the land where there is no more curse. God grant that we may be laborers together for the truth. Let the words of Christ dwell in us richly in all wisdom.

"O make thy church, dear Savior,
A lamp of burnished gold,
To bear before the nations
Thy true light as of old;
O teach the erring pilgrims,
By this their path to trace,
Till clouds and darkness ended,
They see thee face to face."

May all who have taken upon them the name of Jesus, enter into that rest which God has prepared for them that love him is my prayer.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful. Col. iii. 15. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee. This is a promise of God. If we keep our minds on him he will keep us in perfect peace. Micah says, "This man shall be the peace when the Assyrian shall come into your land." This shows that it is Christ that is the peace, and we must seek it through him, in him. Mark says, "Have peace one with another." If we do not have peace one with another, how can we be of one mind and one doctrine? For where there is not peace there is strife, as Jesus so said. Behold the hour cometh, yea, now is come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone, and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. These things I have spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. So we see it is always in God or in Christ we can look for peace, and he says, let it rule in your hearts, if we do we can surely have perfect peace. If all our thoughts and intents are for peace, there won't be any place for evil. And as we are called in one body, there must be perfect peace, or there cannot be one body. We read, Be ye thankful. What could we be more? Let the peace of God, etc. thankful for that perfect peace. We long for the time when Christ shall reign in perfect peace, and all evil is subdued. O may we all be so fortunate as to share in that blessed time, and may we have patience to continue in the faith, endure all trials, and be one of the saints in that glorious time when there is perfect peace on earth, is my prayer.

MRS. M. COLE.

Let the peace of God rule in your hearts. Col. iii. 15. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts to the which also ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful. For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace and things wherewith one may edify another. Depart from evil and do good, seek peace and pursue it. These things I have spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God. Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

ANNIE BURTON.

PHIL. II. 13.

For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Though I walk in the midst of trouble thou wilt receive me, thou shalt stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies and thy right hand shall save me. The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me, thy mercy O Lord endureth forever, forsake not the works of thine own hands. Psa. cxxxviii. 7. If we have faith in God and obey his commandments his grace will be sufficient for us and he will help us to work out our own salvation. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world that we should be holy and without blame before him in love, having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself according to the good pleasure of his will. For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained, that we should walk in them. Surely shall we say in the Lord have I righteousness and strength, even to him shall men come and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed. Therefore let us labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life. And we know that all things work together for good to them who are the called according to his purpose. Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant make us perfect in every good work to do his will, working in us that which is well pleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

A gentleman stepped suddenly before a sign which told him that messenger boys were to be had inside. He hesitated, and then went in.

"How many boys have you in now?" he asked.

"Six," was the reply; "it's dull, today."

"Boys," said the gentleman, eyeing them scrutinizingly. "I suppose you know there is to be an exhibition of trained dogs to-night?"

The faces of the boys showed that they were perfectly aware of that fact, and that they might even give him some points in regard to it.

"Well, I'm looking for a boy to take a blind man to see it."

A titter was the first response; then followed a variety of expressions, as: "What could a blind man see?" and. "You can't guy us that way."

"I'm not jesting; I'm in earnest," said Mr. Davis; and then, looking at one of the boys who had said nothing, he asked: "Well, what do you think of it?"

"I think I could do it," was the reply.

"How do you propose to make him see it?"

"Through my eyes, sir. That's the only way he could see it."

"You're the boy I'm after," said Mr. Davis, and he arranged for him to meet the blind man.

The exhibition was in a large theatre, and the blind man and his guide had a box to themselves, where they would disturb no one; but Mr. Davis from his seat in the audience knew that the boy was telling what went on so that the blind man could understand. Indeed, no one applauded more heartily than the blind man himself.

The following day Mr. Davis again appeared among the messenger boys, and after a few words with the manager, said:—

"Boys, there was offered every one of you yesterday a chance for lifting yourselves up in the world, but only one of you grasped it. My friend, the blind man, has felt for some time that he might get much pleasure out of life if he could find some young eyes to do his seeing for him, with an owner who could report intelligently. My friend is delighted with the experiment. He says he is sure I hit upon the one boy in town who will suit him, and has offered him a good position with a fine salary. Messenger boys are easy to get; but a boy who can make a blind man see is at a premium.

You see, that boy, though he did not know it was on the watch for a good opportunity, and when it came, he knew how to manage it."

A Smoky Salvation.

A preacher who had used tobacco for years was exhorted to seek for entire sanctification and give up smoking. After a considerable struggle he decided to yield up all, renounce his tobacco and profess entire sanctification.

Not long after some one saw him out in the yard sucking away at a cigar, and said to him:

"I thought you had given up tobacco."

"Yes," replied he, "I gave it up. I gave up everything to the Lord, and he has given it back to me." And so he smoked on.

A professing Christian, while smoking a pipe, began to talk to an unconverted man and recommended the religion of Christ to him, saying:

"I am saved, Jesus abides with me and lives in me."

"Does Jesus smoke a pipe?" inquired the sinner.

His shot took effect and the man took his pipe out of his mouth and threw it across the street.

Perhaps there are things worse than tobacco, and there are a good many things that are better; and when people think on "whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report," we do not believe that they will include tobacco smoking among those things of which they are to think. The man who loves his neighbor as himself will not be likely to poison the air he breathes with tobacco, or compel a decent stranger to inhale the noxious smoke which he has blown out of his mouth. A man who loves his wife as his own body will not be inclined to make her or her children sick with the stench of his tobacco. One who loves the Lord his God with all his heart and soul and mind and strength will not be a slave to a tobacco pipe or a plug, nor will he waste the Lord's time and the Lord's money in such vile and vicious indulgences.

The Berean Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

"For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi: 23.

How much these words should mean to us. We are servants to those things which we obey. Now if we obey sinful things we must be servants of sin. If so we are free from righteousness. We profit nothing. The pleasures which are derived by continuing in those things may last for a while, but there is no reward in the end. Our labor will be all in vain, and death will be our destiny.

But if we obey the things which obtain to righteousness we are servants of God. We are then free from sin, and become knowers and doers of the Word. Our lives will profit much, and our labor will not be in vain, for the end instead of being death will be everlasting life. Our reward will be, priests and kings of God and of Christ, and the gift which God will bestow on us will be eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

MAUDE BUTTON.

Dear Bereans:

Jesus is coming. This is a topic which is glorious to think and talk about. It should be one of the uppermost thoughts in the mind of the Christian.

To those who are looking for his second coming, their hearts are filled with joy, because they will see him who is Lord of lords, and King of kings, Jesus, their Saviour. There is joy in knowing that when our Lord was born, the name that was given to him was Jesus, which means Saviour. He came to save his people from their sins. We read in John iii: 16, For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. In this we have the assurance of life through the only begotten Son of God, that through his death we may have life.

Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Matt. xx: 28. Now we are looking for his second coming, when at the resurrection our loved ones will be raised to life eternal. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order. Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, jealous of good works. Titus ii: 13-14. May we all be ready and be able to say what Paul said, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

"Jesus is coming! sing the glad word!
Coming for those he redeemed by his blood,
Coming to reign as the glorified Lord!
Jesus is coming again.

Jesus is coming! the dead shall arise,
Loved ones shall meet in a joyful surprise,
Caught up together to him in the skies.
Jesus is coming again!

Jesus is coming! his saints to release;
Coming to give to the warring earth peace;
Hushing and sighing and sorrow shall cease.
Jesus is coming again!

Jesus is coming! the promise is true;
Who are the chosen, the faithful, the few,
Waiting and watching, prepared for review?
Jesus is coming again."

Your Sister in Christ,
JESSIE M. WILSON.

Dear Bereans:

When Christ appears it will be to raise the dead, to judge the dead, and to reward the dead. Said Jesus: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. xxii: 12. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his work. Matt. xvi: 27. "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Luke. xiv: 14. "Thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints." Rev. ii: 18.

Could testimony be plainer? And does it not connect the Christian's reward with the coming of Christ as the resurrection of the just? And does it not also place the reward of the prophets at the same point of time? Thus the truth is clearly stated, that Christ is to receive the saints unto himself, and that the saints are to enter glory at Christ appearing.

"When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1. Pet. v: 4. This crown is to be given by "the righteous Judge;" and as Christ is not to "judge" the living and the dead till his "appearing," the crown cannot be given before the appearing of Christ.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APR. 5, 1905.

WORD has been received here announcing the death of Isaac McCurry, of Baltimore, Md., whose name will be remembered by many.

THE Chinese Empire has taken up the question of a navy, and several schools are being established to educate and train men for this service.

SEVERAL complaints have been received concerning the farm paper. We do not send this paper from this office, but have sent word, and hope to have all straightened out soon.

CAN any one give us the present address of Mrs. W. W. Booth, who has left Rockwell City, Iowa, and neglected to say where she is now located. We will be very thankful for the favor if any one can supply the address.

SINCE our last issue the war in the far east has not been very exciting. The dispatches do not give the full details of the disposition of the Japanese army. Some think they are still trying to surround the Russians, and cut them off entirely, while others think they will be satisfied with driving them out of Manchuria. It is likely that some portion of the Japanese army will endeavor to get in the neighborhood of Vladivostok while the roads are frozen hard. The Russian fleet in the Indian Ocean is reported at various points, and little of a definite nature is known of their intentions, or where the Japanese fleet is stationed to meet them. In the meanwhile the disturbances at various points in the Russian empire are causing the government much trouble. Instead of quieting down, it gets worse, and the end is not in sight. "Peace" has been the cry of every outside nation, and various plans have been talked over, but without reaching a conclusion. As an indication of the resources of the contending nations, the Russians failed to get their loan floated in France and Germany. They appealed to their own bankers and succeeded in getting it. Japan appealed to England and the United States, and the agents had to refuse the money as ten times the amount asked was subscribed. These straws indicate the way the wind blow.

WE wish to call special attention to the article in this issue written by Bro. Halstead, on "Unity of the Spirit." Bro. Halsted is one of the oldest preachers of our Church in this country. His experience in the field for so many years, entitles him to consideration. His close observation of the history of the Church, and of the principle men who have figured in its course makes his opinion valuable. He has noted the difference between men in their mentality, whether from natural causes or by virtue of educational privileges, and thinks that due allowance should be made for this variation. He realizes that while this condition exists it is impossible to have a unit body, and all see alike on every point. It was so in the days of the apostles, and has been so all down to this time. Of course, Bro. Halsted recognizes the fundamental principles underlying the Gospel that is the power of God unto salvation, and the necessity of obeying the directions laid down, and of living in accordance with the profession made. He has contended for all of this earnestly for many years; indeed the best of his life has been given to this work so he cannot be accused of looseness in this respect. What Bro. Halsted wants to see is less contention among brethren over what is not essential to salvation, and a spirit of love manifested, with charity for what we may consider the shortcomings of our brother. The man who abandons the faith, or nullifies the principles of the truth of the Gospel, would receive no consideration at the hands of Brother Halstead; but where two brethren cannot see alike concerning a matter of minor importance, or one that does not affect the faith of the Gospel, he would have these brethren exchange views in a kind and friendly spirit, and not fall out, use harsh terms, or get contentious. In short he wants us to be brethren, and to manifest a noticable degree of brotherly love.

If on first reading Bro. Halstead's article you are tempted to criticise it, read the article over again, a third time even, and endeavor to get into the spirit of the writer, and you will find he is only laboring to induce you to shun a danger point.

Notes by the Way.

After the conclusion of our meetings at Higgins, Texas, I took the train on the Santa Fe, at about 8:30 A. M. to Amarillo, where I arrived at about 8:30 A. M. I had to remain at the above place until about 7:30 P. M. in order to take a train on the Ft. Worth and Denver, R. R. to Quanah, Texas. Arrived at about 12:30 P. M. I found Brother Newberry waiting for me at the depot.

The surface of the ground was covered with a heavy snow, I am told it was about eleven inches deep. It soon melted however in that southern clime, which left the ground so sloppy and muddy that it was very unpleasant under foot.

I found the people quite excited over a local option campaign. The "Drys" and "Wets," were all lined up in battle array.

A troop of eight or nine traveling Salvationists had also come to town, with their musical instruments and a bass drum. They played nicely, and rendered good vocal music, which attracted the people. They also drew the crowd after them, who wanted to be entertained. They occupied the Methodist Church South. (I heard a man say the difference between the Methodist Church North, and the Methodist Church South was that one was on the north side of Jesus and the other on the south side.)

That the people who went to hear the Salvation Army, went to be entained was quite evident. For when they called for testimonies, they acted like people who were sitting on Spaulding's glue.

We held our meetings in the Christian Church, but on account of the mud, Salvation Army, and politics, it was very difficult to get much of a hearing. It was evident however that some interest was manifested. The pastor told me that what I had said would be helpful to his congregation. The meetings were closed on Sunday Night.

On Monday morning I started for Avery, Oklahoma. I took the Frisco to Oklahoma City. Remained there over night, and then at 8:30 A. M. took the train on the Choctaw R. R. for Shawnee City, and again changed on to the Santa Fe, and arrived at Avery at 2:10 P. M. I found Bro. Deffenbaugh in waiting for me.

After the first meeting held was set in, which made it impossible to hold meetings for several days. The rain finally cleared away and the meetings commenced again, and considerable interest was manifested.

Several began to consider the things spoken quite seriously, and were anxious to hear more. One man invited me to his home, where we had a profitable time conversing on Bible topics.

Meetings closed with well wishes, and invitations to come again. Bro. Deffenbaugh and wife, are all alone in the faith at this place, and they will have to hold the fort and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, which no doubt both of them will do.

The Church of God must stand as the pillar and ground of the faith, if they carry out that for which they were called out. See 1 Tim. iii. 15, "That thou mayest know how to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the pillar and the ground of the truth." To stand in the above aspect requires both study and discipline. Study to show thyself a workman, and not only this, but learn proper behavior, that the truth defended may not be disgraced by one so presenting it. These are absolutely prerequisites which qualify a person as a minister of the gospel. I know of no reason why Bro. Deffenbaugh cannot thus equip himself. He is now struggling to put his family in shape, where they will be more comfortable. He settled on a government claim on the prairies of Oklahoma, and now holds the government title to his farm.

Bro. Deffenbaugh conveyed me to the train, which I boarded for my next appointment at New Kirk, Oklahoma.

I arrived at New Kirk at about 7 o'clock P. M. Sister Vickery met me at the depot, and conveyed me by carriage to the home of herself and husband, Ivan Vickery. Meetings were commenced the next night after my arrival.

The meetings at this place were very satisfactory. Not only was the attendance good, but the interest was all that could be desired, all through the meetings. Many of the things they heard, they confessed was new to them, but they patiently listened to the Scripture quotations cited in their support. One man remarked that I was not giving man's opinions, but reading straight from the Bible, and this had its effect upon the minds of the audience.

Questions were asked, and answered. One thing was quite noticable that the questions were asked not in a spirit of controversy, but solely for information. Many were the invitations that I received to visit them personally in their homes and give further light.

At the close of the last meeting the people flocked about me wishing me God's blessing, and confessed their interest in the Word spoken, and hoped that I would return to them again.

As we left the house a group of people outside, stopped me to ask more questions. One man said, "Won't you come home with me?" It was hard to break away from such interest. If financial reasons would have permitted me to remain two or three weeks longer, I feel assured that a number could have been brought to the obedience of faith, and a church organized. I expect to return to them again on my next south-western trip.

We have, however, at this place, a bright young man, named George Waters, who is studying hard, to qualify himself for the work of the ministry. I visited him, and answered many questions upon which he desired light. Bro. Waters is going to try to hold the fort. He is now a superintendent of a Sunday school, and not only this, but every Wednesday night he conducts a public Bible class, for the study of the Scriptures. If any one will send him books, papers and tracts, to distribute in the neighborhood, he will be certain to make good use of them. Please help the work along in that locality, by means of good literature, I know of no better place. Address George Waters, R. F. D. No. 2, Newkirk, Oklahoma.

Sister Nancy Barber is now holding the fort in localities in Oklahoma, where we jointly held services. She writes me that she has revisited Quinlan, and held near a weeks series of meetings to full houses; and when I last heard from her, she was at Winter, the first place we held meetings at in Oklahoma. God bless Sister Barber in her work, she is very much in earnest. I feel much interested in the work in Oklahoma; it is my intention to visit this field again.

I now in Kansas, and at this writing [illegible] meetings on the Arkansas City route. These meetings I will report later on.

It seems to me that the people are tied less to their creeds than they used to be, and are more willing to engage in personal investigation as to Bible truth.

On this present trip I have met with but very little denominational prejudice. I have endeavored not to raise it, and believe I have as a general thing succeeded. The most that I have seen was at Higgins, Texas, when on the Sunday night, the Baptist preacher gave a hot scorcher from the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. I wrote a reply to it for the town paper. Let us press forward in the glorious work. The great consummation is near at hand, when the last battle for truth will have been fought, and the victory won.

The King is coming, not to weep, and finally perish upon the tree, no, that is in the past. See the heavens part, revealing to our ravished eyes the Royal Majesty of the heavens, riding upon the clouds like burning billows, bounding beneath his feet; and hark! the archangel's trump, with its dead-awakening blast, which pierces the caverns of the dead! The sea heaves and casts forth the sleepers in Jesus; the earth casts forth her dead, and no more covers her slain ones.

Even now, the swelling buds revive the hope that the winter of death is almost past. Its chilly storms, and icy blasts, will flee before the genial breath of spring. The gloomy night fades away, as the morning emerges above the horizon, gilding the mountain tops with gleams of glory. "The sun riseth, a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after the rain." The vista of futurity is about to be unveiled, God's will is about to be accomplished, gladness is about to beam from every eye, and songs of gladness break forth from every heart.

ROMANS VI. 22.

But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. Yes, we who meet here each week to remember our Lord till he come, have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered, being made free from sin, and become servants of righteousness. And we know too that unless we have really buried the old man with all the desires of the flesh, have become dead indeed unto sin, it will be hard to work the works of righteousness. But we realize too that the end everlasting life, is worth laying aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and so have decided to run the race for the mark of the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus our Lord. We have decided that the end everlasting life is worth striving for, we know it is warfare all along the way, for narrow is the way that leadeth to life, and Jesus says strive to enter in at the straight gate, but we know that if we run the race with patience and endure to the end, it is life, glorious life forevermore. The future prospect is one of full and complete satisfaction. Because we may not partake of the world's pleasures, do we think our life is too narrow, look to the future, it is infinite; are we despised, misrepresented, everywhere spoken against for Christ's sake? In the future there is glory and honor and power in the kingdom of God Are we beset with troubles, weakness, grief, sorrow and pain, the future will bring purity, incorruptible health, unfading joys and divine nature. It is the hope of so glorious a prospect that carries us through trials and temptations hard to be borne. It is written of Jesus, that he learned obedience by the things he suffered, that the Captain of our salvation might be made perfect through suffering, and he left us an example that we should walk in his steps. Paul followed the Master closely for he says he endured all things, persecutions, hunger, peril, yea, counted his own life not dear to him that he might finish his course with joy, why all this sacrifice and devotion? That he might attain unto a resurrection from out among the dead, and the end everlasting life. We have been called to glory and virtue, to the supreme honor of sitting with Christ [illegible] to be [illegible] he shall [illegible] us not [illegible] be overtaken.

We all acknowledge the value of time, but few its worth any other but wise by feeling the want of it when too late.

Time and opportunity are the most uncertain of all things; and yet there is nothing we more depend upon.

"See then, that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

Household of the One Faith:

Time is swiftly passing and it will soon be our yearly conference meeting, and I would let the brethren know how good an opportunity it will be to meet with the brethren here at Scholls in our annual conference. You are all perhaps aware that there is to be an Exposition held at Portland Ore., this year beginning in June. Now as our conference will be held the latter part of June what a good chance for those brethren who would like to visit the coast and the fair to arrange their business so as to take advantage of reduced rates to visit the Exposition and meet with us here in conference at the same time. We extend a hearty welcome to all who can come and hope to see many of the household of faith who we only know by name and also those who we have met and loved as a brother in Christ.

There will be some tents on the ground so if any should desire to camp they can be accommodated. As we look for a large attendance and there are not many of us here to take care of the people it may be necessary that some camp on the ground and we will try to make all comfortable and at home. Let us make this a meeting to the honor and glory of God and all come with the same spirit as if to meet the elder brother and work for the Master with all our heart and may we all meet in his glorious kingdom. Your Sister in the Master.

MRS. W. L. SKEELS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

As I am the only one of the faith living in this neighborhood I will write a few lines as I feel much delighted over the meeting held here in this vicinity by Sister Nancy Barber. Her sermons were grand, encouraging and convincing, to those out of Christ as well as those who are now in the one body. There was a splendid turn-out and very good attention and the people wanted her to continue the meeting, but the busy time of the season for crops was here and we thought best to close them for this time, and the weather was quite threatening. On Saturday we drove down to Mother Randolphs and on Sunday had Bible class and then we took the communion and had good exhortations to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, for if we do those things there is more life in us, and we can help one another to live more closely to God. Brethren, let us not fail to declare the whole counsel of God, and put on the spirit of meekness and love one toward another, and besides this giving all diligence. Add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in us and abound they make us neither barren or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But if we lack these things we have forgotten that we were purged from our old sins. For if we do these things we shall never fall. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. When the Savior comes, shall we be one of his chosen? Most surely, if we put on the whole armor of God. May we be found teaching the gospel of the kingdom, no matter where we may be.

Your Sister, in the hope of Christ's coming.

ELLA R. GATES.

Maxims on Time.

Time is like a verb that can only be used in the present tense.

The employment of time is to the soul what retirement and rest are to the body—it creates health and vigor.

When we complain that time sits heavy on us, it is confessing in fact that we have employed it shamefully.

Time is a grateful friend; if we use it well it never fails to make us a suitable [illegible]

Obituary.

Mr. Cary Noble, one of the pioneers of Green Co., Wis., passed away at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Pollock, on Washington street, last night at about 10 o'clock. His death was caused by a general breaking down due to old age. He had been up and around the house up to about a month ago, but for the past three weeks has been confined to his bed a greater part of the time. He gradually grew weaker but his mind remained clear and he was able to converse with his relatives up to a few minutes before the life spark went out.

Death came peacefully and while he was sleeping. He closed his eyes shortly after nine o'clock and that life was slowly ebbing away was evident only by the shortness of breaths which gradually grew weaker and shorter. In entering upon his last sleep he undoubtedly did not realize that he had looked upon the faces of his children and relatives, who were assembled about his bedside, for the last time.

Mr. Noble was born in Clinton Co., Ohio, on Jan. 20, 1816. He was the son of Benjamin and Mrs. Noble, his mother's maiden name being Elizabeth Mathews. He came west to Illinois in the early thirties and engaged in farming near Rock Grove. He moved into Green county and followed farming for a number of years after 1838. In 1840 he was married to Catherine McCauley at Rock Grove. They moved to this city about twenty-nine years ago, where they lived happily together until eight years ago, when Mrs. Noble died. Since her death the deceased has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. S. R. Pollock.

There were five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Noble, four of whom are living, Ben, James, and Mrs. Pollock, of this city, Arron, of Muscatine, Iowa. Simoungton, a son, died in July, 1893.

The funeral will be held Sunday from the Christian church, of which he was a member and where he was a constant attendant before he became too feeble to leave the house. His many friends will assemble at the house at 1 o'clock and the church service will be at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

J. W. Niles of Edinboro, Pa., died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. Fisher, of Salamanca, N. Y. Bro. Niles had been in poor health for several years. Deceased was 72 years old. He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Fisher of Salamanca, N. Y. and Mrs. Kittie Adams of Edinboro, Pa., besides a host of friends and relatives.

The writer first became acquainted with him about 15 years ago and found in him a Christian gentleman, always and everywhere laboring to instruct those with whom he came in contact as to the love and goodness of God in giving his only begotten Son to redeem man from his lost and ruined condition. He was a firm advocate of the restoration of the kingdom of Israel, with Jesus Christ as the Supreme Ruler, and the twelve apostles as co-rulers with him, and that his kingdom would expand until it embraced the whole earth. Bro. Niles and the writer have been fast friends ever since we became acquainted and we were loth to part with him, but we hope that when Christ comes and gathers his jewels we will meet our brother in the land where there will be no more sickness, sorrow, pain or death, and behold the face of our blessed Redeemer, and with him share his glory. God grant it may soon be. Amen.

J. B. LENT.

Brother Underwood:

Would you please say that Brother Niles left a Chronological Chart that his widow would like to dispose of cheap.

Go Work in My Vineyard.

We are workers in the vineyard,
In the vineyard of the Lord,
We must labor for the penny,
And receive the great reward,
We must do the Master's biding,
We must go at his command,
We must listen to his teaching,
For he died for every man.

Now this vineyard needs its pruning,
And its soil must all be tilled,
Least the vines will all grow weaker,
And its fruit it will not yield,
We must not forget the stranger,
We must not forget the poor,
We must not forget the heathen,
We can find them at the door.

When we go to trim this vineyard,
Use the pruning knife with care,
Least we wound some tender feelings,
And they turn back in dispair,
Let us point them to their errors,
Point them to the better way,
Let our love so twine around them,
Guide them to eternal day.

We who have borne the heat and burden
In the vineyard of the Lord,
Don't forget the younger children,
Feed them with the precious Word,
See that every plant is watered,
Water them with precious care,
So we all can get the penny,
Then a crown of life we'll wear.

Random Thoughts. No. 15.

Dear Restitution:

From what I have said in previous articles, it will be seen that I do not regard the millennial as some do. With many the millennium is every thing, and speak of it as a time of universal peace and glory, no more death nor sickness, nor war, nor trouble of any kind, but all to be peace and love and joy in the whole world—millennial blessedness, millennial glory, etc. and yet the very word is not found in the Bible. True we read of a thousand years, and the word means a thousand years, but the thousand years there mentioned are anything but peace and joy and freedom from pain and sorrow in the world in general. There it is clearly taught that mortality will exist in the world even after the thousand years have passed away. As I see it the thousand years or a large part any way will be a time of war, of conflict, of subjugation, one kingdom after another to be subdued till all the kingdoms of the world have become the kingdom of the Lord and his Anointed. Some people cannot admit that pain or sorrow or affliction can exist after the Lord comes. They believe that God is love, and can see nothing else but love. God being love could not allow pain or sorrow to exist on the earth after the Lord comes. Now I admit that God is love, as well as they do, but love is not the only attribute of the Lord. God is light and in him is no darkness at all, but there is much darkness (ignorance) in the world. Our God is a consuming fire! Some people can see nothing but love. God is love! Now I will not say that too much is said about the love of God, but I will say that too little is said about other attributes. I think there is more said in the Bible about his wrath, his vengeance, fury, anger, indignation, etc. than about his love! "God is jealous, and the Lord revengeth; the Lord revengeth and is furious! The Lord will take vengeance on his adversaries and he reserveth wrath for his enemies." Nahum i. 2. Jesus and his apostles when here preached the gospel, that is what they always preached the gospel of the kingdom of God, but I do not call to mind that they ever preached about the love of God! True the gospel reveals the love of God to send so good a message, but I do not think they ever preached it. But to the saints they taught it. As says John, "Behold! what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God," etc. 1 John iii. 1. But this was said to the saints, not to sinners. What God says to saints should not be applied to sinners, and so vice versa, what God says to sinners should not be applied to saints. I once heard a man say every word in the Bible was the Word of God, and was addressed to him! I said I could not agree with him in that, for that in the Bible were words of God and of the devil, of good men and bad men, nor would he be willing to apply all to himself, for instance "woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, etc., how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" We should rightly apply the Word of God, but it is very doubtful if any man would apply this to himself. Our Lord Jesus being sent by God, spoke the words of God, and for all God is love, he sometimes used language that is not very lovely, it depends on to whom he speaks. To his saints it may always be kind and good and lovely, but not so to the wicked. To the one he may be love but to the other a consuming fire. "The Lord Jesus will be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that acknowledge not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints and to be admired in all them that believe," etc. 2 Thes. i. 7-10. Now I am not objecting to what is said as to God being love, I only object to what is not said as to other attributes of God. There are two sides to most questions. While I rejoice in believing that the love of God moved him to send his Son into the world with a good message, and that he will save all who believe and obey that good message, yet I am quite satisfied his judgment will be righteous in awarding to the unbelieving and disobedient, "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish," etc. Rom. ii. 5-11. I have all faith that the righteous will be given eternal life, will be made immortal, and I have just as much faith that he will destroy the wicked. For "God is love," and "God is a consuming fire." "Behold the goodness and severity of God! on them who fell severity, but toward thee goodness, if thou continue in his goodness," etc. Rom. xi. 22. And God is not changeable—as he has been, and is, so will he be—yesterday, today and forever. So when our Lord comes to reign on Mount Zion with his holy ones, he will bless his people but subdue his enemies. The saints who will then be like him, having glorious bodies and will be mighty ones, will share with him in the blessing of his people and subduing his enemies, and will strike through kings, in the day of his wrath he shall judge among the heathen (nations), he shall fill the place (fields of battle) with dead bodies, he shall wound the heads over many countries (or great nations) Psa. cx. 5, 6. And this is in harmony with Psalm cxliv. which is just to the point. I will give it entire from Boothroyd, "Sing to Jehovah a new song; his praise in the assembly of the saints. Let Israel rejoice in his Maker (that is mortal Israel the subjects). Let the sons of [illegible] let them sing [illegible] the timbrel and harp. For Jehovah taketh pleasure in his people; The humble he adorneth with salvation. Let the saints gloriously exult; Let them sing aloud on their couches; Let the high praises of God be in their mouths. And a two-edged sword in their hand; To execute judgment on the heathen, and inflict correction on the peoples; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute on them the judgment decreed, This honor awaiteth all his saints. Praise Jehovah."

In reading this Psalm let my readers apply the first four verses to mortal Israel then in their own land with Jesus and the immortal saints reigning over them. And then the rest of the Psalm to these immortal saints. All this is in harmony with what Jesus says, Rev. iii. 21, that the overcomers should sit with him on his throne, etc. And Rev. ii. 26, 27, that he would give them power over the nations, and that they should rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, etc. All of which is very different from going to heaven to sing glory hallelujah for ever. With many it is too material. They cannot think that immortal saints can ever engage in war, or that there will be war and blood shed in the millennium. Now I think I have shown in previous articles, that the twelve tribes will be the subjects of the kingdom in their own land. And that the kingdom will spread out, one nation after another being subdued till all nations have been broken to pieces and consumed, the people of these nations becoming subjects in or of the kingdom till the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Dan. vii. 27. Still it is hard for some people to believe that our Lord Jesus, or his immortal saints, can engage literally in war! Well I have given a few of the Scriptures on the subject. My readers can read for themselves, but why should they not? Have not such things been done by God and the angels? Did not God pass sentence of death upon Adam and all his posterity? And do we not see the sentence executed every day? Who was it brought a flood upon the ungodly world and drowned them all except those in the ark? Who rained fire and brimstone from heaven on Sodom? Who marched throughout Egypt and in a single night slew the first born in all the houses of the Egyptians? Who sent King Saul to slay the Amalakites, man and woman, infant and suckling? Who caused the death of 185 thousand of the army of Sennacharib in one night? And many other cases may be cited. If God and the angels have and can do such things, why should we think the saints, who will then be like the angels, cannot do the same? Any way I am just simple enough to believe what the Bible says—if does not mean what it says but something else, then who can tell us what it means? But more anon.

Is the World Growing Better?

How often we hear the statement made that the world is growing better. As proof of this we are reminded that the different churches are outgrowing their denominational lines. Church federation is growing in favor. It won't be long, they say, until all churches will unite on a broad basis. I remember of reading of a broad way and of a narrow way. I also remember that the few were promised the blessing. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," Luke xii. 32. The Apostle Paul said to Timothy "But watch thou in all things." To do this we must be able to know what the truth is. Jesus said, "If any man will do his (the Father's) will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." John vii. 17.

Let me state here that the great opposition to Jesus during his ministry came from the religious world. If all were Christians who profess to be, infidelity and scepticism would hide its form. To show more fully the religious spirit of our day I wish to give a brief account of a meeting held in our capital, Columbus, O., just last week. The report was made by Dr. Rexford pastor of the Universalist Church of that city. "This Conference was not called to discuss denominational questions [illegible] called by the 'sanction of or under the auspices of either of the liberal churches, Universalist or Unitarian. It was not held for 'revival' purposes under the old time meaning of revivals. It was called for the discussion of religious interpretations up to date." Eight were placed on the program. Four from the liberal churches and four from the outside. Through the sentiment expressed no one could have detected any lines of division. There were no outsiders. They were all inside. Rabbi Klein claimed Jesus of Nazareth as a Jew and said that he is spoken of in Talmudistic writings as Rabbi Joshua. The Christian claims Jesus—why not the Jew? Dr. Thayer of Cincinnati, Unitarian, in his discussion of "Religion-up-to-Date" urged that everything is religious today that uplifts the people to better types of life. We can no longer make the old distinction of "sacred and profane, men of God and men of the world. The best man of today is the best man of God. Business must not be purely secular and religion purely sacred. Everything that helps the world is sacred. Teaching is a sacred office, as sacred in the school room as in the pulpit. And so all people who hold offices of help are in a sacred calling. Dr. Lewis read one of the most remarkable papers in the whole series. Dr. Lewis is with the First M. E. church of Columbus. His subject was "The Ultimate Christ." It was a surprise to us all. We thought we knew pretty well where the Liberal party stands, but this paper set us questioning where the Methodist stands. Perhaps Dr. Lewis is not representative in this paper, but expresses his personal convictions. Nearly all the historic or traditional theories concerning Christ were set aside and especially the theory of his substituted or retributive death and the "ultimate Christ" seemed to be the spirit of all helpful services in the world. Dr. Lewis was one of the most welcome members of the company. In closing this account of the Conference I wish to call attention especially to the first two phases of it. There was not a single reference in all the papers and addresses to the supernatural, the whole trend of thought was the natural, placing religion on natural grounds—a growing feature in the modern religious landscape. There seems to be a diminishing demand for the supernatural in the later interpretations of religion. Second, in all these discussions not a word was said in regard to religion for another world. The thought centered on the problems of religion for this world, the members apparently assuming that if we can rationally interpret this world and master it for best uses we shall solve the problems of all other worlds." I have used Dr. Rexford's own words in the above report. Will these men go to their pulpits and teach what they have in their papers? I suggest not, each will find time to teach a little church doctrine. Not one Scripture alluded to in all this report. Paul commended the Bereans for they examined to see whether these things be true or not. Jesus said "Search the Scriptures for in them you think you have eternal life and they are they which testify of me." Jesus went everywhere preaching the gospel. He sent his apostles out and they preached the gospel. The great commission was, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Paul wrote to the Roman church, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto the salvation of every one that believeth." A definite gospel was taught. It was the gospel of Christ. But though we or an angel preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed. If any man preach any other gospel let him be accursed. Gal. i. 8, 9. Do not these texts teach the gospel is definite? Modified by the definite article "the" and the phrase "of Christ." Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom of God. Was there such an expression found in all the papers read at this Conference? If so it was not reported. These men emphasize one phase of the Christ life and that is the moral. Was it the moral teaching of Christ that caused the Jews to hate him and finally to put him to death? It does not require a critic to observe that it was the doctrine, that he was the only Begotten Son of God that caused the trouble. This to them was blasphemy.

In the 5th chapter of Matthew we find the grandest moral precepts ever taught. And yet Jesus taught, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Our [illegible] took the time in teaching his moral precepts to allude to the future. He told his apostles that in the regeneration they should occupy thrones and rule over Israel. He confessed unto Pilate that he was born into the world to become a King. During the forty days he was with his apostles after his resurrection he taught them of the things concerning the kingdom of God. He taught his followers, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." They thought this a hard saying and ceased to follow him. When he asked the apostles, Will ye go also? Peter answered, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou only hast the words of eternal life. We believe and are sure that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. The words that Christ taught were declared to be spirit and truth. I would not detract one thought from the moral phase of the Christ, neither would I take one sentence or part of a sentence from the doctrine that he taught. When the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth? Many in our day are receiving an up-to-date religion and reject the gospel taught by Christ and his apostles. There are a few yet who are willing to abide in the truth.

I will close this paper by giving Paul's last charge to Timothy, which I think very appropriate. "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things." 2 Tim. iv. 1-5. These Scriptures need no interpretation but were spoken by one who was guided by the Holy Spirit. I have tried to place the sayings of the Son of Man and his apostles against the words spoken by man. Which will you receive? Remembering that his Word shall judge us in the great day.

Yours in the true faith.

D. C. ROBISON.

ENVY.

Envy is a trait of character to be shunned as well as feared. The Scriptures in many places warn us against it. It is the fostering element in our nature of almost every, sin and crime humanity is heir to. It will nerve the hand take the life of man. It has been the controlling power of all religious wars, bloody, cruel or otherwise. It was envy of their innocent brother that caused Joseph's brethren to cast him into the pit and leave him there to perish. Proverbs xiv. 30 declares a sound heart is the life of the flesh, but envy the rottenness of the bone. Again xxvii. 4 says, "Wrath is cruel and anger is outrageous, but who is able to stand before envy?" It was through envy that Christ was taken and slain. Matt. xxvii. 18. For he (Pilate) knew that for envy they had delivered him up. In the first chapter of Romans Paul describes a class God has given over to a life of their own choosing, as he says being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, witchcraft, covetousness, maliciousness, envy, murder, debate, deceit, whisperings, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, and inventors of evil things. O what a record of those knowing the judgment of God that they which commit such things are worthy of death, yet not withstanding this knowledge not only do the same, but more still have pleasure in them that do them. Rev. i. 29-32. All of this class of professors did not live in Paul's day. We sometimes see them even in our day. All this dark category of crime to which Paul alludes in the first chapter of Romans comes only from a carnal mind, for we read in 1 Cor. iii. 3, For ye are carnal, for whereas there is among you envying, strife and divisions, are ye not carnal and walk according to man. The church may think it can practice all the evils found in the world and practiced by the natural man and yet pass the golden gate into the city of God. But listen to what Paul declares in Gal. v. 21, "I tell you beforehand as I have also told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." That settles it, Paul then closes the chapter with these beautiful words, "Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another (by so doing) to envying one another." Oh, how much sorrow, tears and bitter heart aches have been caused by fostering and growing a field of vain glory, one of the worst crops that can be cultivated in the human heart. Vain glory, something that is not real, a counterfeit life. At the most we do not live here in this life very many years, while here we may as well appear natural, be ourselves and not try to deceive ourselves and others that we are something great. God honors our heart and life. There is but one kind of medicine we can take that will eradicate the envious spirit from our nature and help us to build a life and character for God. Paul gives the formulas or mixture in Philippian ii. 1-8.

L. S. BRONSON.

A Sympathetic Disposition.

The nearer a follower of Jesus approaches the Christ life, the more sympathetic will such an one become, for the reason that sympathy is a very conspicuous trait in our Redeemer's life. We have no record that he ever repulsed any seekers for his aid and sympathy. The nearest approach to withholding sympathy was in the case of the "Woman of Canaan, (who) came out of the coasts, and cried unto him, saying, have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is greatly vexed with a devil. But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then she came and worshiped him, saying, Lord, help me. But he answered and said, it is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it to the dogs, and she said, truth Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." The Savior's sympathetic heart could no longer resist her earnest appeal, and his taint of Jewish prejudice fled away, and he said unto her, "O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole, from that very hour."

Let us take a lesson from this, and not allow a wall of prejudice to stand between us and a supplicant for our aid and sympathy.

We have a Savior to deal with, who even now can be touched with a feeling for our infirmities. During his ministry upon earth, his heart-strings were always responsive to the appeals of suffering humanity; blessings dropped from his hands like dewdrops from heaven. His blessed promises were ever soul-inspiring, to the mind of the dejected and sorrowing pilgrim, which always kindled in the heart, lofty aspiration and joy of heart, before which despondancy fled like the fog before the rising sun.

It is his purpose in the good time that is coming, to cause sickness, sorrow, pain and death, to pass away into the realm of forgetfulness, and never more afflict humanity any more at all. Then, in place of tear-stained faces, sweet harmony, peace and joy, will beam from every eye. At this time, God's will will be done on earth, as completely as it is now consummated in the heavens.

Blessed Hope! When we meditate upon it's sweet blessedness, our thoughts cannot help but rise up in thankfulness, and the heart sing for joy, and in the sweet melody of heaven, ascribe praise to him who has loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood. This hope is a sunbeam which converts gloom into glory and creates within the believer a tender sympathetic heart, just like the Savior's.

We may grow into this life, to the extent of entirely changing the carnal nature, so that that which is sinful, will become abhorent and repulsive, to a nature so refined and made sensitive to sympathy. By faith such a person can even now lift the curtain, and catch a glimpse of the impending glory.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

W. H. WILSON.

An appeal to the brethren of the one hope in Illinois.

Dear brethren:

By the signs of the times it ought to be apparent to all, that the second coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is near at hand, we ought now to arouse ourselves to the thought of the blessed Hope, and realize that the day is far spent, and the night is at hand when no man can work. We must therefore work with hands and voice, and give freely of our means that the light of the glorious gospel may be spread broadcast among those who have never heard it. We have but one Evangelist in the State of Illinois and we ought surely to be able to support him liberally and to encourage him in the good work he has already begun. 2 Cor. ix. 6, 7. Therefore let us help him all we can to go on with this grand work, and thereby hasten the coming of our blessed Master to set up his kingdom.

LILLIE FILSON.

Dear brothers and sisters:

A few weeks ago I saw in THE RESTITUTION some good suggestions in regard to printing a small paper for children, but have found nothing on the subject in the last two numbers. I feel interested in such a paper, and believe it our duty as the household of faith to provide such food for youthful minds and in such a way that they can readily comprehend and retain it. We must admit that it is the early impressions that sink deepest and last longest. What did Jesus say about little children in Matt. xviii.? At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus saying, who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and sets him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the heavenly kingdom. Now as little children are by nature pure and innocent should we not provide such mental food as will cultivate and strengthen the reverential faculties of the brain, causing them to predominate over the opposite faculties, for as the physical body develops year by year, even so does the mental faculties. Hoping to hear from others on this subject through the dear old RESTITUTION. Submitted in love of the truth.

MRS. C. W. EMSLEY.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Unfermented Wine for the Lord's Supper.

The following recipe for making unfermented communion wine is given.

Pick off as many ripe grapes as desired, wash and mash, avoiding contact with metal vessels. Put in strong thin bag and hang up to drain. To every gallon of juice add two pounds of sugar. Place over a slow fire and let juice boil about fifteen minutes, stirring to prevent it from sticking and burning. Skim off the skum that rises to the top while boiling. Bottle in small bottles; pint bottles are best, as all must be used as it is opened to prevent fermentation. Bottle and seal air-tight while hot, keep in a dark cellar or where canned goods are kept to prevent freezing.

Prepare the Way.

The urgent command is now given: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Do you wish to hasten the day of the return of the blessed Master? "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Do ye wish to see the King in his beaty as he descends from heaven to take his waiting people unto himself? "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Do you wish to join in the song of Moses and the Lamb? "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Do you wish to enter in through the gates into the city? "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Do you wish to enter speedily upon the enjoyment of all that awaits the redeemed in the heavenly kingdom? "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." "Lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!" "Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world!"—Advent Review.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 3 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

"What We Believe,

An Exposition of the Faith of the Church of God," in sixteen chapters, 40 pages, large size, is now ready for shipment. It contains chapters on The Restitution, The Kingdom of God, The Government of the Nations, The Restoration of Israel, The Literal Resurrection of the Dead, The Immortalization of the Righteous, The Final Destruction of the Wicked, Eternal Life only through Christ, The Faith of the Gospel, Repentance, Baptism, A Holy Life, and Organization of the Church of God. Price per copy 15 cts; 10 copies $1.00. Send postal or express money orders.

A MINISTER'S REASONS.

I have a new addition of "A Minister's Reasons for leaving his Church," a pamphlet of 22 pages, which I will mail at 5 cts. per copy, or ten copies for 40 cts.

Winona Lake.

Winona Lake this season will be particularly attractive for an outing. The summer of 1905 is to be an especially attractive season at Winona Lake, the beautiful resort of Northern Indiana on the Pennsylvania Lines. The Presbyterian General Assembly will convene there May 18th. Noted speakers and musicians have been engaged for the summer entertainments. There will be conventions and social and religious conferences from May until September. The literary representation will be prominent. In brief, it will be a most profitable season educationally. Teachers and students who attend the Summer School will derive much benefit.

Winona Lake has golf links, tennis courts, baseball and cricket grounds, boating, fishing, swimming and camping facilities. The Pennsylvania Lines run direct to the park entrance. Season and fifteen-day excursion tickets may be obtained from ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

Live Thy Creed.

Be what thou seemest; live thy creed;
Hold up to earth the torch divine;
Be what thou prayest to be made;
Let the great Master's steps be thine.

Sow truth, if thou the truth would reap;
Who sows the false will reap the vain;
Erect and sound the conscience keep;
From hollow words and deeds refrain.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. The topic for our lesson tonight, is not only a doctrinal, but also a highly practical one, I will put it in the form of a question:

DO YOU KNOW JESUS?

See 1 John ii. 4: "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him." So we learn from this Scripture that the proof of knowing Jesus, is shown by the obedience of the one who claims to know Jesus.

Now, Carrie, I will ask you to give us the correct starting point in the study of this question?

Carrie. I would start with the Logos which was in the beginning. We must be careful and distinguish between the Logos "in the beginning," and the Logos "made flesh." See Jno. i. 1: "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and God was the Logos."

Q What are we to understand by the words Theos-Logos?

A I would define it to be the science of God.

Q Please inform us as to the source from whence the above science comes?

A From the Logos which was with God, and God was that Logos.

Q What is the Greek comprehension of the word Logos as found in John i. 1-3?

A According to the best authority that can be given by eminent scholars it comprehends in Greek, the five prominent attributes, which was with the great Eternal "in the beginning," and with no one else, and was also descriptive of the characteristics of his personality alone; and hence, "was God," as well as was "with God."

Q Please name those five attributes?

A "Logos comprehends in Greek, thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love," these five attributes.

Q Do those five attributes which comprehends the pure Greek of Logos, abide in complete fullness in any other person?

A Only in one other person, who derived them from the Omnipotent.

Q Who is that person?

A See John i. 14: "The Logos was made flesh and dwelt among us." That is thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love now dwelt in complete fullness in human flesh.

Q How made flesh?

A "Made of a woman." Gal. iv. 4.

Q When?

A "Made under the law." Gal. iv. 4.

Q What did the word Logos become when "the Logos was made flesh?"

A It became the appellative of the Logos so made flesh.

Teacher Ella will you please show from the Scriptures where those five attributes dwelt peculiarly in Jesus the Logos "made flesh, in excess of all others, except the Father?

A In the first place, the above Theos-Logos (the science of God) dwelt in him in full completeness alone. See Col. ii. 9, "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily," and in none other.

Teacher I will ask Ella to consider single the five attributes of the Logos made flesh, and show the completeness in him, above all others, and show their relationship to knowing Jesus?

Ella (1) Thought. Correct thinking lies at the base of every correct act in life. "For as he thinketh in his heart so is he." Prov. xxiii. 7. "My thoughts are not as your thoughts." "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." "Thy thoughts are very deep." The attribute of thought was "very deep" in the Logos made flesh.

Q How deep?

A "To the fullness of the Godhead bodily," in all its phases. Depth of thought, as it pertains to knowledge—a deep thinker. Also thoughtful as to the good of others.

Q Now those who say they "know Jesus," to what extent must they go to practically apply to themselves the thoughts of the Logos made flesh?

A "Bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor. x. 5. Those who do not attempt to do this much can never "know Jesus."

(2) Wisdom. "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Col. ii. 3. Nothing can exceed being the depository of "all the treasures of wisdom." Again, "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. i. 24. This wisdom is that which was with God. Hence we find in the "Logos made flesh" "are hid all the treasures of wisdom." His power and wisdom is of God, and hence, must far exceed that of human origin.

Q How about those who say they know Jesus, and are ignorant of the wisdom of God?

A They know him not unless they know "Christ (as) the power of God, and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. i. 24.

"Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of the world?" Verse 20.

"Your faith should not stand in the wisdom of man." 1 Cor. ii. 5.

"My speech and my preaching was not with the enticing words of man's wisdom." Ver. 4. Those who know Jesus must understand and know him only as "the wisdom of God," otherwise they know not Jesus.

(3) Power. "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth." Matthew xxviii. 18. This power (that is "all power" existent in heaven and earth) is given only to (Jesus) the "Logos made flesh." That is, "all power." "All power" previously was "with" and "was" God, the Logos, which was in the beginning. "They (the Jews) were astonished at his doctrine; for his Word was with power." Luke iv. 32.

All who do not know Jesus, know not the "power of God unto salvation." See Rom. i. 16: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of (or derived from) God unto salvation to every one that believeth." None can possibly know "the power of God unto salvation," unless they first acquire the knowledge of Jesus. "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." 1 Cor. i. 18.

"But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of (derived from) God, and the wisdom of God." Verse 20. Not of man.

Q Next please consider the knowledge of God, which was in the beginning with God?

A (4) Knowledge. With regard to the knowledge of the Logos made flesh, Col. ii. 3, informs us that all the treasures of knowledge are hid in him. Or resident with him as it was originally with the Father, the Logos which was in the beginning. David speaking of the knowledge of God, says: "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it." Yet in Jesus, the Logos of God, made flesh, "is all the treasures of knowledge." Is it not "wonderful"?

Q What relation does knowledge bear to those who know Jesus? See John xvii. 3, "And this is life eternal, (or the way to life eternal) that they might know thee the only true God, (the Logos in the beginning) and Jesus Christ (the Logos made flesh) whom thou hast sent." To have a knowledge of Jesus Christ, the Logos made flesh, (which was not the Logos in the beginning) in whom are now hid all the treasures of knowledge, is to know the Father also, and this knowledge brings life everlasting.

Q What about the fifth attribute of the Logos which was in the beginning.

(5) Love. "Love is of God." "God is love."

Q What relation does love bear to knowing Jesus?

A "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." 1 John iv. 8.

"If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar." 1 John iv. 20.

Q Is there a difference between knowing about Jesus, and actually knowing him?

A Yes, to know Jesus carries with it the thought of intimacy, which a mere passing acquaintance has not.

Q Who has the most implicit confidence in Jesus?

A Those who know him best. And those who know him best, love him the most. We cannot have affectionate love for a person we know not. Therefore in order to love Jesus, we must first know him, and the more we know about him, the greater will be our love for him.

Teacher Now, Bessie, tell us, can a stranger be an acquaintance?

Bessie Certainly not. There is a mutual recognition between acquaintances.

Q Then those who profess to know Jesus, must be able to show a responsive recognition from Jesus, must they not?

A They surely must. Says Jesus: "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine." John x. 14.

Q Is there not also a responsive recognition between the Father and the Son?

A There is. "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father." Verse 15.

Q When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, will not many profess to know Jesus, whom Jesus will not recognize?

A Yes. "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophecied (taught) in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? (out of others, but not out of themselves) and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them I never knew you." Matt. vii. The recognition will not be mutual.

Q How can we be assured that we really do know Jesus?

A See 1 John ii. 3, 4: "Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments."

Q What are we to understand by the words "keep his commandments?"

A Why simply to believe, obey, and live just as he has commanded us to do.

Q Did Paul place a very high value upon the knowledge he possessed of the Son of God?

A Yes, indeed. He said: "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things."

Q How much loss did he suffer for the knowledge of the Lord?

A "The loss of all things."

Q For what purpose did he sustain such great loss?

A "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

Q Why suffer such a loss in order that he might attain unto the resurrection out from among the dead ones?

A Because that will be an endless life associated with joys beyond mortal conception.

Q Are all willing to pay that price?

A No, sir, not by any means.

Q Do you recollect a case of that kind?

A I do.

Q Please give it.

A A rich man went to Jesus and asked this question: "What good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

Q Did Jesus name the good thing?

A He did.

Q What was it?

A "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor."

Q Was he willing to do the "good thing?"

A No. "He went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions."

Q What does it mean to know Jesus?

A To do just as he commands.

Q What was the difference between Paul and this young man?

A Paul counted everything but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ my Lord. The young man wanted to hold on to the riches of this world, and also have the riches of the life to come.

Q As he could not have both, which did he chose?

A The riches of this world.

Q Are there rich men today who profess to "know Jesus," who even begrudgingly give even a small fraction of what they possess, that others may "know Jesus?"

A It is a sad thing but such is the case.

Q In order to enjoy the blessings of the life to come, does Jesus require of us the same sacrifice that he did of others before his ascension?

A Exactly the same. He requires us to be constant "living sacrifices," and adds that is but our "reasonable service."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

PRUNNING FRUIT BEARING BRANCHES.

"Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh, and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." John xv. 2, 3.

A branch that beareth not fruit, but draws upon the vine for its life, but renders nothing in return. He taketh it away, severs its connection with the vine. He reminds his disciples that what the vine is to its branches so is his relation to them; and as the branches are only valuable as they bear the luscious grapes, so each disciple receiving life from his Savior is required to renew that life in others, and bring forth abundant fruit. There may come the sharp edge of the pruning knife of trial but it is only that the clusters may be the larger. Then he passes to another lesson suggested by the same illustration, as the branches of the vine are one in sap and essence, and have a unity in their common stock, so all who are in Christ are members one of another, and should hold each other in mutual love as friends in a common cause. They are friends of a common Master and henceforth sharers of his knowledge and sent forth to bear his message to the world. In preceding verses are touching evidences of the love of Jesus, who sought to comfort his disciples in view of his departure from them. "I go to prepare a place for you," "I will not leave you comfortless," but the strongest comfort was the assurance of identity of life between him and them shown by our lesson. Our Lord is the real substantial vine. All other vines whether green things growing or national symbols are but shadows of him. God's face is sternly set against the useless in the spiritual world as well as in the physical, whatever becomes worthless through failure to perform its functions shall be taken away and cast forth. We exist for the sake of bearing. Fruit prunning is not punishment, it is cultivation. Cleansing is not calamity, it is loving care. The branch must stay in the vine if it is to bear fruit. Religion is a permanent relation with God, not an occasional contact.

Editor Restitution:

It is not often that I write anything for publication, but we are much benefitted by the writings of some of the brethren and sisters, and if we all kept still and did not say anything about it, how would they know that their writings did us any good? They might get discouraged and think we did not appreciate their efforts. But let us not let them think so, but give them a word of encouragement occasionally. And now, to the brethren scattered abroad. I sometimes wonder if we are doing all we can to spread the truth of the gospel? It seems to me that we should get out among the people of the world and the church people and perhaps we can throw in a word of truth now and again. Sometimes we can get in a Bible class or some other meeting and it may set some one to thinking. Then, again, do we have a tract in our pocket to give to some one who might be of an enquiring mind? This all means a little sacrifice of one kind or another but what does it amount to when compared to the sacrifice that Christ made for us? If we have any regrets after we attain unto the kingdom one will be that we had not done more for the blessed Master. I don't know but this is one of the means by which we are to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God.

Let us still look for his blessed coming.

Selections.

"Preach the Word."

Preach means "to proclaim; to cry in public; to make known; to deliver a religious discourse," and the apostle Paul declares that "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. 1 Cor. i: 21. Not that preaching is necessarily foolishness, or that the apostle so regarded it, or that God has chosen this method of saving men because it is foolish, but because of its simplicity and effectiveness.

But it is not simply "the foolishness of preaching" or "foolish preaching" that saves men, for if so no doubt the world would have been nearly all saved by this time. While preaching is the Divine method, the effectiveness and power rests upon, first, what is preached, and, second, to some extent, how it is preached.

Not that the matter and manner will always, if ever prove effectual in winning the greatest number, for I believe that the facts show otherwise; they certainly did in Noah's time. We are told that he was "a preacher of righteousness." I have no doubt he was a good one, and did not lack in either matter or manner, but his standard of righteousness was too high, and the subjects were too unpopular, and the result was his converts were very few. It is probable that there were other preachers and that they had converts, but if so they did not get into the ark.

Of all the preachers, before or since, Jesus was the greatest. It was said of him that "never man spake like this man." In manner, then, he was superior to all, and in matter he was perfect. He preached the whole truth in its simplicity and purity, and yet not many, comparatively, believed on him unto salvation. Some of his teachings many who believed who could not endure, and therefore turned back. The same was the experience of the disciples; and has it not been so ever since, and particularly so in our day? It is true there have been some very remarkable revivals, but they were periodical, and revolutionary, exceptional and not the rule, and mostly on special lines of truth, but there have been, and yet are, many revivals and conversions—revivals of sentiment, the resurrection of an old theory, readjusted and varnished over, and conversions to these rejuvenated fallacies, or it may be to some special truth distorted and wrenched away from the great system of truth in its completeness, and magnified above its proportions, while the truth as a whole is ruled out, or is simply hinted at as almost superfluous, and non-essential.

But the apostle exhorted Timothy not simply to preach, but to "preach the Word," from which I understand he meant the whole truth; and then he tells why, "For the time will come [and truly it has come] when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears: and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Tim. iv: 2-4.

The less of the Word you preach the more popular you will become. Make some doctrine, true or false, a specialty in your preaching and you will please the class who run on that line; but preach the Word and you only please those who value the Word above any favorite leader or doctrine, excepting Jesus. Now I am sure this rule cuts very close, and we all need to exercise watchfulness. Brethren, let us preach and teach the Word in its fullness and purity.—James Howie in Herald of Life.

The Habit of Being Late.

A local paper says that the custom of being dilatory is so prevalent that even at places of amusement the audiences are being annoyed by it. It is also noticeable at church services. And here it is irreverent as well as annoying. The worshipers of God should be, like Cornelius and his family, "all present before God," waiting to unite in his worship, and to hear the message of his servant. In the days of our fathers, punctuality was regarded as kindred with honesty and veracity. To be true to his obligations to God and to his fellow-worshipers, a man had to be in his place before the minister entered the pulpit and be ready to join in the prelude of praise. He had no right to reduce his time of service in the sanctuary by ten minutes than to pay his creditors ninety cents on the dollar when he was able to pay in full. A Christian congregation is not an audience. It is a company of worshipers, and every member should be present to take part in the opening anthem of praise, and in the repetition of the Lord's Prayer. The paper from which I quoted, looking at the matter from the secular standpoint only, says: "This habit of being behindhand is very exasperating and insidious. It is extend to all the affairs of life. Among several thousand people, and in the course of a year it amounts to a great loss of time and opportunity."

It is just as easy to be habitually punctual as habitually late. It is a matter of habit. Punctuality in keeping any kind of an engagement, either for business or pleasure, is a virtue which brings its own reward.—Herald and Presbyter.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Will All Men be Saved?

I have written and published, and now offer for sale at ten cents per copy, a book of 60 pages, which is intended to be, as indicated in the sub-title, "A Consideration of the Doctrine of Universal Salvation." Some of the divisions are, An Introductory section, A section treating the historic origin of the doctrine, Tendencies and effects, God's methods of dealing with men, The Savior of all men, Who will have all men to be saved, The paid debt, the sovereignty of God.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APR. 12, 1905. NUMBER 14.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Admiral Rojestvensky with his Baltic fleet, has passed through to the China Sea, where it is very probable he will meet Admiral Togo with the ships of Japan. The whole scale may be changed before many days, Russia has apparently staked all on a great battle. With the Russian fleet outnumbering the Japanese, and the added danger of the Russian vessels at Vladivostok coming south to harrass the Japanese, making necessary a further division of Togo's forces, the chances of Russian success are good. It will be a question of the ability of the "man behind the gun," and the world awaits the conflict with anxiety. Meanwhile the land forces have been very quiet, and the movements of troops have not been worthy of special note. However, the internal disturbances in Russia are on the increase and the troops have fired on the parading people in some places. The latest trouble is over the revolt of the clergy. The real head of the church is the procurator General, who can upset all the plans of the synod as he pleases. As he is appointed by the Czar, he must do as the Czar says. This has caused a revolution among the members of the Synod, and spread from them to the priests and other ecclesiastical officers. They have demanded that the present encumbent be removed. The government has relied largely on the priesthood to keep the people in check, and now that this prop is removed, the army is about all that is left.

The Hidden Gospel.

"If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost. In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." Paul (2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.)

In a preceding paper this subject was dealt with tracing the hiding of the gospel from the time of our Lord's mission down through Roman Catholic and Protestant Commentaries making the Church the kingdom, and the practice of immersion by those calling themselves Baptists, still holding to orthodox errors.

An offshot from the Baptists in the United States, known as the Reformation, made a further step in advance. They did much to prune and simplify the orthodox doctrines by reducing "the gospel of the glory of the Anointed" to the facts of the death and resurrection of Jesus, embracing the formula Jesus is the Christ. This latter important truth they professed as the "Ancient Gospel;" at the same time ignoring its true significance as the Anointed for the throne and kingdom of his father David, according to the promise of the angel to Mary before his birth, as recorded in Luke i. 32. Alexander Campbell became the principal exponent of the "Reformation," although Walter Scott was the real founder of the system. He claimed to have spent the greater part of his life in the study of the four evangelists, and yet although "the gospel of the kingdom of God was preached by our Lord, and although Nathaniel with his Master's approval—"Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel;" and thus the true kingship of the Anointed one was plainly declared. Walter Scott missed the object of his search. Verily his mind was blinded and the "gospel hid." Here also it may be said water was made a fetich, "the faith" being awanting, and although "not far from the kingdom of God," yet far enough to have lost it, and to have led thousands into the ditch.

In one respect a still nearer approach was made to the "gospel of the kingdom of God," by those known as Millenarians. In modern times these made certain steps in advance of the reformers of the sixteenth century. They come to read the prophets in a plain natural sense, eschewing the socalled spiritual sing system so much in vogue among the orthodox. They found that the kingdom of God is a Theocracy to be restored and set up over the twelve tribes of Israel gathered to the land of their fathers, the personal reign of the Messiah, his pre-millennial Advent, etc. All this has been set forth in volumes and periodicals. The Quarterly Journal of Prophecy was carried on for some quarter of a century; the Rainbow for some twenty years, and yet who will affirm that the "obedience of faith," as rendered by the first disciples according to the records of the New Testament, was known and practiced by a large number of those here alluded to? Is it not abundantly evident that here the gospel was "hid."

A remarkable movement akin to the foregoing was originated in the United States by a plain but vigorous farmer. In the thirties of the preceding century and onwards, the imminent Coming of Christ was proclaimed far and wide. Many thousands were awakened to the impending event, and were led to expect the advent on a certain day fixed by Miller. Great and wide spread disappointment was the result. Miller had explained away the numerous and explicit declaration of the prophets predicting the return of the twelve tribes of Israel to the land of their fathers. Miller said, "The return of the Jews could only be sustained by denying the positive declarations of the New Testament which assert 'there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek;' that 'the promise that he shall be the heir of the world was not to Abraham and his seed through the righteousness of faith,' etc. This position was fortified at a later period by a pamphlet written by a Captain Landers, and wisely circulated in America. More recently a book of nearly 200 pages, entitled, 'Refutation of the Doctrine, Called the Age to Come,' by Elder I. H. Waggoner, maintained the same position in opposition to the writings of followers of Miller named Joseph Marsh, David Campbell and others. Miller evidently did not perceive that the national promises made to Israel are perfectly consistent with the abolution of race distinctions in the Church of Christ. Miller had the hardihood to set aside some of the most explicit testimonies to the restoration of the kingdom of Israel. Here is a specimen which must defy the sharpest wit of man to explain away. "Thus saith the Lord, like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them." Jer. xxxii. 42. Miller in his younger days, according to his own confession, was an infidel. So far as this text is concerned Miller certainly returned to the Deism of his youth, for it is nothing short of rank infidelity to deny the literal fulfilment of such a declamation. Miller speaks of "the positive declarations of the New Testament." Some of these he positively ignores. Zacharias "was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied." He said, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel.....that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us. To perform the mercy promised to our fathers." The two disciples on their way to Emmaus said, "We trusted that it had been he which would have redeemed Israel." These are "positive declarations" of the New Testament, even more explicit than any mere reasoning of a fallible mortal. A branch of this party is the Seventh Day Adventists who are now compassing land and sea to make proselytes to the strict observance of the Seventh Day Sabbath according to the Fourth Commandment. Here again, in this movement of William Miller it cannot be doubted that the gospel was "hid."

The leading supporters of the Rainbow formed a society named the "Conditional Immortality Association" which has existed for some quarter of a century. It has to be briefly noted that true and important as conditional immortality is, the work of this Association has been mostly of a negative character—man not immortal; the non-immortality of the soul; no natural immortality. As to "conditions" by compliance with which man may attain to immortality it is simply taken for granted that what is known as evangelical doctrine, apart from immersion into Christ, is held by most as sufficient as a passport to everlasting life. It cannot be doubted that here the "gospel is hid." Some baptized believers of the gospel of the kingdom of God are members of this association. It is presumable that such members have not found any opportunity of bearing a testimony in favor of the true "conditions" prescribed by Christ himself.

It is doubtless quite possible for an intelligent and vigorous advocacy by both press and oral agency of the plain reading and understanding of the prophets as already referred to as well as of the conditional attainment of everlasting life, and yet by ignoring the true "obedience of faith," be the means of hiding the gospel from those brought under the influence of their teaching. Such advocates hide the gospel both from themselves and from those that hear them, such may possibly find an excuse as "blind guides," but how inexcusable must those be who have personally rendered compliance with the "obedience of faith" and have for years been actually engaged in bearing testimony in favor of such obedience?

Respectfully submitted for the consideration of all whom it may concern.

Following Jesus.

We should so love our Master that we would be willing to sacrifice any thing for his sake. Considering his precious promises to those who serve him how can we turn away from him. Jesus is the good Shepherd and we are his sheep. He is constantly watching over us. A sinner on his wayward path is like a sheep wandering away from the fold instead of coming to the good Shepherd, who careth for every one that wanders away from the fold. Christ set a perfect example before the world. We should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present life, following Jesus as closely as possible. We follow Christ when we imitate his example, obey his words, walk in his footsteps toward doing good and God. We need to see our leader clearly and to follow him as our leader with personal love and devotion, living ever for him and with him. The Lord says in Isa. xli. 10, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee. I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee. I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Our lives are like a voyage over an untried sea with its calms and storms. Amid dangers Jesus will be our pilot and Savior. He can calm the storm and say to every troubled soul, Peace be still, and guide at last to the harbor of eternal life.

"If any man will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Good correlative passages. Matt. x. 38; xi. 28, 30.

Every great thing which has been done on this sphere has been done at the cost of much time, patience and constant labor. The grandest temple of worship in all the world, St. Peters of Rome, was begun in 1450, dedicated in 1626, and not entirely finished until 1880, thus covering a space of 480 years in its building, yet the purposes and ideas conceived by the earlier builders were carried out by constant work, by often doing labor which might have been applied with more enjoyment elsewhere. The best poems and the best books have been those which have required labor. The great Milton is said to have written ten lines of "Paradise Lost" each morning and spent the remainder of the day polishing them.

The man of science begins with wonder at the results of a composition and at once begins a search for laws governing the case. Then comes the long interspace of toilsome labor, of painful analysis and tedious experiments, all to gain some desired goal. It requires a constancy of purpose, an unswerving will-power to work for a desired end, an elimination or giving up of many minor pleasures. It requires the assuming of new responsibilities and an energy, never flagging, to spend four hundred thirty years building one edifice; to spend a life time on one grand poem, or to do as Palissy, the man who spent his life and fortune, reduced himself to penury to give to the world enameled pottery. These toilers were all expecting a result, or some reward for their work, some earthly or temporary reward. There is always a call for workmen and the call is going forth for skilled laborers. Long centuries ago a call was sent out for laborers to aid in building a temple which should not fade. The chief Architect asked for willing workers, those who would not be afraid of the taunts and jeers of careless companions, those who would not be afraid to follow him over rough places which were seemingly impossible of successful passage. Workers who could give up time from affairs of this social and business world, to take a position in the laborer's field, and work without turning back. He promised that the yoke was easy, the burdens light and the reward was great. Laborers have been responding all through the ages and the roll is not yet complete.

Now, the question comes to each one, How soon will I join the laborers, how soon can I take up my cross and make myself worthy of him, can I earn his "Well done"? Every laborer expects to find some conflict between his social program and his business program, but this temple must be builded and we must prepare our share. There is always a pleasure in our work, yet sometimes the worker feels a little discouraged, but some one has said and said beautifully, "Do not ever be discouraged because your work does not bring results soon, for God has never tired of making beautiful sunsets and blossoms although few stop to admire them." He who builds the best block is he who applies himself most closely and denies himself outside pleasures. Let us each one be one of the Master's builders, one to follow after him and deny ourselves for him. His burdens are light. It is true they require careful attention as do all things worth having. Let us follow his directions closely and receive the reward which he has promised so freely. The joy of eternal life in a palace not made with hands.

A Word of Rejoicing.

We turned the key in the door again March the 4th, and started for Millbrook, Mich. We found the church as faithful as ever. We preached 19 sermons, and two afternoon meetings for the special instruction of the young converts. As the result of this effort six young ladies including their school teacher went down into their watery graves and took the all-saving name, while a large number of the brethren stood on the bank rejoicing to see the new recruits start out in the blessed Christ life; truly they have a bright prospect before them as the Millbrook church is a live, working body, and will render these lambs the necessary help they so much need. The evening following baptism the church extended the right hand of fellowship, while one dear wanderer came forward asking the church to take her back into their confidence and fellowship, gladly did they all respond to the request. Communion followed, and meeting closed amid tears of joy at the result of the effort made. We begin meetings this evening at Allen school house and trust God's blessing to go with us.

To all the loved ones who are looking for the coming Savior, greeting:

How lonely, oh how very lonely we become at times in this far away country. No organized churches of our faith, only a few scattered believers here and there. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly, we need thee so very much. The churches of this city have united and secured the services of two evangelists and are holding a union revival service. We attend most of the time. But today I debated the question of attending the services with myself for some time but finally went. The preacher said before he had talked five minutes, that this world would never see Jesus any more. He will never come back. There I was as a member of that congregation, giving my silent assent to such teachings as that. Thank the good Lord, those who know me, and most in the congregation do, know that I do not believe any such doctrine as that. But his statement hurt me. The worst thing about it was that the man was honest and really believed what he said. How much longer will it be before Jesus shall be acknowledged to be the promised Messiah who is to rebuild David's throne and rule, not only over the twelve tribes, but over the nations of the world as well. We believe the time is almost up. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

Selections.

What Books Shall We Read?

As a rule the books which will do us the most good are those which make you work hardest while reading, which stimulate the brain and inspire you to noble purpose. Passive reading is even worse, if possible, than desultory reading; the mind remains inactive, in a sort of indolent reverie; so it is weakened and in time rendered incapable of that reach and grasp which enable it to master principles, and that power which enables it to analyze and synthetize. Passive reading takes the spring and snap out of the mind, until the brain becomes languid, lazy and disinclined to grapple with great principles and hard problems.

Reading and thinking are the gymnasia of the mind. The gymnast does not carry the apparatus away from the gymnasium, but the strength and the suppleness which the exercise gives him. It is not so much what we carry away from the book and store in the memory that is valuable as the strength and skill we develop in the book we read. Passive no more develops the mind than thou sitting down in a gymnasium will develop the body. The mind must have exercise, vigorous, strong, systematic, continuous.—Optimist.

Radiation.

Light, heat and energy are radiated by bodies. A bar of iron fresh from the forge throws off or radiates both light and heat in the process of cooling. The hot-water pipes in the office or church radiate heat but not light; and the heat does not diminish as long as the source of supply is maintained. The bar of iron is charged with heat which is soon thrown off. The heat of the pipes is maintained by their communication with the furnace. A more perfect illustration would be the sun, which constantly radiates light, heat, and energy, with apparently no diminution. If some one says I am mistaken in my science, the reply is I am not attempting to teach it—only making use of a simple phenomenon to teach a higher lesson.

Have you ever noticed that human beings radiate influences of various kinds? Some men radiate business. They seem steeped in it—charged with it—radiate an atmosphere of it in which they live. Others in a literal and physical sense radiate alcohol; they lurch into 'bus or tram, and body and breath soon radiate the fumes throughout the vehicle.

Then there are those living sunbeams who radiate cheerfulness wherever they go. It is a delightful experience to be with them in their atmosphere of brightness and joy. And on the other side, there are some who are always in trouble—or expecting it; a cloud seems to hang ever above and around them, and they radiate gloom and dampness and depression. "No man liveth to himself." We are all, always radiating influences bitter or sweet, evil or good, uplifting or depressing; what shall be our aim, and how shall we reach it?

There is no greater need in the world, and no higher aim possible for us than to Radiate Christ!

You have doubtless known some who on their first contact with Him have seemed red-hot with enthusiasm and zeal. Then after a few months their heat has been expended, and they have become cold. The contact with their source of heat has not been continued. They were self-sufficient instead of dependent upon their Lord.

There are those, again, whose very presence sheds a sweet odour of Christ Jesus—a silent yet powerful manifestation of His presence seems with them, as though a halo of His spirit were around them and Himself within them. His love seems to sweeten their voice, and to beam in tenderness from their eyes; and their whole being seems charged with Him.

It not only seems, but it is so. Realising that they are but the "earthen vessels," they know that the "excellency of the glory" is that which is from God through our Lord Jesus, and not from themselves. Their sufficiency is of God—their desire is that "Christ shall be magnified in their body, whether by life or death."

If, then, we can reach the height to which the Apostle Paul attained and truly say, "Christ liveth in me," we shall bear Him about with us day by day, think His thoughts—utter His words—all our actions will be performed in His spirit—and all our life long we shall radiate the light, the love, the energy, the life, of our beloved Lord Jesus.

Brethren, sisters, radiate Christ!

Herbert H. Horsman.

The Forward Look.

Earnest men and women: to-day have little time for looking backward. Facing the future, they "forget the things which are behind," and look forward in anticipation to the marvelous possibilities of "the things which are before." Paul's picture is striking and vivid. The runner, after a rigid course of training, now that the race has begun, attends to only one thing. Forgetting that part of the course already passed over, he strains every muscle, exerts every physical power, to the accomplishment of a single purpose—to reach the goal and win the prize.

An old deacon was accustomed to offer this prayer: "Help us to forget what we ought not to remember, and to remember what we ought not to forget." A wise forgetfulness of some things that are past, is [illegible] rest. He who is pursuing with all energy the great purpose of life can not afford to have his attention diverted. The slow and painful effort by which the alphabet was mastered is for the scholar a thing of the past. Forgiven sins need not be remembered after we have learned a lesson from the manner in which we were overtaken. Forget your annities, the faults and peculiarities of others, the unpleasantness of life, the disagreeable things of the past but remember past mercies comforts and joys. Whatsoever things are lovely and of good report, think on these things. Do not glory in the good deeds of the past, but devote all the energy to greater achievements, looking forward to a future that is bright with promise for all earnest souls. New York Observer.

Use What You Have.

"What is in thine hand, Abel?"

"Nothing but one wee lamb, O God, taken from the flock. I purpose offering it to Thee, a willing sacrifice."

And he did. And the sweet smell of the burning has been rising the air ever since, and constantly going up to God as a perpetual sacrifice of praise.

"What is it thou hast in thine hand, Moses?"

"Nothing but a staff, O God, with which I tend my flocks."

"Take it and use it for me."

And he did; and with it wrought more wondrous things than Egypt and her proud king had seen before.

"Mary, what is it that thou hast in thine hand?"

"Nothing but a pot of sweet-smelling ointment, O God, wherewith I would anoint thine only One, called Jesus."

And so she did: and not only did the perfume fill all in the house which they were, but all the Bible reading world has been fragrant with the memory of this blessed act of love, which has ever since, been spoken of "for a memorial of her."

"Poor woman, what is it thou hast in thine hand?"

"Only two mites, Lord. It is very little; but then it is all I have, and I would put it into thy treasury."

And so she did and the story of her generous giving has ever since wrought like a charm, prompting others to give to the Lord.

"What is it thou hast in thine hand, Dorcas?"

"Only a needle: Lord."

"Take it and use it for me."

And so she did; and not only were the suffering poor of Joppa warmly clad; but, inspired by her loving life, "Dorcas Societies" even now continue their benign mission to the poor throughout the earth.—Ed.

Over and Over Again.

"I want to make my life count," the girl cried, with a quick impatient breath. "I don't want to spend it all in cooking meals and dusting rooms—things that have to be done over and over every day, and are never remembered two minutes after they're done! I want to do something that will last."

"Did you ever think," the old teacher asked, "how many things God does over and over, day after day, and year after year? Day and night, summer and winter, seed time and harvest' come regularly as the cooking of meals and dusting of rooms. The need of forgiveness, of encouragement, of strength, isn't he but answering these over and over again, every hour of our conscious lives?"

"That's—different," the girl answered slowly.

The old teacher smiled: she had been a girl once, and she understood. "Do you remember the miracle at Cana?" she asked. "The thirty long years of preparation were over, and the Master was going out to save the world. The marvelous baptism at the Jordan the terrible days in the wilderness, each had borne witness that the time had come. Even the first disciples were chosen. Then came the first demand upon the power that filled him. What was he to do—heal the sick? restore the blind? raise the dead? tell eager multitudes of the Father's waiting love? You remember that the call was to none of these things; with a whole world to love, the first duty was merely—to help out a wedding feast."

The girl had listened with brightening eyes. "Thank you," she said softly.—Anon.

Revelations xiii.

This chain of prophesy commenced with chapter 12, and the events are noted one after the other, in the order they occur. 1st, The rise of a leopard beast as a consequence of the war in the heaven between Michael and the dragon; Constantine was one of the angels or messengers of Michael, in casting the dragon out of the heaven. This war commenced in the forepart of the fourth century, and Paganism was finally extinguished in A. D. 420. Then in the "seat" and "power" of Paganism arose the leopard beast.

2nd, The wounding and healing of one of his heads. This war by the northern barbarians commenced in the third century—and ended with the fall of Rome A. D. 476 when Odoacer became king of Italy. This war divided Rome into ten kingdoms symbolized by ten horns of the beast.

3rd, The rise of the Papacy—"the giving to the beast a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies." This event took place in the sixth century by the aid of Justinian, and was completed by Phocas A. D. 608 to 610.

4th, The beast exalts himself and makes war on the saints for 1260 years.

5th, Goes into captivity A. D. 1870, a self-confessed prisoner in the vatican. The prophecy is now brought down the stream of time to our own day and generation. Verse 11, "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon." Daniel's four beasts came up from the sea; so does the leopard beast of this chapter "rise up out of the sea;" but this "another beast comes up out of the earth." This last is very significant to the student of the prophecy. This book is largely a book of symbols, as we learn by its first verse, where it reads, "And he (Jesus) sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John." That is he taught him by signs. For instance, "a circle is a symbol of eternity, as having neither beginning nor end; an eye is a symbol of wisdom; a lion of courage; a lamb of meekness and gentleness." But what does the earth signify; of what is it a symbol? In the metalic image of Dan. ii. 31 we find a pointer, that will help us materially to solve this question. In the interpretation, Daniel says to the king, Thou art this head of gold. The Medo-Persian represented by the silver is said to be "inferior to thee"—the head of gold. "The fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron;"—the metal by which it is symbolized. But being "mixed with miry clay," "the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken." When we consider that it was the toes of the feet, that were mixed with the clay, the last phase of the image which symbolized the last days of Gentile times; we are held to the fact that the clay represents democracy—the common people as in contrast to royalty—Imperialism, etc. The condition of the world today confirms this interpretation. Russia today, the most autocratic of all countries, is weakened materially because the common people, the clay element, are raising their heads demanding a voice in the government. Other Scripture will point to the same conclusion. See Deut. xxxii. 1, "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth." Here are two classes addressed—the heavens—the rulers, the earth,—the mass the common people. In Hosea ii. 21, we read, "And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth; and the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil." In the day here spoken of "the earth shall yield her increase," in corn, and wine, and oil. The people (the earth) will petition the heavens (their rulers) and they will hear them. Again the heavens will petition the Lord and he says, "I will hear the heavens." How natural are these figures of speech. We hold an election, and raise up by our votes officers to rule and make laws, in Scripture they are called "the heavens." The trouble now is too often, they do not after being put in office, hear the people.

Again in this book of symbols xii. 16 it is written, "And the earth helped the woman," that is the people had compassion on the woman in her suffering at the hands of the dragon. Many instances are on record where the neighbors and friends of the persecuted Christians by the Pagans, shielded them in their sufferings. These Scriptures cited should prove that the earth out of which John saw the "beast coming up," is the democracy—as contrasted with royalty. "Two horns like a lamb" would indicate the mild lamblike exercise of power by the government symbolized; but it is added that, "He spake as a dragon." By my investigations of this symbol, I have come to the conclusion, that it represents our country, the United States of America. Right glad would I be if any brother should prove to me, that it does not. On this point I invite criticism. It will be noticed that after the 1260 years of Papal rule its going into captivity in 1870, the next event noted is the "coming up" of the symbol under consideration. Therefore the United States arose at the right time to fulfil the symbol. And in the next place it came out of the right place—the symbolic "earth," that is from the democracy of Europe—having no root extending to any royal house whatever. But was led by the republican element of Europe—escaping from the tyrrany of the monarchs of the old world. Therefore upon its horns there are no crowns nor diadems. In the next place the mild democratic government until recently has answered exactly to the lamb-like horns of the symbol. The speaking as a dragon seems to be inconsistent with the lamb-like horns; but answers exactly with the policy, and the utterances of our nation for the last decade. A few years ago when England was in a dispute about territory with Venezuela the United States took up the question in behalf of Venezuela and said, "The United States is sovereign on this continent, and its fiat is law." The Monroe doctrine condensed in the luminous and forceful phrase of Secretary Olney of the Cleveland administration. The dragon was a symbol of imperial Rome. Therefore to speak as a dragon is to speak with authority. The word of the United States emenating from her State officials bears with it as much weight and authority as does that of any country in the world. Verse 12, "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." Every item in this verse will meet its fulfilment in the image of verses 14 and 15, therefore remarks are not necessary here. Verse 13, "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men." It will be noticed here that it is affirmed "that he maketh fire to come down from heaven," etc. No make-believe like the apostacy of whom it is written that his, "coming is according to the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders." 2 Thes. ii. 9, R. V. This view may be objected to because the next verse reads, "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth," etc. But how does he deceive them? The answer is, "By those miracles which he had power to do," not "lying wonders," as in the case of the apostasy. Now what country has done so many wonders—real, actual wonders as has the United States of America. In time as compared with other nations, it has come up like Jonah's gourd; and in stability equals any of the old countries of Europe. The inhabitants of the Orient send their sons to the United States to be educated in arts and sciences. In useful inventions the Fair at St. Louis established the fact that the United States leads the world. In real estate valuation and in finance the United States is the peer among the nations. Her railroads nearly equal in mileage the rest of the world combined; and in the design and magnificence of her palace cars she is in advance of all nations. Is this not a great wonder for the young giant of the west?

The prophecy notes especially one point in the wonders performed by this power, and that is "that he makes fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men." This prediction would seem to have reference to the wonders performed by our electricians. Franklin was the first to bottle the lightning; Morse and Edison, are pioneer stars in the field of inventive genius. The result of which is that electricity carries man's messages the world over in speed like a flash of lightning; it lights up our villages and our cities, and bids fair to be the motive power of the future for railroads, steam boats, etc. That this is in Scripture called the fire of heaven, see Job i. 16, "The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep and the servants." Again God says to Job, "Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, Here we are?" If Job lived now he could answer in the affirmative.

Now a question, Is it reasonable to suppose that God closed the prophetic utterances of the prophets, which was given "to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass," without mentioning anything concerning this one of the most wonderful of nations in which many of "his servants" are surely included? I admit that it is hard to believe that our country will make an image to the (former) beast. But what is contemplated by the prophecy is not "an image" to the papacy, but to the leopard beast before it received "the blasphemous mouth," the Papacy. Church and State were united in the time of Constantine. And they had "turned away their ears from the truth," "to fables" and prescribed the faith of their subjects. See the orthodox edicts of the Emperor Thodosius A. D. 380. Gibbon Vol. iii. p. 80. In the Chicago Record Herald of Nov. 11, 1901 under the headlines, "Fear of the United States," says correspondence of the Associated Press, St. Petersburg, Oct. 27: The Russian leader writers have put President Roosevelt and the United States on the list of their regular themes. Scarcely a day passes without some newspaper devoting a serious editorial to the development of the political and economical power of the United States. This in itself is gratifying, but what is more so is that nearly all the papers are sympathetic and many display accurate insight into American affairs. The Bourse Gazette had the following a day or two ago: "The statesman who has unexpectedly assumed the reins at Washington is the perfect type of the American of today and before him lies a wider horizon than any of his predecessors enjoyed. Between the United States of our day and the republic of which the history of the last century told us, there is little in common. The classic land of freedom, the country which has developed its prosperity to wonderful dimensions and which has realized the boldest Utopias and the most daring theories of political and social liberty; the great transatlantic republic terrifies the imagination of Europeans. It is a new giant, a state which the latest events have made a world power; a state which has transformed itself to the point of unrecognizability, and is bent upon transforming the whole world, proclaiming through its chief magistrate—that the word of the United States shall have due weight everywhere where economic and political questions are decided." Does "he" not do wonders, and "speak as a dragon?"

Unwearying Trust.

I will not ask to have my cross removed.
Thou knowest best the weight my heart can bear—
But give me strength unmurmuring to go,
And happy still some pilgrim's load to share.

I will not ask exultant ways of peace,
Unfailing good—nay, rather to be tried,
And in affliction's furnace lose my dross,
If only so I may be purified.

I will not ask great gifts of tongue or pen;
Only inspire me with unwearying trust,
That though I plant the vineyard, still Thy love shall raise it, blossoming from the dust.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher Well, what topic shall we investigate tonight.

Bessie I would like to have Luke xvii. 21:

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU."

Teacher Very well. Now, Bessie what question brought forth the above declaration?

Bessie Why the question that the Pharisees demanded of our Lord.

Q What was the question?

A "He was demanded of the Pharisees, When the kingdom of God shall come?"

Q Does this question, and answer, relate to present, or future time?

A Future time.

Q What makes you think so?

A Why the question of the Pharisees implies that much. "When the kingdom of God shall come?"

Q They did not seem to have any conception, then, that the kingdom of God was already a fact, set up in their wicked hearts, did they?

A Not in the least. Their question implies that they considered it an event still in the future, and that they wanted to know the time when this future event would take place.

Q Did Jesus tell them that they were mistaken about the kingdom of God being still a future event, and that the aforesaid kingdom was then a present fact, existent in their own wicked hearts?

A He did not.

Q Did Jesus look for it as being still a future event?

A He did.

Q What makes you think so?

A His own words as given in Luke xix. 11, 12, show that.

Q Please quote the passage?

A "And because they thought the kingdom of God should immediately appear, he said, therefore, a certain Nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return."

Q Why did he use the above language?

A To correct a wrong impression which existed in their minds, about the immediate proximity of the aforesaid event.

Q When did he say it would be established?

A At his return from the "far country."

Q When will he take possession of his throne?

A See Matt. xxv. 31: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."

Q How great will be his glory when he comes?

A Paul says when he appeared to him on his way to Damascus, his glory was "a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun."

Q If he comes in a glory which exceeds the brightness of the sun, it can hardly be an unobserved event, can it?

A I should say not.

Q How much greater than the sun will his glory be?

A Isaiah says, the sun will be ashamed, and the moon confounded, when the Lord shall reign in Mount Zion, etc.

Q Then his glory will be exceedingly bright, if it is bright enough to make the sun hide itself in shame?

A It will, indeed.

Q Who will see this glorious coming?

A See Matt. xxiv. 30: "Then shall all the tribes (nations) of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Q Will his glory equal the glory of the Father?

A See Matt. xvi. 27: "For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of the Father, with his angels."

Q This coming can hardly be a secret, invisible coming, can it?

A It cannot, because all tribes (nations) shall see it.

Q When will the kingdom of God come?

A "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."

Teacher Lud, how do you harmonize these declarations of the Lord's coming in glory, and that he will not sit upon the throne of his glory, until he shall come in his glory with his answer to the Pharisee's question as to "when the kingdom of God shall come?" And also his declaration, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation?" And again, when he says "all the tribes of the earth," shall see his coming to sit upon the throne of his glory?

Lud. Why, that is quite simple. You have noticed astronomers take close observation of the coming on of an eclipse, a comet, or a new star, through telescopes of great power, in order that they may catch the first indication of their approach. The first one who discovers it, makes a report, and says: "See here; or see there," or in other words, describes the point in the heavens, where it can be found, by the words, "See here; see there." When the kingdom of God shall come, we will not need men in an observatory, to look for it and say to us, "See here; see there."

Q Why not?

A Why, because the Lord has told us not to pay any attention to these observatory men, because their vision is befogged.

Q Where?

A In verse 23: "And they shall say unto you, See here; or see there; go not after them, nor follow them."

Q What reason does he give for not putting faith in them?

A For the reason already given, that he is coming in glory, and the aforesaid glory will illuminate the entire expanse of the heavens. See verse 22, 23: "And they shall say unto you, See here; or see there: go not after them, nor follow them." The reason here given is: "For (or because) as the lightning shineth out of the one part under heaven, and shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of Man be in his day," or in the day of his coming. No observatory will be needed to detect this, because it can be seen with the naked eye; in fact, its brightness may require an eye shade.

Q Do the other evangelists tell the same story?

A Yes. See Matt. xxiv. 27: "Wherefore if they shall say unto you, behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not."

Q Why not believe it?

A See verse 27: "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." In other words, the coming of the Son of Man will be as conspicuous as lightning, shining clear across the expanse of the heavens, from the east to the west. We wont need magnifying glasses to see or observe such magnificent glory.

Q This, then, must have been the thought of our Lord, was it not, when he answered the Pharisees, as to "When the kingdom of God shall come?"

A Yes. This is clearly seen in his answer, when he said, "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation, or close watching. He next says: "Neither shall they say, Lo here, or, Lo there!"

Q Why not?

A His answer is, "For behold, the kingdom of God is within, (or among) you." We wont need any observatory men to say, Lo, it is here, or, Lo, it is there, because at that time, it will be right here, within, or among us; and this being the case, we wont need any spy-glass men to go a hunting for it, like for a stray comet.

Teacher Albert, when the Lord used the words, "the kingdom of God is within you," did he have reference to the time when he spoke the words, or to some future time, when the kingdom of God should come?

Albert His answer related to the question, "When the kingdom of God shall come?" The Pharisees admitted that the kingdom had not come as is implied by their asking, when it should come? If they were conscious of the fact, that the kingdom had already come, then there would have been no sense in asking him when it should come? Jesus could not admit the present existence of the kingdom, because he had not yet taken his journey into the far country, to receive it. The phrase "Lo here; or Lo there" relates to future time, when the kingdom of God will be in fact, within or among them, and not to the time the words were spoken, because the kingdom of God was not then among them, and It would be an error to affirm that it had.

Teacher Arloa, when the kingdom of God comes in fact, will its character or presence be of such an indefinite character that it will be a matter of dispute, and that it will cause some to say, Lo, it is here, while others will contradict it, and say, no, Lo it is there, at some other place.

Arloa No, indeed, it will be such a literal, manifest glorious fact, and that it will be just as the Lord said: "Neither will they say, (or have good cause to say), Lo here! or Lo there! for, (or because) it will be within (or among) you," as a literal fact, which will admit of no conjectures, or disputes, or observatory men, as to its location.

Q Now the phrase "the kingdom of God" occurs in both the 20th and 21st verses of Luke xvii. Now, is there any real reason by which we can make the phrase "the kingdom of God," in the 20th verse mean a literal kingdom, and that in verse 21, something else?

A None, whatever, they are both from the Greek word basileia, and both mean just what that word implies, in Greek usage. The two words uttered with the same breath, cannot mean different things, unless there is something found in the passage to warrant a change, which in this case there is not.

Q Do some translators render the words "with observation," by different, but yet equivalent words?

A Yes. Dr. Adam Clark uses the words "narrow watching." The kingdom of God cometh not, with "narrow watching" as by a telescope, which is much the same as close observation. The Diaglott has "careful watching," which is the same thought.

Q Why not "careful" or "narrow" watching?

A Because the Lord comes in "great glory," which is visible to all nations.

Q Is the Lord's coming, and the coming of the kingdom the same thing?

A They are events which take place at the same time. "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory * * * then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

2 TIMOTHY ii. 17.

The Lord knoweth them that are his. The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble and he knoweth them that trust him. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous. Are we told how the Lord knoweth his own? God knows his own by their righteousness, for he loveth righteousness. The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul, the commandments of the Lord are pure, the fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever, and by keeping God's laws there is great reward. Will it not be a great reward to be known of him, for the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself. As we know the brethren by the Word of truth, so God knows his own by their words, and by their faith in him; he knew Abraham and called him from out among the heathen. He called Lot from Sodom, and saved Noah from the flood of water; his people Israel from Egypt. Yes, through all ages he has known and kept his own; and to the Gentiles to us, he has sent his Son to take out a people for his own. Jesus said, He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father and I will love him. I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world, thine they were and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy Word. This is how Jesus knew they were his, because they had kept the Word of truth, words of truth and righteousness, for the righteous Lord loveth righteousness. O love the Lord, all ye his saints, for the Lord preserveth the faithful, he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. By our words and works are we known by our Father and his Son Jesus, and our names are written in the Book of life. My prayer to God is, that not one name shall ever be blotted from the Book of life, but that all shall see his face, and be known of him.

COL. i. 23.

If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; where of I Paul am made a minister. If ye continue in the faith, this it shows that it is on conditions, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel. This shows that our faith and our hope must be founded on the gospel, and that we must understand the conditions set forth in the gospel. The gospel means a good message, and it comes from God to man. I will mention a few things told in this message.

We observe that man's habitation of the earth was made dependent upon obedience. He was threatened with deprivation of life if disobedient. He was disobedient hence he was deprived of life, and went back to dust. In mercy a future life that should be everlasting, was offered him on conditions. These conditions are that we believe that Christ died, was raised again, and that he has power over death, and will call to life again those who have complied with his commandments, and have lived in accordance to them. That he will establish the kingdom on earth which was promised to the ancient worthies, and the promise comes down to all who will be obedient. Matt. xxiv. 14, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness." Mark i. 14. Jesus preached this gospel of the kingdom. In Luke viii. 1, we learn that he went through every village and city preaching the same glad tidings of the kingdom of God. The disciples delivered the same message, and the seventy the same. Acts xix. 8. Paul disputed in the synagogues on the kingdom of God for three months. Acts xxviii. 23, 30, 31. We find Paul spent two whole years in Rome preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. i. 16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." In order to believe in a re-establishment of the kingdom of God, we must believe in the second coming of Christ, the King of the kingdom. For this hope we find many promises in the Word of God. I will only mention a few. For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his holy angels, and then (at his coming) shall he reward every man according to his work. John. If I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also. Acts. This same Jesus which was taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. This all proves to a certainty that Christ will come again. And that he is coming to establish a kingdom and recompense those who are worthy. This is just as clearly stated, for example, Psalm xxxvii. 9 says, They that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth. The meek shall inherit the earth. Such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth. And this quotation is still more definite as it says, The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever. There are many more, but this one is sufficient when it states that their inheritance will continue forever. Now, these and many more are promises that our faith is founded on, and it is a sure foundation. And may we all continue in the faith grounded and settled, that we may not be moved from the hope of the gospel.

MARY KNOWLES.

GAL. vi. 4.

Let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone and not in another, for every man shall bear his own burden. In John ix. 24, 25, Then came the Jews round about him and said unto him, how long dost thou makest us to doubt, if thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. Jesus answered them I told you and ye believed not, the works that I do in my Father's name they bear witness of me. Now we have the same chance. We can do works In the name of the Father, we can live and walk in obedience to his will and keep his commandments that we can prove that our works are those of a Christian. In James we read ii. 14, What doth it profit my brethren though a man say he hath faith and have not works, can faith save him? The 17th verse, Even so faith, if it hath not works is dead, being alone. And the 10th verse, Yea, a man may say, thou hast faith and I have works. Show me thy faith without thy works and I will shew thee my faith by my works. So we see we must have works and faith, and our works must be so as to prove we are the children of God. Let us every one try to live and walk in the ways most pleasing to God, so we will be accepted by him when he comes in all his power and glory to establish his kingdom, is my prayer.

MRS. M. COLE.

A Question Often Asked.

Mrs. Woodward what does this text in Eccl. xii. 7 mean? Well, what do you think it means? Why, I think it means just what it says, that our spirit goes to God who gave it. Well, my friend, so do I, but you think the spirit spoken of there means the immortal part of man. Yes! of course I do. And I know it does not, for man is not immortal, for "who only hath immortality," 1 Tim. vi. 16, refers only to the King of kings and Lord of lords, and that is neither you nor myself, is it? Well, no, but what does it mean? Simply what it says, let us analyze the sentence and see, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was." Now, tell me friend, how was it before it was man? Let the Word speak, Gen. ii. 7, tells just how and what it was, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." The dust shall return to the earth as it was. Don't you see how it was, dust to dust again. Why! yes, that part is plain, but it is the other part of the text that bothers me. Well, it is just as plain as the rest. "And the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Now tell me, when did God give man this spirit? Read the rest of Gen. ii. 7, "And breathed into his nostrils the breath of life." And what did man become, an immortal soul? O no, simply a "living soul." Man was an inanimate formation before God gave him the power to breathe, and God does not say he breathed an immortal soul into his nostrils, but simply breath of life, or a life-giving power to live, move, think, act, love, hate. All the powers of being were put in motion by God giving the power to breathe. The breath is simply the spirit of life in man, and when the power to breathe is removed from us, we return to dust again and the spirit—breath returns to God who gave it. James understood it, ii. 26, "For as the body without the spirit is dead (margin, breath) so faith without works is dead also." Job xxvii. 3, says, "All the while my breathe is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils." What is the spirit of God Job speaks of? He says it is breath. How vividly Ezekiel portrays the re-living of God's dead ones. Ezek. xxvii. 9, "Thus saith the Lord God, come from the four winds O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live".....And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live. Let us be satisfied to wait until God wants us to have immortality at the blessed resurrection morn. Then if we are worthy of it he will present us with the life that never goes out in death—even eternal life. Yours hoping for that blessed gift.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APR. 19, 1905. NUMBER 15.

The Restitution.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins; and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Report of Labor.

We closed our meetings in Mecosta County, March 4th, with great reluctance, for the interest which was very great had not in the least abated. But the Elder had been too sick with La Grippe for ten days to be able to preach, excepting three sermons, and we felt that he ought to be at home. We held meetings at the Decker and Allen school-houses. In all we spoke 20 times, with 15 baptisms, 3 persons who were baptized four years ago at our meeting there had become careless and felt the great need of renewing their vows to the Lord. The church feels greatly rejoiced at the added numbers, and we pray God to keep them all faithful until death. The Elder is no better at this writing, his lungs are very sore with his almost constant coughing. O for more laborers to send into the vineyard. There are at least 3 places waiting for us now and no one to send.

Yours in the work.

Oliver Cromwell is said to have observed very sapiently: "It is a good thing to strike when the iron is hot, but it is a better thing to make the iron hot by striking." The successful man is he who to a great extent creates his own occasions, and instead of waiting for things to turn up, turn things up while he waits. The wise laborer works with a small opportunity until the Lord gives him a great one. And the Lord is apt to give the larger chance to the man who proved himself willing to make the best use of little things. To him who gathers up the fragments the whole loaf of opportunity is finally given.—Sel.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 18 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

A CARD from Brother P. Neill announces the death last Friday of our aged brother W. D. Townsend, of Salem, Ohio. An obituary notice will be given later.

BROTHER D. E. VANVACTOR reports that at his meeting at Burr Oak in this county on April 9, one more made the good confession, and was immersed into the all saving name of Jesus Christ. Mrs. Pearl Zechiel is the name of our new sister. May she ever prove faithful to the profession she has made, and share in the glory that awaits the overcomer.

THERE are indications that the Russian and Japanese fleets may meet soon and try conclusions. For reasons best known to themselves, they seem to have rather avoided a meeting so far. As to the movements of the army little is known. Reports of internal troubles in Russia continue to multiply. Peace and quiet are a long way off to all appearances.

Should We Take a Part?

I mean a part in the "revival" as it is conducted at the present time. This question suggests three others, and to answer them correctly is to give a similiar answer to this one. 1. What is the modern "revival?" 2. Who are "we?" and 3. What is a part in the revival? The lexical definition of a religious revival is, "Renewed and more active attention to religion; an awakening of men to their spiritual concerns." There can be no doubt as to the fact that men should be awake to their spiritual concerns, and that with a view to this becoming efforts should be made to draw their attention to religion; this "religion" being understood as that system of faith and practice which the Word of God sets before us. The Word should be preached according to the solemn charge of Paul to Timothy: "Preach the word." 2. Tim. iv: 1. Attention should be directed to the fact of man's mortality (Job iv: 17), and the necessity of seeking for glory, honor, and immortality, Rom. ii: 5-7. The gospel of the kingdom, as proclaimed by Christ and the apostles, should be announced. Faith, repentance, and baptism in the name of Jesus Christ should be preached as being necessary to the remission of sins. Acts x: 13; Luke xxiv: 47; Acts ii: 38. The faithful and persistent presentation of the Word is sure, if anything is sure, to bring about "renewed and more active attention to religion." This would be a revival in the true sense of the word. However, at this point our modern revival almost totally fails.

At one place visited by the writer a revival was announced, and it was stated by the speaker that there would not be much preaching, as they simply wanted "a revival." A revival of what without preaching, which is a means of manifesting the Word of God. Rom. x: 16, 17; Titus i: 3. How can interest be awakened in God's purpose concerning the earth and man; in the covenants of promise to Abraham, David, and others; in Jesus the Christ; in the kingdom of God; in the Immortalization of God's people, and the destiny of the wicked, where there is no preaching, and hence no Word of God, on the subjects named where men relate from ten to a score of deathbed scenes in one evening? What about modern revival methods? Instead of preaching the Word, and telling men and women what to do, as the apostles did so faithfully at every opportunity, our modern revivalists call upon their hearers to raise their hands or rise to their feet to show that they wish to meet their departed friends in heaven. Whoever fails to vote is classed with "the world," though he may ever so scrupulously keep the line drawn between himself and the world. One cannot consistently vote on the proposition of going to heaven, because 1. Such public voting is an extra-Scriptural arrangement. None of the apostles, at any of the public meetings conducted by them, ever had any such transaction. 2. Because the Scriptures do not teach going to heaven. On the contrary they teach uniformly, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matth. v: 5. Therefore to vote on this question is practically to abandon and identify oneself with that which exists outside of the Word of God.

But who are we that we should have scruples about taking part in the revival? We are a company of earnest men and women who have been called out of the world, into one body, for the kingdom of God, by means of the gospel; and we believe, according to the teaching of the Scriptures, that the kingdom of God will be established upon the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint rulers with Him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal restoration of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous; the final destruction of the wicked, and eternal life only through Christ. We teach that men should believe the gospel, repent of their sins, and be immersed in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and live a holy life as essential for final salvation. Believing this, we do not believe that man has an immortal soul which goes either to its reward or punishment at death; that the kingdom of God is either in the heart, church, or heaven; that the resurrection takes place when men die; that telling pathetic stories in a religious meeting is preaching the gospel; that getting religion at the mourner's bench is repentance, or that sprinkling is baptism.

"A part" is a portion, piece, or fragment of the whole. What portion, piece, or fragment of the modern revival as such can we accept and enjoy? Is it the rehearsal of deathbed stories which supplant the preaching of the gospel? Or the altar service which exists wholly independent of the Word of God? Or the public voting on going to heaven? None of these can we accept as in any way filling the Scriptural requirements. And yet, take them away and the revival will be a failure.

In the absence of proper teaching of God's ways to transgressors (Ps. li: 13), can we participate in the prayers that God may convert sinners without such teaching? Is not such teaching essential; in fact, is it not indispensible toward the conversion of sinners? The Thessalonians had turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for His Son from heaven. 1. Thess. i: 9, 10. We may be assured that such turning to God was not accomplished without teaching them God's ways. Sec 1. Thess. ii: 13. Is there any reasonable requirement which demands that we join in the exercises at the altar? Shall we speak to the mourners? If so, what shall we tell them? Shall we ask them as to their understanding and belief of the gospel? If they give a negative answer, shall we urge them to study the Word of God until they can act intelligently? If the answer is an affirmative, shall we say to them, as Ananias did to Saul, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord?" Acts xxii: 16. Such a course, though the only reasonable one, would not only be regarded as, but would actually be, a breach of common courtesy. Shall we, on the other hand, say to the mourners, as is frequently done, "Only believe," without telling them what to believe? This we cannot do, though it is about the only thing we would be permitted to do. There is, therefore, but one reasonable course open, and that is, that while we harbor no ill will, and have none but the best of intentions, toward the persons engaged in the revival, we do not participate in those exercises.

Shall we attend meetings when they are in progress? While I should like to do so as a matter of courtesy, I find myself unable to do so without creating a wrong impression. If I go, I am expected as a public teacher to take an active part in everything that is religious. And inasmuch as the revival is regarded as the cream of religion, if I do not take part in the exercises while present at the meeting, my failure to actively participate, whatever may be my reasons, will cause offence. Hence I do not attend revival meetings as generally conducted. Perhaps the reader can do so without leaving an unfavorable impression. This is a matter in which he must exercise his best judgment in the sight of God.

GIVING.

Benevolence is a rare and valuable trait of character. How much we admire as we see it unselfishly exhibited in the character and lives of others. But I wonder if we do not sometimes forget, perhaps we too might give out to others the same pleasing enjoyment by cultivating a greater spirit of liberality in our own hearts and lives? When we speak of giving very many people seem to think there is but one thing that can or need be given, and that is money. If they possess that it may not be given. If they do not have it they cannot give. But if they possess the spirit of Christ and feel as benevolent as Peter did on the day of Pentecost when the lame man asked alms of him, we can say, "Such as I have give I unto thee." It is such as we have God asks us to give. If we are in the same financial condition as Peter was when he said, "Silver and gold have I none," yet we can encourage one another by our presence, by a smile or a word of approval. If we cannot go to the front of the battle we can hold up the hands even to the close of the day of those who are there. We can be with them in the hour of trial and need. If we cannot preach we can be in our seat when the hour of worship arrives. Should the devil come to us at that time or at the Sunday school hour inviting us out to a sumptuous dinner, do as Christ did when the devil tempted him, give them the Scriptures by saying, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone." If we cannot lead the meeting, we can shovel a path to the church door, we can ring out God's prayers from the end of the bell rope. We can build the furnace fires, warm and light God's house with a warmth and glow that will tell of our willingness to give of such as we have, which will be well pleasing in his sight. Give of what we have. Oh, if all would be willing to say, "Such as I have, give I unto thee," there would be such a shaking to life of many dry bones that the prophet Ezekiel never saw in his vision. God desires his children to give something besides dollars and cents. He says, "Give me thine heart and let thine eyes observe my ways." Prov. xxiii. 26. The very best way for us to cultivate a spirit of giving and doing, is to give our heart. Then dollars and cents will care for themselves. God loves a cheerful giver. But very many appear to be afraid to give any thing lest they become lean and poor, and the next move in life will be over the hills to the poor house. They say, no sir, it will never do to give in that way, it will surely bankrupt us. Just listen to this a moment, "The liberal soul shall be made fat and he that watereth shall be watered also." Prov. xi. 25. Do what you can. Give of what you have. Do it cheerfully and willingly. Don't wait until you can do some great thing, or give some great gift. Don't wait until you can fill the place of A Moody before you take any place in life. Take your own place here in the world and fill it cheerfully and well. No one can ever fill the place of Moody or any other great man, if they have become great enough to do that they have a place of their own in life that they cannot leave for that of another. Never try to be some one other than yourself. Give of what you have. Do it cheerfully and willingly and you will then receive the blessing that belongs to yourself. God be honored and your life a success.

L. S. BRONSON.

Dear brothers and sisters.

I am here at North Bend, Wash., at present teaching the gospel. I got the Baptist church for a few nights. I took up the covenants and promises, and those given in the law. I showed that the law was fulfilled, but those given to the fathers was yet to be fulfilled. I then took up the saints inheritance, which confirmed the promises, then the kingdom which confirmed them both. I then took up the 37th chapter of Ezekiel, and showed them how God would bring them into that land for an everlasting possession. I then showed them the glories of the kingdom. I then took up the soul question for my next text, but they went to scheming and locked the door against me without giving me notice to withdraw my appointment. I then went for the sexton, who had gone with the key, I then went to the minister and asked him if he meant to lock me out and if he did'nt think he had done wrong? He just laughed. I then went to the sexton and he said they had done wrong after I had told him how I had preached, and he acknowledged that I had taught him Scripture that he had never learned before. I then went to the School Board, who were not church members, and they said they would treat a stranger better than that, so they opened their door. I went to their prayer meeting and prayed Scripture, and when I testified I told them that I was a humble servant of the Lord, and as they did to the least of one of his servants they did it to him, and they threw up their hands. Then I told them if they could prove me heathen than I could them they were better Christians than I was, and I thought the minister would slide off his chair and go through the floor. In his sermon on the next Sunday he told them that they could not stay in their church and believe all that was written in the Bible, and that some of their sheep were about to leave the flock. I felt sorry that he had a church that was the only church of God and could'nt believe in the Bible.

Dear Restitution:

You will please find enclosed $1.50 for the welcome visitor, the grand, old RESTITUTION. It gladdens our home. I often wonder how long we have to wait the coming of our Lord to restore all things to its Eden home. We have not heard a sermon preached of our faith for three years, as we are isolated from any of like precious faith. The Seventh Day Advents have been trying to creep in and take what few there are here, and have succeeded in getting some of them to keep the seventh day, but I pray that God in his mercy will keep our family from following after them.

Farewell, dear brothers and sisters, waiting to be gathered home.

Kaiser's Move Long Planned.

Some few years before his death, Lord Salisbury, who was justly regarded at the time as the dean of all European statesmen in his wide experience and profound knowledge of diplomacy and foreign affairs, declared in one of those odd bursts of confidence, which used to be denounced by his foes as "blazing indiscretion," that the question which would bring on the long expected and much dreaded outbreak of a war between the great powers would be in connection neither with China, nor yet with Egypt, nor the Balkans, nor yet Asia Minor—but Morocco. Of far graver import than the much discussed eastern question was the Moorish peril, and it is no secret that several times during the last fifteen or twenty years certain of the European governments, notably France and England, have been on the verge of war about Morocco.

The last crisis of this kind happened between four and five years ago, when Great Britain threatened to occupy Tangier in the event of France seizing Tafilet, which commands all the great trade and caravan routes of the Moorish empire.

About eighteen months ago England abandoned this position with regard to Morocco, and by means of a treaty recognized France's claims to play a predominant role in the Moorish empire, in return for the withdrawal of Gallic opposition to Great Britain's control of Egypt. The convention in question covered a number of other points at issue between the two nations, and put an end to many differences that had stood in the way of a friendly understanding. But the principle feature of the treaty was that in return for France's recognition of England's supremacy on the banks of the Nile, England acknowledged the right of France not merely to exercise a predominant role in Morocco, but to eventually absorb it into her great African colonial empire, Great Britain merely stipulating that for a term of thirty years her trade should enjoy the same advantages in Morocco that it does today.

The announcement that an agreement of this kind had been concluded took every body by surprise. For while there may have been a suspicion that negotiations of some sort or another were in progress between the two powers, it was assumed that they related merely to the settlement of some disputes in connection with Newfoundland, the west coast of Africa and Siam. No one outside the cabinets, the foreign ministers, and the executives of the two nations concerned had the slightest idea that England was abandoning to France that Moorish empire to preserve the integrity of which she had been ready to go to war with her but three years previously.

For once foreign statesmen and rulers were caught napping, and proof was afforded, if proof were needed, that the secrets of Downing street and of the Quai d'Orsai are better kept than the public might be led to believe from the fanciful stories of the exploits of secret agents and international spies, which find so ready an acceptance by the serial and daily press. Not even Russia had been permitted to obtain an inkling of what was going on, despite her alliance with France and the resentment at St. Petersburg was consequently great. Nowhere, however, did the news excite more disgust than at Berlin, where not only the German ambassadors in London and Paris, but likewise Count Billow himself, as the minister of state responsible for the foreign relations of the empire, came in for much abuse, it being asserted that they had permitted themselves to be hoodwinked and had been been guilty of neglect.

In course of time Spain, which had always looked upon the hinterland of her settlements on the Moorish coast as destined to replace her lost colonies, was induced by France to give her approval to the treaty by means of an agreement, the terms of which have not yet been disclosed, but which are manifestly satisfactory to the government at Madrid, since King Alfonso is to be the guest of the French nation at Paris a few weeks hence. Thereupon the Anglo-French treaty was communicated to the foreign governments as a matter of courtesy. Some of them, that of Germany in particular, abstained at the time from according anything more than a bare acknowledgement, declining to express an opinion about the matter, and it was assumed that they had all resigned themselves, perhaps with an ill grace and manifest reluctance, to the fait accompli.

The assumption has proved wrong, at any rate in the case of the kaiser. With far more political sagacity and prescience, and likewise with more patience than he is generally supposed to possess, he determined to bide his time before taking up any position in this Moorish question. Although he was deeply offended at the manner in which Germany had been ignored until everything had been cut and dried, he realized that the moment was not propitious for any protest, and that to render the latter efficacious it would be wiser to wait for a favourable opportunity, which he felt sure would come to him in the near future.

That opportunity has now arrived. Just at the moment when France has presented to the sultan of Morocco an ultimatum containing demands that virtually amount to the establishment of a French protectorate, analagous to that exercised by England over Egypt, since they provide for the administration of the shereefian government under French direction and control, and the occupation of the various strategical points of the Moorish empire by French troops, the kaiser not merely proclaims that the sultan of Morocco is an independent sovereign and that he will permit no third power—that is, France—to intervene in the relations between the German and the Moorish governments, but he actually goes to Tangier himself for the purpose of informing the Moors in person of the fact. The result of this coup on his part is already apparent. For the sultan of Morocco has rejected the French ultimatum and declines to surrender any vestige of his independence to France.

While the action of Emperor William can not be described as an insult to France, yet it constitutes a defiance which eighteen months ago, before Russia had the Japanese invasion of Manchuria on her hands, would probably have led to a declaration of war by the French government. For while the kaiser is acting with perfect correctness from a German point of view, yet it cannot be denied that he has called a halt to France in connection with Morocco, that he has publicly encouraged the Moorish sultan to reject the French ultimatum and to resist any attempt to establish a French protectorate, while no amount of explanation on the part of M. Delcasse at Paris in the chamber of deputies and in the senate can possibly blind the French nation to the fact that its dignity has received a sharp blow—the sharpest, indeed, which it has experienced at the hands of Germany.

It is idle to attempt to predict what will be the outcome of the present situation. Few statesman could have foretold the conclusion of the Anglo-French treaty concerning Morocco a year ago. Still fewer could have dreamt the nature of this latest move on the part of the kaiser, although now that it has taken place it is manifest that he must have had it in mind when in February he peremptorily forbade his son, the crown prince, to visit his fiances at Cannes, since the friendly welcome which his heir apparent would undoubtedly have received at the hands of the authorities in the south of France could not but have rendered it difficult for him subsequently to assume the position which he has taken on the subject of Morocco.

Were France to respond to this act of defiance on the part of the kaiser by a declaration of war, or were she to pursue a policy with regard to Morocco which would involve her in an armed conflict with Germany, she would find herself isolated and possibly called upon to face the triple alliance, with a knowledge that if defeated she would be compelled to restore to Italy the latter's lost province of Savoy, as well as a considerable portion of what is now the French Riviera, besides the sacrifice of most of her colonial possessions to Germany. For Russia is neither willing nor able to come to her assistance, or to live up to the terms of the Franco-Russian alliance. St. Petersburg resents the lack of sympathy manifested by France for Russia in her troubles, and then, too, the chaos in the dominions of the czar is so great as to preclude for a long time to come any idea of Russia's taking up the cudgels in behalf of France against Germany, which alone of all the European powers has shown her the most marked friendship and good will since the beginning of the war with Japan.

The Palm Tree.

The Arabs have a saying about the palm tree, that it stands with its feet in salt water and its head in the sun. They often cannot drink of the blackish water found in the oasis where the palm grows: but they tap the tree and drink the sweet palm wine. The palm tree, by the magic of its inner life, can so change the elements found in the unkindly soil around it that they minister to its growth and strength and fruit-bearing. So we in our earthly life must often have our feet in the mire and bitterness of sin around us; and upon our heads will often beat the fierce heat of temptation. But, in spite of these things, we shall be able to grow, and grow strong, if within us there is the making of a new life through Jesus Christ.

Don't Brag.

Young man, don't brag. Don't call the world's attention too loudly to your general worth. Perhaps you really are brave in danger and clever at books and fleetin football games—but we will not believe you any the sooner because you insist on telling us so. In fact, we are inclined to look a trifle askance at the braggart. If he can do all these things so well, let him do them, and stop talking about it. Seeing is believing. A little modesty is becoming to any young man. Do not be alarmed; if you have skill, prowess, or brains, we shall find you out, though you never say a word about it. And we may be so pleased with our discovery that we shall be tempted to do your bragging for you.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

The Book of Daniel.

INTRODUCTION.

1. And there was a man of prominence dwelling in Babuloon, and his name Joonkeim.

2. And he took a wife by the name of Soosonna, a daughter of Chelkias, very beautiful and one who feared the Lord.

3. And her parents were justified (pardoned sinners like all the Christians now), and they had taught their daughter according to the law of Moouses.

4. And Joonkeim was very rich, and he had a pleasure-garden adjoining his house; and the Joudaians were accustomed to be gathered together unto him, because he was the most renowned of them all.

5. And two elders had been appointed from the laity judges for that year, concerning whom the despot had said that transgression had gone forth from Babuloon by reason of elder judges, who seemed to be steering the laity.

6. These were accustomed to prolong their stay in the house of Joonkeim; and all those who were being judged were coming unto them.

7. And it came to pass whenever the laity had run away between days Soosanna was accustomed to go her way into, and walk about in the pleasure-garden of her husband.

8. And the two elders beheld her day after day going her way into and walking about in it, and they came to be in inordinate desire for her.

9. And they perverted their own minds and they inclined their eyes away from looking unto heaven and from being mindful of just judgments.

10. And they were both smitten with her, and they did not tell one another their woe.

11. Because they were ashamed to declare their inordinate desire, namely that they desired to have connection with her.

12. And they covertly and diligently watched day after day to see her.

13. And the one said to the other, Let us go our way home, because it is supper-time; and going out they separated from one another.

14. And turning back they came to the same place, and questioning one another as to the cause they confessed their inordinate desire; and then they arranged together a time when they would be able to find her alone.

15. And it came to pass while they were covertly watching a favorable day, that she went in even as yesterday and the third day with only two little maids, and she longed to bathe in the pleasure-garden, as it was scorching hot.

16. And there was no one there except the two elders who were hid and covertly watching her.

17. And she said to the little maids, Bring me olive-oil and ungerents, and close the doors of the pleasure-garden that I may bathe.

18. And they did even as she had said, and they closed the doors of the pleasure garden, and went out by the side-doors to bring the things directed them, and they did not see the elders because they were hid.

19. And it came to pass when the maids had gone out that the two elders arose and ran toward her;

20. And they said, So the doors of the pleasure-garden are closed and no one beholdeth us, and we are in inordinate-desire for thee, therefore yield to us and be with us.

21. And if you do not, we will testify against thee that there was a young man with thee, and that for this reason thou didst send the little maids away from thee.

22. And Soosanna raised a sigh and said I am in straits on every side; for if I should do this it is death for me; and if I should not do it, I shall not escape your hands.

23. It is better for me not having done [illegible] will not escape your hands.

24. And Soosanna raised a cry but with a great voice, and the two elders called for help in her presence.

25. And the one running opened the door of the pleasure-garden.

26. And when those of the household heard the shouting in the pleasure-garden, they ran in through the side-door to see what had occurred to her.

27. And when the elders had said their say the bond-servants were put to shame exceedingly, because such a word had never been spoken concerning Soosanna.

28. And it came to pass on the morrow, when the laity had come together unto her husband Joonkeim, that the two elders came full of their thought of transgression against Soosanna to put her to death, and they said in the presence of the laity.

29. Send for Soosanna daughter of Chelkias, her who is the wife of Joonkeim, and they sent.

30. And she came and her parents and her children and all her kindred.

31. And Soosanna was refined in appearance and beautiful to the sight.

32. And the evaders of law commanded her to be unveiled, for she was veiled, that they might be filled with her beauty.

33. And those with her and all those who saw her were lamenting.

34. And the two elders arose in the midst of the laity and placed their hands upon her head.

35. And she lamenting looked up to heaven because her heart trusted in the Lord.

36. And the elders said, As we were walking by ourselves in the pleasure-garden, she came in with two handmaids, and closed the doors of the pleasure-garden after her and dismissed the maids.

37. And a young man came unto her who was hid and took a half-reclining position with her.

38. And we being in a corner of the pleasure-garden and seeing the transgression ran upon them; and seeing them having connection,

39. We were not able to get controling hold of him, because he was stronger than we, and opening the doors he ran out.

40. But her we took and we asked her who the young man was.

41. And she would not tell us. These things we testify to; and they condemned her to die.

42. And Soosanna raised a cry for help on high with a great voice, and said, O God thou everlasting One, thou knowest of the hidden things, thou didst who know them all before their origin.

43. Thou knowest well that they have testified falsely against me; and lo, I am about to die having done none of the things which these men have wickedly devised against me.

44. And the Lord hearkened to her voice

45. And as she was b[illegible]g led away to perish God awakened the Holy Spirit of a young man, Daniel by name.

46. And he called for help with a great voice, I am guiltless of this blood.

47. And all the laity turned unto him and said, What is this word which thou hast spoken?

48. And he taking his stand in their midst said, Are ye so wanting in good sense ye sons of Israel? Without having given them a preliminary examination nor ascertaining the matter clearly are ye condemning a daughter of Israel?

49. Return to the judgment-seat; for these men have testified falsely against her.

50. And the laity all returned with haste; and the elders said to him; Come hither and sit in our midst and tell us; because God hath given thee the eldership.

51. And Daniel said unto them; Do ye separate them far from one another and I will give them a preliminary examination.

52. And when they had been separated the one from the other, he called the one and said unto him, Thou who hast grown old in evil days, now thy sins have come, which thou hast been formerly doing,

53. While judging wilt thou justify the unjust and condemn the guiltless, but release the guilty, when God saith, thou shalt not put to death the innocent and justified?

54. Now then if thou sawest her tell me under what sort of a tree thou sawest them having intercourse with one another; and he said, Under a Schinon tree (so called because it split easily).

55. And Daniel said, Thou hast taken God's [illegible] will split thy [illegible].

56. And straightway him aside he commanded to [illegible] other) put he said to be him there, [illegible] and not of Judah, the beauty hath deceived thee, and inordinate desire hath perverted thy heart.

57. Is it in this wise ye do to the daughters of Israel? And they fear to associate with you; but a daughter of Judah hath not endured your transgression.

58. Now then tell me under what tree thou didst apprehend them having intercourse with one another? And he said under a prinon; (a tree that saws easily).

59. And Daniel said unto him, Thou hast lied all right also against thine own head; for an angel by God is waiting having his sword to saw thee in two, that he may utterly destroy you both.

60. And all the synagogue raised a cry with a great voice and eulogized the God who saveth those who hope in him?

61. And they arose against the two elders because Daniel had convicted them out of their own mouth of having testified falsely, and they did to them in the way they had wickedly devised to do to their neighbor, and according to the law of Moouses they put them to death; and innocent blood was saved on that day.

62. And Chelkias and his wife sung praise for their daughter along with Joonkeim her husband and their relatives, because an unbefitting thing had not been found in her.

64. And Daniel became great in the sight of the laity from that day and thereafter.

COMMENT.

This book of Daniel like so many of the generally accepted canonical books of the Bible has been expurgated and its unity and integrity garbled and mutilated. This book has come down directly from the Chaldaic through the Greek to us. There is no Hebrew version of it, and the omissions and changes from the Greek are due to the Latin apostasy and their ignorance of the Chaldaic language rather than to the bold tinkering of the Joudaic apostasy which occurred much earlier in the Christian era. The name Daniel means "a loan of mercy," God loaned Daniel to Babuloon and it was "a call loan." He was "the prime minister," in fact the real ruler of Babuloon during the royalties of Nabouthodonosor, Baltassar his son, and of Kuros (Cyrus) the Mede.

This introduction with which the book opens gives a very dramatic incident, which proved to be the opportunity in God's providence, which comes to us all, for Daniel as a young man to assert his true character and ability, and he with characteristic courage rose to the occasion, and God gave him the eldership before due age. This high endeavor and success proved to be but the beginning of an ever-increasing career of the highest utility and favor in the sight of God and men.

The book therefore properly opens with this incident which all the versions have made apocryphal, thus robbing the inspired record of one of the most valuable ethical teachings for every young man who aspires to a political career of usefulness in any given sphere.

Selections.

Abraham and David.

The language of the 1st verse of the 1st chapter of the New Testament is very suggestive: "The record of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the So nof David, the son of Abraham."

We see 'Abraham and David' stand out as headlights, alone visible in the great genealogical chart that leads to Christ. Why is this? For what purpose is the matter put in this remarkable way? "Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham." Why this grouping of names so distant in time, and thus ignoring of all intervening generations? It surely cannot be accidental, or without signification.

The Lord had a long line of ancestry according to the flesh, besides Abraham and David; but of them all, those two only were those with whom were made two comprehensive covenants of promise, embracing within their scope the whole Gospel plan of Salvation. Surely this is the explanation.

Abraham and David had each many eminent, and some royal sons; but Christ only is pre-eminently the "seed" or "son" alluded to in those cove[illegible] [illegible] to call attention to the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants, and to identify Jesus of Nazareth as that illustrious "seed," "son, and heir of which they speak; and in whose offices of prophet, priest, and king they will have their complete fulfillment. The Abrahamic covenant promises that at some time in the future, Christ, together with Abraham and all the chosen and faithful ones, as joint heirs with Christ, will obtain everlasting possession of the promised land, and that He will possess the gate of His enemies, that is, conquer the world. The Davidic covenant, after the same tenor, but more explicitly, promises that He (Christ) will rebuild and occupy the throne of David upon that land; and in this form of royalty, "reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet; causing "all kings to fall down before Him, and all nations to serve Him;" "whose dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth." "Then shall Jerusalem be called the throne of the Lord, and all the nations (or representatives of the nations) shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord to Jerusalem. Neither shall they walk any more after the imaginations of their evil heart." Thus we find that the oath-confirmed promises made unto the fathers, center and culminate in Christ. In Him are bound up the destinies of the world. "Now to Abraham and his seed (the Christ) were the promises made." All the promises are yea and amen in Christ Jesus." It was appropriate, then, that the New Testament Scriptures should begin with language identifying Jesus Christ as the head under which the economy of human affairs shall ultimately be established. Yes, this little verse contains a doctrine in which all earth will yet harmonize with heaven. We look back upon these events many centuries in the past, and see the fulfillment of all the things written by the prophets relating to the sufferings and the death of Christ. "When we were yet without strength, according to the time, Christ died for the ungodly." How literally, even to the very letter, everything was fulfilled relating to His birth, life, sufferings, death, and resurrection. The knowledge of the strict fulfillment of these things in the past strengthens our faith in "hoped for" things of the future. "God remembers His covenant." Ps. 105. His promises never go to protest. "They are in Christ yea and amen, to the glory of God the Father."

Jehovah's faithfulness in the past is the guarantee of what is to come. The historical picture aids the prophetical, and encourages and comforts and strengthens us in our patient waiting for Christ. It is very evident that these promises have never had as yet their complete fulfillment; they have been referred to at different periods of the world's history by the prophets and apostles, and thus confirmed; e. g. "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old." These days of old go back twelve centuries to Abraham; from this last verse of the prophet Micah we infer that their fulfillment is still in the future. We go on farther in the future over seven hundred years to the days of Paul, who refers to them in the following language. "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers." Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, including all the ancient worthies who died in faith;" not having received the (fulfilment of the promises,) saw them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." The doctrine of the kingdom is based on these promises; at the Saviour's appearing and kingdom they will receive their fulfillment. The "hope of Israel" will then be realized. We shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and David, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God. We, like David, in contemplating the glories which are enfolded in those "sure mercies," would say, "This is all our salvation and all our desire."

Light.

It is often said by brethren and sisters with a bitter sigh, "Ah! the world is hard of a truth," but it is harder to have to realize that one's own brethren should wilfully make the way stonier and colder; but such is too often the case, and the feeble or weak ones are certain to come to grief in the long run and then upon whose shoulders rests the blame of having lost a lamb whom they may never find again?

[illegible] one, [illegible] by [illegible] the misery and mire and seek the lost one, and when he has found it, rejoiceth?" He meant to teach that if, by an unforgiveable chasm, one was lost, we should spare no effort to regain him; but with that, another lesson is involved; it is, that if we are to seek the wanderer from the fold, how much more incumbent it is for us to avoid placing a stumbling-block in the way of any one of our brethren, so far as seeking to be proud of the achievement of casting him out. You may see with me in this, or you may say that under certain circumstances we may be justified in excluding from our fellowship certain of our brethren lest we who think ourselves strong enough to sit in judgment on our brethren, be weakened in our faith by his presence. But I cannot see how we can be following Christ's precepts and example if we refuse help and instruction to anyone who has dared to differ from us, though they had been sufficiently enlightened erstwhile as to be deemed worthy of fellowship into Christ's body, and, therefore, amenable to judgment by reason of the light that is in them. We must ever remember the seventy times seven.

Christ once said, "To whom much is given, much is required." He meant that to whom God had given much, not to whom we have given much, will much be required, and God, through Christ alone, is to be the judge of the responsibility.

If we could imagine a case where a brother has fallen away, but who still wishes to be kept in mutual loving fellowship, I think we shall have simply imagined it and not experienced it, for if he was so opposed to the Truth he should not remain in it for any appreciable time, for he would go where he could find others with similiar ideas. This is not a theory, but it has been borne out by facts; cases where brethren who differed even secretly from the ecclesias have, without force or persuasion, left quietly, some of whom, I am happy to say, have, years after, been permitted by God's mercy to see their error and come back to the fold.

The fact is, our minds, being finite, cannot see the end of our actions, good or bad, and it behooves us to use the greatest forbearance and discretion in dealing with those whose lights have burned low, lest we extinguish the light altogether, and so plunge them into thick darkness. Remember the lamp will sometimes burn low, not because the oil is exhausted, but because the wick needs trimming.

It would not be right to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but by works of darkness more is meant than mere differences of opinion on the age of the world, the kind of wine to be used for the Lord's table, the mode of inspiration of any part of the Bible, the nature of the resurrection miracle, and hundreds of other unessential points, but rather the believing of such doctrines as the establishment of Christ's kingdom in heaven, of the supremacy of the Romish church, and other great errors, any one of which would destroy the whole fabric of the Truth and annihilate entirely our fondest hopes and aspirations.

I speak of these things because if we act in an unchristlike manner in dealing with one another it will be because we, rather than they, lack the light, for the spirit of the Truth is in all goodness and righteousness and truth, for ye are light in the Lord, walk as children of light.—G. E. Austin.

Let Others Do The Talking.

If you want to defend Christianity, practice it; act and let others do the talking. "In regard to skepticism," said Phillips Brooks, "the main method of meeting it must not be an argument, but a man." A good life is absolutely unanswerable argument for Christianity. It is character that tells.

There is wonderful power in a consistent life.

The atheist who spent a few days with the saintly Fenlon said: "If I stay here much longer I shall become a Christian in spite of myself." Fenlon had used no word of controversy, or even of solicitation. It was the quiet, convincing argument of a holy life that led to the remark.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil, "but my mother's life was too much for me."

A young minister, when about to be ordained to the work of the gospel, stated publicly that at one period of his life he was almost an infidel, "but," said he, "there was one argument in favor of Christianity I never could refute—the consistent conduct of my father.

[illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

...ing of the bottle of ink, viz., as positive evidence that the Jews will never again be restored to Palestine as a nation in the future. The bottle is broken to represent the breaking and scattering of the nation—and as it is written, "so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel that cannot be made whole again." The Elder says, "Until it is demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that a broken potter's vessel can be restored, I shall believe it impossible to restore the Jewish polity." To the Jews at that time, it may have been impossible to restore the broken bottle; but in our day, by the increase of knowledge I think the bottle ground to powder can be restored by the use of cement. And if not, "Is anything too hard for God?" It is written in 2 Sam. xiv. 14, "For we must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again." Now though man cannot gather up the spilt water, we know that God by a law of nature does gather it up in the clouds, and drops it on the earth again—and it is written, "He that scattered Israel, shall gather him and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock." Again the Elder refers to Isa. xi. 11, "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea." This gathering he says was the gathering from Babylon B. C. 536, or 177 years after Isaiah's prophecy of this second time gathering and was from the very places specified in Isaiah xi. 11. Now let us admit that they were as the elder affirms gathered from the places specified in Isa. xi. 11, B. C. 536. The Elder says, "The recovering of Israel from Egypt under Moses was certainly the first." That is the first gathering in the order of Isa. xi. 11, being the second. To which truth compels us to say no; first because Israel was not scattered in Egypt, but went there in the providence of God to preserve their lives in time of famine. In the second place the Jews brought from Egypt were not a remnant in any sense of the word. Now notice the language in Isa. xi. 11, "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, etc. Now the gathering of Isa. xi. 11 is the second time from all the places specified. Therefore the contention of the Elder that in the gathering B. C. 536 they were gathered from those places necessitates a future gathering from the same places to fulfil Isa. xi. 11, so that a future gathering from the places specified will be a "second time" as stated in the text. In the text we have this language, "In that day," What day? The context gives the answer when, verse 6, "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb." Would not the wolf eat the lamb after the return from Babylon? Yes. Therefore "that day" is yet future. Again, verse 9 says, "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." In what "day" of our world did those conditions exist? Never. Therefore the "day" is yet future. Again verse 10, "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious." Yes, blessed be his name. "In that day the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people." And in verse 12, "And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four wings of the earth." Then will the gospel promise be realized in its fulness, "In thee and in thy seed; shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Another testimony to the fact that the "that day" of Isa. xi. 11 is future is found in xii. 6 which reads, "Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion; for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee." This 12th chapter is a continuation of the 11th as may be seen, there is no change in the subject. Again this "Holy One" in the first of xi. is "a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a ...ch of his roots, which shall ...ensign of the people, the ...it, the Spirit of wisdom, ...ding, counsel and might, ...edge, and of the fear of the Lord. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. In consequence of these qualifications which enabled him to overcome the enemy—and to come victorious from death and the grave, in verse 10 we find him having become the Root of Jesse. How is this? At the first he is a stem, a branch, from Jesse, but now Jesse's root. This is his question to the Pharisees. If he be David's Son, how then is he David's Lord? Answer, According to the flesh he is David's Son and came from the root of Jesse. According to the spirit nature to which he has attained, and Lord of the human race; he is David's and Jesse's Lord—and were it not for him in whom is deposited resurrection power, and eternal life to bestow on men of our race, Jesse and David would forever remain in the prison house of death. But it is with them as with our Lord's disciples, "Because I live ye shall live also." In the "that day," of Isa. xi. 11, Christ will be as he said, "The root and offspring of David, the bright and morning Star." At the time of the gathering from Babylon B. C. 536 Christ had not appeared as the "branch" out of Jesse's roots, much less as the root of Jesse. As it is written in verse 10 of Isa. xi., "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious." That is the day for which we pray, Thy kingdom come.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Payion, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

Poetry.

Some Time.

Some time, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here has spurned—
The things over which we grieved with breaking wet—
Will flash before us out of life's dark night.
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see, that, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called he heeded not our cry,
Because his wisdom to the end could see;
And even as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to cloying babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things, because it is not good.

And if, some time, commingled with life's wine,
We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out this potion for our lips to drink;
And if some friend we love is lying low,
Where human kisses cannot reach his face
Oh! do not blame the loving Father so,
But bear your sorrow with obedient grace.

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friend,
And that sometimes the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send.
If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

But not today. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart;
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
And if, through patient toil we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think I will say then, and not say less,
"Blessed be the day I trusted Him."

Notes by the Way.

In closing up the work on the New Kirk route in Oklahoma, I found the interest was of such a nature, that the people were loth to let me depart from their midst. I have a firm conviction that much of the good seed which was sown there has found lodgment, which will in time produce a harvest.

My next move was in the State of Kansas. Bro. Jacob Reed conveyed me by carriage from New Kirk to the home of himself and Sister Reed who live near Middleton, Oklahoma. After a short rest at their hospitable home, meetings were opened in the Arkansas City Route, in the State of Kansas. For a part of the time the attendance at these meetings was not large on account of bad weather. Although crowds do sometimes create an enthusiasm, yet deep conviction often comes in the quiet, reflective moods, as it was in the case of the married daughter of our much respected Sister Hadicke. At the close of the first Sunday morning's service, she asked for baptism. The congregation then drove immediately to the residence of Bro. Ira Vickery, wherein the presence of a goodly number of the household of faith, and others, I baptized her into the name of the Lord Jesus, for the remission of sins. This caused rejoicing in many hearts, but especially in that of her widowed mother. Her father, (now asleep in Jesus) will rejoice to meet her at the resurrection of the blessed and holy ones. After dinner was over, we then drove to the residence of Sister Hadicke, where we all met in sweet communion, in memory of our blessed Lord. We had a glad service. The congregation are arranging to meet regularly for this purpose. In my travels I find this memorial service is much neglected. At night we had another preaching service. These meetings continued through the week, and over the next Sunday following.

After the next Sunday morning's service a married daughter of Sister Smith confessed the faith, and asked for baptism. Tears of joy were shed over this dear one's resolve to follow wherever her Savior may lead. She is a niece of our beloved Sister Nancy Barber, of Salem, Ohio, and also of Sister Randolph, of Winter, Okla., who will both rejoice that their niece, has chosen the better part.

In the afternoon we again met at Bro. Ira Vickery's, where I baptized this dear young servant into the sacred name we all love so much. May God bless these lambs of his flock, and keep them secure in the sacred and precious name of Jesus.

We were also rejoiced to have Sisters Rube and Graham from Blackwell, Oklahoma, with us, and also Bro. and Sister Williams, who also came from a distance. I was pleased to make their acquaintance. I was also glad to meet our young brother Davis, who also came some distance.

Bro. Davis has really a wonderful talent for music, both vocal and instrumental. We appreciated his assistance in our meetings. He has fifty pupils under his instruction.

Others from Blackwell and New Kirk intended being at our meetings, but were hindered on account of the rain on Saturday night.

I made my home while at this point mainly with Bro. and Sister Jacob Reed, and Bro. and Sister Andrew Reed, and I certainly enjoyed their company so much. They made my stay with them very pleasant. I felt free and at home with both of them, and I shall long remember these pleasant associations.

I also had a brief visit with Bro. and Sister Chaplin. Bro. Chaplin is a nephew of that eminent Christian scholar, S. A. Chaplin, whom we all learned to love so much.

Bro. Jacob Reed took me on a pleasant drive to Chilocco, that I may visit the government Indian school at Chilocco, Oklahoma. This school is said to be one of the largest Indian schools in the United States. Vast sums of money have been spent in order to erect large stone school houses, lodging houses, dining hall, business house, printing office, work shops, electric, water and ice plants, and also residences for the superintendent and others; it is in fact quite a village in itself.

We had the pleasure of being present at the noon hour, when dinner was being served to the scholars. We witnessed seven hundred Indian children file out of their various school buildings, and join in a march to the dining hall. It was nice to witness the perfect order which prevailed among them. They were all in uniform and marched in military step. We entered the dining hall, and witnessed them march in, and file around the tables. When all were in place they stood erect as soldiers about the tables. At the tap of a bell, they all sat down, but still sitting straight up; and at another tap of the bell they all bowed their heads in silent thanks. At another tap of the bell they all fell to business; and you might have imagined that all the dishes had fallen to the floor at the bell tap, such was the rattling of dishes. One half hour is allowed for dinner. They have one Indian waiter appointed to serve at each two tables. When dinner was over they then marched out of the dining hall in the same order as when they entered. We enjoyed a visit to the room where they are taught how to cook. We also visited the various school grades, while school was in session. In one of these rooms each child was engaged in writing letters to their parents. These letters were to be corrected and sent to their parents.

We also visited the commercial college, where the young people were being taught how to transact business. The school has a ten thousand acre reservation, which is used for the government farm, and the school campus grounds. The work on the farm and campus grounds is all done by the Indians. They raise their own grain, meat and vegetables: They have also a fine spring of water and a water tower, by which they are furnished with water.

I enjoyed my visit to this school, which certainly gave me a much larger conception of what the government is doing toward civilizing the red man. I noticed an item in a weekly journal, published by the Indians at Chilocco, which said: "The grandson of old Twisted Hair, the prominent chief of Nez Perces, is reported to be studying theology, and is said to be a gifted and progressive Indian." If the grandson of old Twisted Hair could study something better than twisted theology, he would be a more progressive Indian still.

On the Monday morning after the conclusion of our meetings at this place, Bro. Jacob Reed then conveyed me by carriage to the home of Bro. and Sister Chaplin, at Arkansas City. At about 6:30 P. M., Bro. Chaplin drove me to the train, where I took my departure for my next appointment at Neodesha, Kansas. Mr. Fulbright, the husband of Sister Fulbright, met me at the depot, and took me to the home of himself and Sister Fulbright. Meetings commenced on the night of my arrival, with a good attendance to start with. The meetings are now progressing, (April 10) with fair attendance and interest, and trust that some seed will lodge in good soil.

Neodesha is the place where the Standard Oil Trust Refinery is located, and is also the battle ground of the fight now being waged between the trust and the State of Kansas.

I expect to arrive at my home, on Friday April 14, after an absence on an extended trip, which has lasted five months and twenty days.

Before I go out on perhaps, a still longer trip, I will attend to calls from Conferences, and special calls for meetings, which may come in. Those contemplating having me attend their Conferences, or hold meetings in their neighborhood will write to me at 10, Chicago address.

During my trip just closing, a goodly number have made the start in the Christ life, and having so learned of him the better way, may God grant that they may ever reflect that pure life in their own lives; it is in this way that they can show to the world, that they did in fact die to sin, and are now alive in Christ. If the Christ life does in fact dwell within, it cannot be hid. Those who do in fact have within them the Christ life, can have no affinity, fellowship, or communion, with professors who by their outward acts in life, publish to the world, that their profession is simply an outward pretence, an empty farce. By perseverance we can grow into the Christ life, to the extent of making an entire change in the present carnal life. When this change is accomplished, then that which is sinful, will become so abhorent to a nature so refined, and made sensitive, by that which is pure and holy dwelling within, that they can find no kinship with an empty professor.

May our dear Father in heaven grant his divine help to those six or seven young people who have put on Christ in baptism within the last six months; may every one of them come off conquerors through the blessed Christ, whose name they now bear. I should indeed feel so sorry, if I should learn that any one of them should ever disgrace that holy name.

The grand old gospel of the kingdom, never gets too old to loose its charm upon a true hearted believer. When the merry bell of the gospel message vibrates upon the air, its sweet music still sends a thrill of joy to the devout believer's heart. By faith his vision even now pierces the future, and sees by faith the mists all cleared away. He sees the bow of hope as a magnificent arch, spaning the chasm between the vale of tears and the glory land. Why it makes the believer's heart as bouyant as the lark, which cleaves the blue vault of heaven, and warbles forth its sweet melodious notes. Oh, beloved, the grand review is coming, it hasteneth greatly, when heaven's arch will resound with shouts of victory! How many of us are willing to make sacrifices to send this heart-thrilling message over sea and vale, the mountain fastnesses, the broad prairies, and the leafy forest? Beloved, we must work now, or never! Do you want an interest with God's messengers, who do make sacrifices to sound out the glad message both by voice and also the press? What you do in this line is not in vain, the Judge of all the earth knows what you do. What have you deposited in the bank of heaven? That bank pays better interest on deposits, than any earthly bank.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Redemption: Ransom vs. Substitution.

The subject of man's redemption from death into the life in Christ Jesus in its finished aspect, is called by Paul salvation. It is to be the resultant effect of our working together with the Father, through His Son as Ambassador, and His appointed Redeemer, as Heb. xiii: 21, "Working in us that which is well pleasing in his sight," thus accomplishing the object of the apostle's teaching, 1. Cor. i: 30, "And unto him pertain ye, which of God is made unto us wisdom, and also righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." The "wisdom" being the Gospel of our salvation.

The study of redemption brings us first of all to the enquiry as to whom we were in bondage, seeing we are by its means to be brought out of one state into another; out of the hands of one owner into becoming the property of another: Paul, in the prosecution of his mission, reverted to the original ownership of us all when he said, Acts xvii: 29, "Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God" and thus proclaimed the great truth that God is the Father of all men without distinction of race, but that we had passed out of His hands and thus become "sold under sin" at some past time, in the persons of our parents, therefore, born in sin, and bondmen to sin; and as sin brings its wages, which is death, we must have a change of masters needful for our redemption from sin. The redemption of a bondman, in modern parlance a slave, must be by a payment; payments vary, the bondmen of Great Britain were redeemed by payment of the price of £20,000,000; the bondmen of the U. S. A. by an enormous expenditure of life and of money. In both cases, then, the principle was that of ransom, and the men thus ransomed, in both cases have become citizens of the two Empires who had bought them from their bondage.

This release from bondage, and its resultant citizenship, has brought a change of masters. Whereas, formerly the bondman was not under law, to-day he is bound by the law of his land. His servitude to his former master made him to be such a chattel as that he was subject to stripes and many other things evil because there was no law to protect him in person and property. To-day, being under the law, while he obeys that law he is a state of redemption within the meaning of the law of the state which made him free from compelled servitude, from stripes and from death.

While the man, therefore, is called a freeman, he is still in bonds to law: no law, lawlessness becomes his state, and reversion to savagery must result; repetition of evolution would then be necessary, and the man would only emerge by passing through the slaveship, by being bondman to another stronger than he, who would place him under restraint once more. The principle of personal freedom must be within the bonds of law, and in this respect there is no such thing existent as a man who is his own to the extent of living his life free from restraint. We call ourselves freemen, but we are constrained and controlled by law, in the name, and by the authority of the Queen, or the President of the state.

For state purposes, even in lands where the utmost personal freedom is assured, when war is being made, conscription is the resource when voluntary enlistment fails to procure men. Even in our army, the volunteer surrenders his property in himself, and can only be "bought out" by payment of the state price, the price of his redemption, or, if a conscript, by the provision of a substitute: the substitute having to be bought by a price. One man, one substitute: the principle is that of exchange of person for person, and it is thus that the ransom of the conscript becomes such at second hand, by the payment of a price.

But if substitution is dealt with as the principle of man's redemption from the slavery of sin, it wholly fails to meet the necessities of the case, seeing exchange is the principle of it. A substitute, as regards the Gospel of the blessed God, can supply no penalty made by sin against law; no prisoner can be set at liberty by the substitution of another person in his stead, for law can be satisfied only by its just sentence upon the person of the lawbreaker, seeing the substitute is not in the transgression of the law; the man who is guilty must suffer unless he can be redeemed by such payment as the law holds to be the equivalent of his crime, which payment being made is the price of his redemption.

In going through the Word of God, His law for man's redemption, the principle of ransom is ever present, and to redeem by payment of a price, whether it be the individual who is redeemed or the nation brought out of its bondage. The word to Pharoah was, "let my son go that he may serve me;" this was the imperative demand from the Divine claimant for the restitution of His property His son. Pharoah had made the chosen of God into the slave of his state necessities and pleasures. Divine interposition was the power by which restitution came to the people, this culminating in the death of the first-born and the overwhelming catastrophe of the Red Sea. Of this David says, II. Sam. vii: 23, "and what one nation in the earth is like Thy people, like Israel, whom God went to redeem for a people unto himself?" Ex. xv: 1, "Thou in Thy mercy hath led forth the people which Thou hast redeemed." Isaiah also, xli: 14 and lxiii: 16, "and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel," "Thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer!" Isaiah xliii: 3, "I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee." 2. Kings xiii: 5, "And the Lord gave Israel a Saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians." The children of freemen were born free, as was Paul, and it is to the state of freedom of purchase to which Peter makes striking reference: 1 Peter i: 18-19, "For as much as ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, such as silver and gold . . . but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."

The law provided atonement for sin by the provision of a lamb as an offering, as the price of ransom from sin, i. e., the bondage of sin. Pardon was conditional: repentance and sacrifice—a priest and an offering were ever the necessities in the case. What use would a substitute be? You cannot pardon sin in the person of a substitute? This is the old law: "A father shall not bear a son's sin, nor a son the sin of his father, but every man shall bear his own sin."

When a Hebrew offered a sacrifice for sin his action was to buy back God's favour, seeing "He cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance," but He was ever ready to forgive the sinner when the conditions for the remission of his sin were complied with. The action of the penitent was not to appease the face of Jehovah, but to obtain forgiveness according to the Word in the case. Psa. lxxxvi: 5—John Hawkins.

The venerable Dr. Cuyler does not hesitate to magnify his office as a preacher. Speaking before a Methodist gathering he is reported to have said: "Bear this in mind, that no presidential chair, no emperor's throne, was ever yet built high enough to be within ten leagues of the pulpit in which the fearless preacher stands winning souls to Jesus Christ."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Is This Wrong."

There is food for thought in the following paragraph from a sermon by the late Bishop Phillips Brooks: "Every now and then a conscience among the men and women who live easy, thoughtless lives is stirred, and some one looks up anxiously, holding up some of the pretty idleness in which some people spend their days and nights, and says, 'Is this wrong?' 'Is it wicked to do this?' And when they get this answer, 'No; certainly not wicked,' then they go back and give their whole lives up to doing there little piece of uselessness again. Ah! the question is not whether that is wicked, or whether God will punish you for doing it. The question is whether that thing is keeping other better things from you, whether behind its little bulk the vast privilege and dignity of duty is hid from you, and whether it stands between your God and your soul. If it does, then it is an offense to you, and, though it be your right hand or right eye, cut it off, pluck it out, and cast it from you."

It is our duty to take care of our bodies. Necessary sleep, sufficient bathing to keep the skin in good condition, enough good wholesome food to supply waste and keep the tissues and blood in good condition and fresh air to purify the system are necessities. But in attending to these matters remember that indulgence of self is not the way to have the body strong and vigorous. The ancient Spartans were remarkably abstemious; they trained themselves to endure pain without flinching. They used athletic games to develop strength, and despised sensual enjoyments. We do not advocate a Spartan manner of life in all things, but we need to find a true medium between pampering the appetite or needless self-indulgence, and too great abstemiousness. We believe, however, that thousands are killed by over-indulgence, to one who hurts the body by self-denial.—The Vanguard.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were stereotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 8 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

Brother P. L. Austin has supplied us with some clippings regarding his meeting at Niagara Falls, N. Y., which will be given soon.

The Annual Conference of the Michigan brethren will begin this year on June 1, and be held at Dutton. Notice will appear next week.

The war in the east is where it was last week. The fleets are manœuvering for the best positions, and it is possible the battle may be delayed some time. Neither side appears anxious to begin.

Just as we are ready to go to press we get word of the death of the wife of Bro. D. C. Robison, whose name is familiar to our readers. He has the sympathy of the Household of Faith in his hour of deep affliction.

Who Changed the Day?

In a tract before me, written by Wolcott H. Littlejohn, it is asserted that the Papacy changed the Sabbath from the seventh to first day of the week. In another tract it is affirmed that the change was brought about gradually, by the Emperor Constantine, by Pope Sylvester (the 1 Sylvester I suppose) and such bishops as Eusebius. Now if a Roman Emperor, Sylvester, Eusebius and such bishops changed the Sabbath then the power symbolized by the little horn Dan. vii: 8, 20 that had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, had little to do with the change; yet in these same tracts it is affirmed that this little horn power did change the Sabbath; and Catholic authors are quoted in proof of the supposed fact.

It is a fact with which all readers of Roman history are acquainted that the bishops of the Roman church in Rome, had no political authority or power to change times and laws prior to the fall of Western Rome, and therefore prior to the division into ten kingdoms represented by the ten horns of Daniel's vision; after the rise of which three of these are plucked up by the roots.

It is foreshown in the vision that the power symbolized by the horn with eyes and a mouth, would "think to change times and laws." Seventh day keepers assume that the fourth command is included by the term laws. Now it is a fact that the Popes of Rome changed a great many laws, but who knows that the prophecy has any reference to the Sabbath as one of the laws changed? This is the point to be proven. If it is true that Constantine and pope Sylvester, and Eusebius bishop of Cesarea, and many such bishops and popes in Rome and out of Rome changed the Sabbath long before the boastful little horn arose, how can this same horn or the power it represents be charged with the crime of changing the Sabbath to the first day of the week?

Constantine by his edict did not change the Sabbath; he makes no reference to it. It was the first day of the week concerning which his notable edict was promulgated. The day was previously observed, as a day of public assembly for worship, by the Christians prior to the date of his edict which was designed to regulate its observance. At this period in the Emperor's history he may have intended to honor the day more for the benefit of pagans than for that of the Christians; and by the phrase "venerable day" meant the day of sunworship. This is nothing here nor there. Seventh day keepers observe Saturday or Saturn's day. If the Christian is paganized by worshiping in public assembly on the first day, so is the seventh day keeper paganized by assembling and worshiping on Saturday. It is impossible to miss a pagan day. Now the fact is that neither are paganized by so doing and could only be by worshiping the same gods that the pagans worshiped, and according their prescribed rituals. This being true, that we have apostolic precedent or precedent of the primitive christian church we will not be unsettled by the specious arguments, or objections rather, that it is the Pope's day and those who observe it worship "the beast" and drink the wine of the old harlot church, and paganize themselves by observing a day set apart for the worship of the sun. This kind of bugbear may serve to frighten those not well versed in New covenant truth. These third angel message proclaimers (?) seek further to frighten the timid by quoting Rev. xiv: 9, 10 as foreshowing the certain doom of all Sunday keepers.

Did Constaptine the first Christian Roman Emperor change the Sabbath? No. In 321 A. D. issued an edict touching first day observance. The following is a transcript of the edict: "Let all judges, inhabitants of the cities, and artificers rest on the venerable Sunday. But in the country husbandmen may freely and lawfully apply to the business of agriculture; since it often happens that the sowing of corn and planting of vines cannot be so advantageously performed on any other day; lest, by neglecting the opportunity they should lose the benefits which the divine bounty bestows on us."

Constantine was not a pope, and he lived long before the papacy was sufficiently developed to act authoratatively on a question of such grave importance. His edict recognizes the fact that the day was already observed as a day of christian worship. It was not the design of his edict to transfer the sacredness of the 7th day to the first day. If the Emperor had intended to sabbatize the first day he certainly would have gone further and enjoined that husbandmen abstain from labor on "the venerable day." The Emperor may have regarded it as a happy coincidence that the Christian's day of public worship was the same day on which Pagans met to worship the sun.

For Christians to meet and worship on the first day of the week is not to paganize themselves. The seventh day was devoted to the worship of Saturn and therefore called Saturday or Saturns day. Are seventh day keepers aware of this? Mr. Hessey in his history of Sabbath and Sunday observance gathers up every reference to these days as found in Christian literature subsequent to the days of the Apostles, says Jewish Christians kept the Sabbath in the manner enjoined by the law and also met on the first day of the week for worship, following the example of the churches founded by the Apostles; regarding the day as that on which our Lord arose from the dead: thus keeping two days. Gentile Christians refused to keep the seventh day but observed the first. Mr. Hessey further says that very early in the post-apostolic church the question arose as to the binding obligation of the 4th command but the obligation to keep the first day of the week was not a subject of dispute. The observance of the first day was not as that prescribed by the sabbath law. That the early church met for worship on the first day of the week can be proven. Acts xx: 7 reads, "Upon the first day of the week when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight." Also 1. Cor. xvi: 2; "Upon the first day of the week, let each of you set apart whatever blessing may enable him to spare; that there may be no need to make collections when I come."

That the churches founded by the Apostles observed the first day of the week can not be successfully controverted; and following the precedent established by these churches the custom of assembling on this day for a specific purpose, was kept up subsequent to the days of the apostles and down through the centuries to the present day.

The Three Ways.

The Bible speaks of three ways in which humanity will travel. A broad way, a narrow way and a high way.

The broad way is frequented by the world, is easily followed, and leads down to death.

The narrow way is a strait, difficult path to find and follow, and few there be that find and keep the way. This path we are told and taught by the Scriptures, is strewn with many temptations. We are told that even the devil is untrammeled and goeth about seeking whom he may devour.

This gospel dispensation is one of conflict and warfare against many enemies, both without and within, seen and unseen, and although at times we may feel sure of a victory over their enemies that oftimes beset our path and are ready to exclaim as Peter of old "Though all men forsake thee yet will I not forsake thee," yet like Peter in an unguarded moment we fall. The Christian's life is one of constant struggle against the enemies of darkness and sin, and we are commanded to watch lest we enter into temptation and fall. We are commanded to hold fast that which we have that no man take our crown. But after this strait, narrow, difficult and thorny way has been traveled and passed, its mission ended, and its purpose accomplished, the millennium period will be ushered in, then the high way spoken of by the prophet Isaiah xxxv. 1-10 will be lifted up and it shall be called the way of holiness. The unclean shall not pass over it as has been the case so many times while walking the narrow or gospel path. But it shall be for the wayfaring man though fools shall not err therein. In traveling this narrow way very many wise have erred therein many times, and oft have lost their way. No roaring lion shall be there in this high way to deceive. It shall not be found there (as now) but the redeemed shall walk there and the devil himself will be bound, that he may not deceive those that travel that high way of holiness. The many forces of evil that now surround the narrow way will then be restrained. Then the "wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock, and dust shall be the serpents meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain saith the Lord." Isa. lxv. 25. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isa. xi. 9.

Following Jesus.

"As my Father sent me, even so I send you." John xx. 21. "I send you forth as lambs among wolves." Luke x. 3. "Come, take up the cross and follow me." Mark x. 21. "If any man serve me, let him follow me." John xii. 26. "He goeth before and the sheep follow." John x. 4. "An example that ye should follow his steps." 1 Peter ii. 21. "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him but also to suffer for his sake. Having the same conflict which ye saw in him." Phil. i. 29, 30. "Made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant." Phil. ii. 7. "Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." 1 Peter ii. 21. "Who did no sin neither was guile found in his mouth." 1 Peter ii. 20. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Matt. xx. 28. "For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." Matt. xviii. 11. "Jesus went about.....teaching..... and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. iv. 23. "Went about doing good." Acts x. 38. Fed the faint and weary multitude; fulfilled all righteouness by obeying the Father's commands; had compassion on the sick, was holy, harmless, undefiled; the friend of sinners; gave his disciples the words given him of the Father; glorified the Father upon earth; gave his life, his whole life in service, and on the cross, that we might live; put aside the flattering offer of "all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them," and took the path of poverty, of sorrow and of grief, of persecution and of death, in confident faith that the kingdoms and the glory would be his by and by. He trusted in God; he prayed much.

We have been sent forth to follow him, even though it be as lambs among wolves, in taking up the cross. We can serve him only by following him, must suffer as well as believe, must enter the arena of conflict of truth against error, as well as make profession of his name. We become Christians not merely to save ourselves, and to become the recipients of all blessings, but that we may carry on the work that Christ began in the world, and the work of saving men. And that we may do this work we must have the mind that was in him; we must set our feet in his steps, must believe and obey the Father; care for the sick, feed and clothe the hungry, teach others the gospel, put aside all thoughts of earthly glory, trust in God, pray much.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

"And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord."

If whatsoever we do in word or deed must be acceptable to God, they must be pure words; for the Lord will cut off all flattering lips and the tongue that speaketh proud things. The words of the Lord are pure words, as silver that is purified seven times. If we do all in word and deed to the glory of God, we will shine as lights in the world; for God has shown us light. "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." "The entrance of thy Word giveth light." Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly, and whatsoever we do, it will be to his glory, then in word and deed we will serve him. "For the mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom, the law of his God is in his heart." The apostle Paul was a living example of saying and doing all to the glory of God, for he counted the loss of all things and great affliction as naught, that he might glorify God, and his Son, Jesus Christ. Whatsoever we do if done for Jesus, we will receive the promised blessing—eternal life with our Savior when he restores again the kingdom to Israel.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

It is with much pleasure that I write to tell you of our Berean society at Omro, Wis. It is now about two years since we first organized our society. During this time we have in a few instances been obliged to suspend our meetings for a short time but we have always been able to resume them again. Our society numbers about twenty members and we meet Sunday evenings at the home of the president. We are using the Berean leaflets No 2. and are now ready to take up Lesson 10. There is usually a good attendance and much interest is manifested nearly every one present taking an active part in the discussions. We trust that these meetings may result in much good and that by this means others may be led to see the glorious light of the gospel. It is truly a blessed privilege to thus meet together to study God's word and to grow in knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Oh Brother and Sister Bereans! Let us labor more earnestly that others may come to this blessed knowledge. Let us make it possible for God to work through us in bringing many souls to Him. It is such a blessed hope we have in Christ that we ought to labor unceasingly to give others this hope. Christ came to seek and to save the lost. He left this glorious work unfinished. It is for us to carry it on. Let us then be up and doing while it is yet day for the night cometh when no man can work. All about people are dying in darkness and sin—without hope and without God in the world. Can we let them perish while we stand idly by and tell them not of the Christ who came to save? Can we expect to hear the welcome words "well done" if we obey not the Masters command to preach the gospel to every living creature?

We cannot all be foreign missionaries and carry a message of hope and love to people across the sea but we can all work for Jesus just where we are. There are countless opportunities lying all about us. May God open our eyes to see them. By His help we may make our daily lives such that people will want to know and serve our Jesus. Then, as God has prospered us, we may give of our earthly possessions so as to make it possible for others to carry the news of salvation to heathen lands. Oh it is such a blessed work which our master has entrusted to our care, and great is the reward if we are faithful to our charge.

God grant that at the blessed appearance of our Master, we may be found ready and watching.

Your Sister in Christ.

Dear Bereans:

I know that some time will elapse before the time for our annual Bible School to convene, but I think it none too soon to urge upon all who possibly can to make their plans and calculations to attend the Bible Institute held at Oregon, Ill., conducted by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. The time is not definitly settled when this is to take place, but it will likely precede the yearly Conference, as heretofore. Of the time however, there will be due notice given later. This is to spur each one of us into thinking upon the subject as to whether or not we have need of such a drill. I, for one, feel it to be an opportunity which ought not to be lost, affording as it does, the chance for a systematic study of the Scriptures, with one who is a thorough student of the Word, making it so plain that all may understand.

We must realize that many of the standard-bearers of the faith, those who have toiled incessantly in the interest of the Master, are now about ready to lay down their burdens—who are to step in and fill their places? Do we not see, then, the necessity of using every means at our command to prepare ourselves to take this stand, that the Truth, which we all so dearly love, may not languish for some one to hold it up to the world.

Let me say right here that this is not particularly to Bereans, it is to all; Bereans, and those who are not, (but ought to be) old and young alike, in the state of Illinois and in any other state, all are invited to our Bible school, but as I stated above, it is the young to whom we must soon look to keep the banner of Truth floating, unless our dear Saviour comes speedily, for which event we are all waiting and watching. To those who have never visited Oregon, I want to say, it is a lovely little city, situated in one of the most picturesque spots upon the banks of Rock River, so that our stay there may be one of recreation as well as study. Trusting to meet all the old members of our Bible class and many new ones I remain,

Your Sister in the One Faith,

Anna L. Adams.

The Pledge.

Dear Bereans

A little over two years ago when I signed the pledge, I did not suppose I could stop tobacco so easily as I did. For I had tried it several other times before and made a failure of it. Some told me if I could not stop smoking before I signed the pledge, I could not after, and laughed. Of course if I had put my name there to please some one else and did not do my part, I surely would not have stopped the tobacco, but I put my name down, trusting in God's help to stop using the evil weed.

It is an injury to those who use it, I know, for I used it myself and I never received any good from it, and ones breath is always disagreeable and unpleasant to those who do not use it. But one must not sign the pledge thinking that God will do all. He will do His part and give us strength to do ours, and we must do it or fail.

I never regretted that I did put my name down with the list of signers, and I am thankful today for it. It looks nice to see a young man walking along smoking or chewing, and spitting where others have to walk, or see young men go into the saloon and call for their glass of poison! I think if they could only see themselves they would be so ashamed that they would not go near another saloon.

There is only a saloon every other door, here, I never stopped to count them, but I think there are about twenty-five of them in a town of about twenty-five hundred inhabitants. I think we need our missionaries in the United States, instead of sending them to other parts of the world.

Yours in the Precious Faith,

G. H. Lindsay.

Obituary.

Isabella Guise—Shaffer, wife of Hiram Shaffer, died at Bracken, Ind., Dec. 15, 1904. The funeral services were conducted at the Funk church, south of Bracken, by Rev. W. S Jordan. Mrs. Shaffer, whose maiden name was Guise, was born at Springerville, Fayette county, Indiana, August 30, 1841, and died Dec. 15, 1904, aged 63 years, three months and sixteen days. She was one of a family of eight girls, four of them living. Those in this vicinity are Mrs. David Krider, Mrs. Robert King and Mrs. Cox. Her husband also survives her. She had been a member of the Adventist church for twenty years. She was married twice, her first husband's name being Ellsberry.

Joshua W. Barber was born at Baltimore, Md., March 13, 1819.

He moved to Ohio when about seven years old, then to McLean Co. Ill., when about twenty-four years old. He was married to Catherine Haughtman Sept. 15, 1844. To this union there was born twelve children, nine of whom are living. There are also twenty-five grand-children, and seven great-grand-children. His wife departed this life, Nov. 8, 1874.

From 1861 to 1865 he served his country in Co. E. 3rd. regiment provisional troops. In 1877 he removed to McPherson Co., Kansas, where he resided until his death, April 6, 1905, aged 86 years and 24 days.

In the afternoon of April 7, I received a message by phone that Father Barber was dead and asking me to come and preach the funeral. Leaving Ransom at 5 o'clock Saturday morning I arrived at Conway, Kas., a little after 12 o'clock, where I found seven of the children and a goodly number of the grand-children assembled at the home of the deceased. At 2 o'clock I commenced a discourse from 1. Cor. xv., pointing out the importance of the resurrection in order to a future life, for those who have died in Christ. I held up to view the nature of man, as the basis upon which Paul made his argument.

I then presented the resurrection as the hope of Job, of David, of Isaiah, and Daniel, and closed my talk by calling the attention of the hearers to the promise of Paul and Jesus. 1. Thess. iv: 14-18. John xi: 25.

Previous to his coming to Kansas in 1877 he had lived in Harrison Co., Mo. It was while living at Eagle Ville, in that County, about 1875, that he learned the truth under the preaching of Brother W. J. Orem.

Brother Barber was practically alone in the faith from the time of his coming to Kansas until his death, and although surrounded with the ancient doctrine of mysticism and the hardships of a new country, yet he never faltered nor wavered in his faith. Like the mighty oak he was able to stand all the storms of life.

The estimation in which he was held by his neighbors was shown by the large number that attended the funeral, 35 carriages following the remains to the cemetery!

The enemy has triumphed, death has gained the victory, but Paul has said "the dead shall be raised incorruptible," and then the saying will be brought to pass, "O death where is thy sting, O grave where is thy victory," and may his children look forward to that time with a living faith, and be ready to be caught up with the father to meet the Lord, and share with him in the glories of the kingdom.

A. W. Darby.

Poetry.

A Spring Song.

Violet, violet, blue and sweet,
Nestling down by the old oak's feet,
Can it be you are glad to grow,
Nobody near your grace to know?
Whispered the violet, soft as air,
"God can look on me anywhere."

Blossom white on the waving tree,
Low to-morrow your place may be,
Crushed perhaps 'neath a careless tread—
A faded flower. The blossom said:
"Promise of God was never broken;
I am content to be his token."

Robin, singing your heart's delight,
What may happen before the night?
Foolish thing of such joy possessed,
Over a tiny, leaf-hid nest.
"Why should I not in gladness sing?
I am a robin and this is spring!"

Little brook, from the fetchain free,
Dancing off to the boundless sea,
Rippling and fanning in sheer delight,
Sparkling and dimpling till out of sight.
Why should your rapture over brim?
"My cup is crystal, and full to the rim."

Heart that cannot, for cares that press,
Sing with the bird, or thy Maker bless,
As the flowers may, blooming sweet
With never an eye but God's to greet
Their beauty and freshness learn to trust!
Lift thy thought from the earthly dust!

Robin and blossom, and violet blue,
Singing and shining with morning dew,
Have they no lesson for one like thee?
God, who loves even them, will see
How thou art trying to sing his praise
Out of the gloom of thy shadowed days.

History of Man.

There was a time when there was not a man upon the earth. Gen. ii. 5. Let us suppose a sea captain in voyaging over the great deep should land upon an uninhabited island covered with luxuriant grasses, fruits, vegetables, beautiful flowers, pure waters, rich soil, valuable minerals, mild climate, abundance of timber, grand scenery, living creatures, the sea teeming with every variety of fish and other food for man, would not this thought suggest itself to the mind of the captain, "What a beautiful place this would be for inhabitants suited to these conditions." This would necessitate organized beings whose wants could be supplied from their island-home and its surroundings. To secure all needed blessings the inhabitants of this island must be possessed of sufficient intelligence to enable them to obtain by pleasant exercise of their physical powers all the necessities of their simple, unperverted natures. Such beings would also cultivate refined tastes, a love of the beautiful in nature and art, the beautiful scenery of their island-home would supply the one while their inventive genius could supply the other. Suppose that in later years the captain revisits the island and finds it peopled with such beings as he had once thought would be adapted to the place, do you not think his curiosity would be sufficiently excited to learn the history of these people? How did they reach the island? Where did they come from? Why did they come there? If told that they had a record giving their origin and history would not the captain take a deep interest in the perusal of this interesting history? Now, dear reader, I propose to present the simple truthful history of man as he appears in his primitive home, a vast island floating in the immensity of space. The information I offer has been gleaned from what I believe to be a truthful record of man's origin, nature and destiny. If my humble effort shall be the means of instructing the honest enquirer after truth, justice demands that I briefly state the cause that led to this effort.

A zealous, devoted sister in Ohio who is laboring earnestly to instruct her neighbors in the truth, kindly insisted that I should write upon this subject, removing as far as possible the objections urged by believers in the inherent immortality of man. To her then let me dedicate these lines. There was a time when the earth was without an inhabitant as the Bible plainly states. How did it become inhabited? What kind of beings were the first inhabitants? Where did they come from? How were they created? The same book that tells us that at one time "there was not a man" also tells us how the first man was created, tells us who the Creator was, gives us a complete history of the man in every relation he sustains to his Creator. This account briefly, yet plainly informs us of man's origin, the material employed in the act of creation, the process by which life was imparted to the organized being to whom God gave the name man. Before introducing the "history of man" let me quote an extract from Carlyle: "Histories are as perfect as the historian is wise." As this statement will not be disputed what tremendous weight belongs to the history of man, as the author of that history is the very embodiment of wisdom, one in whom "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid." Surely then such a record must be reliable and entitled to our fullest confidence.

Now for the facts of divine history turn to Gen. ii. 7, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Here in twenty-seven simple words is recorded the most stupendous fact in history. Whole volumes of human philosophy have failed to throw even a single ray of light upon the grand truths found in this brief statement, but alas, human wisdom has at best only obscured the beautiful light that shines from the inspired words. That the being described in Gen. ii. 7 is the man of God's proposition is fully shown in every relation that man sustains to the divine plan. Ages after this dust-made man was created the Psalmist David (Psa. ciii. 14) confirms the fact in these words, "He knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust" Job iv. 19 tells us man's "foundation is in the dust."

Now let us refer to the early history of man as recorded in Gen. iii. 19. The closing words of the divine sentence pronounced against the man as the penalty for sin declares that "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Here man's origin is again declared, and his destiny when his sentence is executed brings him back to the condition from whence he was taken. The act of creation made him, the execution of the sentence unmade him. That the man whose history is here given is a being exactly adapted to the place he was to occupy is clearly stated in the description God gives of man's home in the newly created earth. Gen. ii. 8-9, "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil." That the man whom God hath put into the garden with instructions to dress it and to keep it was an organic being possessed of a tongue, teeth, lips, palate, throat, digestive and assimilating organs is evident from the fact that the first command given him after entering the garden was concerning the food he should eat, and forbidding access to the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. But perhaps the interested reader of this history of man should ask, "if this is a true history of man in what respect is man superior to the animal creation, in short what distinguishes him from animal creation?"

To answer these questions fairly and Scripturally, let us note first the points of resemblance given in the Bible as being common to both men and animals. In Gen. iii. 19 God gives us the origin of the lower animal creation. "And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air....." However humiliating it may be to haughty and proud man to read of one common origin for both man and beast, the fact remains and man cannot change it. "But surely," says the objector, "man's superiority will be seen in the endowment of life, did not man receive from his Creator a higher life than the beasts?" To constitute man a living soul, person, or being, God gave him the breath of life. That the breath of life was possessed in common with man by the animal creation is clearly established in Gen. vi. 17, "And behold I even I do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life from under heaven, and every thing that is in the earth shall die." Also in the seventh chapter of Genesis after naming the whole animal creation in the 14th verse, we read in the 15th verse, "And they went in unto Noah into the ark, and two and two of all flesh wherein is the breath of life." That both men and animals originate in the dust and live by breathing the breath of life is a clearly settled Bible fact, whether men accept it or not. Human logic has no effect upon it. Scholarly ability in vain attempts to set aside God's positive declarations, and infidelity can go no further than to say, "I do not believe it." But that the comparison may be complete let us view both man and beast in the state called death.

The reader's attention is now called to Eccl. iii. 18, 19, 20, "I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men that God might manifest them and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth so dieth the other, yea, they all have one breath, so that a man (in death) hath no preeminence above a beast, for all is vanity. All go unto one place, all are of the dust and all turn to dust again." Here the broad sweeping assertion is made that in death man has no preeminence over beasts. However broad the distinctions in life may have been, or after death may be, the question is forever settled that during death's reign a perfect equality exists. Failing to find the proofs of certain claims for man's highly exalted position the advocates of such claims tell us that man's vast superiority over the animals consists of knowledge, while the animal possesses only instinct. But this distinction will not stand, for every Bible student knows that knowledge is by no means man's exclusive prerogative. Here is God's comparative estimate of the intelligence of both man and beast. Isa. i. 3, "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." This comparative view is certainly not very flattering to man, with all his exaltation. The merest tyro in knowledge can testify to acts of intelligence on the part of animals. Certain animals have shown a degree of intelligence that would rank them with some of the human family. A few points of superiority in favor of animals ought in justice to them be presented. Many of them possess greater strength than man, they outspeed him in the chase, they possess keener faculties, the ear detects sound quicker, the vision is sharper, the sense of smell is far more acute, they perceive danger when man with all his boasted knowledge is ignorant of it, man's utter helplessness in infancy is in sad contrast with the ability of some of the animal creation to take care of themselves almost from birth. What then distinguishes man from the lower animals.

At least three things serve to show man's superiority in the divine plan over the other creatures of earth. 1st. Man's Creator showed him a marked preference in giving man a superior form, "the human form divine" for God created man in his image and after his likeness. No other creature on earth, in the air, or in the mighty deep can claim this high distinction. God's estimate of the value and sacredness of his image is shown in his displeasure when man's murderous hand is raised to mutilate or mar the beautiful image of the Creator. Read Gen. ix. 6, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, (mutilates or mars the image) by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." Those familiar with the Bible know that an image is an imitation, representation or picture, hence the image of God is expressed in the physical form of man. The use of the word in the history of man has no reference to an intellectual or moral resemblance as is shown in the use of the word in Gen. iv. 3, "And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image and called his name Seth." Here the resemblance is to the physical form, the features, in short the common use of the word conveys the true idea "the child looked like its parent" not in size, not in intellectual or moral qualities, but bore a striking resemblance in the expression of the features.

The second marked distinction in man's favor is made in his capacity for increasing his stock of knowledge almost indefinitely, while animal knowledge is quite limited, yet sufficient to supply its wants. The mental capacity of animals while quite limited enables them to reason upon the simple problems with which they must deal. But man's field of research, investigation and reason, is so vast and the problems so intricate that a vastly increased capacity was a necessity in his case. Man's Creator honored him in the scale of existence by constituting him a responsible being in placing him under law for the regulation of his conduct. This act of the Creator stamped man as a moral agent, making him responsible to the Author of his being. This distinction places man upon the throne of animate existence upon the earth, this exalted position was conferred upon man not by conquest gained in fierce and bloody struggles with his inferiors, but was given him at his creation. Gen. i. 26, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon earth."

Now let us look at the third and crowning mark of distinction that raises man above the animal creation. A brief period is allotted as the life time of the entire creation, but to man alone has the Creator offered upon conditions, a future state of existence, entirely free from all the unpleasant environments of this present life, and the value of this grand offer consists in the fact that the future life and the blessings attending it will be endless. Our present brief state of existence with all its aches and pains, its bitter griefs and disappointments does not abate our desire for its continuance, every effort is put forth to continue it even under the many ills that belong to it, even the animals when wounded fight fiercely to prolong their lives, though suffering intense pain. No wonder that love prompted the offer of endless life. Jno. iii. 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Should not every heart be attuned to praise God for his wonderful goodness to the children of men? Yea, even inanimate nature should break its lasting silence in tones of praise for such mighty love. In our investigations so far we have not found any intimation that man, as at present constituted, is in possession of any life principle, that prevents the enemy death from taking full possession of the entire man. Why this profound silence in God's history of man as to any deathless or immortal principle? Even the words or terms that would express endless existence are not once applied to man in the history that God has given of him. With such facts before us let us review a part of the early history as given in Gen. ii. At the 9th verse the statement is made of "the tree of life in the midst of the garden." The name of this tree would indicate that its fruit could either impart life, or prolong life already given. What relation then did the man whom the Lord God formed sustain to this tree? If the tree could give life or sustain life already given, then the prolonging the man's life would be an assured fact, if he could have access to the tree. To assume this position would nullify the penalty that God had pronounced upon the man, for that declared the man should die, and fully explained the penalty by saying the man should return to the dust from whence he had been taken. Now one of two things must be admitted, either the man was prevented from eating of the tree of life, or else God failed to execute the penalty upon the man as he had threatened. To settle this no discussion is necessary. We simply appeal to the history of man as recorded in Gen. iii. 22-24.

Let the reader note the facts in the time referred to, the act of sin had been committed, the man and his wife had confessed their guilt, the sentence of death had been pronounced, the man and his wife were yet in the beautiful garden. Now read the language cited in Gen. iii. 18-24, "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword, which turned every way to keep the tree of life." Does this settle the question? Did this act of God prevent the man from continuing his sinful life forever? Can the man shut off from the tree of life suffer the penalty of death threatened by his Creator? All these questions are fully answered in one brief sentence, Gen. v. 5, "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years and he died." We have thus briefly given a history of the man whom the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground. The identity of the man is clearly seen in all his relations to his Creator, in other words it was the same man that God formed of the dust of the ground, that was put into the garden of Eden, the same man that was told to dress the garden and to keep it, the same man that was commanded to eat of all the fruit of the garden except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the same man that was driven out of the garden, the same man was compelled to eat of the herb of the field, the same man that was to endure sorrow, and labor all the days of his life, and the same man that lived nine hundred and thirty years and died. In all these relations no other man has been substituted, and the same dust-made flesh and blood man is the subject of God's dealings throughout the Bible.

In the face of all these facts, how can intelligent men affirm that all these evidences found in God's history of man, have no relation to the real responsible man, but relate to the body which has been conveniently called "the house in which the real man lives." Assuming the existence of such a being, or entity, or more properly non-entity, necessitated the coining of new words or phrases to describe that which exists only in the imagination. A great many words and phrases as well as attributes are found in God's history of the man whom he created, but not one of them can be applied to the being that is not even mentioned in the Bible. The popular phrases and words found so often in religious literature and public addresses such as "immortal soul," "immortal spirit," "never-dying soul," "never dying-spirit," "deathless soul," "deathless spirit," "immortal man," "undying man," "deathless man" cannot be found in the Bible. The reason is plain, not one of them belong to nor can be applied to the man whose history is given in God's Word. Why did not God use these words and phrases? Simply because they could not be truthfully applied to the being that he formed.

Look now at a few of the words, phrases and attributes that God has used in his history of man. "Die" "dying" "dead" "mortal man" "mortal body" "corruptible man" "flesh and blood" "perish" "destroy" "burn" "burn up" "be as though they had not been" "not be" "silent in darkness" "a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." These and similar expressions abound in the Bible and exactly fit the man that God had formed.

Two words that occur frequently in the Bible are supposed to favor the belief in natural or inherent immortality, soul and spirit. The two words and their equivalents can be found over fifteen hundred times in the Bible, but in all the occurrences of these words there is a total absence of any word or term that expresses endless life. The words are not synonyms, both words have a variety of meanings, both words are applied to the lower order of the animal creation, the word soul being applied to every moving and creeping thing, even before it is applied to man. See Gen. i. 20. v. 30 (margin.)

The soul is said to hunger, to thirst, to eat, to drink, to breathe, and to die. The primary use of the word soul in the Bible is person or being, in this sense it is applied to man whether living or dead, and to beasts, birds and creeping things. A secondary use of the word expresses life. See Matt. xvi. 25, 26; Mark viii. 35, 36; Gen. xxxv. 18. Other uses of the word will be found in a brief search with the aid of a good concordance. As a soul whether man or beast, lives by breathing, the word is often used to represent the life, but is never used in the Bible to represent an entity or thing that can live while the man is dead. Neither life nor death are entities, but both are conditions, and exactly opposite conditions.

The word spirit has a wider range of use in the Bible than the word soul, yet nowhere in the Bible can we find the use of the word as claimed by the advocates of inherent immortality. They once taught that man was dual in nature, a body and a soul, but at present they tell us that man is tripartite, a body, a soul, and a Spirit.

They admit the body can die, that even the Soul is not immortal, but that deathlessness inheres in the Spirit. But if the Spirit is the essential life of man how will they account for certain persons mentioned in the Bible who had no Spirit and yet were living beings. 1. Kings x: 5, 1. Sam. xxx: 12 Here in one case the Queen had no Spirit in her, yet she was a living woman, overwhelmed by seeing the glory of Solomon's kingdom and palace. It took away her ambition to shine as a great ruler, and in the other case the Egyptian was simply exhausted by his long fast, but the food given to him restored him to strength and vigor.

As more than forty different Spirits are spoken of in connection with man, it will be readily seen by the Bible student that the use of the word in the Bible must be determined by the circumstances under which it is used. The word Spirit in 1. John iv: 1 is used in the sense of person, prophet, or teacher. Again the word is used in Ecc. xii: 7 to represent death by man yielding up to God the life principle that God gave to man—"the breath of life." The same idea is expressed in Psalm cxlvi: 4, "His breath goeth forth (to God who gave it) he returneth to his earth (the dust) in that very day his thoughts perish." Now turn to Gen. ii: 7 and Psalm cxlvi: 4 and see how death unmakes him, then turn to Psalm vi: 5 and learn that the dead cannot remember God, then turn to Psalm cxv: 17 and learn that the dead cannot praise God, then turn to Ecc. ix: 5, 6 and you will learn why this is the condition of the dead, for there it is said "the dead know not anything." All their mental faculties have ceased to act. In short the man of whom God has given us a history is dead and not alive. Man's identity has been clearly established in every relation he sustains to his Creator from the time he was "formed of the dust of the ground," until his "breath goeth forth and he returneth to his earth." Every fact in his history corresponds with the fact of his creation.

Now another question of the deepest importance presents itself: Does the Bible in continuing man's history beyond the grave, preserve his identity in the future life? Most assuredly it does, every promise that God has made to man pertaining to a future life conveys this idea beyond a doubt.

The promise of an everlasting inheritance of the land, that God made to the fathers is a clear proof that their identity will be preserved. The identity of the land promised them is forever established in the description of the land by such terms as "this land," "the land whereon thou standest," "arise and walk through the land," "unto thee and thy seed (Christ) will I give this land." The names by which these men were known by their associates clearly identifies them in the time when they will occupy the land. Christ testifies that faithful ones should come from the east and the west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But we have evidence the most conclusive that the identity of the person is not lost but carried into the future State in the case of our blessed Redeemer, whom God raised from the dead with an incorruptible body that yet bore plainly the spear cut and the nail prints. Such proof may be called a demonstrated fact. Every Saint of God has the promise, if they are faithful, that "these vile bodies shall be made like unto Christ's glorious body." That glorious body shining in immortal splendor was just as real, literal and tangible as when hanging upon the cross it was pierced by a Roman spear.

The importance of recognizing the truth as set forth in the history that God has given us of the man of his proposition will be seen when "God's Plan of Salvation" is considered. The dust-made man, the flesh and blood man, the mortal man, in short the man of God's description is the only being that can be a fit subject for the salvation that God has promised. An immortal being could not possibly be benefitted by this salvation, for when a proper subject of God's salvation has reached the immortal state his salvation is complete, as Jesus has taught (Luke xx) "Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Salvation completed in this case puts the subject in just the condition that we are told the "real man" is in now. Such a being cannot perish, therefore God did not give His only begotten Son to save such a person. If there are any immortal beings in heaven or earth they need no salvation. But dying, perishing, mortal beings are exactly adapted to God's plan of Salvation, and it is the grand panacea that offers a full and complete remedy for all the ills he is heir to. Let us rejoice then "that God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Poetry.

A Prayer.

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek
The erring children, lost and lone.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O fill me with thy fullness, Lord,
Until my heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word,
Thy love to tell, thy praise to show.

Age Limit.

There is an age limit in our orchards. Trees sometimes live and bear leaves when they are too old to bear fruit. And some good people think that there is a similiar limit of usefulness in our lives—that when a minister, or even a private Christian, reaches a certain age, his only business is to sit with folded hands, and wait for his summons to the higher life. But the inspired psalmist did not think so. He cries in the seventy-first psalm, "Now; also when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not until I have showed thy strength unto this generation." He realized that he had a work to do for God and humanity as long as he lived, and he believed that God would help him do it And, hence, he writes in the ninety-second psalm, that the righteous "shall still bring forth fruit in old age.

There is no greater hymn, perhaps, in the language; there is none more universally familiar. It has been the comfort of thousands in their last hour. When, many years ago, when a ship sunk in the Bay of Biscay, a man who was saved was asked what the passengers were doing. He said that the last he heard was "Rock of Ages" sung by all who could sing. In multitudes of cases, in joy and in sorrow, in times of danger and amid scenes of peace, it has been the language of the heart. And yet, familiar as it is, and precious as it is, possibly there may be those to whom it is not quite clear what Toplady meant by the figure in the first two lines of the hymn. In Isa. xxvi: 4 the expression "everlasting strength," but the marginal reading is "rock of ages." It is probable that the poet got his imagery here. But to the writer the real meaning has been brought out with beautiful clearness since reading of the circumstances under which the lines were written. There is, not far from the place where Toplady used to serve as curate in charge, a great rock rising up by the side of the road. In the midst, as it were between two massive towers, is a deep cleft. One day in passing he was driven into the shelter of this cleft to escape the fury of a thunderstorm, and it was while waiting there, it is said, that he composed his great hymn.—Indian Witness.

Winona Lake.

Winona Lake this season will be particularly attractive for an outing. The summer of 1905 is to be an especially attractive season at Winona Lake, the beautiful resort of Northern Indiana on the Pennsylvania Lines. The Presbyterian General Assembly will convene there May 18th. Noted speakers and musicians have been engaged for the summer entertainments. There will be conventions and social and religious conferences from May until September. The literary representation will be prominent. In brief, it will be a most profitable season educationally. Teachers and students who attend the Summer School will derive much benefit.

Winona Lake has golf links, tennis courts, baseball and cricket grounds, boating, fishing, swimming and camping facilities. The Pennsylvania Lines run direct to the park entrance. Season and fifteen-day excursion tickets may be obtained from ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines. Information about Winona Lake, the season's program, hotel accommodations etc., can be ascertained from S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind.—May 18.

WE OFFER A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 18 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Notice.

The 18th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, commencing August 19th and closing the 28th, 1905. Programme will appear later.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope,
W. L. CROWE.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 3, 1905. NUMBER 17.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

A Child's Longings.

I'm but a child, yet Jesus died,
From sin to set me free,
"Suffer the little ones," he said,
"And let them come to me."

I need the love which he bestows,
So tender and so true,
His blessing everywhere I go,
My whole life-journey through.

I know there's work for children's hands,
But I am very weak;
I cannot see, I do not know,
Unless his help I seek.

I must go to him, as he said,
And he will smile and say,
Come close within my arms, dear child;
"I'll lead thee all the way."

Then I shall know that I am his,
And he my friend and guide;
Though I can little do for him,
I shall be near his side.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher The lesson selected previously for to-night's study is the following question:

IN A MORAL POINT OF VIEW, WILL SOCIETY BECOME BETTER OR WORSE AS WE APPROACH THE "LAST DAYS?"

What gave rise to the selection of the above topic, for our lesson?

Ella Because we find teachers (who are unskilled in the Word of God) who both from pulpit and the press, declare that the world is constantly growing better, and that at the present time the world "is a much better place in which to live than at any time since our Savior trod the hills of Palestine."

Q If this present world (kosmos), is getting better so fast; if it is a fact, that at this day it is such a vast improvement over what it was in our Savior's day, and is still growing better, would it not be as well to let well enough alone, and let it go on getting better and better, and eventually reach the age of perfection without divine intervention, or the need of a "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness"?

A The fleshly mind would answer yes. The flesh is prone to ignore God.

Q Have we divine assurance as to what will be the moral status of the people in "the last days?"

A We have.

Q Please quote it.

A I will quote 2 Tim. iii. 1-5, from the Twentieth Century Translation: "Be sure of this, that in the last days difficult times will come."

Q The phrase "Be sure of this," indicates that there will be some good ground to expect "difficult" or "perilous times," in the "last days," does it not?

A Most certainly.

Q Upon what condition of things can we base an expectation of "perilous times" in the "last days?"

A In answer I will continue the quotation from Timothy: "People will be selfish, mercenary, boastful, haughty and blasphemous" in the "last days."

Q Then selfishness will be a predominate feature of the last days?

A Yes, so says the divine Word.

Q Could you call excessive cold selfishness, (which cares little for the welfare of others,) an evidence of the world getting better?

A By no means.

Q Is the present age one of excessive selfishness, even in excess of anything previously known?

A There has never been anything equal unto it, since creation.

Q What evidence have you to support such an affirmation?

A It is seen in our "last days" monopolies. The rich have pooled their capital together in combinations called trusts, for the purpose of controlling the price of every necessary of life.

Q To what extent are these selfish combines formed.

A They are world-wide.

Q What has been the effect of the operations of these selfish combines?

A To make the rich fabulously rich. It is simply selfishness run riot, a predominant feature of the "last days."

Q What other effect is seen?

A Their selfish greed has brought distress upon the people, and great suffering upon the poor. As Honar well said: "Sick at heart with this world's scenes of evil,—man spoiling man; man enslaving man; man wounding man; man defrauding man; man treading upon man."

Q What has caused man to thus use his fellowman?

A Selfishness.

Q What effect has all this had upon the times in which we live?

Lud It has produced "perilous times." It has caused labor to organize for self-protection against the merciless, selfish greed of organized capital, which would not only rob the laborer of the just reward of his labor, but exact from him their own prices for the necessaries of life.

Q What condition of things has all this produced?

A Strikes, boycotts, lockouts, evil passions, riots, blood-shedding, starvation, poverty, lawlessness, hatred and a spirit of distrust between man and man. The apologist for the world getting better says, these constant strikes, boycotts, etc., is but "a part of the friction of progress." If this is "progress," may the good Lord deliver us from further "progress," and also keep the world from getting any "better" if this is the evidence of the world getting better.

Q Will a mercenary spirit prevail in the last days?

A Yes. Paul says to Timothy: "People will be selfish, mercenary." Read the daily papers, and note how justice is miscarried by bribery, jurors, legislatures, city councilmen, etc., we hear it often said, "every man has his price." This is the mercenary spirit of our age.

Q What other evils will denote the presence of the last days?

A Paul says they will be "boastful, haughty and blasphemous."

Q Does this spirit prevail to any extent at this day?

A Yes. This is pre-eminently an age of invention, and an increase of knowledge, which has made man vain and boastful in the extreme; the air is full of haughty pride on this account. Blasphemy was never more prevalent.

Q We are told that in order to improve the incoming generation, we must do so by a proper training of our children. What will be the disposition of children in the last days?

A Paul says, "They will be disobedient to their parents."

Q How do children regard their parents today?

A We often hear them spoken of by children, as "the old man," "the old woman," "the governor," etc. Children who thus speak of their parents, are never obedient children. Again Paul says, "they will be ungrateful, impure, incapable of affection, merciless, slanderous, wanting in self-control, brutal, careless of the right, treacherous, reckless, and puffed up with pride."

What other feature will mark the presence of the last days?

A Paul says: "They will love pleasure more than they love God; and they will retain the outward form of religion, they will refuse to allow it to influence them. Turn your back on such men as these."

The above is an inspired declaration of the condition of things which will obtain in the last days of this Gentile age, and it is at this time when the Lord's coming may be expected.

Paul further says: "Let no man deceive you by any means: (by saying the world is getting better) for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition."

Q Now, Paul says, the world will get worse before the King comes, but our modern optimist says, it is getting "better and better," and will continue to improve, until the millennium comes. Which shall we believe?

A. Believe the inspired writers every time.

Q The Lord says a like condition of things will obtain at his second coming to that which prevailed when God sent his judgment in the days of Noah. Was the world getting better and better at that time?

A No. We read: "And God looked upon the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth."

Q If the moral status of the people when the Lord comes, is to be similar to the moral condition of the people in Noah's day, then the teaching of people getting better, instead of worse, must be an unscriptural delusion, is it not?

A It is against the general tenor of Scripture teaching.

Q That which is growing worse all the time, could not possibly be getting better and better, at the same time, could it?

A Impossible. Two opposites could not prevail at the same time.

Q Does the Bible when speaking of the "last days," in so many words say, that the people should grow "worse and worse?"

A It does.

Q Where?

A See 2 Tim. iii. 13: "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

Q Who is it that shall "wax worse, and worse" as the last days come on?

A "Evil men and seducers."

Q Then the world of people can never be said to be getting better and better, until "evil men and seducers" cease getting "worse and worse," can they?

A The two opposite conditions cannot prevail at the same time.

Q Now does the spirit speak expressly as to the condition of things "in the latter times?"

A It does. It speaks so expressly, that there is no room for controversy with any honest controversialists.

Q Please give it?

A See 1 Tim. iv. 1, 2: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their consciences seared with a hot iron."

Q Then we can hardly look upon a departure from the faith, following seducing spirits, speaking hypocritical lies, and an hardened conscience, as an evidence of the world getting better, can we?

A No, sir; it is quite the reverse. We are living in a cultured age, consequently a large amount of deviltry is hidden from the public gaze, by a gloss of "hypocrisy," and while it does not appear so gross and open as it used to be, yet it is more insiduous, deep dyed, and dangerous; the unsuspecting are more easily led astray, because of the hypocrisy with which it is covered.

"Behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the world for their iniquity," and not because they have been improving, and growing better ever since the Lord was upon the earth.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Lord is Risen Indeed.

To the Bereans at Plymouth:,

In the language of the Apostle Paul to the Romans I greet you all, Beloved of God called to be saints, grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. I am pleased to be with you in spirit if not in person this glorious Easter Day and to say with you all, Blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honor and power and might be unto our God for ever and ever, Rev. i. 12, for the knowledge of the fact that the Lord, even our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is risen indeed. To the new man in Christ Jesus this is good news to know that Jesus, God's only begotten Son, whom he gave to be a propitiation for our sins, he who suffered shame and persecution and death that he might do the will of him that sent him and give us a hope of eternal life, is actually risen, that he has conquered the arch enemy death and has in truth become worthy of the approval of God. "This is my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased." Luke iii. 22.

The burden of our text today is the fact that the Lord is risen, he is risen indeed. The mingled grief, disappointment and abandonment of hope of the followers of Jesus is described in this chapter. Cleopas gives expression in the 21st verse to the feelings of the disciples. They had all expected Jesus to restore Israel "at that time" and that the glory of which he preached would be immediate, and to witness his suffering and ignominious death on the cross between two malefactors and his burial had dashed their hopes to the ground. Their faith was gone, their King had been laid away in the tomb, and they seemed at a loss to know what to do, and Peter gives expression to their feelings in Jno. xxi. 3, "I go a fishing." So completely had they given up, forgetting all the teachings of Jesus that his appearance to the women was regarded as idle tales, and they believed him not, for we find Cleopas and his companion leaving Jerusalem and on their way discussing the things that had happened and the "probability" of his resurrection and when Jesus appeared and "Expounded to them from Moses and the prophets," he brought back to them all his teachings, until their interest had returned, their hearts fairly burned within them with renewed zeal and they were loathe to have Jesus leave, persuading him to abide with them. But the climax is reached when their eyes opened and he makes himself known to them. They rise up "the same hour" to return to Jerusalem. Remember "the day is far spent, evening is near at hand," yet they must return to the brethren at once with the glorious news. Although later at night they found the disciples gathered together talking of the appearance of Jesus to Peter, and their united song of rejoicing is, "The Lord is risen indeed," "Christ is risen from the dead; he returns to life once more; death and hell before him bowing, he doth rise the victor now, glory be to Christ the King, Alleluia, Alleluia, He hath risen, wake and sing, Alleluia. Praise the Lord." Oh glorious consummation. What a season of rejoicing those disciples must have had. All their doubts vanished, their misgivings quieted, their confidence restored. What cared they for death or life or angels or principalities or powers, or things to come, or height, or depth, or any other creatures; their Lord and Master had risen, that was enough. Christ their Messiah, their King, their leader, upon whom they had leaned for the past three and a half years, to whom they had learned to look for the solution of all their difficulties and for comfort in their trials, he had risen just as he said. Oh once more they were strong and brave and ready to do for the Master.

Oh what glorious news to know that Jesus Christ is risen indeed. My dear brothers and sisters, has Christ risen for us today. Do we realize he has really conquered death? Do we realize he is indeed risen and is our advocate and Mediator; risen to banish all ills and wrongs; risen that we might not perish. Jno. iii. 16. Risen to take his father David's throne and to put down all rule and authority; risen that there might be glory to God in the highest and on earth peace and good will to men; risen that the earth might be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Heb. ii. 14. Yes, he is risen to be our friend; risen to sympathize with us in our grief, and join in our joys; risen that we might reign with him in glory; that we might sit down at the marriage supper of the Lamb. "Talk on ye profane and vain and science falsely socalled," scoff ye scoffers, the Lord is risen indeed and will reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously (Isa. xxiv. 23) and we who have become co-heirs with him will surely sit down in his kingdom with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and David and Daniel and all the rest of the faithful ones: "Oh, sing to the Lord ye distant lands; ye tribes of every tongue." Christ is risen indeed.

"But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept; but in his own order, Christ's the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. 1 Cor. xv. 20-23. If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God; set your affection on things above not on the earth; for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God; when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Col. iii. 1, 2, 3, 4. My earnest prayer is that we may all earn recognition from our Lord when he shall come; and may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, be with you all. Amen

GEORGE NEILL.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER I.

1. In the third year of the royalty of Joonkeim king of Jouda came Nabouchodonosor, the king of Babuloon to Hierousalem and besieged it.

2. And the Lord gave Joonkeim the king of Jouda into his hand and from a portion of the vessels of the house of the Lord, and he brought them away into a land of Senaar to a house of his god, and the vessels he brought into the house of the treasure of his god.

3. And the king said to Asphanez his chief-eunuch, that he should lead in from the sons of the captivity of Israel from the seed of the royalty and from the quick-witted.

4. Young men in whom there was no blemish and beautiful in appearance and who had understanding in all wisdom, and who comprehended in a knowing way and who thought things through in a thoughtful way, and in whom there was strength to stand in the presence of the king, and that he should teach them letters and the tongue of the Chaldaioi.

5. And the king ordered for them their daily regimen from the king's table and from the wine that he drank; and that he should nurture them for three years, and that after that they should stand in the presence of the king.

6. And it came to pass that there were among them of the sons of Jouda Daniel and Ananias and Azarias and Misael.

7. And the chief-eunuch gave them also names, to Daniel Baltasar, and to Ananias Sedrach, and to Misael Misach, and to Azarias Abdenagoo.

8. And Daniel set it in his heart that he would not pollute himself with the king's table, and with the wine that he drank, and he asked the chief-eunuch as a favor that he might not pollute himself.

9. And God gave Daniel to mercy and pity in the sight of the chief-eunuch.

10. And the chief-eunuch said to Daniel, I myself fear my lord the king who hath ordered your way of drinking, lest perchance he observe your faces to be long-visaged as compared with the young men of your age, and ye condemn my head to the king.

11. And Daniel said to Amelsad whom the chief-eunuch had established over Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias.

12. Try thy house-servants for ten days forsooth. And let them give unto us from the cereals, and let us eat them and drink water.

13. And let our looks and the looks of the young men who eat from the table of the king be manifest in thy sight, and even as thou mayest see do thou do with thy house-servants.

14. And he hearkened to them and tried them for ten days.

15. And at the end of ten days, their looks appeared good to the sight and they stronger in flesh than than the young men who had eaten from the king's table.

16. And it came to pass that Amelsad took away their food and the wine furnished them to drink, and gave them cereal-food.

17. And these young men, these four, God gave unto them understanding and thoughtfulness in every thing literary and in wisdom; and Daniel had understanding in every vision-way and in dream-visions.

18. And at the end of the days when the king had said that he should lead them in, the chief-eunuch also led them into the presence of Nabouchodonosor.

19. And the king talked with them, and there were not found of them like to Daniel and Ananias and Misael and Azarias, and they stood in the presence of the king.

20. And in every oracular-word of wisdom and exact knowledge ("positive science" in these days) which the king sought from them, he found them to be tenfold better than the enchanters and the magi who were in all his kingdom.

21. And it came to pass that Daniel was until the first year of Kuros (Cyrus) the king.

COMMENT.

The reader should not draw the hasty conclusion as so many have in the past that a vegetarian diet is herein divinely prescribed or taught as the best or only regimen for humanity. For it is not, as all experience and positive science past and present have fully demonstrated. Besides there is positive teaching to the contrary and a great deal of it in the divine record. God simply enabled these young men in this way because their good endeavor in the line of duty could be best promoted in this way.

The reader will observe that the name given Daniel by the chief-eunuch was "Baltasar" which is the same name as that of the son of Nabonchodonosor who succeeded him in the dynasty, changed in the C. V. and R. V. to "Belshaszar" and "Belteshaszar." The name of the person whom the chief-eunuch had appointed over Daniel and his comrades also omitted entirely and this person designated as "the steward" his name being given in the text as Amelsad, and in a marginal note in the R. V. [illegible] is spelt "Hammelsar" [illegible] ority or from what [illegible] there being no te[illegible]ble as the Greek.

Students of prophecy will be particularly interested in the further developments we expect to give as we proceed in the translation of this old book.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interespersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were stereotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 3 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

Brother A. H. Zilmer spent last Sunday with the Church at Inwood, as it was a fifth Sunday.

We hope our friends who have not yet renewed their subscription for this year will not let Spring work so occupy their minds that they neglect this matter. We are short of money now. Please remember us.

Sister M. A. Woodward of Michigan writes that she expects to go to Warren County, Ind., next Sunday, and if she does she will stop in Plymouth, Friday night. She says that Brother Woodward is improving in health somewhat.

There is no war news yet this week. The usual secrecy is kept up regarding the plans of the combatants, and there is nothing to report. In Russia the Easter time brought the usual demonstration, and there were disturbances in different localities. At Warsaw the Cossacks fired on the people, and some 70 men, women and children, were killed, and many others injured. The people retaliated with throwing bombs and much rioting followed.

The Assembling of Ourselves Together.—No. 2.

It was shown in a previous article that there were frequent assemblies of believers in apostolic times, for mutual edification, and that "charity" was the first essential toward such building up. Some of the means toward this end were pointed out, as the reading of the Scriptures, exhortations based upon the Word of God, the singing of spiritual songs, and prayer. Another means toward such godly edifying is the celebration of the Lord's supper. It was foreseen in the wisdom of Christ, the Head of the Church, that the body of believers would need a visible remembrance of Himself during His absence, and thus the Lord provided a means whereby His followers [illegible] Him constantly in remembrance of the kingdom of God [illegible] xxii: 16-18), or, [illegible] Cor. xi: 26, are the [illegible] Christ to "come together to eat." 1. Cor. xi: 33. This eating is, first of all, in remembrance of the Lord, and to show the Lord's death. Eating of the loaf is a reminder that Christ gave Himself for us; and drinking of the cup a remembrance that Christ shed His blood for many for the remission of sins. We are here reminded, not only of the abstract fact of the Lord's death, but also of the motive which prompted Him to give Himself, which is His love for the Church. See Gal. i: 4; ii: 20. He "loved me, and gave Himself for me." Let this reflection be a personal one. The devout contemplation of that scene on Calvary, and the love that prompted the Lord to give Himself for us wayward, sinful, and undeserving creatures, can not but beget a deep sense of humility, and of obligation and gratitude toward Him who laid down His life for us.

"The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" 1. Cor. x: 16. "We" bless (or give thanks for) the cup; "we" break the bread, showing that not merely one individual engages in this solemn transaction, conscious of his relationship with Jesus the Lord, but there is a fellowship in that observance. All who participate in that solemn memorial have a common interest in Him whom they thus remember. Thereby is also shown the fact that "we being many are one body; for we are all partakers of that one bread, or loaf." v. 17. As vital union with the head is indispensible to the wellbeing of all the members in the corporeal body, so union with Christ the Head of the Church is essential to the wellbeing of the members of the Church. Where each is keenly conscious of his relation to Christ, and loves him that begat, there will be also that tender affection and kind regard for the one that was begotten. Thus the bond of union between the members, and of the members toward the Head is not only kept intact, but strengthened each time such communion is engaged in.

All should be silent while the bread and wine are passed, so that all may be impressed with the solemnity of the occasion, and each may be engaged in quiet and undisturbed meditation.

I have noticed that in nearly all places the brethren use unleavened bread and unfermented wine in the celebration of the Lord's supper. In a very few instances I have noticed the presence of fermented wine at the Lord's table. Why we should have scruples about the use of fermented bread, and admit fermented wine, has never been clear to me. It seems to me that consistency would require that if we exclude the bread in which leaven has been present, we should also bar the cup which has undergone the process of fermentation. There is vastly more danger in the latter than in the former. There may be those in the congregation who have escaped the drunkard's snare, and shall we who not only love Christ that died for us, but also the brother for whom He died, place before the latter the cup in which are present the fumes of alcohol, and in which is lurking the "mocker" that brings to destruction? And are we right certain that by using the fermented article, which we would shrink from placing before our children, there may not be awakened in the unsuspecting one the fearful appetite that may some day drag him to his ruin? Besides, the unfermented juice of the grape not only fills every lawful requirement as the representative of the blood of Christ, but in addition is easy to obtain. I was rejoiced to see a recipe for making it in the Restitution of Apr. 5. Let the reader read it again, clip it, and save it for future reference.

When and how often should we celebrate the Lord's supper? That the assemblies of the apostolic Church were frequent, that they came together often, admits of no doubt. "Ye come together," said Paul to the Corinthian brethren. 1. Cor. xi: 17, 18, 20, 33. But their coming together was not for the better, as it should have been, but for the worse. The apostle did not chide the brethren for not coming together often enough, or too often, but for their departure from the proper order which had been delivered to them. v. 23; that instead of coming together to eat the Lord's supper, they make distinctions between the rich and poor, eating and drinking so that one is "hungry, and another is drunken." v. 21. The Lord's supper was not intended as an occasion to gratify physical appetite, but to show the Lord's death till He come. Hence the command, "If any man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together unto condemnation." v. 34. To eat, was one of the objects of this coming together, as is shown by verses 20, 21, 33, 34. Now, either those brethren had but one meeting annually, and therefore celebrated the communion but once in the year, or they met oftener, and proclaimed the Lord's death more frequently than that. It can not be truthfully said that their assemblies were annual, as that was entirely too long between the meetings; and for the same reason it can not be said with any show of authority that they celebrated the communion but once a year. "When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper" v. 20, that is, in the way they were doing. Therefore the apostle's reminder of the manner in which he had delivered this solemn memorial service to them, and the proper manner of its observance. This matter was urgent, and required immediate attention, for he says, "And the rest will I set in order when I come." v. 24. When would he come? That He expected to see them shortly, or before a great while, is evident from his remarks in ch. iv: xix: "But I will come unto you shortly, if the Lord will." Whatever was or could be done with other matters, this case must be attended to at once, even before the apostle's visit, which would be soon. Either the communion was annual, and the time of its observance lay between the writing of that epistle and the contemplated visit, or it was "often," even before he should see them. v. 26.

There is another reference to the apostle's coming, ch. xvi: 2, 3. Here the apostle gives command similar to an order given to the Galatian churches, that "upon every first day of the week, let each of you lay something by itself, depositing (or putting it into the treasury) as he may be prospered, so that when I come collections may not then be made." Diaglott, Campbell, and Rotherham. This laying by itself, and depositing it in the treasury was to be attended to before the apostle's coming. It was to be done every first day of the week (Diaglott), on the first day of every week (Campbell). The treasury, according to apostolic order and selection, was in charge of the deacons. See Acts vi: 1-4. They were the custodians of the church funds. How could the deposit of charitable funds be made with them on the first day of the week, if the brethren did not come together at that time, bringing with them that which they had laid by itself? To obviate the collection of such funds at the apostle's coming, to save time and confusion, so that the money might be available without further effort, and to bring all the churches into unity and concert of action, was the design of this order. It shows the custom which the apostle sought to introduce in the churches of God. I. Cor. xi: 17. See also I. Cor. iv: 17; vii: 17.

Shall we depart from this order established in the Church for our benefit, or shall we conscientiously adhere to it? We can not improve upon apostolic teaching, neither can we better the practices and customs established in the Church. Where these means, which have been given with a view to our good, are scrupulously and devoutly employed, we find the brethren growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; but where this is not the case, a gradual loss of interest in the truth, and resulting worldliness, are to be observed. Brethren and sisters, the days in which we live are certainly evil, and temptations are everywhere about us. But the day is approaching. Let us therefore not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhort one another to diligence, and faithfulness, using the means intended for our strengthening and upbuilding, and so much the more as the day draws nearer. Heb. x: 25.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

The Resurrection.

Today is set apart as a memorial of the resurrection of Christ. While we do not believe in observing the day for custom's sake, it is well for us to consider the subject of resurrection seriously and reverently, for our hope will be realized at the resurrection, or its equivalent, viz: a change from mortality to immortality. We of all people should rejoice in the resurrection of Jesus. We have learned the nature of man. We know that he was made of the dust of the ground and caused to live by the breath of life. And we also know that sin entered the world and death by sin, and death passed upon all men, and were it not for a resurrection, death would forever be our portion. Oh, let us thank our heavenly Father for a knowledge of the truth, and having escaped the delusion that abounds everywhere; that man had an immortal entity which escaped at the death of the body to realms above; thereby nullifying the doctrine of a resurrection. What doctrine is given more prominence in the New Testament than that of the resurrection? How the apostle Paul labored to show the Corinthians their faith was vain if Christ be not raised from the dead. With him it was a foundation truth and in no wise would he suffer them to depart from it. Upon this truth they must base their hope of future life. It was among the first truths he taught them, and when some were ready to deny the resurrection, he wrote to them saying, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which also I received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and he was buried; and that he rose again the third day according to the Scripture." 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4. Nor is the old Scripture testimony all the evidence that we have of his resurrection. He was seen by many creditable witnesses to whom he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Acts i. 3. "Last of all," says the Apostle Paul, "He was seen of me." 1 Cor. xv. 8. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins, and they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. xv. 12-18. Here the apostle shows that the hope of the [illegible] is dependent upon the resurrection of Christ. Take that away and we have nothing left worthy of the name of hope. But the apostle was not to be moved by the vain sophistries of those who were drifting away from the first principles he had taught them, and as if to forever silence their objection to the truth he had made; he exclaims, "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept, for since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." At his coming—he could not come if he were not alive. It is then he will fulfill his word—his promise, made when he was here before, "Because I live, ye shall live also." John xiv. 19.

"Christ is the firstfruits," the after-harvest must follow in due time. And God be praised! The after-harvest will be like the firstfruits. "Beloved now are we sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him." 1 John iii. 36. These bodies of humiliation shall be fashioned like unto his most glorious body. Phil. iii. 21. These frail bodies which are the constant subject of weariness, disease, and finally death itself will be made strong after the power of our indissoluble life. Heb. iv. 16. These bodies which derive their life from food and water, and the air we breathe will then become consubstantial with the glorious Son of God to whom the Father hath given to have life in himself. Jno. v. 26. With such a prospect before us who would not exclaim with the Apostle Peter, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us unto a lively (or living) hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead; to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." 1 Peter i. 4. How long? "Until Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 4, "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Here we have presented to our minds the destiny of those who are in Christ. What an exalted destiny for the sons and daughters of Adam, who by nature are children of wrath, having no claim on a future life. What an honor to be associated with the chosen and faithful of all ages. Those who experience the change of nature from mortality to immortality will be thrilled with new life. Sickness, sighing and death will then be forever past. They will then be clothed upon with their house from heaven. Made like unto the angels who are not subject to death. Oh, glorious hope! Soon may it be realized. But who are to be the subjects of this transforming power at the appearing of Christ? It will be only for those who are in him, and have transformed themselves into his moral likeness. It will not be to any who have known him only in a superficial way, who do not his commandments, while professing to belong to him. The honor and power of Christ will be conferred upon those who by a patient continuance in well doing seek for it. Those who like the beloved Paul count all things but vile refuse that they may win Christ, and be found in him, that they might know him, and the power of his resurrection. Phil. iii. 8, 10. To experience that power will be more than adequate compensation for all the effort we may put forth; even the utmost service will not be worthy to be compared to the glory that will be revealed in us. Therefore let us comfort one another and encourage ourselves with the apostolic exhortation, "Wherefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the works of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Cor. xv. 58.

James i. 18.

"Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth." We are begotten by the Word of truth or gospel. Paul says, For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet ye have not many fathers. For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel. Jno. xiv. 6. Jesus sayeth unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me. Then if through Christ is the only way, and he is the truth and the life, it is very important that we find out what this way is. Jesus also says, My words they are spirit and they are truth. We have the record of Christ's words, and those inspired to write the Word of truth. Then we must study the Word and be guided entirely by it. If we do not we will surely be held responsible, when this Word of truth has been kept all down through the ages for our benefit. Pilate asked the question, What is truth? Christ confessed unto Pilate that he was King of the Jews. And sayeth those that were of the truth heareth my voice, those that accept this message accept the truth. There are many things included in the words of truth. The most important of all is what Christ confessed to Pilate that he was to be King of the Jews, for it is through the fulfillment of this truth, that all else will be brought about. For when Christ comes to be King of the Jews, the dead will have been raised. All evil will be put down. And then will be proclaimed peace on earth good will to men. All who believe the truth are praying, Thy kingdom come. His merciful kindness is great toward us; and the truth of God endureth forever. John says, Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. Oh, that we can say with the Psalmist, I have chosen the way of truth; thy judgments have I laid before me.

"Whatsoever ye do in word or deed do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Col. iii. 17. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus giving thanks to God and the Father by him, whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. In every thing give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophet, who will render to every man according to his deeds. For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works. And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord and not unto men.

Sanctification.

"Sanctify them in the truth, thy Word is truth." John xvii. 17. There is no other doctrine taught in the Scripture of which so many misconceptions exist as that of sanctification. We believe the word to be synonymous with holiness, and that it is something to be lived, something of the flesh to avoid, rather than something to get, described by some as a second blessing, or high state of rapture, or condition of power, which lasts through life, after a long season of prayer, and called a second work of grace. Scripture conveys no such idea of sanctification. Where do we read of expressions such as "sell out," "pay the price," surrender, terms of such common use in the holiness meetings? The apostle James says, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights. Can a gift be paid for? Let us believe, receive, appropriate, and appreciate the promises and the blessed gifts by faith. "By which will we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." Heb. x. 10. The knowledge of this truth will sanctify, and Jesus prayed, "Sanctify them by the truth, thy Word is truth." John xvii. 17. After Christ has been preached the convicted sinner accepts him as his sacrifice, after conversion and baptism, he receives the Spirit of the holy God. He is then required or rather cheerfully separates himself from his former associates, enjoying that which he once hated, and has a love for the brethren, an evidence that he has passed from death unto life. As long as he keeps in this spirit he is a sanctified man. There is no second work of grace for him, except to grow in grace and in the knowledge of his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. He will have battles with the enemy, he may do and say many things he afterwards regrets, he does not necessarily sin, let him be steadfast, his heart is right before God. "Out of the mouth of babes will I perfect praise." And again, "We are become partakers of Christ if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence firm unto the end." Heb. iii. 14. "For both he that sanctifieth and they that are sanctified are all of one Spirit. "He that is joined to the Lord is one Spirit." "The Father and I are one" (Spirit). Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men to the end, that he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness, before our God and Father, at the coming of our Lord with all his saints, knowing how to walk and possess your vessel in sanctification and honor, abstaining from the lust and passion of fornication in which the Gentiles indulge, nor must any defraud his brother; for God is the avenger of all these things. As God calls us to sanctification and not to uncleanness, for in a clean and sanctified vessel dwelleth his Holy Spirit. Jesus said to his disciples, "Now you are clean by the Word I have spoken unto you." Let us believe and be clean. "Be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor adulterers, nor thieves, nor coveteous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners shall inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of us, but we were washed, we were sanctified, but we were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in the Spirit of our God. But when? Why when we believed.

This order does not agree with the popular holiness teaching, and no wonder for they have all the first principles of the doctrines of Christ turned upside down, and have need that one teach them the fundamental doctrines, and being fed on milk are babes and unskilful in the Word of righteousness. The figurative language of Scripture they treat as real, while the natural truths regarding man and his death and salvation they spiritualize. But God says, "Their turning of things upside down shall be deemed as potters' clay." They speak of a blessing as an experience, but Paul says, Tribulation worketh patience and patience experience. One of their number admitted that many Holiness preachers and people were in a backslidden condition, they have grown wealthy and covetous, in fact the spiritual famine throughout the earth is great. Let us then cultivate these graces that sanctify. "Wherefore come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord and touch no unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be to you a Father and ye shall be to me sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Having therefore these promises beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all defilement of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." If there are faults that seem uncontrollible, let us then confess our faults one to another and pray one for another that we may be healed. "God worketh all things with them for good, to them that are called according to his purpose." And has he not revealed his purpose? As many as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise." Now to Abraham and his seed are the promises." "In thee and thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." And this is his purpose in setting us apart now from the world with no inheritance in it, to fit us by endurance of little things now, to bless all the families, kindreds and nations of the earth when our obedience is fulfilled and "his house is full." To be associate judges of the world with Christ at his coming. To rule and reign with Christ in righteousness, to be kings and priests unto our God forever. "Moses endured seeing that which is invisible and had respect to the recompense of the reward." Jesus for the joy set before him endured the cross, and great is our reward if we overcome.

My Beautiful Secret.

I have learned a beautiful secret,
I know not how or where—
But I know it is sweet and precious,
And true, and glad, and fair;
And that God in heaven reveals it
To all that have ears to hear.

And I know that ere I learned it,
My way was weary and hard,
And somewhere in life's music
There was always that which jarred—
A hidden and dreary discord,
That all its sweetness marred.

But my harp of life was lifted
By one who knew the range
Of its many strings—for he touched it,
And he struck a keynote strange;
And beneath the touch of the Master
I heard the music change.

No longer it failed and faltered;
No longer sobbed and strove;
But it seemed to soar and mingle
With the song of heaven above;
For the pierced hand of the Master
Had struck the keynote—Love.

Thy heart's long-prisoned music
Let the Master's hand set free;
Let him whisper his beautiful secret
To thee, as he hath to me:
My love is the golden keynote
Of all my will for thee.

Parable of the Hidden Leaven. Matt. xiii. 33.

"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened." Matt. xiii. 33.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his covenant to make them know it." Margin Psa. iv. 25.

In a former paper was shown what the woman and leaven signified in this parable, by looking into the deep things of God to fathom its meaning, for we find that the Bible is its own best commentary, for "it is precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little" that knowledge of the truth is gained. "Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently." Psa. cxix. 4.

"Comparing spiritual things with spiritual.....because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. xiii. 14.

We will now consider the "meal" in this parable of which there was three measures that the leaven was hidden into "till the whole was leavened."

Meal is made into bread or cakes like crackers to sustain life—and either leavened or unleavened it can be eaten. It takes time to get the leavened meal in a condition to be ready to be baked into bread, and if one measure was kneaded at a time, it would take three periods of time to consummate the leavening process of the "whole."

The words "until the whole" appears to involve this view of kneading the three measures separately.

The English method of making oatmeal cakes is to take the meal, put in salt and enough water to knead it thoroughly, roll thin like crackers and and bake on a heated soap-stone on the hearth. This is unleavened bread. The leavened bread was salt, water and yeast mixed in fine flour, kneaded well and set in a warm place to rise, and when leavened sufficiently, moulded into loaves, set to rise again and baked in the oven, and cooled before eaten, but if desired to eat while warm a little dough from the batch was taken off and rolled into a muffin and baked like the oat-cake on the soapstone on the hearth. Ephraim is described in Hosea "as a cake not turned" (therefore only half baked.) "As for Ephraim their glory shall fly away like a bird from the birth and from the womb, and from the conception." "I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing." "Ephraim is joined to idols, let him alone." "Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke, among the tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be." Here is the hidden leaven at work in Ephraim.

The English housewife's method of baking bread now is nearly as primitive a way as used by Sarah of old at Abraham's command, when the three heavenly visitors appeared unto him with the message from God of a promised son, and the faith of Abraham was tested. "Nay but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son and thou shalt call his name Isaac.....but my covenant will I establish with Isaac which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time next year." Gen. xvii. 19-21. Sarah was commanded by Abraham to "Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it and make cakes upon the hearth."

It is evident that Jesus in this parable referred back to this time of Abraham's life, when the promise of a Son was given, "I am that bread from heaven,"

Three measures of meal is spoken of but twice in the Scriptures, in the parable and the instructions to Sarah. So the parable begins in Abraham's day, for immediately after this parable Matthew continues "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet saying, I will open my mouth in parables. I will utter things hidden from the foundation." It is written, For there is nothing hid save that it should be manifested, neither was anything made secret, but that it should come to light. If any man hath ears to hear, let him hear. And he said unto them, Take heed what ye hear; with what measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you and more shall be given unto you. For he that hath to him shall be given, and he that hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath." Mark iv. 22, 23.

"Fear them not therefore, for there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, and hid that shall not be known, what I tell you in the darkness, speak ye in the light, and what ye hear in the ear proclaim upon the housetops." Matt. x. 26, 27.

To the Jews, a tribe of the chosen people of God, to whom were committed the oracles of God, Jesus said, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it and was glad." John viii. 56.

"And the Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel beforehand unto Abraham saying, In thee shall all the nations be blessed." Gal. iii. 8. "For he (Abraham) looked for the city with the foundations whose architect and maker is God."

We feel assured from the above Scriptures that the times of the Highest was revealed unto Abraham, the friend of God, and the founder of Israel the chosen nation. And that with an eye of faith he looked down the three measures of the time periods, that the three measures of meal were given in and the leaven hid in until the whole was leavened. But we are told to "purge out the old leaven that ye may be a new lump as ye are unleavened."

The coming of the promised Son was and is the hope of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith since the days of Abraham, who looked down the vista of years and saw the coming of Christ in power and great glory, with rejoicing in his heart, while with the prophet he could say, "My times are in thy hand."

In the next paper I will take up the three periods of time that it would take to leaven the three separate measures of meal until the whole was leavened.

Report of Labor.

I left home Jan. 5th, and arrived at Eagle Grove at noon. Bro. J. P. Allard met me at the train and took me to his hospitable home. After dinner I made several calls and spoke at night. At 9:15 took the train for Gilford, and spoke Saturday night and Sunday evening. I went to Marshalltown and finished the meeting that was closed for holidays. Remained there from Jan. 8th to 20th, spoke 13 times. A splendid interest was manifested here and I look for material results soon. I then went to Gilford where arrangements had been made to hold a meeting in the Methodist church. In the evening just at the time when the fire should be built the minister hunted up the janitor and took the key from him, and the queer part of it was that he had to go to the pool hall to find his janitor. A few that had gathered at a private house prevailed on me to speak to them there, so I did. The next day the people practically forced him to give up the key and we stayed till Feb. 15th, spoke 20 times. This was during the severe cold weather, but the house was full most every night, some coming for several miles and the interest was excellent. Then went to Union three miles south and commenced a meeting in the Christian church, continued there from Feb. 20 to March 11, spoke 14 times to a full house, a number attending from Gilford. Bro. O. J. Allard dropped in on us a couple of times during the meetings, and rendered valuable assistance. At the close of the meeting six expressed a desire to put on Christ. A call came to come back to Gilford the next night, and at the close of the meeting two more came forward. I then was compelled to lay off for a couple of days on account of hoarseness, but Bro. Allard dropped in and found me at my father's. We sent word to the school a few rods away that there would be meeting that night and Bro. Allard was greeted with a full house and stayed over the next night. He gave us two excellent talks, one especially to the young people that was highly appreciated by them. We reluctantly bid them good by and went to Gladbrook where we spoke two evenings. Then proceeded to Waterloo where we remained from March 15th to 20th and spoke 14 times. We made our home with Bro. Kilroy, who did everything he could to make the meeting a success. We had a fair turn out and an interest awakened in some that will we believe materialize in the near future. We then returned to Gilford and spoke twice and arranged to organize a Sunday school, then went to Eagle Grove and stayed over Sunday. Then after an absence of three months lacking 2 days, we arrived home where we found all well.

Expense from Jan. 5 to April 2, $13.57; money received $67.33; money received above expense, $23.76; wages $148.43.

Alanus Adams.

To the household of faith:

On Saturday April 8th, I began a series of meetings at Delta, Ohio, to hold over Sunday April 16. I was warmly welcomed by the few faithful there. I spent part of the time at Bro. W. H. Elton's and part at Bro. S. J. Elton's. I was fully cared for at both homes. Invitations were extended by others, but time and circumstances prevented the visits. I found all well, except Sister Priscilla Elton, who was sick in bed, but considerably better when I came away. We were to meet and break bread with her Sunday afternoon, but Friday I was called home on account of the death of our brother Townsend—see obituary in The Restitution. The sudden stopping of our meetings was quite a disappointment, as we were looking forward with pleasant anticipation to our Sunday meetings, one in the morning for the little flock to break bread and exhort each other, after a short sermon. The meeting at Sister P. Elton, W. H. Elton's aged stepmother, already mentioned, and the evening meeting for the public, of whom we expected a fair gathering. The meetings may be summed up as small, fair and good. It is not by any means the large meetings that are always the most satisfactory, or from which are the best results. The attention was good, interest was manifest, and some who came first came to every meeting, may the Lord find he can give the increase to some good and honest heart. On Friday evening April 14, after service, I announced the sudden death of brother W. D. Townsend, and bade good by with mutual regrets, and best wishes for the present, and kindly invitations to return at any time suitable. By their liberality the church at Delta proved that they believed in, and were interested in evangelistic work in Ohio. Bro. W. H. Elton brought me to Delta Saturday morning where we said good by, trusting to meet again if still well, and waiting for our Lord and Master. The brothers Elton live about five miles from Delta, they have farms about half a mile apart. I found them very busy indeed, on account of the fine weather at that time, but I think that they have had some more leisure since, as the weather has been very stormy since I came home. I did intend to make a more extended trip when I left for Delta, but will postpone it for the present, and attend to special calls that may come. There is much need of the gospel of the kingdom being preached throughout Ohio, and I am hopeful of more being done if the Lord seems to tarry. Dear brethren, let us strive to fill out our possibilities, each and all of us, so that when he comes—"whose right it is" he may say to us "well done."

P. Neill.

The Raising of Lazarus.

The following is a brief review of the sermon of last Sunday evening at the Church of God by F. L. Austin, pastor. The theme of the discourse is "The Raising of Lazarus."

"The heart of the Sunday school world has this day been stirred anew by once more studying the affecting record of the death and resurrection of Lazarus. It is to be hoped that one of the effects of this world-wide study of this, one of the most naturally touching events in the career of our Lord, will be to bring us all to a greater appreciation of His love and power. Urging ourselves past the rapture-filled company by the opened tomb, denying our ears to listen to the wonderful conversation that followed the loosing of the grave clothes and our pulse the gratification of throbbing in sympathy by meditating on the love feelings of this reunited family, and passing behind the tomb-burrowed hill that our eyes may not become intoxicated by the joy rays from the faces of Master, sisters, brothers and friends,—here, in self-urged quiet, one of man's greatest questions arises. A man has been in death four days. Now he has been brought back to life. Was it truly a kindness on His part to quicken this dead one, introducing him anew to life's cares and toils? Another query rushes in. This same Jesus had previously stated. "The hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice and shall come forth." Is such a coming forth to be desired by man? Will we, ourselves, appreciate such an act toward us? Take notice that both the good and the evil are to be raised. We can readily understand how one would appreciate a respite after a few centuries' abode in a home of liquid fire—if a God of love has or can (?) establish such a home. To any such a bringing forth would be a kindness. But concerning the righteous; in what light are they to view the resurrection?

I believe that the answer to this important question—the value of the resurrection—may be understood or appreciated only as we understand the effect of death upon man. And the only possible way to be rightly informed as to death is to search without prejudice in God's word. That word styles death as man's enemy: 1. Cor. 15-26. It further says that Christ partook of flesh and blood, "that through death He might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil. The effect of this enemy is given more in detail in the Old Testament, to which writings Christ and the apostles frequently referred the people for reliable information.

Says the Psalmist, "In death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" "Wilt thou show thy wonders to the dead? Shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah. Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction? Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?" "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Man's "breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything; neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten; Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished." "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." "The grave cannot praise thee; death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth."

But why multiply quotations? These texts all refer to man in general, good and bad. They plainly teach that in death man has no thought, knowledge, love, or hatred, and thus no joy or sadness; no rapture or pain. And further that there is no work, or device, no praise or celebration there. All power of body and mind paralyzed, gone. No bright picture this. Few desire to be caught in the land of this enemy. In view of this effect how apparent is the necessity of a resurrection in order to life after death. And how kind is the hand that restores to life.

There is another effect from death which should be considered in order to appreciate the effect of resurrection. "The sting of death is sin." "By one man sin entereth into the world and death by sin." "Sin when it is finished brings forth death." "The wages of sin is death." "Death passed upon all men for that all have sinned." "By the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." Here we learn that sin is the cause of death. Because of sin we all rest under the judgment, or sentence, of condemnation—a death sentence. The only way to satisfy the judgment is to pay for it. And paying does satisfy. "For he that is dead is freed from sin." Thus a necessity of death,—to release from condemnation, or sin. But this act reduces man to a position where he is "without strength." Thus, again, the necessity of resurrection,—to release helpless man who has acquitted himself from condemnation.

That this necessity is provided for, there is abundant proof. I "I have hope toward God, * * that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust,"—Paul. "The sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell (hades, grave) delivered up the dead which were in them." "I saw the dead small and great stand before God."

The effect of resurrection is both great and varied. Its first and universal effect is activity, strength,—life. But the varied conditions of life demands considerate study. All are not to be raised at the same time. "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven, * * and the dead in Christ shall rise." "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Let us first look at the dead in Christ. During life they "were baptized into Christ," and walketh in newness of life." They reckoned themselves "to be dead unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Denouncing sin that it should "not have dominion" (sovereignty) over them, they yielded their "members as instruments of righteousness unto God." The works of faith he counted to them, "for righteousness," and they were therefore marked out to be "joint heirs with Christ." Having perfected Christlike characters in life, and having satisfied the sentence of death, they are at the resurrection placed beyond the reach of sin, that they may "die no more." "Immortality," "incorruptibility," "spiritual body,"—these terms describe the effect of resurrection upon upon those in Christ. Over such like "death hath no more dominion." But how different the effect upon all others. They, too, will be redeemed from their helpless condition by the same kind hand of the Lord. It would seem that it is very possible for them to be again stung with sin, which would again be "finished" in death. We see them, unlike those of the first resurrection, before a Judge. Books are opened, including the Book "which is of life." That Judge, righteous Judge, shall assign their names to one of these several books, "and whoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire," which "lake of fire" is the second death. To this end each one shall come only for his own sin, not for the sin of antecedents or of another. "The soul that sins it shall die."

How preferable to be placed beyond sin's reach, where its sting may never more be felt; that the power which leads to death may have no permission to interfere. With what pleasure does one move after acquitting himself of the adverse sentence of judgment. But how supreme the satisfaction if, having become released upon acquittal, we be assured that it shall never more be possible to come into the baneful presence of that monster sin, which would welcome its opportunity to recommit us to the enemy death. This is truly a better resurrection. And this better one may be ours by our choosing Him who is "the resurrection and the life."

Returning now to the opened tomb of Lazarus, let us look into the lovelit face of Him who has just brought light out of darkness, strength out of weakness, life out of death, and unite with the rapture filled family of Bethany in praising our "God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Niagara Falls Gazette.

The Baptism of Jesus.

Jesus was one of the Jewish nation by birth, "made of a woman made under the law." To be under the law was to be under the necessity of cleansing by the shedding of blood; and, accordingly, as an infant He was cleansed by the offering which the law appointed. The baptism of John was a cleansing in preparation for the coming One, in whom the King of Israel was about to visit the nation. He the coming One, was Jehovah's Lamb, to bear away the sin of the world. We might ask the question here, Did the sin which He bore away require to be forgiven? I think it will be seen that what was borne away did not require forgiveness. That which requires to be forgiven is the individual's own transgression of God's law. Jesus transgressed no law of God, and therefore had no sin of His own committing. And He [illegible] grace[illegible] years after[illegible] cousness was manifested in setting Him forth as a mercy seat; so that through the faith in His blood the remission of sins might be obtained.

Before that Jesus could become God's mercy seat He must be sprinkled by the blood of the sin. This was accomplished on the cross, when He was not only the victim but also the altar, and afterwards the altar of incense and the mercy seat, as meeting place, where God meets with those who are washed, sprinkled and clothed in Him. His death was necessary for the manifestation of the righteousness of God. And so His baptism was the same as the baptism of His brethren, a baptism into His own death. He said, "for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." He and His brethren are one; He, their leader and example, put away sin in the destruction of the body which belonged to sin. Although He never yielded to the promptings of the flesh, He was under the dominion of death. But being raised from the dead, death hath no more dominion over Him. His brethren are baptized into His death, but raised in His life, so that they are no longer under the law of sin and death, but under the law of the spirit of life in Christ. Under the law of the spirit of life, the saint is daily putting off the old man and his deeds; but being still encompassed with the weakness of the old man he is apt to fall into transgression. But he has a way, he is indeed in the way to the Father, Who is just and willing to forgive him his sin, when he seeks for it in the true spirit of repentance. This is shown forth in the times of the law by the sin offering for individual transgression. And the condemnation of sin in the flesh, or the destruction of sin in that over which it reigned, and in which it dwelt. The "old man" which Paul says was crucified with Christ was illustrated by the sin-offering whose blood was carried within the veil, and whose body was buried without the camp. These two phases of sin must be understood before the baptism of Jesus can be clearly seen in its force, and also the nature and extent of forgiveness. Many err by constantly fixing the mind on the one aspect of sin, and so fail to see the force of Christ as the mercy seat.—C. Smith.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference [illegible] of God in Michigan [illegible] Dutton, Kent Co., [illegible] June 1, 1905, and [illegible] following Sunday.

Brothers and Sisters, let not these gatherings together prove fruitless, so it shall not be said of us, that we have received the grace of God in vain but may it indeed build us up in the most holy faith, not only intellectually, but that we may be more spiritual minded. That we may become more pure in our walk and conversation, and more faithful in holding forth the Word of Life.

Brethren, this conference meeting is yours. Come to it. If you have a word of good news to impart, come and encourage the brethren, who have come to get sympathy and strength. The friends at Dutton want to see all their old friends, and many new ones. They will be prepared to entertain all who may come.

It is expected that Bro. A. H. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, will be at the meeting.

Dutton is situated on the M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jackman, Sec'y.

The Second Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana, known as the "June Meeting," will convene at the Antioch Church, between Plymouth and Argos, Indiana, Thursday, June 8, 1905, beginning at 7:30 P. M., and continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in Indiana, you have met at Antioch these many years, and have been greatly edified by this gathering. Besides this, the "seed of the Word of the kingdom" has been sown at this gathering which has resulted in good. Let there be a general rally of the brotherhood in Indiana for mutual good, and let the glad tidings of the coming kingdom be presented to others. This invitation is also for those who do not live in Indiana.

The Committee on Program will secure the speakers and arrange the topics to be presented at this meeting. Those coming by rail can come either to Plymouth or Argos, Ind., and will please notify Bro. A. R. Underwood at Plymouth, or Bro. T. O. Taber at Argos.

Though we sorrow not as it becomes, yet it is with a degree of sadness that we record the death of our brother W. D. Townsend. He was born near Damascus, Columbiana County, Ohio, a few miles from Goshen where he died. Was born in 1829, died April 14, 1905, buried in Bunker Hill Cemetery near his home, two married sons survive him, Wilson and Warren. He was brought up religiously in the Society of Friends, but not being prejudiced, when twenty-eight years ago he heard the gospel of the kingdom of God preached by brothers George Moyer and J. M. Stephenson, as searched the Scriptures and found those things were so, he believed, repented and obeyed, being immersed in the name of the Lord, by J. M. Stephenson, April 25, 1877.

Severe catarrh affected his hearing, he was therefore not aggressive, but held firmly to the great foundation truths and the simplicity of the gospel, and was ever ready to help in maintaining and furthering the same. During several years the church in Salem suffered from the inroads of death, members moving away, and other causes, brother Townsend, though hard of hearing, and the only brother left, came five miles to Salem, and with some seven or eight sisters met and broke bread in memory of our Lord, read and exhorted, and thus kept burning the light of truth, and themselves in the love of God. By his death the Church of God in Salem has lost a faithful brother.

In December last he took suddenly and seriously ill with heart trouble. Though not confined to bed, he grew gradually weaker, hearing almost gone, could not see to read. On the morning of his death he ate—for him, a hearty breakfast, retired to his room, and very soon after was found dead. He lived with his son Wilson who with his wife, took kindly care of their father. The funeral Sunday Apr. 16 was very largely attended, the writer briefly outlined our brother's faith and hope from Rev. xiv. 13, and if we are faithful to the end, as we believe he was, we are hopeful of meeting him again when, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God." Our brother lived to see his son Wilson and wife obey the gospel, and so we still have a brother Townsend.

P. NEILL.

March 29th, 1905, at his home in Kingsbury, Ind., Daniel Shaw in the 91st year of his age. Words of comfort were spoken by an Advent minister after reading the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians, and he was laid beside our mother whom he sorely missed after her death on Jan. 2nd, this year.

Their married life extended over a period of more than sixty-five years. They were pioneers of Laporte county and with the exception of about two years had resided in Kingsbury during all that time.

For many years they have been staunch advocates of the "Final restitution of all things as God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began," father always ready and often teaching the blessed truths to all who came. Their lives proclaimed that they lived very near unto their Redeemer.

They were the parents of twelve children, eight of whom are living, as follows:—Dr. T. J. Shaw, Frank Shaw, and G. Allan Shaw, of Chicago, Martha Wiesholt of Stillwell, Ind., Flora M. Groves of Laporte, Ind., Jennie L. White and Dan Shaw of Kingsbury, Ind., and Lanie Lovelace of Hutchinson, Kansas.

The enemy "Death" had not entered their doors for more than thirty-one years, but now the old home is desolate—the familiar easy chairs are vacant—the RESTITUTIONS that they enjoyed are folded away, and the old, worn Bible will never again yield to the touch of their feeble hands, but lies there, a mute reminder of the source from whence they derived strength and courage, that never faltered through their long lives of toil, sacrifice, and unselfish love, and is now left as a sacred heritage to the children, who may draw from its pages the same full measure.

We can scarcely realize that father and mother are gone to return no more, but their pain and suffering is over and we know if we emulate their lives we shall greet them when the trumpet sounds and the dead shall come forth. "Even so Lord Jesus, come quickly."

LANIE LOVELACE.

WE GIVE A CHANCE.

We offer again this coming year to go halves with any one wishing to do Missionary work.

For $1.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to a new name for a year.

For $5.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 6 new names for a year.

For $10.00 we will send THE RESTITUTION to 13 new names for a year.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

Editor Restitution:

Will you please notice in the Restitution that the Church at Fonthill, Ont., propose to have a special religious meeting to commence on Saturday evening May 27 and continue over the following Sunday.

We expect the friends at Niagara Falls, N. Y., to meet with us, and as many more as can make it convenient to attend. A general invitation is given to all.

Yours for the Truth, as it is in Jesus.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Paylon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send in their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny D. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope.

Poetry.

It Doesn't Cost Money.

It doesn't cost money, as many suppose,
To have a good time on this earth;
The best of its pleasures are free to all those Who know how to value their worth.

The sweetest music the birds to us sing,
The loveliest of all flowers grow wild,
The finest of drink gushes out of the spring—
All free to man, woman and child.

No money can purchase, no artist can paint,
Such pictures as nature supplies.
Forever, all over, to sinner and saint,
Who use to advantage their eyes.

Kind words and glad looks and smiles every one
Costs nothing—no, nothing at all;
And yet all the wealth Monte'risto could have
Can make no such pleasures befall.

To bask in the sunshine, to breathe the pure air,
Honest toil the enjoyment of health,
Sweet slumber refreshing these pleasures we share
Without any portion of wealth.

Communion with friends that are tried, true and strong,
To love and be loved for love's sake—
In fact, all that makes life happy and long
Are free to whoever will take.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 2.

1. In the second year of his royalty Nabouchadonosor had a dream-vision and his spirit stood out and his sleep became away from him.

2. And the king said, Call the enchanters and the magi, and pharmacists and the Chaldaioi to tell the king his dream-visions. And they came and stood in the presence of the king.

3. And the king said unto them, I dreamed a dream-vision, and my spirit stood out to know the dream-vision.

4. And the Chaldaioi said to the king in Syriac, O King live forever (for the animate-ages). Do thou tell the dream-vision to thy house servants, and we will tell the meaning by judging comparatively (or tell the comparative interpretation thereof).

5. The king answered the Chaldaioi, The word hath stood away from me; if ye do not make known to me the dream-vision and the comparative interpretation, ye shall be for loss and your houses shall be plundered.

6. But if ye make known to me the dream-vision and the comparative-interpretation thereof, gifts and emoluments and much honor will ye take from me, not though unless ye tell me the dream-vision and the comparative interpretation thereof.

7. They made answer a second time and said, O king, Let the dream-vision be told thy house-servants, and we will tell the comparative-interpretation, ("Sunkrisis").

8. And the king made answer and said, of a truth I know that ye are husbanding time even as ye know that the oracular word (or thing) hath stood away from me.

9. If then ye do not tell me my dream-vision I shall also know that ye have conspired to speak a false and utterly corrupt thing in my presence until the time shall have passed by. Tell me my dream-vision and I shall know that ye will also tell me the analogous meaning thereof.

10. The Chaldaioi made answer in the presence of the king and they say, There is no man on the dry (land) who can make known the oracular word for the king even as no great king and ruler asketh an enchanter, a Magus and Chaldaian.

11. Because the word which the king asketh is difficult and there is no other than the gods whose dwelling is not with any flesh, who will tell it in the presence of the king.

12. Then the king with anger and wrath said all the wise men of Babuloon should perish.

13. And the decree went forth and the wise men were being slain thereby; and they sought out Daniel and his friends to destroy them.

14. Then Daniel gave as an answer counsel and an opinion to Arlooch the chief-magus of the king, who had gone out to destroy the wise men of Babuloon.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Dead PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 10, 1905. NUMBER 18.

15. For what, O ruler of the king, hath the shameless opinion gone forth from the face of the king? And Arlooch made known the affair recounted to Daniel.

16. And Daniel asked as a favor of the king that he would tell the king the comparative interpretation thereof.

17. And Daniel entered into his house and made known to his friends Ananias and Mesaeel and Azarias the affair.

18. And they sought from the God of heaven feelings of pity concerning this mystery that Daniel and his friends might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babuloon.

19. Then unto Daniel in a vision of the night the mystery was revealed; and Daniel eulogized the God of heaven.

20. And said, May God's name have been eulogized from the animate-age even unto the animate-age, because the wisdom and understanding are his.

21. And he changeth periods and times, he seateth kings and he removeth them, giving wisdom to the wise and thoughtfulness to those who see in an understanding way.

22. He uncovereth deep and hidden things, knowing the things in the darkness, and the light is with him.

23. O God of my fathers, I confess and sing praise unto thee, because thou hast given unto me wisdom and ability ("dunames" dynamic-power) and thou hast made me to know things which I have asked as a favor from thee, and hast made known to me the vision of the king.

24. And Daniel went unto Arlooch whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babuloon, and said unto him, Do not destroy the wise men of Babuloon, but lead me into the presence of the king, and I will tell the king the comparative-interpretation.

25. Then Arlooch with haste led Daniel into the presence of the king, and said unto him, I have found a man of prominence of the sons of the captivity of Joudaia, who will tell the king the comparative-interpretation.

26. And the king made answer and said unto Daniel, whose name was Baltasar, Thou canst not tell me the dream-vision which I saw and the comparative-interpretation thereof, canst thou?

27. And Daniel answered in the presence of the king and said, The mystery which the king is asking is not for wise men, magi, enchanters or treasury-keepers tell to the king;

28. But rather it is God in heaven who revealeth mysteries, and he hath made known to king Nabouchodonosor things which must occur during the last days. Thy dream-vision and the seeings of thy head upon thy couch is this,

29. O king, as follows, Thy thoughts upon thy couch arose as to what must occur after these things, and the One who revealeth mysteries made known unto thee things that must occur.

30. And to me moreover this mystery was not revealed with the wisdom that is in me more than that of all the living, but that I might make known to the king the comparative-interpretation thereof, in order that thou mightest comprehend the reasonings of thy heart.

31. Thou O king wast beholding, and lo, an image, that great image, and the sight of it was overbearing, standing before thy face, and the seeing of it fearful.

32. An image the head of which was of best gold (the word "best" here is the word descriptive of Christ's yoke and translated "easy" in all the versions); the hands and the breast and the shoulders (including the arms) thereof of silver, the belly and the thighs copper.

33. The shins iron, the feet part iron and part earthen-ware,

34. Thou wast beholding until a stone was split from out a mountain without hands, and it smote the image upon the feet of iron and earthen-ware, and completely pulverized them.

35. Then the earthen-ware, the iron, the copper, the silver, the gold were made very fine, and became as it were fine dust from a summer threshing-floor, and the fulness of the wind (spirit) took them away, and there was no place found for them; and the stone that smote them became a great mountain and filled all the earth.

36. This is the dream-vision, and the comparative interpretation thereof we will speak in the presence of the king.

37. Thou O king, art a king of kings, unto whom the God of heaven hath given a strong and controling and honorable royalty.

38. In every place where the sons of men dwell, he hath given wild-beasts of the field and flying things of the heavens and fish of the sea into thy hand and constituted thee Lord of them all. Thou art that head of gold.

39. And after thee there will arise another kingdom inferior to thine, and a third kingdom which is the copper, which will lord it over all the earth.

40. And a fourth kingdom which will be strong as iron; in the way that the iron pulverizeth and tameth everything, even so will it pulverize and tame everything.

41. And because thou sawest the feet and hands part of earthenware and part of iron, it will be a divided kingdom, and from the iron root in it there will be in the way thou sawest the iron mixed up with the earthenware.

42. And the toes of the feet part iron and part earthenware, a certain portion of the kingdom will be strong, and from it a portion will be crushed.

43. Because thou sawest the iron mixed up with the earthenware there will be the commingllngs in the seed of men, and they will not cleave together this with that, even as the iron doth not mix up with the earthenware.

44. And in the days of those kings, the God of heaven will cause to arise a kingdom which will not have been destroyed by corruption for the animate-ages; and his kingdom will not have been left to another laity. It will pulverize and winnow all the kingdoms, and it will arise for the animate-ages.

45. In the way that thou sawest that a stone was cut from a mountain without hands, and that it pulverized the earthenware, the iron, the copper, the silver, the gold. The great God hath made known to the king the things that must occur after these things; and the dream-vision is true, and the comparative interpretation of it reliable.

46. Then the king Nabouchodonosor fell upon his face and did homage to Daniel and said, Pour out libations of worship and sweet-smell to him.

47. And the king answered and said to Daniel, of a truth your God is a God of gods and Lord of the kings, one who revealeth mysteries, because thou hast been enabled to reveal this mystery.

48. And the king magnified Daniel and gave him great and many gifts, and established him over all the country of Babuloon and ruler of satraps; over all the wise men of Babuloon.

49. And Daniel asked as a favor from the king, and he established Sidrach, Misach and Abdenago over the affairs of the country of Babuloon; and Daniel was in the court of the king.

COMMENT.

We have in this chapter one of the examples in the Bible of "the dream-vision" way of revelation. "A dream-vision" must not be compared with nor be supposed to be an ordinary dream at all. For it is as different as a picture of a person is from a real person. It is as different as a mere supposition is from an act of faith. All idolatry and superstition has abounded in dreams and suppositions as well as credulous confidence in their reality and reliability for guidance in one's conduct of life. In fact there is not a form or way of revelation that has not been counterfeited by human cunning or demoniac subtilty; and moreover we are warned over and over in the Scriptures themselves against these very devices.

The minuteness and the clearness of the record here should enable the careful and honest reader to see that the method of interpretation "of a dream-vision" is anything but guesswork or "frenzied chance" and while rational in method so far as we can naturally apprehend and follow it, unless you or I have received the something more which Daniel had received, namely, "the divine enablement" as Paul calls it we will surely fall short of "understanding" the full meaning and the lesson intended to be conveyed. The fact that the method of "interpretation" was rational is clearly taught in the word used here and persistently as well as consistently repeated, "synkrisis" (sunkrisis) which means to judge of one thing by comparing it with another. The mere word "interpretation" used in all the versions to translate this original word does not really translate it but is itself an interpretation, and anything but helpful in result.

Daniel at this juncture has become the chief-counselor of Nabouchodonosor the king, and his three friends are subordinates of his. He continues in this office during the reign of his son Baltasar and of Darelos and for a part of the reign of Kuros his son.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

THE TRIAL OF YOUR FAITH. 1 PET. 17.

Yes, Peter says the trial of our faith is much more precious than gold that perisheth. Knowing that we were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ, verses 3 and 4 read. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, and is there not cause for great rejoicing on our part? We who have been called from darkness into the marvelous light of the gospel as it is in Christ Jesus. Though now we have temptations we have the promise from God who is faithful, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we can bear but provides a way of escape, that we may be able to endure it, Blessed is the one that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him. We have the record of how the old worthies were strengthened in times of their severe temptations, and were able through faith to subdue kingdoms, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, and others were tortured, had trials of mockings and scourgings, bonds and imprisonments, some were stoned, some slain with the sword. They wandered about in sheep skins and goat-skins, being destitute, afflicted, evil entreated. Yes, they, Moses and the prophets and the apostles suffered all these things and more, that they might obtain the crown of life promised. These happened unto them for ensamples, and were written for our admonition, that we should take courage and through comfort of the Scriptures we might have hope; and as Christ has suffered for us we ought to be willing, yes, anxious, to bear reproach for his name sake. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ happy are ye, and think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you as though some strange thing happened unto you, but rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's suffering; for the Lord knows how to deliver the godly out of temptations. O is it not a comfort and consolation that we know these truths and if faithful to the end will be found of him in peace and blameless.

MRS. ISA MCCAVE.

EPHESIANS VI. 10.

Be strong in the Lord. We are to put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the wicked one, knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth the same shall he receive of the Lord, wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day and having done all to stand. Be strong in the Lord with good will, doing service as to the Lord and not men. Be strong in the Lord and take the helmet of salvation and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, for through obedience we have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Be strong in the Lord, for his great love wherewith he loved us according to the eternal purpose, which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord, be strong and be not carried about with every wind of doctrine, but speaking in love, if so be ye have heard him, and have been taught by him the truth in Jesus, and have put off the old man which is corrupt and be renewed in the spirit of your mind, put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, be strong, proving what is acceptable unto the Lord and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father and in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Be strong in the Lord that Christ may dwell in our hearts by faith, being rooted and grounded in love and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge. Paul says in verse 15, 6th chapter of Eph. and your feet shod with the gospel of peace taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, be strong as the servants of Christ doing the will of God from the heart. Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory through Jesus throughout all ages world without end. Amen.

S. A. CRAWFORD.

Finally, my brethren, be strong in Lord. Be strong in faith, giving glory to God. Paul says, I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. His strength was in the Lord, and he tells the brethren to become strong by putting on the whole armor of God, that they and we also may be able to stand against all evil. Put on the breast plate of righteousness, having your feet shod with the gospel of peace. Put on the helmet of salvation and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. Praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, above all taking the shield of faith. Praying for strength to withstand all evil, to be strong in the Lord, strengthened with all might according to his glorious power, continue in the faith and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel. Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly and then we will find strength to withstand all evil, all temptations and give honor and glory to the name of Jesus. David, king of Israel, fully understood that in God only was strength. He says, The salvation of the righteous is of the Lord, he is their strength. O love the Lord all ye his saints. Be of good courage and he shall strengthen your heart. The Lord is their strength and he is the saving strength th of his Anointed, it is God that girdeth me with strength. Be strong in the Lord. Rejoice in him always.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Be Strong in the Lord.

Brethren, Beloved in the Lord:

When I was little more than a babe in Christ, I thought I ought to have an answer to all Biblical questions, or pertaining to religious matters, from further experience I became almost afraid of many questions. I had heard of "Bible defenders" and I thought I ought to be one, but a few years continued study of the great book led me to see that the Bible would defend me if I could, and would, use it correctly. I then began to imitate our great teacher, the Lord Jesus Christ, and when reasoning with men or women would stand by what "is written" and to all questions apply that rule, and from that time I found that I had at least begun to be stronger in the Lord. I will give one or two instances or examples. Some time ago, I had an urgent request to call on Sunday afternoon. I called and one of the women in the house asked me what I knew about the "horses" in Revelations. I answered, I do not know about them. I have an opinion, but no knowledge, but I do know the way of life according to the gospel of the kingdom of God, would you like to know something about that? She smiled, but no answer, she was disappointed on the subject of the horses, but had no interest in the good news.

Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. Eph. vi. 10, 11. Then Paul describes the armor by which we may be strong in the Lord. Truth, righteousness, the preparation of the gospel of peace, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, the Sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God. When we believe the truth, and live accordingly, we are strong in the Lord. Jesus withstood temptation forty days, because he remembered and held to that which is written, it was a tower of strength to him. From that on he taught the written Word, so that we also by the same rule may be strong in the Lord. The Word of the Lord enables one to be strong. A brother in the west of Ohio asked me if I believed in universal resurrection. I replied, my brother, I never read that in God's book. He was pleased, and said, I was just curious to know how you would answer. He went on to say, that a man came to him urging the question of Sabbath keeping, and spoke of the "ceremonial law." Our brother said to the the speaker, pardon me, but in what part of the Bible will I find the term ceremonial law? That ended the talk as our brother would not accept a statement that was not written. Brethren, it does not require profound learning to be strong in the Lord. Joshua was instructed how to be strong in the Lord, by observing to do according to all that was written by Moses, as God commanded. Many, many times Jesus said to his hearers, "Have ye not read?" And when tempted of a certain lawyer, he said, What is written in the law? how readest thou? Many a powerfully worded argument, lecture, sermon or essay will be found to be no stronger than a rope of sand when compared or examined by the written Word. Church of the living God, let the Word of Christ dwell in us richly in all wisdom, speaking only that which is written, refusing that which is not written, and thus we may be strong in the Lord.

In parts of Russia there are reports of more Jewish riots. Jews are killed, their houses and shops raided, their women and children mistreated. How long must the world hear these reports?

Hostilities have begun again in the far east. The Japanese army has advanced, and driven the Russians back, the latter retiring with little show of fighting. On the water there has been no battle. The Russian fleet is waiting to be joined by additional vessels that are near them now. Meanwhile there is much speculation as to the attitude of France. The Russian fleets have been allowed to remain in French waters a longer time than the laws allow, and have been aided in many ways to get supplies and coal, and to clean and refit their vessels. To this Japan enters her protest, and it seems that if she enforces her demands on France all of Europe must be involved. If it is proven that France by her action has actually aided Russia, and will not make an explanation and proper acknowledgment, then Japan may declare that such action is warlike, and that will make it necessary for England to aid Japan, and of course it is easy to see how Germany could get into the muddle.

Editor Restitution:

This is to let you know that I know that my subscription is past due on my dear Restitution paper, and I have not got a dollar in the world. I have to depend on my children for my living in my old age (72 years), and don't know how soon I will be able to get it. I am isolated here, no one of the one faith near me that I have ever heard of, no Christian spirit or brotherly or sisterly love. It is a Mormon town, no Sunday really kept, stores, groceries, saloons open Sunday the same as week day. God have mercy. My children and grand children that I am living with are not Christians, but I am still trusting the grace of God to hold up the blood stained banner till he calls me, and will ask for your prayers to help me. I don't feel as though under the circumstances I could do without the paper, but if you feel as though you could not send it, I will have to with God's help do without it. Good by.

Yours with the one faith.

[The above letter is from a brother in Idaho. Our Helping Fund is now overdrawn $10.50. This brother's time is back since May, 1904. After reading this letter, it is not in our heart to cut him off from having the paper. It is a thing we cannot do. We simply make this statement, lay the matter before you, and trust that some one will esteem it a privilege to supply the means to continue our paper to the aged brother.—Ed.]

Fellowship and its Severance.

The first record of meeting after the address by Peter on the day of Pentecost, thus speaks, Acts ii: 41 and 42, "They then that received his word were baptized: and there were added in that day about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the Apostle's teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers."

This word "fellowship" is rendered as to meaning, by the dictionary, as "fellow" and associate, one united in the same affair, one of the same kind, as "fellow heir" a co-heir, "fellow-servant," "fellow-labourer," "fellow-soldier," "fellow-sufferer," one upon equal terms in all things which are for reward, for labour, for service, for warfare, for suffering. In these things one man has no pre-eminence over the others as regards authority from the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, to dispose of him in his service, to reject him as a co-worker, or to put him asunder from the Truth.

Of the word "fellow" by Paul, and its compounds, we may notice it is not used in Romans. He speaks to the ill-disciplined, the disorderly, and the guilty in 1st and 2nd of Corinthians four times, twice in each Epistle. His first use of the word is in 1st Cor. i: 9, where he says to these ill-disciplined heretics "God is faithful, by whom ye were called into the fellowship of his son, Jesus Christ our Lord." This [illegible] Christians into a [illegible] ion which only He who called them has the power to serve. These Corinthians are reminded in chap. x: 20 and 21, that they cannot retain this association with the Lord Jesus, if they eat at the table of the idols of Corinth, and, complying with the necessity of the unity with the Lord Jesus, eat at his table also. It was for them to make choice; it was not for some dominant man to say who should be severed; neither was severance for any diversity of opinion in matters of faith; no such rescript issued to the congregation from Paul. Indeed, in chap. xv: 12, it needs no special insight to discover that even for the denial of the resurrection from the dead, no thought of withholding fellowship was present in the mind of Paul. Paul did not try to slay his brother, and then argue with him.

The unclean person spoken of by the Apostle in chap. v: was put out of fellowship for a time for correction of his misdoing. There was to be a gathering of a congregation to deal with the case (verse 4.) The common sense of Paul and the love he had for the sinner (like his Master) had in it sorrow for his brother's sin, and its consequences, and this sorrow was suffused with the hope for his reformation. The 2nd Cor. ii: chap., thus speaks upon this painful matter, (ver. 4) "For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote with many tears . . that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly to you, (ver. 8) wherefore, I beseech you to confirm love towards him," i. e., "the love of Paul, the love of the love of the congregation, and the love of the Lord Jesus Christ." Men act altogether the other way than Paul and his Master. We are often reminded how brethren misconceive their duty, and miscalculate their power. Severance of fellowship, if it has any potency, is severance from the Lord Jesus and the Father, if it has no such power, it is wholly unscriptural, and is, therefore, altogether futile and foolish in the users.

The next place where the word appears is in Gal. ii: 9, which needs but a reference to be understood. In Eph. iii: 9,-the word is as to what the action of the Truth upon the recipients should advantage them. This to give them the things promised from their acceptance of the faith as placed upon record in 1st Cor. i: 9, "Brotherhood with the Lord Jesus Christ," as it is in chap. v: 11, to preserve them from the surrounding evils which then, as to-day, sever men from the Truth as it is in Jesus.

In Phill. i: 5, the second version applies us with the reason why Paul makes supplication with joy for the harmony of action between the congregation of Philippi "for your fellowship in furtherance of the Gospel." In ver. 11, he sums up their action by saying, "Being filled with the fruit of righteousness which is by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God." In chap. ii: 1, he exhorts the church to progress in this fellowship, always in harmony with the teachings of the Lord Jesus, and striving to assimilate his character, his word being in ver. 5, "have the same mind in you that was also in Christ Jesus." Further, in chap. iii: 10, 11, 12, he uses the word "fellowship," in those aspirations which give us insight into the secret soul of the wholly devoted eloquent man who laid bare his heart and his hopes to his brethren in his profound grasp of the true righteousness; ver. 10, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death: if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection from the dead." I beg to protest on behalf of Paul, that these any means had in them no thought of the word "fellowship," having any meaning such as unthinking men have applied to it for unwise purposes, and for unworthy objects. Paul did not so learn Christ. In 1st John i: 3, John supplementing Paul, supplies to us an inspired use of the word. In verses 6 and 7, he is careful to make the relationship of the word "fellowship" clear to the perceptions of the little children, whom he wrote to "that," says he, "ye sin not:" and here we need no exhortation beyond those he gave for all little children, who receive the Word of God, with the teachableness of the child who sighs for knowledge, and because he loves the Truth, is anxious to gather his lesson, to learn the inspired meanings of apostolic words, that he may be free from such effects and such false doctrine as that which garble the sense of a word only used as designating, and as reciprocating loving unity in the body of Christ.

The catchwords which men make, and the words distorted from their meanings for the expression of action only evil, is a relic of the Papacy and its priesthood. Thus we have ingenious men who assume that they possess powers, unexercised, unnamed by the Lord Jesus and the Apostles. They invent names for their wiser brethren which are from the mint of their own consciousness; coin these, and make some believe they are genuine; but when these words are tested by the Word, they are found to be spurious and thus in the words of the poet, we may say that of such that they are they "Who torture us with words, instead of wooing us with love's sweet witchcraft."—John Hawkins.

Prayer.

He will regard the prayer of the destitute and not despise their prayer. Psa. cii: 17. This Psalm is replete with blessings for God's chosen people, Israel, and in an especial manner when he shall again arise to build up Zion. It is then he will appear in his glory, then comes the words of the text, and the following verses declare his purpose and will, on that auspicious morning, the morning of the creation of the new heavens and the new earth. "Behold I create new heavens and a new earth." This shall be written for the generation to come; and the people which shall be created shall praise the Lord. To hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose those that are appointed to death; to declare the name of the Lord in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem: when the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to serve the Lord. Vs. 18, 20-22.

To pray intelligently, i.e., with the spirit and the understanding also, (and no other prayer is acceptable) will effectually prevent our praying at random, or "for everything in general and nothing in particular." True prayer is the language of want, of desire for some blessing which we need, something specific to meet our wants or needs. But it should be circumscribed within Jehovah's prescribed limits, within the proper circle of his promises. It is not pretended, however, that we should repeat verbatim every item recorded by the different evangelists, for the good reason that they used different expressions, showing conclusively, we think, that the Lord's prayer is merely an outline map, fixing the proper boundaries, beyond which we should not go. It is a model for brevity, yet comprehensive.

One very important item in one of our Lord's prayers to his Father, should not be overlooked or ignored, viz., when he prayed that this cup might pass from him, "nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." Here he struck the keynote, and this should be the grand characteristic of every prayer which ascends to our Heavenly Father, through our only mediator and antitypical high priest, as well as our prospective King, to reign on his father David's throne on Mt. Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously, in the earth redeemed from the curse. May this auspicious morning soon dawn on this now sin-cursed earth, and may it soon bloom again like Eden, and the kingdom of Israel be inaugurated or restored unto David's greater Son, is the sincere prayer of every true Christian.

The office work of prayer is also to impart a reflex influence on ourselves, to get ourselves right, in order to receive the blessings which our Heavenly Father may see fit to impart, and not what we may think we need. "Not my will, but thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." This should always be our motto and watchword at all times, and under all circumstances.—M. I. Lewis.

Christ the Revelation of God.

We must look on that whole career, from the cradle to the cross, from Calvary to Olivet, if we are to know the deepest tenderness, and catch its gladdest notes. That such a man has lived and died is beautiful, and the picture may stand forever as the fairest of the children of men. But, that in that life and death we have our most authentic knowledge of what God is, and that all the pity and truth, the gentleness and the brotherliness, the tears and the self-surrender, are a revelation to us of God; and that the cross, with its awful sorrow and its painful death, tells us, not only how a man gave himself for those whom he loved, but how God loved the world, and how tremendous is his law—this is good news of God indeed! We have to look for our truest knowledge of him, not in majesties of the starry heavens, nor in the depths of our own souls; not in the scattered tokens of his character, given by the perplexed order of the world; nor in the intuitions of the wise; but in the life and death of his Son, whose [illegible] the pity of God, as well as the compassion of a man; and in whose life and death the whole world may behold "the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person," and be delivered from all their fears of an angry, and their doubts of an unknown God.

The Stirred Gift.

Can it be possible that a gift of God to any man should lie dormant and unused? Paul's admonition to his young disciple would imply that it might be so. The parable of the talents suggests the same warning. The man of one talent, who was so afraid of losing it that he hid it, instead of trading with it, was a specimen of this kind of danger. Not much is known of the young man to whom the apostle wrote, but if we may judge from the tone of the two Epistles, we should infer that he was modest, unassuming, needing the spur rather than the curb. We all know such men, and while the character has its beauties and its merits, it has its dangers, too.

Every man ought to be convinced that he has a gift. Some of us are too much given to comparing ourselves with others, and to thinking how much we could do if we had their powers of eloquence, or their money, or position of influence; but as we have so little capital to work with, it does not seem worth making any effort. Of course, that is the easiest way to regard our position, but it is distinctly and explicitly condemned. God does not expect from one talent men the achievements of those to whom he has intrusted five talents, but he does expect that we shall do all that we can. It has sometimes happened, too, that the man who thought he had but one talent has discovered, when he came to use it, that it was not the only talent he possessed, and that he was really able to do more than he had believed was possible to him. Even if he makes no such discovery, he may find that this one talent exactly fits him for a service that his more richly endowed brother has overlooked. Besides this, he may have the privilege of beginning work of infinite value. The poor Methodist preacher, under whose sermon Spurgeon was converted, could have no idea of the far-reaching effect of that sermon. The Sunday School teacher whose work seems so humble, and often so fruitless, does not know how much he may be doing for the future of the church. The one gift we have, though it be but one, needs to be stirred, to be used, to be actively employed, and when that is done the results may be left with God. "He that does the best his circumstances allows, does well; angels could do no more."

The importance of choice is obvious, the time to choose is today. But what are we to choose? The path of service. "We will serve the Lord." The noblest and rarest choice is the choice of service, and the wisest service is the service of the highest and best. The choice on which anything really vital ever depends is the choice of which we shall serve. Serve something we must. We were born to serve. Day by day we have humbly to serve nature's great and unerring laws, or she would sweep us out of existence; and hour by hour, in the problems that cross our path we are serving God and Christ or ourselves;—if not God or Christ, then ourselves. No man is so profoundly the slave of himself as the man who thinks he is his own master. Jesus' choice was the choice of service. "He was in the form of God," sharing his ineffable glory; but he "made of himself no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man and humbled himself, and became obedient unto death." This was a hard, rough path that Jesus deliberately chose for us and for our salvation; and as the Father sent him, so he sent us on a mission of service to all whom we can help. It is this that gives unity to his life. "I am among you as he that doth serve." And it is himself who taught us that we served him by serving those who need our service. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Sunday School Times.

"The sluggard will not plow by reason of the cold; therefore, shall he begin harvest and have nothing." Prov. xxii. 4. So will it also be with the sluggard Christian in the day of judgment. This class has many excuses. It is too hot, too cold, or something else is wrong, that they cannot get or do anything. They of course fool men and deceive themselves; but every secret thing shall be brought into judgment.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will be held at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening June 1, 1905, and continue over the following Sunday.

Brothers and Sisters, let not these gatherings together prove fruitless, so it shall not be said of us, that we have received the grace of God in vain but may it indeed build us up in the most holy faith, not only intellectually, but that we may be more spiritual minded. That we may become more pure in our walk and conversation, and more faithful in holding forth the Word of Life.

Brethren, this conference meeting is yours. Come to it. If you have a word of good news to impart, come and encourage the brethren, who have come to get sympathy and strength. The friends at Dutton want to see all their old friends, and many new ones. They will be prepared to entertain all who may come.

It is expected that Bro. A. H. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, will be at the meeting.

Dutton is situated on the M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jackman, Sec'y.

The Second Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana, known as the "June Meeting," will convene at the Antioch Church, between Plymouth and Argos, Indiana, Thursday, June 8, 1905, beginning at 7:30 P. M., and continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in Indiana, you have met at Antioch these many years, and have been greatly edified by this gathering. Besides this, the "seed of the Word of the kingdom" has been sown at this gathering which has resulted in good. Let there be a general rally of the brotherhood in Indiana for mutual good, and let the glad tidings of the coming kingdom be presented to others. This invitation is also for those who do not live in Indiana.

The Committee on Program will secure the speakers and arrange the topics to be presented at this meeting. Those coming by rail can come either to Plymouth or Argos, Ind., and will please notify Bro. A. R. Underwood at Plymouth, or Bro. T. O. Taber at Argos.

Civility costs nothing, and is often productive of of good results. Here is an instance. A local doctor of medicine at Bath, England had a legacy of $20,000 and a comfortable house, left by a lady who was always known to him by his once offering her a seat in his carriage. A gentleman, known to the writer, once assisted a very old and feeble man to cross from the London Madison House to the Bank of England. This crossing is a very dangerous one, especially at mid-day, when the city is full of cabs, omnibuses, drays, and other vehicles. When the old gentleman had got safely across, he exchanged cards with his obliging young friend; and there the matter rested. Some four or five years after this incident occured, a firm of London solicitors wrote to the young gentleman who had taken pity on the old man, informing him that a legacy of $5,000 and a gold watch and chain had been left to him by a gentleman, who "took the opportunity of again thanking him in his will for one unlooked-for-civility." It is not likely that all will have gold watches and chains left to them, or neat little bundles of crisp notes; but it is certain that acts of civility are productive of sufficient results to our inner selves to make it worth our while to practice them whenever we have the opportunity.—Household Words.

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through time and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1.

Dear Restitution:

As my subscription expired April 5, enclosed please find money order for its renewal, for I have been taking it ever since 70, and I look for it to come as regular as I do for my daily meals. Just tonight I have read with much interest Bro. J. F. Wagoner's article on the history of man, and when I finished reading it I remarked to the listening family that we felt as though he was almost present with us in person. Such articles have a tendency to draw us closer together, and beget in us a love for the truth's sake, and help to see eye to eye as the days are going by, and I will now admonish every brother and sister to continue to take "The Restitution, and not only take it, but take care of it, don't tear it up to tie up your apple butter or preserves with, or cover up your cupboard shelves, no, if it is worth taking it is worth taking care of. Yes, I have had many a happy season while reading over my dear old Restitutions. I have them in file from the year 76, and I never suffer one to be destroyed, consequently I can spend not only hours but days, both profitably and pleasantly reading from the pen of those able writers, many of whom now sleep in Jesus, and their works do follow them. Yes, brethren and sisters, we miss quite a feast by destroying any good article that enables us to comprehend the truths of the blessed old Bible. Yes, we know that all the good sermons that come to us through The Restitution are helpful to us, and especially as we have no regular elder to visit us often and hold up the Word of life, therefore let us hold up and support our paper and read it prayerfully with Bible in hand, instead of having Sunday socials from house to house where the Bible and its teachings are scarcely ever mentioned at all, but the center table is surrounded by the dear young people who ought to be bright and shining lights in their day and generation, and their choice games are played all the day and until a late hour in the night, and the old people, even the professors of our faith, submit to it, and say the children must have fun and amusement. Brethren, these things ought not so to be, methinks if the Son of God were here on earth as he once was he would turn over the tables and use the small cords to correct those who are spending their time in such evils. See John ii. 15. No, brethren and sisters, the time remains but short for the work, our friends are falling on every side, scarcely a day passes that we do not hear of some loved one having fallen in death's embrace.

Oh, the world is full of sighs,
Full of sad and weeping eyes;
Help your fallen brother rise,
As the days are going by.

Your Sister in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

Sarah F. Morgan.

Obituary.

Died at the hospital in Winchester, Va., April 16th, James W. Spaid, age 44 years, 10 months and 4 days. The cause of his death was hip joint disease. He was a very great sufferer and was confined to his bed for 8 months and 16 days. All was done for him that loving hearts and willing hands could do. He was the eldest son of our much esteemed brother and sister John J. and Margaret E. Spaid of Hampshire Co. They carried him back to his childhood home and laid him away in the grave to await the resurrection morn, when we all hope to see our loved ones again. He leaves a devoted wife and two sons and one daughter, and an aged father and mother, and an only brother to mourn their sad bereavement, as well as a large circle of relatives and friends who bestowed much kindness on him during his suffering, for which he was ever grateful. The foundation of God standeth sure, the Lord knoweth them that are his, be ye also ready, for we know not how soon we may hear the call.

Yes, our home is sad and lonely,
We miss our father dear;
No more we hear his welcome voice,
Nor see him in his chair.

His loving hands no more can toil,
To fill our every need;
His loving face no more we see,
Our hearts are sad indeed.

And our only hope is in the resurrection.

Laura E. Spaid & Children.

"To follow Jesus we must forgive. We must feel sorry for those who are unkind to us. We must ask God to forgive them, even though they never tell us they are sorry. As soon as we ask God to forgive one who has been unkind to us, we feel sorry for them and it is so easy to forgive them and forget the unkindness."

Poetry.

A Prayer.

To thine eternal arms, O God,
Take us, thine erring children, in;
From dangerous paths too boldly trod,
From wandering thoughts and dreams of sin.

Those arms were round our childish ways,
A guard through helpless years to be;
Oh, leave not our maturer days,
We still are helpless without thee.

We trusted hope and pride and strength—
Our strength proved false, our pride was vain
Our dreams have faded all at length—
We come to thee, O Lord again!

A guide to trembling steps yet be!
Give us thine eternal power!
So shall our paths all lead to thee,
And life smile on, like childhood's hours.

ACTS xviii.

At our last meeting we left Paul Preaching at Corinth. He found Jewish friends there named Aquilla and Priscilla, and because he was of the same craft, tentmakers, he abode or made it his home with them.

Under Jewish law each father was obliged to teach his children some honorable means of gaining a livelihood, so by occupation they were tentmakers, but every Sabbath we read of his working for the Lord, testifying to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ, but when they opposed themselves he shook his raiment and said: "I am clean, your blood be upon your own heads, I will now go unto the Gentiles." "But it was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you, but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo I turn to the Gentiles." And when the Gentiles heard this they were glad; yes and we are glad today. Then let us thank and praise God for this glorious gospel. So if we are faithful and strive to do our part this gospel or good news like Paul the Lord will be with us, for he told Paul to be of good cheer, to be not afraid, to speak and hold not his peace, for he would be with him.

In reading the 18th verse we notice that the trouble was not so much over the Gentiles' salvation as it was over the law. In Jno. i. 17 we read, The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. So by the law shall no flesh be justified. In the 12th verse we read that the Jews made insurrection or rebellion against Paul and brought him to the judgment seat, but Gallio treats his accusers with indifference and drives them out. Eventually he sails with Aquilla and Priscilla from the eastern part of Corinth to Ephesus, where he leaves them and going on himself to Cesarea, and thence by land to Jerusalem to keep the feast of Pentecost. Acts xv. 21. From thence he returns to Antioch and remains there some time. And a certain Jew named Apolos came to Ephesus who was instructed in the way of the Lord, and being fervent in the Spirit he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John, whom when Aquilla and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

Luke i. 15, 16 reads, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God." It was of John the Baptist that this prophecy was uttered. It was John the Baptist, the son of Zacharias who went into all the country round about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, saying, "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." And as all the people were in expectation and mused in their hearts of John whether he were the Christ or not, John answered, "I indeed baptize you with water, but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose, he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire.

John was sent to prepare the way of the Lord, a messenger of the Most High, an ambassador of heaven, and saying, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." But he was poor. This same John wore raiment of camel's hair, and his meat was locusts and wild honey. He warned the people to flee from the wrath to come, that when he who was to come after him, meaning Jesus, should purge his floor, they might be found among the wheat, and be gathered into the garner. But the chaff will be burn up with unquenchable fire. This humble wilderness preacher sets us the example to work on, even though disappointments come; and we become discouraged. Who cares for the greatness, honor or riches of this world, which are only for a short season, and must be left behind, but to be great in the sight of the Lord, that is worth more than the wealth of the world.

In Matt. iii. 13 we read of Christ coming to this same John to be baptized of him in Jordan. But John forbade him saying, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me," but Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now, for it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Here is another lesson that it becometh us also to fulfil all righteousness. And as Jesus rose from that watery grave was heard the voice of his Father in heaven saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

17TH CHAPTER OF ACTS.

In our last lesson we read where Paul entered the synagogue at Thessalonica and preached to the Jews for three days, trying to make them believe that Christ who died and rose again was this Jesus whom he was preaching about. Some of them believed, while others who believed not became so enraged, that they gathered a company of wicked men together and set the city in an uproar. So Paul and Silas departed for Berea, where they would have made many converts (for many believed) had it not been for the Jews at Thessalonica hearing that Paul was preaching at Beren, they came there also and interrupted him again. So the brethren sent Paul to the sea. While Paul was at Athens he found the city was wholly given to idolatry, here they called him a babbler, others said he was a setter forth of strange gods, because he preached to them of Jesus and the resurrection. When they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked, while others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. So Paul departed from among them and went to Corinth where he reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath and persuaded the Jews and Greeks, but when Silas came from Macedonia Paul was pressed in spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ, when they heard this they blasphemed and Jesus said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads, I am clean, henceforth he turned to the Gentiles. What a lesson this ought to be to us, see how patient and persevering Paul was to travel from town to town in the face of rebukes when so few seemed willing to believe his words.

ROSE STROUD.

In our last lesson, Acts xvii., we find that the Apostle Paul preached at Thessalonica in the synagogue of the Jews. While he reasoned with them out of the Scriptures and preached unto them that Jesus is the Christ, many believed, and also many devout Greeks and of the chief women not a few.

If the sermons and teaching of Christ's disciples, his servants with these that have no hope in the promises of God are not mere exhortations, but if they are able to give a reason of the hope that is within them, that they see in our faith, that our hearts and lives are changed, then we can expect that men and women will search for the truth of the gospel and be won for his cause. Verse 1 to 5.

Verse 5, Enemies of the truth will have no difficulty in finding associates of low character to join in their plot against God's people as they did against Jason and the apostles in our lesson. Would that our faith and enthusiasm be such as the apostles of old, that it could be said of us—they have turned the world upside down.

Verse 11, To receive the Word of God with all readiness of mind, and search the Scriptures daily whether these things are so, as the noble in Berea did, is proof of an upright heart and a noble mind, and may be the means of leading many into the truth of the gospel. How it fills our hearts with joy and thanksgiving that it may well be said of us—that we may be counted among their number.

Verse 13, If the gospel and the blessings thereof have been believed and received by honest men and women envious hearts will best irred up against them, even if they themselves reject the truth, and thereby not be able to enter into the kingdom, they strive to keep others out. This is the spirit of the ungodly and they will surely perish.

Verse 16, We may have been instructed in all the wisdom of the world and may be very sincere concerning religious matters, yet we may be far away from the one true God, and way of truly serving the one God, the only God, the God of all.

Verse 26, As the whole human race has one Father and is ruled by him, so all men are brothers, children of one family, and it is our duty to treat each other as such. Each one has received of his heavenly Father such privileges, which no man and no community can take away from him without doing a great injustice toward a brother and being guilty of an open rebellion against God.

Verse 31, God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness and will render to every man according to his deeds. To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life. But unto them that are contentious and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath. For there is no respect of persons with God. Rom. ii. 6, 11. I trust dear sisters it will be our happy lot to be among those who do not grow weary in well doing. Let us wait with patience until Jesus comes.

SISTER KLINGENSTEIN.

18TH CHAPTER OF ACTS.

From Athens where Paul gained but few converts, he came to Corinth which was the capital of the Roman province of Achaia and the real center of the busy life of Greece. The encyclopedia says it was not the ancient Greek city with Greek inhabitants, but as a new city which had grown up in Roman times with a vast population of mingled races. Never before had Paul had so vast or so promising a field for his preaching. The wealthy classes were so very wicked and the poor so wretched, Paul hoped to improve the morals of the one and create a feeling of hope in the other.

Paul had friends at Corinth in the persons of Aquila and his wife Priscilla, and in the 3rd verse it says he was of the same craft so he abode with them and wrought. Paul's occupation was that of a tentmaker—it seems that in those times all Jewish boys learned a trade, and that of tent making was the natural employment for one of Cicilian origin since the hair of the Sicilian goat was used to make a canvas which was specially adapted for the tents used by travelers on the great routes of commerce and the soldiers. Among the poor Paul lived a poor man's life—it was his special glorying that he would not be burdensome to any of them, preferring to work at his trade to earn sufficient for his keep—but it was very hard for him to gather enough together for even his scanty needs—a good and sufficient example that it is only through much tribulation we can enter into the kingdom of God.

He reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath and persuaded the Jews and Greeks—but met only opposition and blasphemy, unt' shaking his raiment to signify the utter emptying out from God's house unless they believed what he said—your blood be upon your heads, I am clean, from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles. Paul had obeyed the injunction to warn the wicked to turn from his wicked way that their blood might not be on his head—but his failure to influence them at that time had not changed his purpose to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified, and it was characteristic of Paul that the stronger the consciousness of his personal failure the greater the impulse of his zeal. It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you (the Jews), but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life—lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

How wonderfully accurate are the works of the Lord—through all the ages they fit in as beautifully and neatly as though it was but a day or an hour—every piece complete in its own place and part, and the season for its use timed so nicely that it is impossible for it to interfere in any way. The Gentiles were to participate in the glories to be revealed, and how perfectly natural it came about. So Paul left the synagogue and came to the house of Justus, a man who worshiped God. And Crispus the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house and many of the Corinthians hearing believed and were baptized. But the deep feeling Paul would have inspired seems to have been lacking, and lest his might be the glory he tells the Corinthians that Christ sent him not to baptize but to preach the gospel, not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect—for the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. He says the Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified—unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness—but unto them that are called both Jews and Greeks Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord. God was taking care of Paul though, and when he seemed tried beyond endurance he spoke to him saying, Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace, for I am with thee and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee, for I have much people in this city. God must have been pleased with Paul, even though his work seemed of none effect. And it says, Paul stayed at Corinth one year and six months teaching the Word among them.

NELLIE PATE.

It Grieved Him at His Heart.

In reading the sixth chapter of Gen. one can scarcely fail to be impressed by these words, which have been chosen as a title to this short paper. They form a good starting point from which to consider something of what we know about our Creator, the great God whom we address as "Our Father." Most of us at times, in our most solemn moments moments, have allowed our thoughts to travel stage by stage to the great source of all things. But how soon we found how limited we were, and lost ourselves. It is beyond our finite minds to realize the fact that He is from everlasting, to everlasting, invincible and yet everywhere present, the Creator and sustainer of all things. It almost fills us with fear, and were it not for His infinite goodness, as revealed to us in His word and in His Son, we might have exclaimed despairingly, like the Psalmist, "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me, it is high, I cannot attain unto it" (Ps. xxxix: 6.) But such thoughts are good for us, for although God has veiled Himself from us in some respects, He has revealed to us very plainly what His character is. And when we lift our thoughts upwards to Him, striving to draw closer, we feel lost in wonder how such a supreme being can deign to bestow upon us a moment's thought: And when we think how He cares and provides for us, surely our hearts must flow out in gratitude and thankfulness for His great love to the children of men.

It was not the Almighty's purpose that we should have His image or form in our mind. He revealed to Moses His character or the image of His mind. Ex. xxxiv: 5, 6, 7. Doubtless this was a great lesson; we were not to be mere idol worshippers. It was not external form or comeliness God was going to look upon in man, but the character with which he clothed himself.

One of the first phases of God's character which is shown to us, in the Bible in relation to man, is His justice. He placed the man and his wife companion in the midst of comfort and happiness, with only one little thing forbidden. If the divine command was disobeyed, punishment was to follow. The command was disobeyed, and punishment followed. God was just, and we could almost say here, too, that it "grieved him at his heart" to see how soon they forgot Him. And even in the punishment He pronounced we get a first sight of His tender mercy. Although the woman was first in the transgression, through her very punishment, she was to be the means of bringing back mankind to God. "Her seed (the Christ) was to bruise the head of the Serpent." A long time elapsed before the partial fulfillment of that promise, and although the seed has come, the serpent power has not yet been destroyed; though the time seems now not far distant when Christ shall return from the heavens to sit upon the throne of David for ever. Then shall the serpent's seed be destroyed, and mankind restored to the favour of God.

After the fall of Adam and Eve, when men had increased on the earth, they gradually forgot their Maker, and gave themselves up to wickedness, living only for the sensuous pleasures of existence. One man only and his family were deemed worthy of preservation, and still, though so angry with mankind, that God resolved to destroy them off the face of the earth, it is said in the chapter already alluded to, that "it grieved him at his heart." How touchingly this must appeal to us, and how joyfully it should bring us to the fact that our God is a God of love. Yes! a God of love; and, as John says, "Herein is love; not that we loved God, but that he loved us." "We love him because he first loved us." And again he says, "He that loveth not knoweth not God, for God is love." 1. John iv: 10, 19, 8. We are apt to forget this at times, and to fancy that to please God we must understand the doctrine or the teaching of the Bible with great exactitude. This is right in its place, but it is only one thing. It is important to understand His Word, but all that understanding will be of no avail to us if we do not what that Word says. "Faith without works is dead" says James. We must put our faith into action if we hope for God to love us. If we love each other in that high sense, we shall work for the good of one another, we shall try to keep self in the background, and by doing so, we shall become ourselves lovely, for John says, "If we love one another God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us."

We do not wish to undervalue a perfect understanding of the true faith, for "without faith it is impossible to please God." If, for instance, we were to accept as many do, that hell is a place of torment, and that helpless infants, and all the wicked who have ever lived, great and small, are being tormented in flames of fire for ever and ever, how could we then believe that God is love? God is a just God; he punishes those that do wickedly, but His punishment is always tempered with mercy. The bulk of mankind who have not known or heeded His Word shall be as though they had not been. "They are extinct; they are quenched as tow." Is. xliii: 17. The wicked shall be punished according as they deserve, and at last perish for ever. Take one more example of the need of true faith. John says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" John iii: 16. This was the crowning act of God's love to mankind, as illustrated in the parable of the vineyard by Jesus himself. Now, if Jesus was the second person of the Trinity, as the Churches round us teach, where was the great love of God in giving his Son? Jesus as an equal part of God would give himself, and he would know it was only a form he was to pass through, for he could not really die, being immortal.

Let us look for a moment at the feelings of a natural father. We all know the story of Abraham, he was an old man stricken in years. God had promised him a son, but as yet no son was born to him. At last, long after the natural time, a son was born, the child of his old age. He grew up at his side into a fine boy, obedient and docile, and returned his father's love with all the fervour of his youth. Suddenly God commands Abraham to take his son, his only son, and offer him up as a sacrifice to Him. Abraham obeyed, and we all know how God stopped him in the act of slaying Isaac, and provided a ram in his stead. You can picture in your own mind the father's anguish and dismay, and his great joy when he received his son to himself again.

Now, in this simple way, let us look at Jesus, who, like Isaac, was promised long before. After a time He was born. He grew up obeying His Father in all things. His character was spotless. He was a perfect man, the only perfect man who has ever lived. How God must have loved Him. He called Him His "only begotten son, in whom he was well pleased." But although God loved Him so well, He also loved all His creatures, and He had promised that through the woman's seed redemption would come to them. How could this come about? In a figure, God had established a means by which men could approach to Him. This was intimated in Eden, after the fall, when Adam and Eve were covered with the skins of animals. They had brought upon themselves the sentence of death, so to show them what that meant, God slew an animal, and placed its skin upon them. Their nakedness, which sin had made visible to them, was then covered by the shedding of blood. But as this was only a figurative act, it could never really take away and was not sufficient to restore them to their Edenic condition. Hence, under the law, such sacrifices had to be repeated over and over again. But as the Apostle to the Hebrews says, "the blood of bulls and goats could never take away sin." Something more than that was necessary. That something God had foretold at the fall. The hope of the serpent power being crushed was all centered in the seed of the woman. And just as under the Mosaic law the sacrifices had to be perfect, without a blemish, so the seed of the woman, in order to be a perfect sacrifice, had to be without spot. Christ came as this perfect sacrifice, and because He was suitable in all points "it pleased the Father to bruise him, so that he might justify many and bear their iniquities." There was no ram caught in the thicket for Him. He was cruelly put to death by His enemies, but the grave could not hold Him, He rose victorious from the tomb, and became the first-fruits of them that sleep, the beginning of a new creation. Now if Christ was God, how could He have been a perfect offering, and God be a just God? The only one who could be a perfect offering was one of Adam's sons, who could do what Adam had not done, who could be obedient in all things. Therein was justice. God being the Father of Jesus made no difference from the point of view of the sacrifice, for God was also Adam's Father in a more particular sense than He was Father to Adam's posterity. We can therefore appreciate in a much deeper way the Father's love towards us, if we cast aside the unscriptural doctrine of the Trinity.

We see the Father's love to men, too, in the beautiful simplicity of His commands. There is nothing too difficult to keep the simplest hearted away from Him. The message His Son brought was to the weary and heavy laden; those that are weary and sad of heart can best appreciate the promise He sends them of rest. Not a promise they cannot understand, but a promise of cares removed, sorrows vanished, tears wiped away, a beautiful earth, with love and joy shining forth in every dewdrop, and this for endless ages in the company of the glorious Saviour who Himself passed through many sorrows and was acquainted with grief. Surely our hearts must flow out in gratitude to the great God who has given us all these things and we can exclaim with John, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it does not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure" 1. John iii: 1-3.

Let us purify ourselves, remembering this great love, and not forget that when the people forgot Him they did wickedly and "It grieved him at his heart."—C. E. Turner.

Continue in Prayer.

It is easy to pray in the hour of anguish and distress. The wicked and the ungodly cry out in their time of sore need; but when the storm is past they cease to pray; when the calm comes they have no further occasion for supplication. But the child of God, who knows really the power and virtue of prayer, loves to "continue in prayer." He fills his mouth with arguments; he prays as taught by the Holy Ghost. He pours out his soul unto God. Day after day and year after year his supplications rise. He prays without ceasing; like the Son of God, who continued all night in prayer, the watches of the night bear witness to his supplications, and the dawning of the morning finds him at the throne of grace.

Continue in prayer. Let the breath of prayer go up amid the turmoil of business, the oppression of care, the temptations that beset, and the trials that surround. Let prayer be made continually, and rise by day and night, and God will hear our prayers and help in time of need. Our prayers like vessels sent afar will bring back rich cargoes from distant lands; and when at last our prayers shall find their fullest answer in the kingdom of God we shall cease to pray and lift up our voices in notes of ceaseless praise. —H. L. H.

The officers who were sent to take Jesus came back with the report that never man spoke as he spoke. But the reason for this was that never man lived as he lived. Had his life been other than it was, he could not have spoken as he did. His words bore with them a convincing power, because they came from a heart pure and holy, full of love and sympathy, benevolence and truth.

There are some consecrated helpers needed in the home and office to help others prepare to go forth to the work. There is no room for idlers. The consecration to be faithful in the work at home is just as great as that of going to the mission fields.

We may not always be able to be able to be happy here, but we are able so to conduct ourselves that eternal happiness will be our lot hereafter.

Once more it becomes the painful duty of the writer to record the sad death of one of the most promising young men who ever lived in Cuming City township or in Washington Co., —Hugh R. Lippincott, son of Ephraim Lippincott by his first wife (now deceased) and who was the daughter of Amasea Warrick, a former resident, who will be remembered by all the old settlers. Last Sunday, a week ago, Hugh was in the prime of health, and rode his wheel up north to the ditcher. On returning, he was taken suddenly ill and when medical aid was summoned the doctor pronounced it to be the dread pneumonia which has taken so many of our loved ones and taken them so suddenly from our midst during the past winter. The whole neighborhood mourns, and mourns sincerely, for everybody wants to be numbered with the parents among the sincere mourners. Hugh was born May 30, 1884, and died April 9, 1905, at 8 o'clock. He was a well educated, refined young man, always first in school, Sunday school and social doings in the neighborhood and in losing him the parents have indeed met with a loss. The stricken father and stepmother, who loved him as an only son and for whom the boy had an equal affection, and the relatives and friends all have our sympathy in this dark hour. The funeral services will be held from the residence, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Almus Adams officiating, and interment in the Blair cemetery, where sleeps his mother and other relatives.—Blair, Neb., Pilot.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 3 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

There is no better way to spread the truth than sending a periodical to a person whom you wish to interest. It talks when and where you cannot, and coming each week is better than a book. A sermon is heard and perhaps forgotten. A paper is repeatedly before one. Do not neglect the minister, of course, but give this branch of work consideration. Do you know a friend whom you would like to meet in God's kingdom? What amount of money would you willingly give to accomplish this end? Make a list of persons and send in at once, and so sow the seed—God will give the increase.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 17, 1905. NUMBER 19.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end, the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-rulers with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Be Kind.

Be kind to thy father, for when thou wast young,
Who loved thee so fondly as he?
He caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue,
And joined in thine innocent glee.
Be kind to thy father, for now he is old,
His locks intermingled with gray,
His footsteps are feeble, once fearless and bold;
Thy father is passing away.

Be kind to thy mother, for, lo! on her brow
May traces of sorrow be seen,
Oh, well may'st you cherish and comfort her now,
For loving and kind hath she been.
Remember thy mother, for thee will she pray
As long as God giveth her breath;
With accents of kindness then cheer her lone way,
E'en to the dark valley of death.

Be kind to thy brother, his heart will bath dearth,
If the smile of thy love be withdrawn;
The flowers of feeling will fade at their birth;
If the dew of affection is gone.
Be kind to thy brother, wherever you are,
The love of a brother shall be
An ornament purer and richer by far,
Than pearls from the depths of the sea.

Be kind to thy sister, not many may know
The depth of true sisterly love;
The wealth of the ocean lies fathoms below
The surface that sparkles above.
Thy kindness shall bring to thee many sweet hours,
And blessings thy pathway to crown,
Affection shall weave thee a garland of flowers,
More precious than wealth or renown.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 3.

1. In the eighteenth year of Nabouchodonosor, the king made an image of gold, the height thereof six cubits, and he stood it on a plain called Decira in a province of Babuloon.

2. And he sent to gather together the subordinates and the military-leaders, and the local-rulers, leaders and petty-rulers, and those over official-powers and all the rulers of the countries, to come to the renewing-services (renewing of fealty to Baal) of the image.

3. And the local rulers, subordinates, military-leaders, great petty-rulers, those over official-powers, and all the rulers of the countries were gathered together unto the renewing-service ceremony of the image which Nabouchodonosor the king had stood; and they stood before the image.

4. And the herald called out with might; unto you as laities is it said, ye tribes, ye tongues.

5. At the hour when ye shall hear the sound of the trumpet and the fife and the cithara, and Sambuke and psaltry, and every kind of musical instruments, fall down and worship the golden image which Nabouchodonosor the king hath stood.

6. And whoever shall not fall down and worship in the self-same hour will have been cast into the flaming furnace of fire.

7. And it came to pass when the laities heard the sound of the trumpet and fife and cithara and sambuke and psaltry and every kind of musical instrument, they all fell down, the laities, tribes, tongues and worshiped the golden image which Nabouchodonosor the king had stood.

8. Then the men of Chaldaia went and accused the Joudaians.

9. To the king; O king, live for the animate ages.

10. Thou, O king, didst issue a decree that any man who should hear the sound of the trumpet and fife and cithera, sambuke and psaltry and every kind of musical instrument.

11. And should not fall down and worship the golden image, should be cast into the flaming furnace of fire.

12. There are prominent men Joudaians, whom thou didst establish over the works of the province of Babuloon, namely Sedrach, Misach, Abdenagoo, who have not obeyed thy decree, O king; thy gods they do not serve (for hire) and the golden image which thou didst stand they do not worship.

13. Then Nabouchodonosor with anger and wrath said they should lead Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo; and they were led into the presence of the king.

14. And Nabouchodonosor made answer and said unto them. Is it true, O Sedrach, Misach, Abdenagoo that ye do not serve (for hire) my gods and worship the golden image which I have stood?

15. Now then if ye are ready when ye hear the sound of the trumpet and fife, and cithera and sambuke and psaltry and harmony also of every kind of musical instrument, fall down and worship the golden image which I have made: but if ye do not worship it, the self-same hour ye will be cast into the flaming furnace of the fire and what god is there who will deliver you out of my hand?

16. And Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo answered the king Nabouchodonosor, saying, We have no need (use) to answer thee concerning this matter.

17. For our God is in heaven whom we serve (for hire) and he is able to deliver us out of the flaming furnace of the fire, and out of thy hands, O king, will he snatch us.

18. And if not, be it known unto thee O king, that we are not serving (for hire) thy gods nor worshiping the image which thou hast stood.

19. Then Nabouchodonosor was filled with anger and the look of his face was changed towards Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo, and he said they should make the furnace flame out in a sevenfold way until it had reached the limit of flaming out.

20. And that strong men with strength should bind Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo and cast them into the flaming furnace of the fire.

21. Then those men were bound with their Persian trousers and turbans and stockings on, and were cast into the midst of the flaming furnace of the fire.

22. Since the word of the king was very urgent; and the furnace flamed out exceedingly.

23. And these three Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo fell into the midst of the flaming furnace bound, and they walked about in the midst of the flame, hymning praise unto God; and eulogising the Lord.

COMMENT.

Eighteen years have elapsed the reader will observe since the events recounted in the preceding chapter, and the still more important events recounted in this third chapter, events namely in the career of Nabouchodonosor and Daniel and his three friends, those herein recounted pertaining more directly to Daniel's three friends for whom though of course he would be held responsible for fealty and good conduct as his subordinates and opportunities by request over the departmental affairs of the province of Babunoonia. So the result of their trial herein recounted was another crisis in the career of Daniel himself.

The votive-prayer of Azarias and hymn of the three omitted in the C. V., R. V. and all the versions come in immediately after the 23rd verse with which this translation rests as in the text, the narrative again resumed with the closing verses of this 3rd chapter. This is another instance of mutilation and expurgation so common in all the translations of the books of the Old Covenant.

Revelations xiii. The Image.

In verse 14 the two horned symbol is represented as "saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live." In all my searching after the truth of the prophetic symbols, I have never found an exposition of "the image of the beast," that seemed to be the counterpart of the prophetic symbol. The difficulty I think arises from not paying attention to the chronology of the events as indicated in the prophetic writings, according to which, we should not look for the acts of the two horned beast, until after the former beast goes into "captivity." (v. 10). That he is a latter day manifestation is evident, because he appeals to the dwellers on the earth to make the image, showing thereby his democracy, and that he is a component part of that which is represented by the clay of the metalic image of Dan. ii. 33. Another evidence that is unmistakable of the chronology of this power is found in chapter xix. 20. "And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshiped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone;" positive evidence that he is a present, living power when the Lord conquers the nations in the future "day of the Lord." An image is a likeness, history repeating itself. Now what was the first beast to which the image is made? Certainly not the Papacy, as claimed by Sabbatarians, because the wounding of the imperial head of the Roman leopard beast occurred before the rise of the "little horn" of Daniel vii. And before the giving to "him" the blasphemous mouth of Rev. xiii. 5. In both Scriptures the rise of the papacy is represented. Inasmuch as Rome has passed through seven different forms of government symbolized by the seven heads—and that the Papal head is an eighth, and of the seven, chapter vii. 10. Therefore it is evident that to make an image of Rome in any one phase of her existence, would not be a likeness of her in any other of her phases. In this respect Rome is, as noted by Daniel vii. 19. "Diverse from all others," (symbols). It should now appear to be evident that the image to be made is not to be a likeness in all the different phases through which Rome has passed. In chapter xiii. 3, we read. "And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed." Now by verse 13 we learn that that image is to be made "to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live." Now under what head or at what time did Rome receive a deadly wound by a sword? The wounding of one of the heads of the leopard beast, symbolizes the war waged against Rome by the northern Goths and Vandals, by which Rome was so reduced that its Emperor Augustulus was compelled to implore the clemency of Odoacer who became the king of Italy A. D. 476. Thus Rome the proud mistress of the world received a deadly wound by the sword of the northern invaders. Another pointer is obtained by noticing what the image enforces; that is in prescribing the faith of its citizens. This we find in verses 15, 16, 17. He causes all to...to receive a mark in their right hand or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." This constitutes the image and those refusing to worship are condemned to be killed. Verse 15.

Now according to the chronology of the events, as indicated in the prophecy, we should look for the counterpart, or that to which the image is made, in the space of time that intervenes between the time of Constantine in the forepart of the fourth century; and the rise of the Papacy as a civil power in the last part of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century. The orthodox edicts of the emperor Theodosius A. D. 380 meets all the requirements of the prophecy, and is the original to which the image is to be made. In Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman empire, chapter xxvii. 81, the reader will find the edicts referred to, commencing on page 80 we read, "Before he again took the field against the Goths, he received the sacrament of baptism from Acholius, the orthodox bishop of Thessalonica; and as the emperor ascended from the holy font, still glowing with the warm feelings of regeneration, he dictated a solemn edict, which proclaimed his own faith, and prescribed the religion of his subjects. "It is our pleasure (such is the imperial style) that all the nations, which are governed by our clemency and moderation, should steadfastly adhere to the religion which was taught by St. Peter to the Romans; which faithful tradition has preserved; and which is now professed by the pontiff Damasus, and by Peter, bishop of Alexandria, a man of apostolic holiness. According to the discipline of the apostles, and the doctrine of the gospel, let us believe the sole deity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; under an equal Majesty, and a pious trinity. We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and as we judge, that all others are extravagant madmen, we brand them with the infamous name of heretics; and declare that their conventicles shall no longer usurp the respectable appellation of churches. Besides the condemnation of divine justice, they must expect to suffer the severe penalties, which our authority, guided by the heavenly wisdom, shall think proper to inflict upon them." This edict was published during the war which wounded the head of the "beast," of which Theodosius was one of the emperors, as we learn by the language, "Before he again took the field against the Goths." This should prove to us that the sixth or imperial head is the one that received the deadly wound by a sword. Next we notice that "he (Theodosius) dictated a solemn edict, which proclaimed his own faith, and prescribed the religion of his subjects."

In verse 15 it is written, "that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed." This prophecy teaches that the image shall cause people who refuse to worship it, shall be killed. Now in doing so it is doing just what the imperial head of the Roman empire did under Theodosius and his "colleague Maximus the first among the Christian princes, who shed the blood of his Christian subjects on account of their religious opinions." Gibbon Vol. 3, p. 3. Then follows the account of seven persons who were "tortured, condemned and executed. The first of these was Priscillian himself, bishop of Avila, in Spain; who adorned the advantages of birth and fortune, by the accomplishments of eloquence and learning." Now it be remembered that this all took place about A. D. 380, at least 200 years before the rise of the Papacy as a civil power—symbolized by the little horn of Dan. vii. and also by the blasphemous mouth of Rev. xiii., which was given to the "beast."

GEO. FRANCIS.

The Hope of God's Children.

But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear. 1 Peter iii. 15. There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. Eph. iv. 4. For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. Rom. viii. 24-25. The eyes of your understanding being enlightened that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints. Eph. i. 18. (Back of all this is one faith). One Lord, one faith, one baptism. Eph. iv. 5, 28. If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a minister. 22, In the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblamable and unreprovable in his sight. Col. i. 22-23. I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel. Which is not another, but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed. Gal. i. 6-9. For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are within this book. Rev. xxii. 18. That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us, which hope we have as anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil. Heb. vi. 18-19. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, where unto thou art called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. 1 Tim. vi. 12. And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end; that ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises. For when God made the promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself. Heb. vi. 11-13. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. 2 Peter i. 4. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. 2 Cor. vii. 1. For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you; because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain; and they said unto him, we neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came showed or spoke any harm of thee. But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest; for as concerning this sect we know that every where it is spoken against. And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to see him into his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening. Acts xxviii. 20-23. In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began. Titus i. 2. That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life. Titus iii. 7. And when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question. Acts xxiii. 6. And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. Acts xxiv. 15. And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers. Unto which promise our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night hope to come. For which hopes sake king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Acts xxvi. 6-7. But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. 1 Thes. iv. 13. That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. Eph. ii. 12. Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart. Eph. iv. 18. Who are Israelites to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law and the service of God and the promises. Rom. ix. 4. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. 1 Cor. xv. 19. Teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Lord Jesus Christ, Titus ii. 12-13. If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Col. iii. 1-4. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. 1 John iii. 2-3. May God bless the entire household of faith and especially the dear isolated ones. Your Sister anxiously looking for our blessed Savior.

MRS. C. W. ENDSLEY.

To those of like precious faith:

Please let me call your attention to a matter, which is of vast importance to us all and to the cause of truth. The time is very near when several general meetings or Conferences are to convene. Brethren, we all have or ought to have an individual interest in this matter, each one should feel as if the success of these gatherings depended upon their own individual presence, and effort to make it a profitable gathering, remembering if the truth lives and thrives in these perilous days, it must be through the earnest and diligent effort of its friends, for the whole professed Christian world is teaching another hope, which is not a Bible hope. Then dear friends in Michigan, do not begin to try to find excuses to stay away from this coming annual gathering. We have an example of those who excused themselves from a feast where much preparation had been made for them, a yoke of oxen, a tract of land, a newly wedded wife stood in the way of accepting the invitation to "come." What the result of their absence at the appointed time, "not one of these shall taste of my supper." The good Master is preparing the table now for his family to sit down to, can we afford to be shut out of that wedding feast? These yearly gatherings are among the preparatory places, where we are making our robes of righteousness, helping others to select their garments of praise, pointing out to others the path of holiness, in short doing faithfully our duty as helpers "together with God." How many times in fifty years have I been asked the question, Are you going to the Conference? Of course I am going, I cannot afford to miss that feast, "where there is a will there is a way," make the way dear friends, come with hearts so full of praise and rejoicing that others will be blessed by your presence, and when meeting is over you will go to your homes rejoicing for the spiritual blessings we all have received. Satan will try every way to keep you at home, make a superhuman effort to be present with a glorious success as your motto for this year. We expect Brother Zilmer to bring some fire with him, but it will all go out unless he finds the ready wood to lay on the coals, if we have plenty of kindling we need not fear, but the blaze will make its appearance, come on with the wood friends. Yours in the work.

Editor Restitution:

I must tell you of a visit we had with Bro. Austin of Niagara Falls. He came on Monday evening and began a series of discourses and carried them through until Friday evening. The audiences were not overly large, but very attentive. We have been endeavoring to interest some people in our study of gospel truth and these lectures are a step in that direction, and as one result we have met some believers whom we never met before. I also have reason to believe that there are others in the city of Buffalo whom we have not met yet, and I believe that an acquaintance would be mutually profitable. Bro. Austin is a rapid speaker, a clear reasoner, and cannot fail to interest any audience who wants the pure "Word of God."

Yours for truth.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 17, 1905.

THE strike among the teamsters of Chicago is causing trouble. Some have been killed. There is talk of calling the troops to keep order.

THE King of Roumania has given notice to Turkey that war will be declared May 23 unless his terms are are agreed to. Another chance for the Balkans to flame out is offered.

THE scare about Japan declaring war against France for giving aid to the Russian fleets has about subsided. All are reported to have left French waters, and ready to give battle, should they fall in with Japanese ships. Skirmishing on the land, along a line of 100 miles of front, but no general engagement so far.

AFTER last Sunday evening meeting at this place, Bro. Zilmer gave the usual invitation, and Glen Petcher, the oldest son of Brother and Sister Petcher offered himself for baptism. Glen is 16 years old, and in his youth has decided to "remember his Creator." He has had the benefit of home training, a member of our Sunday school, and has a studious and earnest disposition. Our prayer is that he will be ever faithful, and be welcomed by the Savior into his coming kingdom.

Teacher. If I mistake not at the close of our last gathering Carrie suggested a topic to be investigated at our next meeting. Will you please state it Carrie?

Carrie. Yes. I find that so many people stumble over Jesus' words to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." I would like to have a critical study of the above text.

Teacher. Very well. Who are to become the subjects of this new birth?

A The language of our Savior puts it like this: "Except a man be born again," etc.

Q What are we to understand by the word "man," in this text?

A It is from the Greek word anthropos, which signifies a human being, without regard to sex.

Q What is "man" in his natural or or unchanged condition?

A Nothing higher than flesh and blood.

Q Can the flesh and blood nature inherit God's eternal kingdom?

A No, Paul says: "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." 1 Cor. xv. 50.

Q Why cannot the "flesh and blood nature" inherit the kingdom dom of God?

A Because the "flesh and blood" nature is a corruptible nature, which cannot endure, while the kingdom of God can never pass away, or cease to exist.

Q How, then, can the new or everlasting nature be secured?

A Only in one way.

Q What is that one way?

A By re-birth.

Q What does the re-birth consist of?

A Jesus says: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Q What is the modus operandi of this new birth?

A To my mind, John iii. 8, as given in the Twentieth Century Translation, states the case more clearly. I will quote it: "Believe me, Jesus answered, unless a man owes his birth to water and Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. All that owes its birth to human nature alone is only human, and all that owes its birth to the Spirit is spiritual. Do not be surprised at my telling you that you all need to be born over again. The wind blows where it wills, and you can hear the sound of it, but you do not know where it comes from, or where it goes; and it is the same with every one that owes his birth to the Spirit."

See also 1 Cor. xv. 50: "This, brothers, I declare—that mere flesh and blood can have no share in the kingdom of God, nor the perishable share in the imperishable."

Q Then we learn from the above Scripture, that two natures are contrasted, each nature owing its origin [illegible], not [illegible]?

A It is. I will place the two side by side.

1 "All that owe its birth to human nature alone is only human."

2 "All that owes its birth to the Spirit is spirit."

The human nature ceases the moment a person experiences his re-birth by the Spirit.

Q What is the first step taken to produce a human birth?

A A human begettal.

Q Is that also true with regard to those who are born of the Spirit?

A It is. The Spirit begettal must precede the Spirit birth. Says Jesus: "Unless a man owes his birth to water and Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Q How are we to understand by the use of the phrase "water and Spirit," that two births are indicated, one of "water," and the other of "Spirit"?

A No. It is only one birth; but we owe that one birth to the two agencies of water and Spirit.

Q How are people begotten that desire the Spirit birth?

A See James i. 18: "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth."

Q What is the "Word of truth?"

A See 1 Cor. xv. 15, "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel."

Q Then, before the begettal for the Spirit birth can take place, a person must understand and believe the "Word of truth," or in other words "the gospel," should he not?

A Yes.

Q Well, suppose a person simply believes the gospel, and goes no further, will the Spirit birth result from that begettal.

A No.

Q Why not?

A Because there is no life in the begettal.

Q What is lacking to make the begettal vital?

A The "water;" "unless a man owes his birth to water and Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Q When does a person come in contact with the water?

A In the obedience of the Word of truth. See 1 Peter i. 22: "By your obedience to the truth, you have purified your lives, so that there is now growing up among you a genuine brotherly affection. Therefore love one another earnestly with all your hearts. Your new life came from an imperishable not a perishable source, at the Word of the everliving God."

This begettal has vital energy in it, which is indicated by the fact that, "there is now growing up among you a genuine brotherly affection. "And also your new life came from an imperishable not a perishable source."

Q From what source is the mere human life derived?

A From a perishable human source.

Q Again, did not Jesus affirm, that "Unless a man owes his birth to water and Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

A He did.

Q Now, I wish to ask, do you find that the same thought is borne out by other Scriptures?

A Yes, I do, I will call attention to Titus iii. 5, "He saved us not in consequence of any righteous actions we have done, but in the execution of his merciful purposes (how?) by that washing which was a new birth to us." In the Diaglott it is rendered, "The bath of the new birth."

There can be no literal "new birth," apart from the "washing" or "bath of the new birth."

Q When does the new life begin to develop?

A When we rise from the "bath of the new birth."

Q Please give Scripture authority for your statement?

A See Col. ii. 11-13: "By your union with him you received circumcision, but not a circumcision performed by hands. It was getting rid of the tyranny of the earthly (human) body; it was circumcision by the Christ. For in baptism you were buried with Christ; and in baptism you were also raised to life with him, (the new zoe life) through (or by means of) your faith in the working of the power of God, who raised him from the dead. And to you, who were once dead (to the Spirit life) by reason of your sins and your uncircumcised nature—to you God gave LIFE (the new or zoe life) in giving life to Christ! He pardoned all our sins!" (I must explain that these quotations are from the Twentieth Century Translation.)

Q Are we to understand from this Scripture that the Spirit begettal never manifests itself prior to submitting to the "circumcision of Christ?"

A Most [illegible], for [illegible] owes his birth to water and Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Q Did Paul regard all who refuse to submit to the "circumcision of Christ," as being heathen?

A He did. See Eph. ii. 11, 12, "Remember how you were once heathens yourselves, as your bodies showed. You were called the uncircumcised by those who were called the circumcised—their circumcision being a circumcision performed upon the body by the hand of man. At that time you were FAR from Christ; (how so? because) you were cut off from the privileges of Israel; and, as regards the covenants founded on God's promise, you were in the world without hope and without God."

Q How are people begotten for the Spirit birth?

A See 1 Cor. xv. 15, "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel."

Q What power is in the gospel?

A "It is the power by which God brings salvation to every one who believes it." Rom. i. 16.

Q Are "the covenants founded on God's promise," the base of the gospel?

A It must be so seeing that "outsiders" from the covenants are "in the world without hope and without God."

Q Then this gospel is the gospel by which all must be begotten, who aspire to the Spirit birth?

A Exactly so.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Baptism with the Holy Spirit.

When "the word of God came to John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness . . . he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Luke iii: 2, 3. "And as the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not; John answered, saying unto them, I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Luke iii: 15, 16. The same circumstance is related by each of the other Evangelists. See Matth. iii: 11; Mark i: 8; John i: 33. While our Authorized Version reads, "I baptize you with water; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire," a more literal rendering is, "I am immersing you in water: he will immerse you in Holy Spirit and fire." This is according to the translation of the Diaglott, Rotherham, Campbell, Mac Knight & Doddridge, and the marginal reading of the Revised Version. That John's immersion "in water" was for a purpose, is clear from the terms "unto repentance," and "for the remission of sins." It filled a place in the purpose of God, John being "sent from (or commissioned by) God." John i: 6. Only one of the Evangelists—Luke—attributes to Jesus the term "baptize with the Holy Ghost." Acts i: 5. In this instance it was not directed to any but "the apostles whom he had chosen." v. 2. From this it is evident that this baptism with the Holy Spirit had not yet been administered to those for whom it was intended; no one had as yet been immersed in Holy Spirit, and it was therefore a matter of future fulfilment, especially in view of the words of Jesus, "Wait for the promise of the Father, which ye have heard of me." Acts 1: 4. We will therefore endeavor to ascertain, 1. For whom this baptism was intended. 2. At what time and place it occurred, and 3. Its design.

1. WHO?

That the apostles were the persons who were baptized with Holy Spirit, is evident from the following considerations. a. They were commanded to tarry at Jerusalem. Luke xxiv: 49; Acts i: 4. b. They were all with one accord in one place on the day of Pentecost. Acts i: 20; ii: 1. c. The cloven tongues appeared to each of them. ii: 3. d. They were filled with the Holy Ghost. ii: 4. e. The speakers were recognized as "Galileans." ii: 7. They were previously styled "ye men of Galilee." i: 11. It is said that the Lord "was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem." Acts xiii: 31. He was seen forty days of the apostles whom he had chosen. Acts i: 2, 3. Therefore this baptism of Holy Spirit was experienced by the apostles, and was for a definite purpose. The names of these apostles are given Acts i: 13. Judas Iscariot does not appear in the list, because he had committed suicide after his betrayal of the Master, and Matthias was afterwards selected in his place. Acts i: 15-26. That this selection was done with the approval of God is evident from the fact that Matthias not only was "numbered with the eleven apostles" (Acts i: 26), but is by the inspired historian recognized as one of the apostles. There were "eleven" besides Peter who were speaking on the day of Pentecost. Acts ii: 14. The speakers were all "men," as is evident from ii: 37. We are told in chapter vi: 2 that "the twelve" had charge of the selection of the seven deacons in the Jerusalem Church, and these twelve are styled "the apostles." v. 6.

II. WHEN?

The next question is, When were they baptized with Holy Spirit? The promise was that it should be "not many days hence." From whence do these "not many days" begin? From the "forty days" during which the Lord showed Himself to the apostles whom He had chosen. ch. i: 3. And they were particularly cautioned to not depart from Jerusalem, but (there) wait for the promise of the Father. The first verse of chapter 2 tells us that "when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place." This "day of Pentecost" is the time when the promise of God, for which the apostles were waiting, was fulfilled, and it was "not many days" after the day of the Lord's ascension. "Pentecost is a Greek word, signifying the fiftieth part of a thing; or the fiftieth in order." It occurred fifty days after "the first of the firstfruits" was presented before the Lord (Ex. xxiii: 10), and came on the first day of the week. The first day of Pentecost was "on the morrow after the Sabbath from the day of the wave offering"; and inasmuch as "seven Sabbaths shall be complete: even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath," and they were to "number fifty days" (Lev. xxiii: 10 21); therefore this "feast of weeks" (Deut. xvi: 9, 10) always began and ended on Sunday. When the fiftieth day had fully come, they who had received commandments of the Lord "were all with one accord in one place." At that time there were "dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven." Acts ii: 5. What brought those persons thither? It was the command of the Lord God to the children of Israel that three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose: In the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles." Deut. xvi: 16. The occasion under consideration was the "feast of weeks." At this time the "not many days" mentioned in Acts i: 5, were fulfilled.

III. WHERE?

The foregoing passages also show the place where this baptism of Holy Spirit was administered. It was the place chosen by God, the city of Jerusalem, as appears also from Acts i: 12; ii: 5, 14. It was at Jerusalem that the apostles were to begin to preach repentance and remission of sins. Luke xxiv: 47. But how could "unlearned and ignorant men" such as these "Galileans" were (Acts iv: 13), preach "among all nations," when they were not conversant with the languages or dialects of those nations? And how could they speak intelligently to the representatives of "every nation under heaven," now assembled at Jerusalem? There was no time for those uneducated men to study and acquire the use of foreign languages? But the Lord had made provision for the emergency. They were to "tarry in the city of Jerusalem" until they should be "endued with power from on high." Luke xxiv: 49. "Power" is the faculty of doing or performing anything. The thing they were to do was to preach among all the nations, and they were distinctly promised that they should be endued with the power to carry out this command, only they were to tarry at Jerusalem for such endowment, which was not many days after the Lord's ascension. Suddenly, while they were all in one place, "there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto each of them cloven tongues as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." What was the effect of this remarkable occurence, which was something more than an "electrical phenomenon"? They "began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." From the entire narrative it is evident: 1. That they spoke in foreign languages or tongues, in which they had not previously conversed, being Galileans. 2. They were speaking "the wonderful works of God," it was none present in "the house where they were sitting" but they who had been commanded to "tarry at Jesusalem:" the apostles. "The multitude" were not present, but "came together" after "this was noised abroad;" but so far from understanding the nature and meaning of the speaking with tongues which they heard, they, "were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born? . . What meaneth this?" All of which makes it evident that the apostles, and not the multitude, were baptized with Holy Spirit.

What was the effect of this baptism with Holy Spirit? It gave the apostles power to witness to foreigners in their respective languages the facts relating to our Lord Jesus Christ. These apostles he had chosen (Luke vi: 13. 16), to be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach. Mark iii: 14, 15. The twelve were with him from the beginning (John xv: 27), heard him preach (Luke viii: 1), and saw his miracles or "signs." John xx: 30. They were his witnesses to the people. Acts x: 41; xiii: 31.

The peculiar function of a witness is to testify the things which he has seen and heard, to relate the facts of which he has knowledge. Acts iv: 20. For this testimony concerning the Lord Jesus the apostles were to be qualified by the endowment of the Holy Spirit. "Ye are witnesses of these things." Luke xxiv: 48. What "things"? The things concerning the sufferings and resurrection of Christ. See v. 46. "And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning." John xv: 27 These words were addressed to the apostles, for they had been with the Lord from the beginning. But who was it with whom they should "also bear witness"? It was "the Comforter, whom I (Jesus) will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me." v. 26. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and to the uttermost part of the earth." Acts i: 8.

After the power of the Holy Spirit came upon them, they did witness to the people, as, for instance, the apostles on the day of Pentecost, "This Jesus God hath raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." Acts ii. 32. And later, "And (ye) killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses." Acts iii. 15. "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus." Acts iv. 33. "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his own right hand to be a prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins. And we are witnesses of these things; and so also is the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him." Acts v. 30-32. "And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree; him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly; not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be Judge of quick and dead." Acts x. 39-42.

"And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people." Acts xiii. 31. Hear also the testimony of Peter and John, "The elders which are among you I exhort, who also am an elder, and a witness of the suffering of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed." 1 Peter v. 1. "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen without eyes, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; (for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested to us;) that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." 1 John i. 1-3. From the foregoing array of testimony it appears plain that the apostles, the "witnesses chosen before of God" (Acts x. 41), were true to their mission of being witnesses unto the Lord Jesus, and this was after "the power of the Holy Ghost" had come upon them. Acts i. 8. The passage cited from the epistle of John shows the object of this testimony, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you (why?) that ye also may have fellowship with us; (and in what or with whom did those witnesses have such "fellowship"?) and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." This is also shown in the testimony of John in his gospel, when he speaks of the "signs" which Jesus did in the presence of his disciples, which were written "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." Jno. xx. 30, 31. Jesus himself, in that wonderfully pathetic prayer, showed how others than the apostles should believe on himself. "Neither pray I for these alone (the men God had given him. John xvii. 6-19), but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." John xvii. 20. Others than the apostles were to believe on him, and the means through which they should believe is said to be "their word"—the word of the apostles. No wonder they needed and were furnished with the spiritual equipment with which to go forth and bear the testimony by which men should come to believe on the Lord.

It was necessary that the words of Jesus (which are spirit and life, John vi. 63, and words of everlasting life. v. 68) should be brought to the remembrance of the apostles, so that they might communicate them to others. This emergency was wisely foreseen and provided for by the Lord. Even before his suffering the Lord told the apostles that "the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." John xiv. 26. How could we know anything about the Lord Jesus; what he taught in Galilee after the baptism of John (Mark i. 15), what "signs" he truly did (John xx. 30, 31), what was his life, his character, how he died for us, was buried and rose again, were it not for the apostles who were with him, and were his chosen witnesses unto the people? And how could they correctly report these things to us, if they were not brought to their remembrance by that Comforter whom the Lord promised to send them? And these things are "now reported unto us by them that have preached the gospel unto us with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." 1 Peter i. 12. Frequently the Lord warned the apostles not to tell certain things relating to himself "until the Son of Man be risen from the dead." Matt. xvii. 9; Mark viii. 30; ix. 9. Why not? Because they did not then understand them. "They understood none of these things; and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken." Luke xviii. 34. When did they understand them? When Jesus was glorified. Jno. xii. 16. Why then? Because the Holy Spirit was then given to those that believed on Jesus. John vii. 39.

Poetry.

This Hour.

Lord, make me meet to master common things,
Strong for the strife renewed each opening day;
Teach me that worthy victory may be won
On fields obscure, by souls too spent to pray.

Bid me to know the moments as they rise
Full-fraught with meanings of the life divine;
Teach me the lesson of the present power,
That present calm and conquest may be mine.

Loose me from all that binders in the Past,
Nor let me fear the Future's frowning brow.
To use the utmost gifts of grace and love
There is no moment for my soul but Now.

Selections.

Be of Good Cheer, Paul.

Read Acts xxiii: 11-31. The second vision which Paul had must have produced much the same state of mind in him as that produced in the disciples mid the storm on the lake of Galilee, when Jesus spoke "Peace." Once before a night-vision and heavenly message of comfort had been granted to him. That was at Corinth. The wickedness of the city in which he was then dwelling was a great burden to him. His own safety seemed to him to be of quite secondary consideration. The cry of the multitude had on this second occasion arisen concerning and very much against him (verses 9 and 10). I doubt if anyone in these times can realize how terrible it must have been for him to face such an excited people, knowing the bitter feeling of hatred they had against him. How much better ought we to serve our Master, even than the Apostles, seeing how much more peaceful are our lives and that we can serve Him without fear. To stand alone, a solitary individual, with the flashing eyes of scorn and hate, the deafening shouts of the crowd breathing defiance and condemnation, ringing in the ears! How fearful is the object of such wrath! How overpowering! Thus it was with Paul, our brother. Can we not follow him into the silence and security within the thick castle walls? How much he must have needed comforting! Very weary and worn he must have been, with no sympathising voice to speak to him. No human friend stood near. Alone! Yet how truly not alone! Though no human friend was at hand, yet there was the presence of the Friend who never changeth, whose love can never die.

The busy streets were hushed, the trying day was over, and darkness had settled on the city when "The Lord stood by him." We could well imagine that the Lord stood by him in visible form, for he (Paul) was to "see that just one" ch. xxii: 14. We do not read that the Lord stood by him at Corinth, but only that He spoke to him. In the second vision he was more privileged. I should say that this was because he was lonely and a prisoner in the castle. It would thus be a token of our Lord's consideration for the sense of loneliness which the affectionate heart of Paul would specially feel. Those prison walls could shut out from him his human friends, but they could not shut out his Lord and Master. That well-beloved Master showed Himself to His servant that night, bringing home to his mind that He was indeed his ever-present Friend.

How many hours of His more unknown servants has He illuminated with His dreesence since then! How marvellously tender are the ways of God! Often wonderfully real has His presence been to many a sorrowing one, though not seen by earthly eyes.

"Be of good cheer, Paul, for thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome." Those were words just calculated to give both rest and stimulus to the tried spirit of Paul. Rest: for was not his Lord with him to encourage him to "Be of good cheer?" He needed a friend to cheer and strengthen him, for he had more work to do at Rome, Not yet was Paul to pour out his life's blood in the Master's cause. He had a most important witness to bear in that city, which was then the mightiest power known by men upon earth. The calm that would come over Paul's spirit in the presence of the Lord would give fresh courage and renewed vigour. He surely was in need of it after the noisy strife of tongues clamouring for his death. The thought that his Lord still needed him would give him hope.

Yet even at this time a carefully-planned plot had been laid, from which it seemed almost impossible that Paul could escape. Forty Jews had bound themselves by an oath that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed Paul. These forty men were now waiting for the coming day when they expected that Paul would be brought to the judgment hall. In his progress they designed making an assault upon and killing him. But long before morning a party had started from the castle gates. Quietly, under the light of the brilliant stars, they moved on, with Paul a prisoner in their midst. He was secure under their armed protection, for he was in the midst of a strong military escort. Never was plot more completely frustrated. In that manner he was conducted to Antipatris. Just when all seemed favourable to the designs of Paul's foes, and when they only waited the morning dawn to seize upon their prey, the prisoner rode quietly away. The morning dawn found the prison empty. How disappointed those men would be! What feelings of revenge they would have! But we know not, perhaps some of those men might have been converted by Paul's teaching in after times. Very marvellous are the workings of God. How Paul's nephew heard of the plot we are not told. We learn that he did hear of it, and that he had the courage to go to the castle and tell Paul, and also had the greater courage to go to the captain (at Paul's bidding) to tell him of the forty secret foes determined on the murder of the Apostle. The captain, thereupon, easily defeated their purpose. Under cover of night he sent him forth to Caesarea. Was not that night's ride a proof of God's faithfulness? One can seem to see an application of the promise made long before respecting Israel, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper" (Isaiah liv: 17). Do we not often see weapons turned, as it were, to smite those who formed them for another's hurt? Yet the evil workers have often smitten down God's beloved servants. God has not always seen fit to avert the weapons of torture and death ere they fell.

He desires the perfection of our characters and the perfection of the characters of his people who are around us. If in bringing about this end our service is required, then it is proportionately wrought in us as we yield ourselves willing servants or sacrifices in the cause. It is fully accomplished in us when we have learnt to give up all, to suffer all, to lay down ourselves entirely in our Father's service.

We must take more courage and be determined to face all dangers for the dear name's sake of our Lord, who gave Himself for us. Even in the time of Paul's greatest adversity he is told by his blessed Master to "be of good cheer." The Master knew that Paul loved Him, and so loved to spread the good news of salvation. So that to tell Paul that He (his Master) wanted him to bear further witness of Him was very encouraging to that willing servant. O let our hearts be glad also in the work of the Master; so that at any time when we are discouraged and lonely, we may hear the Master gently telling us to "be of good cheer," showing us the way He would have us walk, comforting us in our loneliness, giving us work to do for others, making us forget ourselves and all our cares in working for Him and His cause, so that the rough edges may be smoothed down in our characters as in Paul's. He had much to go through so that he, like ourselves, might be made fit for the Master's use.—Mary Oake.

"We had a great revival in our congregation," said a minister to a friend. "I rejoice to hear it," said his friend; "how many did you add?" "We did not add any," replied the minister, "we got rid of five."

Dear Bereans:

I feel sure that every one of you enjoy reading the many good letters and articles which fill our Berean column from month to month, but do some of you realize that you have not contributed your share? Your committee are many times discouraged because their letters, requesting material for the column, do not bring answers in return. I know many of us think, (I speak from experience) that we cannot write, some one else can do it so much better and easier than we, that we do not even try. Let us each remember that only the ones who make the effort are the ones who succeed, that with our own effort we can ask Jesus to help us, for has he not told us that without him we can do nothing? So send along your material and do not wait to be asked to contribute, the column is yours, and your letters will be thankfully received at any time. Please send all communications to Anna L. Adams, 603 Peoria Avenue, Dixon, Ill.

THE RESURRECTION.

To the Christian a resurrection from the dead means a great deal. Why? We read in Job xix. 25, "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." We should solve that our lives should stand approved before God, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. xx. 6. "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." Matt. xxv. 13.

Almeda C. N. Wertz.

THE RESURRECTION.

After battling for a season with the cold, stormy elements of winter, we rejoice to find spring time again returning, bringing the warm rains and sunshine which revive dormant nature from its sleeping state to one of living green. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Matt. vi. 30. If we have been faithful laborers in our Master's vineyard during his absence, when he returns we will be clothed upon with the beautiful robe of righteousness and incorruptibility. For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Phil. iii. 20.21. Jesus says, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. John xi. 25. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. 1 Thes. iv. 14. Again we read, Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. 1 John iii. 2 3. Read I. Cor. xv. When we pause to consider the unspeakable richness of the reward in store for God's faithful ones, we feel like singing with the poet:

"Oh that will be glorious,
With crowns and palms victorious;
And Jesus reigning there with us,
When our sad warfare is o'er."

Anna M. Wertz.

Dear Bereans:

"Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psa. li. 10. What a great thing it is to have a clean heart and pure thoughts. We must constantly be on the alert for evil and wicked thoughts when they enter our hearts so we can drive them out. "Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin." Prov. xx. 9. There so many worldly things that when we are idle we let our thoughts dwell on them instead of the things of God. And when we are reading God's Word or hearing it spoken we should concentrate our thoughts upon the subject. "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." Matt. v. 8. And we cannot live Christian lives unless we have these, we may go to church every Sunday and to the world be Christian men and women but, "The Lord seeth not as a man seeth for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Let us strive to have our hearts acceptable unto the Lord when he looks upon them.

Kansas and Oklahoma Field.

For two years while farming in Kansas I have had little to report for the Lord's work as I have done but little. Yes, done but little either for my family in a temporal way or the Lord in a spiritual way. All my rushing and driving at the farm in grubs and in stumps, with young mules to break, resulted only in vanity and vexation of spirit, for floods swept everything away both years, and it seemed as though I was driven back to the evangelistic work; and having now put my hand to the gospel plow, I shall not look back, God helping me. It is not because I desire an easy job, for I would rather work hard and be at home with my family, but a responsibility to the work I have consecrated myself to hangs over me, and I cannot put my heart into any other work. Yet I must say, in contrast to the yoke the world has always put upon me when serving it, that Jesus' yoke is easy and his burden light. While I preached every Sunday in our school house at Rollin, when at home for over two years, yet none were led to obedience there, only a few at the time of our last Conference.

Bro. R. P. Story settled near us, between Stark and Savonburg, Kansas, and as he is zealous for the faith he had me to go there once a month, during the past year, to preach to his neighbors, who had never heard the truth preached. Here I see a chance for good to be done. I had a fair interest at Savonburg after a week's meeting in the Friends' church, and a number were convinced of the truth, who, although they did not obey will never forget nor forsake it for sectarianism.

At Stark, Bro. Jos. Williams and I had better success, as we had the use of the Friends' church there for two weeks, which gave us time to lay the whole foundation, and also to clear away most of the rubbish of Babylon. We had a full house and convinced quite a number, who are spoiled forever for popular theology, but none obeyed. I went back again recently, and although I could not get into the church, I got the use of a hall and had another two week's meeting. As a result six of the most noble souls in this vicinity obeyed in baptism and four others, who had been baptized previously came in by accepting the right hand of fellowship from the four of our faith already here, Bro. and Sister A. E. Benage and Bro. and Sister R. P. Story. These four who came in with us are Bro. and Sister Osborn and the elder Bro. and Sister Inman, whom sister Palmer will remember as formerly living at Dows, Iowa, noble old people, and fully consecrated to the Lord. This made a class of fourteen, so I had an elder and two deacons appointed, and having learned from the owner of the hall that they could use it free, I appointed a class meeting for every Sunday at 10 A. M. God help them to let their light shine, and to stand firm on the rock of truth. With the prayer and hope that it may lead some reader to a more complete consecration to Christ, I wish to speak of those baptized, now Bro. W. H. Roberts. He had been brought up a Roman Catholic. He had heard some of this truth in Nebraska, but had not become sufficiently interested to search the Scriptures whether it were true. Besides, he did not feel that many of our people there had ever been converted, as he saw conversion. He even felt that to associate with them instead of making him better and purer would tend to drag him lower. He saw many smoking and chewing tobacco like the world, talking and discussing politics as the world does, passing vulgar jokes as the world does, and showing strife, anger, jealousy and love of money like the world. So he did not feel drawn toward them. I showed him that the church consisted of many called of which but a few overcomers would be chosen. How in apostolic times it would not have justified any one to stay out of the Church of God because Simon the sorcerer, Judas, Ananias, Diatrepes and others such were there. That we must stand by truth for the sake of truth itself, and instead of looking to what others do, look to the head Christ as our ideal and example. I told him that I felt that the tobacco habit was a part of the old man of sin to be put off, when we put on the new man—Christ. That it was a "weight," a "stumbling block," had the "appearance of evil," was no part of the new man Christ, nor of the bride's white raiment, and that if sinful men in selecting a bride preferred a clean-mouthed girl, free from such habits, that surely Jesus would have as refined a taste as carnal man. That the nicotine poison permeated the flesh and bones, thus defiling our body, which we are commanded to purify as a habitation for God through the Spirit, and that unless we could show that it did not defile the body we could not escape destruction, for "whosoever defileth the temple of God, him will God destroy." I talked long with him on how we were required to "deny ourselves," "crucify the flesh," overcome and "follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth," and if we gave up nothing for Jesus' sake, and crucified nothing, and buried nothing at baptism, we would be but dead branches, and a dead sect, no light to the world, no example for sinners, and having no power with God. How we would never regret any self-denial or sacrifice we may make for Christ now, if when he comes we may only hear our Savior and Redeemer says, "Well done, good and faithful servant," and that I feared that this would not be said to the man who was chewing or smoking at Jesus' coming, and how the divine nature was only promised to those who now "purify themselves as he is pure." 1 John iii.

In the morning when I came back to see him I saw a change at the first glance. A clean look about his mouth, and a look of victory and triumph in his eye, and I was not surprised when he said, "I have decided to make clean sweep, and bury the whole old man. I know it will be hard, but Jesus did something hard for me." Thank God, I said, let the family all kneel while we look to him for strength and his blessing, for when we are weak then we are strong, for his strength is made perfect in weakness, and his grace is sufficient for us, and we can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us. He will not suffer us to be tried above what we are able to bear, but will with every temptation open a way of escape. Let us humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, for God resisteth the proud, but showeth favor to the humble, a broken spirit and a contrite heart he will not despise." May God bless them and keep them.

Obituary.

Mrs. Priscilla Hopkins, nee Babb, was born at Zenia, Ohio. Came with her parents to Rensselaer, Ind., in 1851, where she has since resided until her death, on May 2, 1905, at the age of 70 years, 2 months and 5 days.

She was the mother of two children, one daughter, Mrs. Lora H. Rhodes, with whom she had been living for many years, since her husbands death, and one son, Elden R. Hopkins, both respected residents of Rensselaer.

She became obedient to the faith of the gospel and united with the Church of God at Rensselaer many years ago, never faltered in faith or practice of her profession, ever present at assembling and commemoration, when health and strength permitted, and when from failing health this privilege was denied her, it was with deep regret.

Being naturally endowed with great energy and will power which being controled by the faith and loving spirit of Christ, enabled her truly to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," and thus fulfill the injunction "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." She seized the present opportunity to do "what she could," not waiting for a more convenient season, or the accumulation of means, that she might do greater things.

Her death is not only greatly deplored by the church, by her family and relatives, but by the community in general, as she had a wide circle of acquaintance, universally calling her familiary, "Aunt Priscilla," and by whom she was held in universal high esteem for her true, sincere and remarkable degree of unselfish kindness, in doing for others, in bearing their burdens and bringing sunshine into their lives, never prompted by mere worldly show, or vain display.

Her funeral was largely attended, where the hope of life through Christ, so sweet to her was briefly presented. May the Life Giver soon come.

Annual Conference

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will be held near Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening, June 1, 1905, and continue over the following Sunday.

Brothers and Sisters, let not these gatherings together prove fruitless, so it shall not be said of us, that we have received the grace of God in vain but may it indeed build us up in the most holy faith, not only intellectually, but that we may be more spiritual minded. That we may become more pure in our walk and conversation, and more faithful in holding forth the Word of Life.

Brethren, this conference meeting is yours. Come to it. If you have a word of good news to impart, come and encourage the brethren, who have come to get sympathy and strength. The friends at Dutton want to see all their old friends, and many new ones. They will be prepared to entertain all who may come.

It is expected that Bro. A. H. Zilmer of Plymouth, Indiana, will be at the meeting.

M., and continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in Indiana, you have met at Antioch these many years, and have been greatly edified by this gathering. Besides this, the "seed of the Word of the kingdom" has been sown at this gathering which has resulted in good. Let there be a general rally of the brotherhood in Indiana for mutual good, and let the glad tidings of the coming kingdom be presented to others. This invitation is also for those who do not live in Indiana.

The Committee on Program will secure the speakers and arrange the topics to be presented at this meeting. Those coming by rail can come either to Plymouth or Argos, Ind., and will please notify Bro. A. R. Underwood at Plymouth, or Bro. T. O. Taber at Argos.

... Algar was born at Waterloo, Stanford County, Canada East, July 20, 1836, and died at Gladbrook, Iowa, May 2, 1905, having lived 68 years, 9 months and 8 days. He embraced the things concerning the kingdom in 1856, and was a staunch believer in the Coming of Christ and the establishment of his kingdom in the earth. In 1860 he moved to Baileyville, Ogle County, Illinois, where he remained until the Spring of 1870, when he removed to Gladbrook, Iowa, where he resided until his death. About eight years ago he was stricken with rheumatism and has been a great sufferer, being bedridden nearly all of the time. He leaves a wife, daughter, one brother, and two sisters, besides numerous other relatives and friends to mourn his loss. They sorrow not as others who have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken by Brother S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois, from 2 Thes. iv. 13, after which we laid Uncle Albert away to await the call of him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

O. J. ALLARD.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued. Bro. Woodruff expects and asks no income from their sale, only that each book will bring a return that will replace it, and keep the book in circulation. The cost of freight and postage till the book is in your hand amounts to 12 cents. Allowing a margin to supply wrapping and necessary postage in correspondence, we must add 3 cents to this, making the cost to you post paid 40 cents. This is a rare opportunity to get a book that is highly instructive and at the same time readable, in that it is not too long in any one part, so as to weary the reader. It is an excellent work to give or loan to truth-seekers. Send to this office and get a copy. Any one wanting a number of them to use in mission work, can have them in quantities as they desire at a price just covering the cost of the books and getting them to hand by express or freight, as they desire.

Several thousands of these books should be taken by our brethren at once. Every new convert, every inquirer after truth, should have one of these books, and at the price asked could have one if our brethren will make the effort. Take hold, brethren and send these books into the Lord's vineyard to work.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

NOTICE.

The subject matter contained in the articles written by Brother Joblin, entitled The Fatherhood of Jesus, and Vital questions, will be put in pamphlet form provided the brethren desire it. This will be decided by the promptness of your orders. The price will be 10 cents a copy or 12 for $1.00. Do not send money now, but send word to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, saying how many you will buy when the work is out. Due notice will be given when to send money.

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through time and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri Work.

I have spent a month and a half in the evangelistic work in Nebraska at old points in Frontier Co. and now have begun work for the Kansas-Missouri Conference. Though only one has come out for baptism yet the seed of truth has been sown in many hearts and will not return void, even though few may obey it. Bro. Chadwell is having better success in the work in Missouri as a number have obeyed the gospel under his preaching. Our Nebraska treasury is empty and the Kansas-Missouri treasury almost empty and we hope that those who are interested in the work going on in these States will send on their offerings for the work. The Nebraska Secretary is Mrs. Fanny E. Welsh, St. Paul, Neb., and the Kansas-Missouri Secretary is A. W. Darby, Ransom, Kan. Brethren, act quickly.

Yours in the hope,

W. L. CROWE.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Borrowed Light.

Not sunshine alone makes the rainbow,
But the skirts of the mantling storm
Gather in the bright rays of beauty—
Both the light and the dark, bend the form;
So, God's grace thrown over our sorrows
When they roll in as dark as the night,
Puts together a radiance of gladness,
And we smile 'neath the beamings of light.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER I.

The votive-prayer of Azarias and the hymn of the three.

1. And Azarias standing offered votive-prayer in this wise.

2. And opening his mouth in the midst of the fire he said, To be eulogized art thou O Lord God of our fathers, and to be praised, and thy name one that hath been glorified for the animate-ages.

3. Because thou art just to all those whom thou hast created, and all thy works are truthful works and upright are thy ways, and all thy judicial ways truth.

4. And verdicts of truth hast thou rendered in regard to all the things which thou hast led upon us, and upon Hierousaleem the sacred city of your fathers: because in truth and in a judicial way didst thou lead all these things upon us for our sins.

5. Because we did sin and transgress in standing away from thee;

6. And we consummated sin in all our ways and did not hearken to thy commandments, nor did we thoroughly watch to keep nor do even as thou didst command us, that it might come to be well with us.

7. And the things that thou didst lead upon us, and all that thou didst do unto us, in a truthful judicial way didst thou do them.

8. And thou didst give us up into the hands of enemies who were transgressors and most hateful apostates; and unto an unjust and most wicked king as compared with all the earth.

9. And now it is not for us to open our mouth, shame and reproach have we become to thy bond-servants and those who revere thee.

10. Do not though give us up utterly for thy name's sake and do not abrogate thy covenant.

11. And do not stand thy mercy away from us for the sake of Habraam who was beloved by thee and for the sake of Isaak thy bond-servant and Israel thy saint.

12. To whom thou didst say that thou wouldst multiply their seed like the stars of the heavens and like the sand that is by the lip of thy sea.

13. Because O thou sole Lord we have been diminished more than all the nations, and we have been humbled in all the earth today because of our sins.

14. And there is no ruler nor prophet nor leader in this period, nor whole-burnt-offering service nor sacrifice, nor offering, nor incense-service, nor place to offer a fruit offering in thy presence, nor to find mercy.

15. But with contrite soul and a spirit of humility would we look expectantly as though with a whole-burnt-offering of our rams and bulls, and with myriads of fat lambs.

16. And in this wise may our sacrifice have come to be in thy sight today and may it have been perfected in following thee, because there will be no shame for those who trust in thee.

17. And now we are following it out with all our heart, and we fear thee and are seeking thy face.

18. Do not put us to shame, but do with us according to thy forbearance and according to the plenitude of thy mercy.

19. And deliver us according to thy wondrous ways and give glory to thy name, O Lord; and may all those who are showing evil things to thy bond-servants have been confounded.

20. And may they have been put to shame from thy ability to rule, and their strength be crushed.

21. And may they have come to know that thou art Lord God alone and renowned over all the inhabited.

22. And the subordinates of the king who were putting them in did not leave off firing the furnace with naphtha and pitch and stubble and twigs.

23. And the flame poured through above the furnace to the height of forty-nine cubits.

24. And it made its way through and burned those of the Chaldaians whom it found round about the furnace.

25. But the angel of the Lord came down simultaneously with those round about Azarias into the furnace, and shook out the flame of the fire from out the furnace.

26. And made the middle of the furnace like a breath of dew whistling through it, and the fire did not touch them at all, nor did it harm nor annoy them.

27. Then the three with one mouth as it were, sung a hymn, and glorified and eulogized God in the furnace, saying.

28. Eulogized shouldst thou be, O Lord God of our fathers, and praised and exalted for the animate-ages.

29. And the sacred name of thy glory should be eulogized and superlatively praised and exalted for all the animate-ages.

30. Eulogized art thou in the inner temple of thy glory and superlatively glorified for the animate-ages.

31. Eulogized art thou who lookest upon abyssmal-depths, who art seated upon Cherubim, and praised and superlatively exalted for the animate ages.

32. Eulogized art thou upon a throne of thy royalty and superlatively hymnable and being superlatively hymned for the animate-ages.

40. Eulogize the Lord, ye stars of the canopy, hymn and superlatively exalt him for the animate-ages.

43. Eulogize ye the Lord, fire and burning-heat, hymn and superlatively exalt him for the animate-ages.

44. Eulogize ye the Lord, cold and heat, hymn and superlatively exalt him for the animate-ages.

67. Eulogize the Lord all ye who revere the Lord God of the gods, hymn and confess that his mercy is forever, or (unto the animate-age).

End of the votive-prayer and hymn.

COMMENT.

I consider this votive-prayer and hymn one of the most suggestive and instructive portion of the Old Covenant Scriptures. They throw light on a thousand obscure things in the revealed Word elsewhere; but to see all this implies a great familiarity with the original record and a profound knowledge of God's Word. Why they were omitted in all the English versions has never been satisfactorily explained any more than the mutilation and garbling of other sacred books.

End of the votive-prayer and the hymn.

24th verse of the third chapter of Daniel. And Nabonchodnosor heard them hymning praise and wondered, and arose with haste and said unto his great ones, Did we not cast three men into the midst of the fire with their feet bound? And they said unto the king, Truly O king.

25. And the king said, I see there four men loosed and walking in the midst of the fire, and there is no destruction on them, and the appearance of the fourth is like to a Son of God.

26. Then Nabouchodonosor went unto the door of the furnace of the burning fire and said, Sedrach, Misach, Abdenagoe, ye bond-servants of the Most High, Come out and come here; and Sedrach and Misach and Abdenagoo came out of the midst of the fire.

27. And the satraps and the military leaders and the local rulers and the influential men of the king are gathered together, and they gazed with wonder at the men that the fire had not prevailed over their bodies, and the hair of their heads was not scorched and their stockings were not changed in color, and that there was no smell of fire on them.

28. And Nabouchodonosor the king made answer and said, the God of Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo be praised, who sent his angel and delivered his house-servants, because they trusted in him, and changed the spoken word of the king, and they submitted their bodies to fire, that they might not serve for hire, nor worship any God other than their God.

29. And I promulgate the decree, that every laity, tribe, tongue that speak blasphemy against the God of Sedrach, Misach, Abdenagoo shall be for loss, and their houses confiscated, even as there is no other God who can deliver in this wise.

30. Then the king established Sedrach, Misach and Abdenagoo in the province of Babuloon, and promoted them and asked them as a favor to take the lead of all the Joudaians in his kingdom.

31. Nabouchodonosor the king unto all the laities, tribes and tongues that dwell in all the land, may peace have been multiplied for you.

32. It hath been pleasing in my sight to announce unto you, how great and mighty the signs and prodigies are, which God the Most High hath caused to relation to me; his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and his official-power unto generation and generation.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Random Thoughts. No. 16.

Dear Restitution:

I think I have shown that the kingdom of God will be a real literal kingdom. Its locality or territory will be "under the whole heavens," and will cover the whole earth. Not beyond the bounds of time nor space, but may at first be a very small kingdom. That Jesus is the Christ (or Anointed) and will be the King. That the saints will then be like the King, having glorious bodies like his, will share with him in the government—each having his proper position, higher or lower as the great King shall see fit, all of them being like the great King, immortal and incorruptible—and can die no more. That the subjects will be Israelites, both of the house of Israel and the house of Judah gathered out of the nations in which they have been scattered, and brought back to their own land, still mortal, where they will multiply and increase under the government of Jesus and his saints, and grow strong and mighty and glorious. That there will be war between them and other nations, and that the other nations, one after another will be conquered or broken to pieces and consumed—the people of these nations becoming subjects in the kingdom of God, to be also governed by Jesus the great King and his saints.

I wish now to say somewhat as to the seat of government and laws. All nations or kingdoms have their capital city, as Washington for the United States, London for Great Britain, Paris for France, etc., so the kingdom of God will have its capital city, from whence will proceed the laws by which it will be governed. Now what will the name of that city be? And what about its laws? I will let the Bible answer, and first we will look at the 48th Psalm, Dr. Boothroyd's Translation, "Great is Jehovah, and highly to praised, in the city of our God, on his holy mountain. Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole land is Mount Zion; on the north side is the city of the great King. In its palaces God is known for a refuge. For lo! the kings were associated; they passed on together against it. But when they saw they were astonished; they were confounded and hasted away. There, a trembling seized on them; strong pain, like that of child birth. They were as if struck by the east wind, which breaketh to pieces the ships of Tarshish. As we have heard, so have we now seen, concerning the city of Jehovah of hosts, concerning the city of our God. That God will establish it forever. We, O God, have thought on thy kindness. In the midst of thine own temple; as thy name, so shall thy praise resound to the extremities of the earth; thy right hand is full of righteousness. Let Mount Zion rejoice, the cities of Judah exalt, because of thy judgments, O Jehovah. Go round about Zion—number its towers, mark well its bulwarks, count its palaces; that you may tell it to the next generation; for the God is our God for ever. He will always guide and defend us."

Now just a thought—in John xiv. 2, 3. Jesus says to his disciples, "In my Father's house (household or family) are many mansions (dwellings) but if not, I would have told you; because I am going to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I am coming again, and will receive you to myself, so that where I am you also may be."

Now let my readers see the 48th Psalm I have given above and apply it to time after our Lord has come again, and dwelling on Mount Zion in Jerusalem, the city of the great King, with his saints dwelling in the mansions or palaces. Jesus said there were many, see if you can count them. "Go round about Zion, number its towers, mark well its bulwarks, count its palaces," (mansions). It will be certainly a grand and glorious city. The capital city of the kingdom of God.

Now will my readers read the 132nd Psalm. This shows what God had promised to David—even under oath, and had his children all been what they should have been, they would still be occupying the throne on Mount Zion, but as they were not, the throne has long been in ruins. But when our Lord returns he will rebuild its ruins (Acts xv. 16) on the Mount Zion. "For Jehovah hath chosen Zion, he hath desired it for his habitation. This (said he) is my rest forever; here I will dwell, for I have desired it." Psa. cxxxii. 13. As yet he has not yet returned, for he is not now there. When he comes and reigns there he will never vacate it again. There will be no end to his reign. I cannot begin to give all the Scriptures that show Mount Zion to be the seat of government in the kingdom of God, but I will give some of them.

Let us read a little in Isaiah ii. concerning Judah and Jerusalem. Verse 2, "It shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of the house of Jehovah shall be established on the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go, and shall say, Come ye, let us go up to the Mount of Jehovah, to the temple of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of Jehovah from Jerusalem," etc. The law that shall judge, rule or govern the world will go forth from Mount Zion in Jerusalem, the city of the great King, when he shall come and make his abode there.

In Heb. ii. 13, the writer quotes a part of Isa. viii. 18. He applies it to Jesus, "Behold, I and the children, whom God gave me to show the Lord was like his brethen, but in Isaiah it says more, "Behold! I and the children Jehovah hath given me, are for signs and for wonders in Israel from Jehovah of hosts, who dwelleth in Mount Zion." When the Lord shall dwell in Mount Zion, his saints will be with him and will then be able to perform signs and wonders! When the Lord appeared to Saul on the way to Damascus, the light exceeded the brightness of the sun at noon, and on the Mount of transfiguration his very garments shown and glittered, and on other occasions, but we will turn to Isa. xxiv. 23, here we read, "And the moon shall blush, and the sun be ashamed, for Jehovah of hosts shall reign upon Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients, shall he be glorified." If the brightness of our Lord shall make the moon blush and the sun ashamed, on account of his exceeding brightness, how bright and glorious he will be! And the saints will be like him, having glorious bodies like his, and will see him as he is then! The Lord may well say, Behold! I and the children Jehovah hath given me, are for signs and wonders in Israel, from Jehovah of hosts, who dwelleth in Mount Zion. At present Israel is scattered among the nations, but they will be brought to their own land. "And it shall be, when you shall have multiplied, and shall have increased in the land. In those days says Jehovah, they shall no more say, the ark of the covenant of Jehovah. Neither shall it enter into their mind, nor shall they remember it, nor care about it, nor shall it be made any more. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of Jehovah. "And all nations shall be gathered unto it, unto Jerusalem, to the name of Jehovah," etc. Jer. iii. 16, 17. And Micah iv. gives us almost exactly the same as Isa. ii., showing that when Israel shall have been brought back and become a great and strong nation in their own land, the Prophet very definitely states the place where the Lord will reign, verse 7, "Jehovah shall then reign over them in Mount Zion, from henceforth, even for evermore." "Oh, may the salvation of Israel come from Zion! When Jehovah restoreth his captive people, Jacob shall exult and Israel shall rejoice." Psa. xiv. 7. Time would fail me to give half the Scriptures that go to show that the Lord will reign on Mount Zion in Jerusalem. Both the Old and New Testaments are full of it.

From year to year the people will go up to worship the King Jehovah of hosts. Zech. xiv. 16. In Isa. xi. 3, 4 is a thought to which I wish to call attention. Many things, glorious things, are said of our Lord by whom God will judge, rule or govern the world, but there it says he "shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, nor decide after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth," etc. For ourselves, at present, I do know of any better evidence we have than what we see and hear. What we see and hear, we are apt to think we know; but how often are we mistaken even then! the great King who will judge world, will have a better knowing things than by his eyes or ears! And it will be impossible to deceive him. Why? Because he will know the hearts of the people. As also will his associates, the saints. We do now sometimes hear of mind reading, but then we shall know, even as we are now known—just as the Lord now knows our hearts and thoughts will the saints then know the thoughts of the people over whom they will then reign. But I see this paper is sufficiently long, so for this time adieu. More anon.

The Committee in charge of the Ohio State Conference to be held in Cleveland from August 17 to 20 inclusive, 1905, do extend to all both in Ohio and elsewhere a very hearty invitation to attend. It is our desire that this gathering may redound to the honor and glory of God and the spiritual upbuilding of all that come. That the hearts of all who will be present will burn within them with renewed zeal and sincerity of purpose, that whatsoever is done will be done heartily as unto the Lord and not unto men, knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. Be sure to come. Address all communications to J. C. Thompson, Sec'y, 146 Brookdale St., Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Restitution:

We still meet at our place of worship in our church every Sunday, at half past ten o'clock, to sing praise to the Lord, and thank his good name for all blessings flowing from his bountiful hand. Though we are but few we realize that we have the truth as it is given to us in his words, that we shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. One thing is encouraging, there is a good attendance of the few that are here, and in harmony of the faith, and we pray for our Sister Dell Glotfelty, who has been through an operation by the doctors, but is getting along nicely now, and hopes to soon be up again.

S. P. RENNER.

We hope our friends who have not yet renewed their subscription for this year will not let Spring work so occupy their minds that they neglect this matter. We are short of money now. Please remember us.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 24, 1905. NUMBER 20.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 24, 1905.

THE papers dated May 24 and June 7, will be consecutive issues.

THE situation in the far east has not changed very much the past week. Report has it that the Russian fleet has eluded the Japanese, and is now on the way to Vladivostok. The armies are reported on the verge of activities, but nothing has been done so far.

THE trouble and turmoil in the world grows more and more each week. There is no peace in sight. The prophecy of troublous times is being fulfilled before our eyes. The rest of prophecy will be fulfilled just as surely. Let us order our lives in accord with the Master's will, that we may enter into the Kingdom when He comes.

LET all who are interested take special note of the Northwest Conference as given this week. Notice was sent earlier, but was lost. and as the time is short extra effort must be made by those who expect to attend. The other conference meetings in different states should be remembered and attended by all who can possibly get to them. Our time to labor for the Master is limited. His coming will not be delayed long, and then we will be glad we made a sacrifice to do him service. All who can should attend these meetings.

The Baptism with the Holy Spirit.—No. 2.

"Apostles and prophets," according to Eph. iii: 1-5, were the persons to whom the mystery of the gospel was "revealed by the Spirit." And Paul wrote these things, so that others, reading them, might understand his knowledge in the mystery of Christ. The apostles regarded themselves as dispensers of the grace of God, as stewards of the mystery of God. 1. Cor. iv: 1. And they were "ministers," not only of the word, but of "the spirit which giveth life." 2. Cor. iii: 6. Where such a commission, such a ministry? It was from God, who had not only given them authority, but had made them "able ministers of the new testament." The Lord Jesus, as God's representative, had said to the apostles: "I send you" (apostello). John xx: 21; Acts xxvi: 17. They were taught by the Holy Spirit, as Jesus had said to them: "He shall teach you all things." John xiv: 26. "He will guide you into all truth." John xvi: 13. Into that truth they were led, both for their own, as also for the guidance of the Church during the gospel dispensation.

That Spirit was also to show the apostles "things to come," things future. John xvi: 13. As we peruse the Acts of the apostles, we see how perfectly this promise of Jesus was fulfilled. See how Peter was influenced, warned, and guided by the Spirit at Caesarea (Acts x: 19; xi: 12); the council at Jerusalem (Acts xv: 28); and Paul in Asia Minor (Acts xvi: 6, 7), and in all his labors. Acts xx: 28.

Notice also the apostolic predictions of a widespread and disastrous departure from the faith, as foretold in the writings of the apostles. 1. Tim. iv: 1-4; 2. Thess. ii: 3; 2. Tim. iii: 1-5, iv: 3, 4; 2. Pet. ii: 1-3; iii: 1-3; 1. John ii: 18; Jude 17, 18. In this connection notice two things: a) The persons to whom such information was communicated: "The apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ." b) The means by which it had come to them: "The Spirit speaketh expressly." Thus we see that the Spirit spoke to the apostles of this then future apostasy from the faith. That those apostles were true prophets is attested by the facts of history. The awful apostasy with all its widespread disaster has come, and we today are battling with its effects.

The apostles were not only commissioned to bear the testimony concerning Jesus the Christ to the world; they were also supplied with the proper credentials of authority. They had the "signs" of their apostleship, "in signs, and wonders and mighty deeds." 2. Cor. xii: 12. And these mighty signs and wonders were wrought, as Paul affirmed, "by the power of the Spirit of God." Rom. xv: 18, 19. At Jerusalem "many wonders and signs were done by the apostles." Acts ii: 43. "And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people." Acts v: 12-16. At Ephesus "God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them." Acts xix: 11, 12. To the Galatians Paul wrote that "he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles." Gal. ii: 8. The Lord "wrought" in these apostles, thus confirming their apostleship. Paul wrote to the Corinthians that his speech and his preaching "was not in enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." 1. Cor. ii: 4. This "power" was imparted to the apostles by the Spirit of God. By it they could smite refractory members with death, as in the case of Ananias and Sapphira Acts v: 1-11. They could smite the disobedient with blindness, as Barjesus was smitten by Paul. Acts xiii: 11. They could raise the dead, as Peter raised Dorcas (Acts ix: 36-41), and Paul raised Eutychus. Acts xx: 9-12 They healed various sick persons, as the impotent man (Acts iii: 1-8), others upon the streets of Jerusalem (v: 12-16), and Aeneas by Peter (Acts ix: 33-35;) the cripple at Lystra (Acts xiv: 8-18), and Publius on the Isle of Melita by Paul. Acts xxviii: 8, 9. Paul was unharmed by the viper which adhered to his hand. Acts xxix: 1-6. He cast a spirit of divination out of a young woman. Acts xv: 16-18. By the same power which enabled them to do all these things, they could impart the Holy Spirit to others through laying on of their hands. Acts vi: 6; viii: 14-18; xix: 6; 2. Tim. i: 6. The Evangelist Mark correctly records the fulfillment of the "signs" that were to follow them that believed: "In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay their hands on the sick, and they shall recover." These signs did follow when the apostles went forth and preached everywhere, for the Lord was "working with them confirming the word with signs following." Mark xvi: 17-20. This is a brief but comprehensive way of saying what has been shown at length above. The signs, according to the testimony, belonged to the apostles, and were intended as a confirmation of the word which they proclaimed. That word having been confirmed to us by them that heard the Lord Jesus (Heb. ii: 1-4), in the utter absence of the "signs" which followed the baptism in Holy Spirit in the times of the apostles, and for a special purpose, why claim the baptism of the Holy Spirit, as is done at "revival" and "holiness meetings" conducted by ill informed and misguided persons in our days? Either those persons are apostles of the Lord, called and equipped as were the apostles of old, and can show the "signs of an apostle," as they were then displayed; they must be able to do the things the ancient apostles did by virtue of their baptism in Holy Spirit; or their claims to such baptism must fall flat. We hear of persons here and there who talk about healing the sick, but we would remind them that this is not the only "sign" mentioned at Mark xvi: 17, 18. It is the last of the number. Why not begin with the first one, and go on through to the last? Here we have the following "signs" which in the days of the apostles did follow:

1. Casting out of devils, or demons.
2. Speaking with new tongues.
3. Taking up of serpents.
4. Drinking deadly things without evil effect.
5. Laying hands on the sick for their recovery. Are they in evidence now? To ask the question is to answer it. In ancient times they were distributed "according to his own will" (God's will). Heb. ii: 4; 1. Cor. xii: 11. If men today cast out demons, as Jesus and the apostles did by the power of the Spirit of God; if they speak with new tongues, not because they have had to learn them at the cost of labor and means, but by a sudden and direct impulse; if they take up serpents, as did Paul; if they drink deadly things without evil effects; if they can lay their hands on the sick so that they will immediately recover, as Jesus and the apostles did repeatedly, it is because it is according to the will of God. If they can do none of these things, it is because the persons to whom they belonged have passed from the scene of action, and the purpose which they were to subserve has been accomplished. That the word has been sufficiently "confirmed" to the satisfaction of the persons who either claim or contend for the gifts of the Holy Spirit, is evident from the fact that they appeal to that very word without any further "confirmation." They would not believe it more strongly and cite it more confidently than they appear to do, were the "signs and wonders" of apostolic times an every-day occurrence.

V. SOME PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Was the baptism of Holy Spirit designed to displace baptism in water? From the manner in which certain passages of Scripture are cited and applied, we would conclude that such is the case. It is admitted by persons making such a claim that John's baptism was "with water." But it has been claimed that after the day of Pentecost, baptism with the Holy Spirit was the order, and that the passages speaking of baptism into Christ and His death, refer to such Spirit baptism. How wrong such a conclusion is, and how little knowledge of the Bible such a position betrays. It is undeniably true that in the baptism of the Ethiopian eunuch and the Household of Cornelius "water" was required, and both these cases occurred some time after Pentecost. Neither is it stated in other cases of baptism recorded in the Acts of the apostles that such baptism was with Holy Spirit. The thing men seek to prove by the citation of such passages of Scripture is assumed.

What was the design of baptism with Holy Spirit? Was it for the remission of sins? In that case, were sinners baptized in Holy Spirit? Was the promise of that baptism made to sinners? See again the language of Jesus to the apostles whom He had chosen. Acts i: 1-5. "The world can not receive" the Spirit of truth promised to the apostles of our Lord: John xiv: 17. Again, if baptism of the Holy Spirit was for remission of sins, how often were persons baptized with the Holy Spirit? If they frequently experienced such baptism, they must have sinned often, so as to require a frequent baptism; and the baptism of the Spirit did not impart to them any power to resist or overcome sin.

The apostle Peter was one of the persons prominently concerned in the baptism of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. It is doubted by no one that he, "with the eleven" for whom he spoke, was baptized in Holy Spirit. And yet this baptism did not afterward prevent him from becoming guilty of "dissimulation" or hypocrisy, and he had to be publicly reprimanded by Paul, "because he was to be blamed." Gal. ii: 11-14. From this example we learn, or ought to learn, this lesson: that not even the endowment of the Spirit imparted to the apostles such power which would render them immune to temptation and sin. What, then, becomes of the claim of persons at the present who profess to be so completely "sanctified" and "filled with the Holy Ghost," that it is impossible for them to sin? If any one cannot sin it is because he cannot be tempted; and he who cannot be tempted is in a better state than was our Lord Jesus during his life among men, for he "was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. iv: 15. But it is contended that this filling with the Holy Ghost removes "inbred sin," and this being eradicated, to such a person the possibility of sin has been removed. "Inbred sin" is sin which is bred in; it is hereditary, and transmitted from one generation to another. It is, according to the teaching of "holiness people," that evil disposition, that natural tendency toward sin with which every human being is born into this world. Now, it needs no argument that the removal of this wicked propensity, so as to render persons temptation proof, and impervious to sin, would be a very desirable condition, which if possible, everyone should earnestly covet and diligently seek, especially if the Word of God holds out such a condition. But did it ever occur to those well meaning persons what consequences are involved in the position that such a state can be attained in this present life, and has actually been affected in their case? Inbred sin, as we have seen, is sin, or a tendency to sin, which is bred into persons: a hereditary evil. It is transmitted by parents to their children because it is a part of their natural furniture. Now, if inbred sin is entirely removed from the parents, they cannot possibly transmit it to their children, because it is not in them; and in this way we would soon have a race of sinless people who are born sinless because their parents were without sin. Such a race however, has not been heard from at this writing. And even the children of those "wholly sanctified" and "Spirit-filled" people are required to become converted and to "seek sanctification" in the same way in which their parents did. Either there is a necessity of seeking purification from inborn sin which they have inherited from their parents after their supposed sanctification; or they have no need of such purging because there is no sin in them. The seeking of sanctification on the part of the children of "sanctified" parents is a tacit admission that those persons could still transmit sinful tendencies. Inasmuch as they could communicate this tendency, it was in them and hence "inbred sin" as it is called, notwithstanding their high sounding claims, was not yet removed. A thing much to be desired in regard to this matter is, that persons be consistent with the position they assume. I regret to say that such is not the case, and hence the extravagant and groundless claims that are made, and the reproach which is cast upon God because of the conduct of persons incompatible with their professions.

It must not be inferred from the foregoing remarks that we are opposed to sanctification as taught in the Word of God. We not merely believe and endorse what the Scriptures teach upon this subject, but are striving to conform our lives to such teaching. The Scriptures nowhere teach that saints are persons to whom the possibility of sinning is altogether in the past. A saint is a person who is separated from sin, and set apart to God. But he is not one who cannot sin if he will, or for whom it is impossible to sin. We are told that Saul made havoc of the Church. Acts viii: 3. In the next chapter it is said that he was "breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." Acts ix: 1. And a little further down Ananias says, "Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem." v. xiii. Here are three terms applied to the same persons: a) The church. b) Disciples of the Lord. c) Thy saints. From all of which it is to be seen that the disciples were styled saints, and the church consisted of such. They had been "called to be saints." Rom. i: 7; 1. Cor. i: 2. This calling was by the gospel. 2. Thess. ii: 14. The word of God is the means of sanctification. John xvii: 17. In order to this it must be believed (2. Thess. ii: 13) and obeyed. Rom. ii: 8; Gal. iii: 1; v: 7. Saints at Philippi, with bishops and deacons, were admonished to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling. Phil. i: 1; ii: 12. Though saints, their salvation was not an accomplished fact, and still needed to be worked out. "Saints" needed to be made perfect through the instrumentality of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers. Eph. iv: 11, 12. Were there, are there, can there be, "saints" who need "perfecting"—imperfect saints? Doubtless there were and are still many such.

We sometimes hear people say in testimony meetings that they are "witnesses for Jesus." While we doubt not their sincerity or their good intentions, and would not speak disrespectfully of anyone's religious sentiments, we can not but register our conviction thus the term "witness for Jesus," as applied to persons today, does not express the truth. There is no doubt as to the identity of the witnesses of whom we read in the Scriptures: 1. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me" was spoken to the apostles. This is proven by the fact that those who were the Lord's "witnesses unto the people" came with Him "from Galilee." Acts xiii: 31. 2. These witnesses were "chosen before of God," and they ate and drank with the Lord after He rose from the dead. Acts x: 39-42. This can only be said of the apostles. 3. The same men affirmed that the Lord commanded them to preach to the people. The thing we are to do is to receive the testimony of those men—"believe through their word." They are witnesses to us quite as much as they were to those who heard them speak, for their "apostleship" for obedience to the faith extended to "all nations." Rom. i: 5. When they announced the gospel, it was intended to be the same everywhere without change during the entire dispensation. When they erected a standard of faith, it was to remain the same among all nations. What they said and wrote concerning Jesus was intended to convince us that he is the Christ, and that believing we might have life through His name. Let us, then, receive their testimony with becoming humility, reverance, and with full persuasion that is is not the word of men, but in truth the word of God which will effectually work in us if we believe. 1 Thess: 13.

We will also briefly consider the claim put forward by many well-meaning persons that they are "led by the Spirit" in all the details of their life. That the phrase "led by the Spirit" is a Scriptural one, and that there is such a thing as being led by the Spirit, even in the twentieth century, is not denied; but with this concession the correctness of the position which we are opposing is by no means admitted. When persons claim the guidance of the Spirit of God they wish to be understood that the Spirit of God is influencing them by direct and immediate inspiration, similarly as the apostles were led into all truth. If every person may be led by the Spirit in this way, why consult the Scriptures written by the apostles? If their writings must be consulted for information concerning our duties and obligations, where is the direct leadership of the Spirit? The persons who set up such a claim also appeal to the Scriptures as the arbiter of disputed questions, thus demonstrating one of two things: Either they do not have confidence in the Spirit which, they say, leads them: or they are not at all led by the Spirit independent of the Word of God. Judging from their action, we are forced to the conclusion that there is no Spirit guidance apart from the Word as given us through inspired men of God.

Obituary.

Thomas S. Anderson died May 12, 1905; born in Warren Co., Ohio, emigrated to Indiana, from there to Kansas, Doniphan Co. He is father of O. M. Anderson, who is son-in law of our much loved Bro. W. J. Oren. He was 87 years and 3 days old. He was a very benevolent man. His sorrowing daughter said to me, No one ever asked him for a favor that they did not get it. He was noted for standing up for what was just. He was in his dotage the last several years, and is not held responsible for many things he said. Funeral sermon at the house by the writer. Quite a good attendance, considering the weather, it rained that day for three hours, and wound up with a cyclone, a short distance east of his residence. The elements seem against the inhabitants of the west, yet we trust there is a remedy in sight. We read of a time when all tears will be wiped from off all faces. May that time hasten. Yours in hope.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, pressework and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued, and will be sent postpaid for 40 cents, just enough to cover all expense. Order from this office.

Mourn Not.

O mourner, mourn not vanished light,
But fix your fearful hopes above;
The watcher, through the long, dark night,
Shall see the day-break of God's love.

A land all green and bright and fair,
Lies just beyond this vale of tears,
And we shall meet, immortal there,
The pleasures of our mortal years.

He who to death has doomed our race,
With steadfast faith our souls has armed,
And made us children of his grace
To go into the grave unharmed.

The storm may beat, the night may close,
The face may change, the blood run chill,
But his great love no limit knows,
And I' rotore we should fear no ill.

Dust as we are, and steeped in guilt,
How strange, how wondrous, how divine,
That he hath for us mansions built,
Where everlasting splendors shine.

Our day with beauty let us trim,
As nature trims with flowers the sod;
Giving the glory all to him,—
Our Friend, our Father, and our God.

What is the Gospel?

It is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. In other words it is the truth, as taught and exemplified in the life and character of the Lord Jesus. The truth of God is pure, and absolutely good, and generates purity in the conduct and conversation of every man who in sincerity of heart believes it. It is the staff of life—the bread that satisfies all who hunger and thirst after righteousness. The truth is light, and darkness flees from it. It makes manifest evil doing and exposes what is false and hypocritical. Jesus could justly say, "I am the light of the world," for he was the embodiment of the truth. He endured hardness for the truth's sake, and though put to the proof and tried, came off triumphant, because the truth of God was in his mind, and instantly at his command under all circumstances, and in every emergency.

A lie originates in ignorance and when ignorance combines with evil intent, it becomes the parent of rebellion and enmity—the active principle of sin, that perverts and depraves the soul mentally and morally. Lies fundamentally breed mental uncertainty and confusion, producing moral feebleness and degeneracy. Sin and death entered the world through the deceptive influence of a lie, and only by the truth can man regain a standing again in righteousness and peace. It is the knowledge of the truth dimly revealed that makes a man conscious of sin, and to see himself as unclean—the victim of evil desires and perverted instincts, being estranged and alienated from the life of God through ignorance. This condition of mental darkness overshadowed the Gentiles in the days of Paul, their foolish heart or mind he says being darkened, and therefore he adds alienated from God their Creator, that is as he further affirms being "without God, without Christ, having no hope in the world," and in this state of mind it was impossible for them to see and realize their hopeless condition until they came in contact with the light of the gospel.

The Jew though in possession of the law and the prophets, nevertheless rejected Christ and put him to death because of their ignorance—not perceiving that according to the Scriptures their Messiah must first be a suffering man, one of sorrow and acquainted with grief. However many of them repented when on the day of Pentecost the apostle Peter moved by the Holy Spirit, made known to them that they had by wicked hands crucified and put to death the Prince of life. That Jesus was really the Lord's Anointed—the Seed of the covenant made with Abraham and with David, and being a Man approved of God, it was impossible that death should hold him, and that God had raised him from the dead in fulfilment of his promise to David, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades, nor suffer thy holy one to see corruption." This statement of the case by the apostle was letting in the light of truth, and as the result many were pricked in heart, and cried out, Men and brethren what shall we do? They had become now conscious of their crime in killing the Prince of life, and were anxious to know if their sin could be forgiven. Is there any way open for our reconciliation, and can we be restored to favor, and be at peace with God? John the Baptist introduced Jesus to the nation of Israel as the "Lamb of God, that beareth away the sin of the world;" which was virtually affirming that he must suffer death as a sin offering. The elders and priestly rulers of the nation rejected him, for the very reason that they did not apprehend that the Anointed Son of God, and heir to David's throne, must be a slain Lamb before his manifestation as the all-conquering King. The law required the lamb or bullock to be free from any physical deformity or blemish, otherwise it would not be accepted. Now the law being "a shadow of good things to come," what was the good thing foreshadowed by the unblemished sin offering? The answer to this question suggests itself, viz: the unblemished character of Jehovah's provided lamb—a man of the Adamic race free from sin, "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, in whose mouth was found no guile, who when reviled reviled not again." Here we have a practical demonstration—a living object lesson of the operation of the law of the Spirit of life, in other words the law of faith—its sanctifying influence—controlling the tongue, restraining the desires, resisting temptation, patiently enduring the provocations of designing men as seen in the life and character of the Lord Jesus, the Captain or leader in our salvation. The apostle Paul following in the footsteps of Jesus was enabled to say "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Before he came under the operation of this law, he could will to do good, but was too feeble to perform the good, the good he would do he did not, and the evil he would not do, that he did."

Jesus as the Lamb of God was an acceptable offering, because he was worthy, and in John's revelation he is represented as the only one, who on account of his worthiness had prevailed to open the book containing the invisable secrets of the ages. When no man in heaven and earth was found worthy of this favor of opening the sealed scroll of the world's history in advance, of the Lamb of God now risen from the dead and become the Lion of the tribe of Judah came to the rescue in the glory of his triumphant exaltation at the right hand of power. He had gained the victory over sin and death, and having obtained salvation himself, was able to save others, hence says Paul "when we were without strength in due time Christ died for, or on behalf of the ungodly." The law of Moses said do this and live, but it rendered no help to those "without strength" and therefore when the commandment came sin revived, that is it quickened the activity of that "other law of sin and death" from within ending in death. But not so with the law of the Spirit of life. The latter imparts strength and ability, not only to will but to perform the good. Faith can perform marvellous works. Jesus speaking figuratively declared that faith could remove mountains and pluck up trees by the roots, illustrating the active principle of mental vitality and energy generated through a belief of truth divinely revealed. By faith the law of the Spirit of life is written on the heart whereby the servant of Christ is enabled to love the good, and hate the evil. Self control then becomes a work of pleasure, for the desire to do evil has been overcome. When we consider our own weakness and unworthiness in the light of revealed truth, and how we have ceased to be rebellious and disobedient, we will be more able to justly appreciate the goodness and mercy of our Creator in sending his own Son into the world to seek and save us from perishing. How can we after tasting of his goodness, and the joy and comfort of a good hope be otherwise than thankful that he has favored us with a knowledge of his will and purpose? When we come to see how sin defiles and degrade the human soul, the more earnestly will we strive to overcome the fleshly lusts, and the vain imaginations of the carnal mind. The law given by Moses was just and good and holy, but it was faulty nevertheless in that it could not cleanse the soul from the defiling effects of sin, because through the weakness of human nature it killed the offender instead of making him spiritually strong, to restrain the evil desires of the heart. In fact it did not reach the heart, for it was not written there, and could not therefore purify and regenerate moral and intellectual nature. The law of the Spirit of life instead of killing the sinner kills the desire to sin that is within him, and makes him a new creature. The "old man" in Adam figuratively speaking dies, while the new man in Christ lives. It is then the laws of faith that justifies, and not the laws of works. Paul wrote to the Galatian brethren, Ye are all the children of God by faith, and if children then heirs. The obedience of faith is the response of an enlightened mind, and the answer of a good conscience. Belief of the truth as it is in Jesus, is not simply a spasmodic impulse of the emotional feelings of the flesh as witnessed in revival meetings, but rather the intelligent conviction created within through a belief of testimony, that enables us to see what we are, and what our relationship is toward God, first as aliens in darkness and sin, and afterward as obedient children of light.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example.

THE LIFE OF PAUL.

About half way between Jerusalem and Constantinople stood Tarsus, the birthplace and early home of that man, who more than any other, carried Christianity from Judea throughout the Roman Empire, namely our beloved Apostle Paul. The city was in Level Cilicia, one hundred and twenty miles west of Antioch, the first metropolis of Gentile Christianity, and five hundred and fifteen miles northwest of Jerusalem. It was situated on the Cyndrus river and had been a free city for a century before Paul's birth. Since the year B. C. 37, the Jews had been in captivity to the Roman Empire, but the department and progress of some cities had been so favorable, they were given the privilege of governing themselves and called free cities. So Tarsus was a free city and was a center of education and culture, and ranked with Athens and Alexandria.

Paul was a Jew of the Diaspora, the scattered Jews. They were numerous in Rome from the time of Pompey and still more numerous in Syria and Asia Minor. These Jews who were thus scattered throughout the Roman Empire, sometimes had the rights of citizenship in the particular cities in which they lived and sometimes had the rights of Roman citizenship. Paul had both. He was a citizen of Tarsus (Acts xxi. 39), and also a citizen of Rome. Acts xxii. 28. The chief privileges of Roman citizenship were three: trial by Roman courts, freedom from dishonorable punishments, as scourging and crucifixion, and the right to appeal to Censar, with certain limitations.

The language of the dispersed Jews was almost universally Greek. The popular attitude of the Gentiles toward the Jews was one of contempt and hatred, and this bitter feeling caused suffering to Paul and apparently hindered his work. The knowledge regarding the family of Paul is very meagre. He rarely mentions father, mother, brother or sister. That his father was a Roman citizen is known from Paul's word to the chief captain (Acts xxii. 28), we cannot infer from the fact of citizenship, that he at least was of moderate wealth. On the other hand, the fact that Paul learned a trade is not evidence that his family was poor, for the Jewish rabbis taught that it was a man's duty to teach his son a trade. Paul's education in Jerusalem is not a proof of wealth, for we learn that a married sister was settled in Jerusalem with whom he may have lived, and the cost of instruction was probably small. Paul's word to Agrippa that he had lived after the straightest sect of the Jew religion, his saying before the Sanhedrin, "I am a Pharisee, a son of a Pharisee," and his entire life before his conversion, suggest that his father, though living among the Gentiles, was a zealous observer of the law. It seems not improbable that the sister in Jerusalem remained a strict Jew and hostile to Christianity, for had she shared Paul's faith, we might have expected some indication of the fact, that the conspiracy to kill Paul was known to his sister's son implies that she was in touch with the hostile Jews.

It is not quite certian what Paul means when he says that he is a Hebrew of Hebrews. Phil. iii. 5, but the phrase probably signifies no more than this, that Paul was of pure Jewish decent. Since Paul's home was that of jealous Pharisees, we may infer that he was most carefully instructed in the Scriptures from earliest youth. One writer says that the Jews learned the law as soon as they became sensible of anything. We can only conjecture what the school life of Paul may have been while he was a boy at Tarsus.

Paul was evidently quite a young boy when he went to Jerusalem to receive instruction in the law. It was not necessary that he should go there to secure his training, for there were competent teachers elsewhere, but there was a temple with its imperishable fascination for the Jewish heart. If Paul was ambitious to become a rabbi, no place of study could for a moment rival in attraction with the holy city. The work of a Jewish school was chiefly memorizing. The teacher repeated again and again an explanation of a passage of Scripture and the scholars were required to commit it to memory. The power of a rabbi over his pupils was great, for he regarded himself as a mediator between God and men, who made known the divine will and helped men to keep it.

It is probable that Paul returned to Tarsus and remained there some time prior to his appearance in Acts at the martyrdom of Stephen. It is doubtful whether he could have found opportunity in Jerusalem to learn his trade, for his trade was that of weaving goat's hair and that was a Cilician industry.

Before Stephen arose, the opposition to Christianity had come largely from Sadducees and had not gone further than imprisonment. It was charged that Stephen spoke blasphemous words against Moses and God, and said that Jesus would destroy the temple and change the customs of Moses. Acts vi. 11-14. Thus the point at issue between Stephen and his opponents was indeed vital to the existence of the Jewish system. Either Stephen and his position must be overcome, or Pharisaism would be undermined. Such was the man and such the position which called out the strength of Paul. Paul himself tells us that he consented to Stephen's murder, which is apparent from Luke's narrative, for this says that Paul held the garments of the witnesses while they hurled stones at the martyr. Acts vii. 5-8 and viii. 1. From the day of Stephen's death Paul entered into the work of persecution with his whole soul. He purposed to wipe the whole sect of Christians out of existence.

In proceeding against the disciples, Paul sought first to make them blaspheme Jesus and renounce their loyalty to him, and if he failed in this, he caused them to be put to death. Many persons were imprisoned and many put to death, both men and women. Acts xxvi. 10. Paul was widely known and feared, and before he went to Damascus, Ananias, who lived in that city, had heard from many, the evil Paul had done in Jerusalem. Paul himself says he persecuted the Church beyond measure, and that he made havoc of the faith. Gal. i. 23. After this Paul's life changed and he became a most zealous and successful herald of the gospel. The occasion of the change was the revelation of the Son of God in him and was very sudden. Immediately he departed into Arabia. The heart of the event was the spiritual apprehension of the Son of God. Christ was revealed in him. In 1 Cor. xv. 4-8, Paul is speaking of the appearance of the risen Jesus, which confirmed the Scripture, teaching that he should rise. After appearing to Cephas, to the twelve, and to all the apostles, he appeared to Paul. Thus in these accounts, we are informed that it was about noon when Paul was arrested by a heavenly light, (Acts xxii. 6), that this light was great above the brightness of the sun; that it shone round about them all (Acts xxvi. 13), that the one who spoke to Paul said, "I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest," and then they all fell to the earth. The hour of Paul's conversion to faith in the risen Messiah, witnessed also the creation of a conviction in his soul, that he was to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, which duty he faithfully performed.

SARAH NEILL.

False Pretenses in the Pulpit.

What is surprising is that Mr. Crapsey and other clergymen of his tendencies and opinions do not see that the moment they reach disbelief in the church's foundations they should get out of the pulpit and not wait to be put out—that their continued presence there is a living lie—that they are obtaining money under false pretenses by trying to remain there. The obtuseness of moral perception and the destitution of self-respect that clergymen exhibit under such circumstances is what is surprising and shocking.

When officers of the United States Army believed in 1861 that the Union ought to be destroyed and the nation divided they did not try to keep on eating the nation's bread. They resigned their commissions and stopped their pay. However wrong they were from political viewpoints—however ungratefully they may have repudiated their obligation for education and support up to that time—they at least declined to try to draw money from the institution they sought to destroy, and did what they could to preserve self-respect and maintain their personal integrity.

Yet we see clergymen—chosen and set up as moral exemplars, and soliciting the trust they receive—denying the faith whereby the institution that feeds them lives, and clinging to their pulpits and their salaries. They declare in effect that the church ought not to exist because its foundation of faith is a sham, and yet they ask it to continue to exist that they may get money by it.

The prevalence of this attitude among preachers must make observing laymen often wonder whether the way to begin to establish honesty and put down dishonesty is not to stop "graft" in the pulpit and inspire the clergy with a resolution to refrain from trying to obtain money by false pretenses—to imbue the clergy with just a little everyday sense of personal honesty in money matters.—The Inter Ocean.

The foregoing are the observations of a secular paper apropos charges of heresy which have been filed against the Rev. Algernon S. Crapsey, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church at Rochester, N. Y. The "reverend" gentlemen is charged with saying in a series of sermons last February that Jesus was but a man as other men, denying His divine paternity. It is immaterial what the charges are, or what the offence committed against the doctrinal standard of the body of which Mr. Crapsey is a member. As soon as he ceased to be in harmony with the teaching of his church he was in duty bound to withdraw and seek a community in which his views would be agreeable. He should not wait to be ousted by a committe called to try him for heresy, but when he was fully convinced that he was at variance with the doctrinal standard of the organization, he should have sought another body which holds the views he has espoused. In this way the time, expense and worry incident to such a trial, and the disgrace sure to follow, would be avoided.

The minister who is opposed to the teaching of his church and still uses the prestige guaranteed to him by virtue of his membership within its fold, and accepts and enjoys the favors which the church extends to him, is not only ungrateful, but sacrifices every just claim to consideration and respect. A strictly honest and conscientious man will not use the prestige the church gives him to promulgate private opinions and to air contrary winds of doctrine, but will seek a place where he may carry on his propaganda without let or hindrance. If he can not find such a place in some other church there is nothing to keep him from organizing a church to his own liking. Scores of "churches" have been founded within the last ten years by persons for whom the doctrinal or ethical standard of the churches in which they were reared were not congenial. There is infinitely less disgrace and occasion of reproach in such a course, than in remaining in the church, and at the same time using every means to discredit its teaching and lower its respect.

Brethren and sisters of the Church of God, let us examine ourselves whether we be in the faith. There is a standard of faith to which our views must conform. It has been given by divine authority. If we come short of the measure, let us employ all the means at our command to reach that standard. Those means are ample. It is only a question of proper use.

A. H. ZEISER.

It Was a Kind Act.

Frank Treffrey, the popular Omaha conductor, performed a deed recently which the recording angel noted down to his credit. While on his southbound trip, about two miles above Northrup, he saw a colt a short distance from the track fast in a barb wire fence. It had ceased its struggles from sheer exhaustion and was in a most frightful predicament. On reaching Northrup the humane instincts of the conductor prompted him to suggest to the train crew that they reverse the engine and run back to the relief of the helpless animal. This was agreed to, and first obtaining tools from a blacksmith the relief train stanted out and performed the deed that saved the life of one of man's best friends. When a whole train of cars will come to the aid of a poor dumb beast it shows that human sympathy is very much alive.

Christ's Resurrection.

The fact of the resurrection is capable of incontrovertible proof, because it professes to be both an historical and a spiritual fact. As an historical fact, it must meet the demands of historical evidence; and as a spiritual fact it must meet the demands of spiritual evidence. That it can do both, nineteen centuries of Christian belief declare, and sixty generations of saints have gone down to the dark river calmly relying upon an historical fact which they accept, and a spiritual experience of the reality of the risen life, of which no logic of scholars can rob them.

The resurrection of Jesus from the dead is an historical fact. The tomb is empty, and history can carry us back step by step until, with Peter and John, we are in the tomb on the first Easter day, to find its Occupant gone. To his friends Jesus showed himself, now to one, now to two, now to the eleven, now to five hundred brethren at once. And the occasions of such manifestations were in the cold light of day in the open country, while the persons were those who were so certain of his death that they found it hard to believe in his resurrection. Three of those who became his followers saw him even after his ascension. To Stephen and Saul of Tarsus and John were granted visions of the glorified Lord, for the truth of which they actually laid down their lives; while one, as though anticipating the shifting sands of criticism, declared: "We have not followed cunningly devised fables." The scores of thousands of Christian Sundays stretch back to the rent tomb in the garden of the Arimathean. Indeed, no event in the history of the world is more thoroughly authenticated than the resurrection of Jesus. But history has little weight for those who have formulated an "historico-religious" theory. The myths of their own imagination suit them better.—Episcopal Recorder.

Contractor's Point of View.

The Brotherhood Star reports this conversation:

A gentleman once said to us, "I do not favor prohibiting the sale of liquor, it would be an injustice to the men in business. Besides, it would 'throw thousands out of employment.'"

We replied, "You do not look at [illegible] issue from the right side, You [illegible] contractor's view."

"Just before the war closed, a [illegible] ernment contractor said in a [illegible] hope the war will not close under two years. I will lose thousands of dollars; besides, many men will be turned out of employment from the Government works.'

"A lady passenger, clad in weeds of mourning, rose to her feet, and with tearful voice, said, 'Sir, I have a brave boy and husband sleeping the sleep of death in a soldiers' cemetery. I have only one boy left, and he is in front of the foe. Oh, God, I wish the cruel war would close now.'"

He saw the point. Do you?

It may be your boy that will fall the next victim to the drink industry.

Would you consider the "trade" worth such a price? Stop the murderous traffic.

My Christian friend you are watched. The world is watching you. Enemies are watching you. Sinners, scoffers, skeptics, and hypocrite are watching you. And if you go wrong, there are those that will rejoice at your failure, and exult over your downfall. It will not harm you to be watched, if you only watch yourself. You are not to be dependent upon sinners and scoffers to warn you of danger, or persuade you to duty. You are to "watch and pray, lest you enter into temptation." No person on earth has so great an interest in your prosperity as yourself. And if you are led astray, or go wrong, others may talk about it, but you must feel the pain, and anguish, and sorrow, that comes from wrong-doing. Hence it is your business to watch yourself, to "watch unto prayer," and to maintain a life of constant vigilance in the service of your divine Master.

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through time and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Dead PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 7, 1905. NUMBER 21.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTIONS advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Last Good Night.

Mother, good night! my work is done,
I go to rest with the setting sun;
But not to wake with the morning light;
So, dearest mother, a long good night!

Father, good night! the shadows glide
Silently down to the river's side,—
The river itself with stars is bright,
So, dearest father, a long good night!

Sisters, good night! the rose's close
Their dewy eyes for the night's repose;
And a strange dampness must discolor my sight,
So, dearest sisters, a long good night!

Brothers, good night! the sunset plush
Has died away, and a midnight hush
Has settled o'er plain and mountain height;
So dearest brothers, a long good night!

Good night! good night! nay do not weep;
I'm weary of earth, I long to sleep—
I shall wake again with the dawning light
Of eternal day,—good night, good night!

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 4.

1. I Nabouchodonosor was prosperous in my house and in good health.

2. I saw a dream-vision and it frightened me, and I was disturbed upon my couch, and the seelngs of my head disturbed me.

3. And through me a decree was ordered to lead into my presence all the wise men of Babuloon that they might make known unto me the comparative-meaning of my dream-vision.

4. And the enchanters, magoi, treasury-keepers Chaldaioi came their way in, and I told the dream-vision in their presence,—and they did not make known unto me its compurative meaning.

5. Until Daniel, whose name is Baltasar according to the name of my God, came and who hath God's Holy Spirit in himself. To whom I said, O Baltasar, thou ruler of the enchanters, in whom I am aware that God's Holy Spirit is, and that no mystery disableth thee, do thou listen to the seeing of my dream-vision which I saw, and do thou tell me the comparative-signification thereof.

7. Upon my couch I was gazing with wonder, and lo, a tree in the midst of the earth and the height of it much.

8. The tree became great and strong the height of it reached even unto the canopy, and its outer-covering unto the limit of all the earth.

9. Its leaves were seasonably beautiful and its fruit much, and sustenance for all was therein the use of it, and beneath it the wild beasts of the fields found shelter and in its branches the birds of the heavens took up their abode and all flesh was supported therefrom.

10. I was beholding in a vision of the night upon my couch, and lo, a spiritual messenger, even a saintly one from heaven came down.

11. And spake with might, and in this wise said he, cut off the tree and pluck off its branches, and shake off its leaves and scatter its fruit; let the wild beasts be shaken from beneath its branches.

12. Only the planting of its roots in the earth leave, and in a band of iron and copper, and in the green verdure outside of it, and in the dew of the heavens shall it have lain down, and in the midst of the wild beasts shall be its portion in the use of the grass of the earth.

13. Its heart will have been alienated from men and the heart of a wild beast will have been given it; and seven seasons will change themselves over it.

14. Through judgment by comparison "eir" (translated above "a spiritual messenger" in 10th verse) is the word (Ho logos) and "bresma" (an oracular response) to the inquiry of saints, that the living may know that the Lord is the Most High of the kingdom of men, and that to whomsoever he may think best he will give it, and that he will stand up over it that which is accounted nought of men.

15. This is the dream-vision which I saw I Nabouchodonosor the king, ...do thou Baltasar tell the comparative-meaning, because all the wise men of my kingdom are unable to disclose the comparative-meaning of it to me. But thou Daniel art able, because God's Holy Spirit is in thee.

16. Then Daniel whose name was Baltasar, was borne away as it were for an hour, and his reasoning faculties disturbed him: and Baltasar made answer and said, my lord let the dream-vision be for those who hate thee, and the comparative-solution thereof for thine enemies.

17. The tree which thou sawest the greatest and mighty one, whose height reached unto the canopy, and the spreading reach of it unto all the earth.

18. And whose leaves were flourishing and its fruit much, and in the use of which there was sustenance for all, beneath which the wild-beasts of the field were dwelling, and in whose branches the birds of the heavens were nesting.

19. Thou art it, O king; because thou hast been enlarged and made strong, and thy majesty hath been made great and it hath reached unto the heavens and thy lordship unto the ends of the earth.

20. And because the king saw spirit even a holy one coming down from the heavens, and he said, pluck off the tree and destroy it, only leave the growth of its roots in the earth, and in an iron and in a copper band and in the green verdure outside of it, and in the dew of the heavens out in the air will it have stayed, and in the midst of the wild beasts will be its portion until seven seasons (or appointed times) be changed over it.

21. This is the comparative meaning of it, O king, and is the comparative-judgment of the Most High which hath come to my lord the king.

22. And they will drive thee away from mankind, and in the midst of wild beasts will be thy dwelling; and grass will they morsel out to thee like an ox; and from the dew of the heavens will thou be met, and seven seasons will be changed over thee, until thou hast become aware that the Most High ruleth as Lord of the kingdom of men, and to whomsoever he may think best he will give it.

23. And because they said, leave the growth of the roots of the tree, thy kingdom abideth for thee from the time when thou shalt become aware that the official-power (or qualification) is the heavenly qualification.

24. Therefore, O king, let my counsel be pleasing to thee, and mayest thou have redeemed thy sins with acts of mercy and thy iniquities with acts of pity for the needy; perchance God will be long-suffering for thy stumbling-steps.

25. All these things come upon Nabouchodonosor the king.

26. A twelve-month afterward as he was walking unto the inner-sanctuary of his kingdom in Babuloon,

27. The king made answer and said, Is not this the great Babuloon which I have built for a house of royalty with the controling-power of my strength, for the honor of my glory?

28. While the word was yet in the mouth of the king, a voice from heaven occurred. To thee are they speaking, O king Nabouchonosor, Thy kingdom hath gone from thee.

29. And they are driving thee out and away from mankind, and thy dwelling will be in the midst of the wild beasts of the field, and grass will they morsel out to thee like an ox, and seven seasons will be changed over thee, until thou shalt comprehend that the Most High is ruling as lord of the kingdom of men; and that to whomsoever he may think best, he will give it.

30. In the self-same hour the word was fulfilled on Nabouchodonosor, and he was driven out and away from mankind, and ate grass like an ox, and from the dew of the heavens his body was wet until his hair had become much like the hair of lions, and nails like bird's claws.

31. And at the end of the days I Nabouchodonosor raised my eyes to heaven, and my senses returned unto me, and I eulogized the Most High an I I praised and glorified the one who liveth forever, because his official-power is an everlasting official-power and his kingdom unto generation and generation;

32. And all who inhabit the earth have been accounted as naught; and according to his will he doeth with thee host (Sunaines) of heaven and with the habitable of the earth; and there is no one who will do with his hand in opposition and who will say unto him, What hast thou done?

33. In that season my senses returned unto me and I came into the honor of my kingdom; and my outward-appearance returned unto me, and my petty rulers and my great men sought me, and I obtained control over my kingdom, and exceeding majesty was added unto me.

34. Now thou I Nabouchodonosor praise and exalt and glorify the King of heaven because all his deeds are true and his paths judicial-ways, and all those who go their way in haughty-pride he is able to humble.

COMMENT.

The reader will do well to carefully note the forms of statement and the particular wording of the dream-vision and its solution as given in this chapter—especially what is said of the word "eir" and the interpretation of it given in the 14th verse so different from the C. V. and R. V. Any one who will do this will clearly see that a Scriptural "dream-vision" cannot and must not be confounded with ordinary dreams nor ordinary visions, whether of the day or the night. The king's name moreover in its meaning is significant of the over weening pride with which he was lifted up. Whoever changed it to "Nebuchadnezzar" made it impossible to translate it or to get at this important fact. Because he had attained his great wealth and power from cattle-raising and the products of the fields he had named himself as it were the creator of the ox and all these resultant generic products, in a word "this great Babuloon which I have built." The experience herein given also illustrates another well-attested truth of revelation that under God's chastening hand we are scourged and justly too with the very sins in manner and kind which we have committed. "As a man soweth even so shall he reap." Nabouchodonosor in his crazy arrogance ignores his Creator and the Creator of all things, and is made actually crazy and "turned out to grass" and to eat grass with the cattle he glories in having created, until he "comprehends" who and what he really is. This is the great object lesson here taught.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 2.

A series of essays written by members of the Young People's Society of the Church of God Cleveland, O. Compiled from both profane and Biblical history.

In our last lesson, we learned of the wonderful conversion of Saul of Tarsus. How God saw that Paul was a man of sincerity of purpose and just such an one as was needed to engage in the work of the Lord in order to bless mankind by establishing the gospel of the kingdom among them. As Paul often said, he was not ordained of man but by God. Paul was always zealous in whatever he undertook, a man of determination, and he now undertook to show that Christianity was not merely a religion, but also a system of life and action. Its introduction amid the society of the Roman Empire produced changes of momentous consequence, which we will study. Here we find Paul beginning his career as a preacher where his career as a persecutor had ended.

Immediately after his conversion Paul retired into Arabia. It is not recorded why he went there, but it is supposed that he went where he might meditate and acquaint himself with God and his purposes. As a new born babe in Christ Jesus, he desired the sincere milk of the Word and Paul's early education both helped him to readily comprehend the great truths and to set them forth to his fellowmen. His next move was to go to Damascus and straightway proclaim Jesus, here he was threatened and had to be rescued by his brethren. Fleeing to Jerusalem, he was taken by Barnabas to the Apostles and introduced, he preached boldly in the name of the Lord and disputed with the Hellenists with such success that they formed a plot to kill him. In a trance Paul experienced in the temple the Lord told him to depart quickly from Jerusalem because the Jews would not receive his testimony. Acts xxii. 18.

Paul was unwilling to leave and urged in favor of his staying, the fact that he was known as a persecutor of the believers. His testimony as he thought, would have special weight, but the Lord refused the request, and told Paul to depart to the Gentiles. Here, then, is Paul's special commission. In the vision and experiences of that hour of his conversion, we must see the source of Paul's conviction that he had a mission from Jesus to the Gentiles. First. Paul himself was from the Gentile world, from one of the Greek cities of Asia and his father had lived there before him. His own experience had given him a much broader horizon than the original apostles had. He knew the Gentile world, he had seen its elements of good and could sympathize with it as the twelve apostles could not. Second, the vision of Jesus had come to him when he was bent upon destroying the church, and thus the pure graciousness of God in his salvation was made to stand out in singular prominence. But if salvation was offered to him on single condition that he would accept it, then it must be for Gentiles, no less than for Jews, for both alike can accept what is offered them. Rom. i. 16. There had been very few Gentiles allowed to enter as members into the Christian church up to this time, but men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who came to Antioch, used to speak to Greeks, also giving the good news of the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number that believed turned to righteousness. According to Acts this great question (of whether Hebrew birth was necessary to enter the Christian church) was first presented definitely to Peter in the case of a Roman centurion named Cornelius; and a vision which had appeared immediately before the question emerged, determined him to enter the house and the society of Cornelius and set forth to him the good news, on the principle that "in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him." The church in Antioch was unsettled somewhat about this same question when Barnabas summoned Paul. For ten years Paul labored in Cilicia and Syria, we do not know how these years were spent in detail, the only direct reference which Paul makes to this work is in the epistle to the Galatians. He says that the churches in Judea heard that he was preaching the faith, that he had once sought to destroy and they glorified God in him. But this period of ten years was spent in successful evangelistic work, chiefly among the Gentiles, and was doubtless significant for Paul. No doubt his thought of Christianity was matured and his long experience in this work prepared him for the larger and better known mission of later years. In fact he must have become perfectly assured of the truth of his principles and established in the belief that the work of the Gentile was indeed a work of God.

The report concerning this Antioch church came to Jerusalem and they sent forth Barnabas as far as Antioch, who when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad; and he exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they should cleave unto the Lord. xi. 22, 23. Barnabas remembered his short experience with Paul in Jerusalem and thought he was well suited to peculiar circumstances of the Antiochian congregation so went to Tarsus and brought Paul back. In the 26th chapter we read, "And it came to pass that even for a whole year they met in the assembly and taught much people; and that the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. About this time there was a famine in all Judea and Paul and Barnabas fulfilled the ministration of relief by taking the contributions that each individual could give to the elders of the churches, and they saw that the brethren were cared for. This hospitality did not alone extend to the brethren, but to all whom they could see really needed the help, showing us that hospitality was exercised among the early church, and that it has always been the rule for the stronger brethren to support the weak.

The first general preaching to the Gentiles was that in Antioch and hence Luke's statement is probable that with the success of this preaching arose the name Christian. It is thought that this name originated with those outside the church, just as the supporters of Herod are called Herodians so the disciples of Christ are called Christians. The rise of the name Christians implies that the Gentile believers in Antioch were recognized as independent of the synagogues and separate from the Jews.

The dedication of Paul and Barnabas was not performed by the church, but by Symeon, Lucius and Manaen. While these five men were fasting on a certain occasion, and engaged in some undescribed service belonging to them as prophets and teachers, it was borne in upon them by the Spirit that Barnabas and Paul should be separated unto the work among the Gentiles. In what way this communication of the Spirit came we are not told. A certain preparation for it lay in the fact that they had been signally blessed of the Lord in the work in Antioch, which was largely a work among Gentiles. Here they had shown a manifest fitness for this kind of work and hence their brethren may well have felt that it was the will of God that they should be dedicated to it. Accordingly they fasted and laid their hands upon Barnabas and Paul with prayer, and sent them forth. No authority was given them. There was simply a recognition of the fact that the Spirit had called them, and a prayerful dedication of them to the appointed service by their associates in the work in Antioch. We must not loose sight of the fact that Paul had been laboring for years before this, although his preaching had been that of an individual. This trip to Cyprus is generally called his first missionary tour. Paul was not a missionary of the Antioch church, supported and directed by it, he was independent in his work, although Antioch was in a sense his church home, because he was in full sympathy with it, and it was only natural that he should return thither again and again during the years of his labors.

The missionaries accompanied by John Mark, a cousin of Barnabas, began their work in Salamas and went through the whole island to Paphos. In these missionary journeys he preached wherever he could. Generally, he first looked up his Jewish brethren. In some of the larger cities there was a synagogue. He was a Jewish rabbi, recognized as such, probably more some insignia which served to designate him as a rabbi, so that when he was seen there, he was invited to address the congregation. If he was refused a hearing in the synagogue, or was in a city where there was none, he would preach in the market place. Every Greek and Roman city had a market place, where ideas as well as goods were interchanged with freedom. Here Paul often talked with people in groups or found his way into the home of some one who was already of his belief and there talked to the people gathered to hear him. He did not confine himself to preaching, but did a great deal of personal work; he went from house to house, was not afraid of emotion or enthusiasm, talked to men, oftentimes with tears in his eyes. He was on fire with a passionate fervor and urged his disciples also to be fervid in their belief. When he preached to the Jews he followed very much the line of argument which Stephen had followed. It is interesting to compare Stephen's speech, delivered at the time of his martyrdom, and the first sermon preached by Paul in a synagogue. Paul begins as Stephen began, with the history of Israel; he shows how Israel had been expectant of a Messiah, and yet how it had been characterized by unbelief and in all its history had been disobedient; breaks off the history before it is completed. States that the Messiah was born of the seed of David as promised; that Israel had put him to death; and then bears testimony as a living, personal witness that this Jesus has risen from the dead. This appears to have been his habitual course of argument with the Jews in his earlier preaching. He bases his whole argument for Christianity on the fact of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, attested not by others, but by his personal, vision and personal communion with him as a living Messiah.

The one incident of interest related in this tour to Cyprus is Paul's meeting with the Roman pro-consul, Sergius Paulus. He summoned the missionaries out of curiosity to hear something new. A Jewish sorcerer that was with the pro-consul opposed Paul and his companion as he feared they might supplant him in his favor. This opposition aroused all the energy of Paul, and according to Luke he spoke words of judgment against the sorcerer which were straightway fulfilled in a temporary blindness. Luke tells us the pro-consul believed, being astonished.

The tour through Cyprus does not appear to have resulted in many conversions, but we know that Paul worked in every way to show himself approved unto God and probably endured many hardships and temptations during the time, from his conversion to now, which he does not record. But the work which he did, is an example to us to continue to so let our light shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father in heaven.

Brethren, beloved in the Lord:

On Saturday May 20 I went to Barberton the home of brother and sister Juergensen. After a warm welcome we consulted, and proceeded to make arrangements for a first public effort to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom in Barberton. Sunday afternoon we went to Akron and met the few that remain faithful to the simplicity of the gospel. I was there informed that a few years ago there was an excellent Church of God in Akron, but men had risen speaking perverse things, and the flock was scattered and peeled. We had an uplifting meeting, and after breaking of bread in memory of our blessed Lord, the great Head of the Church, it was decided by those present to place the light on the lamp stand, to hold regular meetings for the worship of God, for fellowship, for breaking of bread and prayers. First meeting on first Sunday of June, at the home of Sister's Hazel. May they all keep themselves in the love of God. On Monday we completed arrangements for a public service at the Disciple meeting house in Barberton the next evening. The prospects were good for success in numbers, as a good many promised to be present. However the meeting was small, but from the after remarks we have reason to hope for as much glory to God, as if the attendance had been large. "All things work together for good to them that love God." We expect to make further efforts in the near future. Much credit is due brother and sister Juergensen for their active work, and liberality in trying to spread the truth, but let them not be weary, for in the day of Christ, they will find they "have not run in vain, neither labored in vain. May not one of us be weary in well doing. We shall reap, if we faint not.

There is continued agitation in the Balkan regions, and the little flame is being fanned, so that a large blaze may spring up, unless it is speedily suppressed.

The Sultan of Morrocco has refused French overtures, and called for an international congress to arrange differences. France may refuse to attend, which would force England to do likewise, and this would place the other nations in a very awkward position.

One thing is unique in relation to the Japanese naval forces. Since the beginning of the war she has bought no war ships, except a few smaller vessels. The accidents of the blockading of Port Arthur lost her some ships, and yet she has fought and destroyed a force superior in strength and armament to her own, and is now stronger than when the war commenced.

Battle of the Sea of Japan.

Admiral Togo says the above name shall be the one to designate his victory over the Russian fleet. It seems that the Japanese had established themselves across the mouth of the straits of Corea, with one base on Corea at Masampo, and another at Saseboo in Japan, across a bay from Nagasaki. Here they lay in wait till Admiral Rojestvensky sailed his fleet into the trap set for them. Togo had laid mines, had his submarine boats, torpedo boats, and smaller craft all in readiness, as well as his heavier vessels. When the time came to strike, the blow was given, the Russian fleet all but wiped out, the Admiral in command severely wounded and taken prisoner. After each victory of the Japanese since the war began, there has been talk of peace, but there has been none so far. The Chicago Tribune commenting editorially on this great sea fight says:—

"Greece and Persia, England and Spain, Japan and Russia. The smaller nation in each instance had the better sailors, and thereby won decisive victories. The defeat of the Russian fleet in the straits of Corea is of as much moment to Japan as was the triumph at Salamis to the Greeks or the destruction of the Armada to the English. If Rojestvensky had won the laurels that Togo is entitled to claim, the military men would have said that the situation of Japan was perilous. The financiers would have agreed with them, and the fall in Japanese bonds would have recorded their estimate of the immediate effect of the disaster.

It would be too much to say that the existence of Japan would have been endangered if the Russians had won, but Japanese hopes of becoming the dominant power in the orient would have faded away. The situation of the land armies in Manchuria would have become dangerous in time. The power of Japan to raise money would have been crippled. The exultant Russian government would have strained every nerve to put more men and ships in the orient. Now that practically the entire Russian navy has been sunk or captured, that government is the prey to infinite distress and humiliation.

That does not necessarily mean the advent of peace. After each notable Japanese victory it has been predicted that peace was sure to come. It did not. St. Petersburg said after every defeat that Russia would fight on until she became the victor. It may be that even after this latest disaster, which is irreparable in the immediate future, the voice of the war party may be still for war. It is barely possible that its fierce obstinacy may yield at last. It may become plain that Japan has an admiral who is the greatest sea commander of his day; that Japan has seamen and Russia none to match them; that Japan has a navy and Russia none, and that without a navy the fortunes of war are likely to be against her for a long time to come. If any vessels have escaped Togo and got to Vladivostok they will be sealed up in that port. If any make their way to neutral harbors they will remain there dismantled till the war ends.

Probably Gen. Linevitch soon will have an opportunity to show whether he is a better or a more fortunate gen-

[illegible] Kouropatkin, able to assume that Marshal [illegible] has been quiescent of late because he was waiting to learn the fate of the fleet sight. Now that he has learned it and knows that his communications will not be cut, he is free to move. He can turn his attention to Harbin or Vladivostok, or both. It behooves the Russian general to be on the lookout lest the enemy come upon him unawares.

If the Russians should meet with further reverses by land and be compelled to fall back into Siberia, perhaps as far as Lake Baikal, the situation would be one that would justify hopes of an early peace. It would then be madness for Russia to continue hostilities. It might be impossible for her to do so. Even if the finances of the empire admitted of it, the hatred of the war and of war taxes among the peasants is reaching a critical point."

Of course gloom rules in Russia. The Czar called his ministers to council, and some favor continuing the war, and others want it ended. What the outcome will be no one knows. It is certain that Russia must either gain a victory on the land soon, or be forced out of Manchuria. As the war started to force Russia to withdraw from Manchuria, the Japanese might well stop at that, but as long as Vladivostok holds a hostile fleet, Japan must keep "in the field" with her warships.

Our Death is Our Resurrection.

Rev. A. C. Smither preached at the First Christian Church last night upon "Our Death is Our Resurrection," which was the second sermon in his series of Sunday evening sermons on "The Future Life." He took the unique position last night that a Christian's death is his resurrection into a larger and fuller life. In support of this position he said:

"That man has a dual nature is the testimony of consciousness. Every man knows himself to be more than the mere matter that composes his body. This two-fold nature was bestowed upon the race in its creation. There are in man a natural body and a spiritual body. These often contend with each other for supremacy. The Christian often longs for the liberty that shall come in his freedom from the limitations of earth life.

"Death is the severing of these two bodies, the liberating of the spiritual from bondage to the fleshly. In death the spiritual body emerges from the fleshly body and is adjusted to its spiritual environments. Nature furnishes beautiful analogies in the life of the oak that emerges from the bondage of the acorn, in the eagle that grows out of the egg and in the butterfly which is the outgrowth from, and the victory over, the chrysalis. Nature everywhere points to the immediacy of the resurrection. This doctrine is confirmed by reason. The flesh has served its purpose and returns to the dust whence it came. And well it does. It could serve no purpose in the future life. There is no inherent reason why the spirit should be held in bonds for ages before its eventual inheritance. This is a heathen notion and not biblical.

"This teaching is confirmed by scripture when death is described as an exodus, a going out, a victory over the limitations of this fleshly pilgrimage. Jesus assures man of his immediate resurrection when He says "I am the resurrection and the life," with no hint in his words that the resurrection will be at a future date. His words were rather a rebuke for Martha's expectation of a future resurrection. He promised to meet the penitent thief that day in Paradise. Here was a recognition of the fact that Jesus and the thief would together be in the realms of infinite joy. Jesus taught that God was a God of the living and that even the dead were alive to Him.

"Paul also expressed a desire to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord. This was his faith in the future world. Paul elsewhere teaches about the body that it was a tent soon to fall into decay while he should inherit after he had passed from this world an abiding house which unquestionably refers to the spiritual body that man should possess in death. The whole discussion of Paul in that marvelous fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians reflects a new meaning when read in the light of this theory. Jesus in his resurrection illustrates the doctrines of this sermon.

"In the final end of all earthly affairs there will be a general gathering of all creatures at which the righteousness and goodness of God will be recognized and declared before the uni-evil [illegible] separation from God and [illegible]

Eld. A. C. Smither;

I was prevented by illness from hearing your previously announced discourse on the subject "Our Death is Our Resurrection" but I have read a synopsis of it in the Los Angeles Times under date of May 8th. You affirm that man is a dual being, that he has a twofold nature, that was bestowed on the race at its creation. That there coexists in man a natural body, and a spiritual body. That death is the severing of these two bodies, the liberating of the spiritual from the bondage of the fleshly. That at death the spiritual body emerges from the fleshly. You affirm that nature furnishes beautiful analogies in the life of the oak, that emerges from the bondage of the acorn; in the eagle that grows out of the egg, and other like natural occurences. You affirm that this teaching is confirmed by scripture when death is described as an exodus; a going out; a victory over the limitations of the flesh. You affirm that Jesus assures every man of his immediate resurrection when he says "I am the resurrection and the life," with no hint in his words that the resurrection would be at a future date. His words were rather a rebuke to Martha for her expectation of a future resurrection. You affirm that He promised to meet the thief that day in Paradise and that Jesus and the thief would be together in the realms of infinite joy.

You refer also to Paul's expressed desire to be absent from the body and present with the Lord; and that that marvelous chapter of Cor. 15, reflects a new meaning when read in the light of this theory.

Now in all kindness and with a desire to know the truth;—for it is the truth that will make us free—let us examine these various affirmations and contentions to ascertain how far they harmonize with the teachings of The Christ and His apostles.

First then as to man's dual nature. His having in this life both a natural and a spiritual body. The conversation between the Saviour and Nicodemus will throw some light on this. Jesus said that which is born of the flesh is flesh and that which is born of the spirit is spirit, and that he—Nicodemus—would have to be born again in order to get into the Kingdom of God. In order to be born again there must be another begettal. Now the spiritual body is incorruptible, and in order to be incorruptible one must be begotten of incorruptible seed which is the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever. 1 Peter i: 23.

Those only then can have spiritual bodies who have been begotten by the Word of God, and they get the spiritual body at the resurrection, for says Paul so also is the resurrection of the dead * * it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body * *. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural: and afterward that which is spiritual. It seems clear therefore that though there are two bodies they do not co-exist in man—one follows the other, in those who have been born again.

As to your second affirmation I remark that their is no analogy between the revivifying of something having died, and the growth of a plant from its seed or the growth of an animal from an egg.

If the acorn dies, if the vital element in it be destroyed there will be no oak. If the vital germ in the egg be destroyed there will be no eaglet. If the life of the larvae is put out, there will be no butterfly. Read what Prof. Drummond says regarding this matter.

As to your third contention, that death is going out, I concede it is a going out of life; but that it gives us a victory over the limitations of the flesh is surely not the Scriptural view of death. It is spoken of as an enemy. The last enemy to be destroyed is death, and the apostle exultingly writes "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality: then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory "Oh death where is thy sting, O grave where is thy victory * * but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory (over death and the grave) through our Lord Jesus the Christ * * who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.

Your fourth affirmation that Jesus assures man of his immediate resurrection, when he says I am the resurrection and the life, is an assumption for which I can see no warrant in the [illegible] that there is an rebuke to Martha for saying know he will rise again in the resurrection at the last day, showing she had an expectation of a resurrection at some future time: for Jesus uses almost the same language in the sixth chapter of John 40, 44, and 54 verses. Speaking of those who should believe in him, he says they "may have everlasting life and I will raise them up at the last day." Could raise them up mean anything else than a resurrection. On one occasion the Saviour said when thou makest a feast invite not thy kinsmen and rich neighbors, but the poor, the lame and the blind. They cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

But let us turn to the resurrection of Jesus, an event fraught with more of importance to the human race than any other that ever transpired on this planet. It is the foundation of the Christian's hope. "If Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain and your faith is vain. If we believe that Jesus died and rose again so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent (anticipate) those who are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ (dead up to that moment) shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words (that is when one falls asleep, or dies, the words are used interchangeably).

You observe that the consolation and hope of the Christian is founded on the resurrection of the Christ. If we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so (in like manner) them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, to life as we learn from what follows and when? When the Lord descends from heaven with a shout.

Now the resurrection of Jesus did not occur till after he had been dead three days; and then it was a restoration to life of one who had died, and so complete was the restoration, that He was recognizable by those having known him previous to his death.

Now I see no resemblance in the resurrection of Jesus to what occurs when one dies. You define death as a seperation of a natural body from the spiritual body, and say that a resurrection occurs at the same time. Now as we all know the natural body is not resurrected at death; but goes into the grave, and as the spiritual body cannot die, what is resurrected or restored to life. I would like to know. A resurrection implies a precedent death. Things not having died, cannot be resurrected. I think it amounts to this: that you do not believe in a resurrection at all; for as you define it there is no resurrection; no restoration to life of anything having died. The Saviour said "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore. I have said the gates of the grave shall not prevail against my church. I have said that everyone who seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day; and behold I have the Keys of the grave and of death: I can unbar the tomb I can restore to life.

The New Testament is luminous with the doctrine of the resurrection, but the eyes of the theologians of this day have been so blinded by a belief in the natural immortality of the Soul, that they cannot see the light, well may we exclaim as did Paul before Agrippa why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead.

The following citations together with those already given will show to some extent the prominence given to the resurrection in the teachings of the Christ and his Apostles.

To the Sadducees who put the hypothetical case of the woman having had seven husbands, the Saviour said "Those accounted worthy to obtain that age (the age to come) and that resurrection from the dead, * * are sons of God being sons of the resurrection (Diaglott). In Philliplans iii: 10; Paul speaking of the Christ says, "To know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to his death; if possibly I may obtain to the resurrection from among the dead (Diaglott). This is strange language if his hope and expectation was that [illegible] and resurrection would occur simultaneously.

Rev. xx: 5, reads, "But the rest of the dead did not live till the thousand years were ended. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and Holy is he who has a portion in the first resurrection" (Diaglott).

1 Cor. xv: 21 "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits. Afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming." Not at death then but at the coming of the Christ will the dead be raised, and the living changed. Even so, come; Lord Jesus—Come quickly.

This letter is already too long but I would like to add a word as to where Jesus was during the three days between death and resurrection. He had said Matth. xii: 40 "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the stomach of the great fish; so will the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth—Diaglott—In a footnote Diaglott says the meaning is simply in the earth.

To the women who repaired to the sepulchere early in the morning, the angel said fear not. I know that you seek Jesus. He is not here for He is risen: as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. The angel did not say where His body lay, but where the Lord lay. The Paradise to which Jesus referred in His reply to the penitent thief was not in existance at that time, See Rev. ii: 7. Paradise is an Asiatic word, and means a garden. Jesus and the thief did not die on the same day. The soldiers coming at the close of the day finding the thieves alive, broke their legs, for it was not lawful for them to hang on the cross on the Sabbath day; but finding Jesus dead they did not break his legs.

When Pilate learned that Jesus was dead, he had "I marvel that he is so soon dead." It usually took several days to kill by crucifying

The last Quarterly Conference of the year will be held at Dixon, on Saturday and Sunday, June 10th and 11th.

We hope that not only every member of the Board will be present, but that as many as possible, especially those who are isolated from those of the faith, may make an effort to be present. It is possible to make these quarterly gatherings a source of great help to the work in the different communities in which they are held. Some may be strengthened who cannot attend our Annual Conference, and also, many outside our fold might be interested. We cannot expect our Evangelist to do more than his share; he needs the help of every loyal member who can be with us. Let us come then with prayer in our hearts and that holy zeal for the truth which is contagious.

The Prime Minister of England, in delivering a speech, said, that as a result of the recent reorganization of the navy, England's fighting power for the first twenty-four hours of hostilities with any foreign power, has been augmented threefold; that England, and England alone, proposes to have a field gun of so powerful a character, that it is not found convenient or possible to make it of the same caliber as the horse artillery gun, and that in little more than two years the whole army will be rearmed, but long before that time it will be ahead of most armies of the world; that the only real problem of the British army now is the defense of Afghanistan. He believes, however, that the government's triumphs in the direction of peace, particularly by negotiating arbitration treaties, have been greater than in the army or navy.—Christian Alliance.

Consider this Outing.

By far the most attractive trip for health and pleasure the coming vacation season is that offered by the Seashore excursion Thursday, August 17th, over Pennsylvania Lines to Atlantic City, Cape May and seven other famous summer havens on the Atlantic Coast.

The fast through trains over Pennsylvania Lines take passengers in a few hours out of the heat and humidity of summer to the cool breezes of old ocean. This mid-August excursion occurs in this season for rest when it is most convenient to leave business. Excursionists have the added pleasure of seeing Atlantic City when it is in full tide of the fashionable season. The greatest representative gathering ever known at any resort are seen at Atlantic City. As many as 50,000 people at one time promenade the famous boardwalk. The fashionable bathing hours present an unparalled scene—fully 100,000 bathers in the sea and on the beach.

The healthful effect of the seashore trip is due to the salt and pine air. So beneficial has this proved that physicians send their patients there to get the benefit of breathing the pure ocean air.

Special low fares will be in effect for this Seashore excursion. Full information will be freely given by local ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1

...e Best Drinking Place.

On a pleasant day in the early fall
A stranger rode into the town,
And, stopping his horse to the public square,
Glanced this way and that with a frown;
For the place he sought he could not find
(Saloons had been banished that year),
So he called to a lad who passed that way,
And said to him, "Sonny, come here.

"Here's a nickel for you to show the way
To the best drinking-place you know."
"All right," he answered—a quick-witted youth—
"Just turn up that street, sir, and go
Until you come to another upon your right,
Then turn into that and keep on
Till you come to another, turn right again,
And you'll see it quite plainly," said John.

So, thanking the lad, the stranger rode on,
And John gave a hop, skip and jump;
For back came the stranger within a trice,
Brought up—at the old town pump!
"Here you are, sir," said John with a smile;
"The 'best drinking place' to be found.
Take a drink, sir; it's free, and you're welcome, too,
It's good for your health, I'll be bound!"

He took the glass in a good-natured way
And drank of the water so clear.
Then said, "'Tis an excellent drink, I'm sure;
The best I've had for a year."
So saying, he tossed the lad a coin,—
"The lesson is worth that to me.
Keep on playing your temperance jokes,
"I will make the world better," said he.

"Hold Fast Till I Come."

On the wall to my left are these words, "Hold Fast till I Come." As they are almost directly in front of where I sit, I cannot help but see them, and as I was looking at them a short time ago, and pondering over them, I thought them an appropriate text for my short address this morning.

The words are found in the 2nd chapter of Rev. 25 verse, and are a part of a message from the Lord Jesus to the church at Thyatria, "Hold fast till I come." The saints which were at Thyatria have long ago fallen asleep, none of them lived to see Jesus come. The world knows nothing of them, even their city has disappeared. They are to the world as if they never had been. They are dead, they are gone. But he who spake these words "Hold fast till I come" is alive. He is alive forever more, and has the keys of hades and of death, and the saints at Thyatria who held fast will recieve a crown of life when he comes. "Hold Fast till I come." These words still live, they have lived for nearly two thousand years and this morning we can hear them and profit by them, just as we trust many did in the church at Thyatira.

Let us leave for a few moments this verse in Revelations and turn to 2nd Tim. i. 13 where we find these words. Paul's words to Timothy, Hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. Here is an injunction to hold fast the form of sound words. The reason why is most explicit; in 2nd Thes. ii. 10 verse we are told all those who received not the love of the truth shall perish; in the 11th verse we are told that God shall send them a strong delusion that they might believe a lie, and in the 12th verse that they all might be damned who believed not the truth. Paul knew the importance of holding fast the form of sound words. It made lots of difference with him what he held, what he taught and what he believed. We do not find in any of his epistles, or in the Bible for that matter, that it makes no difference what we believe just so we are sincere. It makes a great deal of difference, no matter how sincere we are, if we believe not the truth we are damned. There it is in 2nd Thes. 12 verse, doomed to perish, Without faith it is impossible to please God. So in order to please him we must know what to have faith in. We can see from the foregoing the importance of holding fast the traditions, doctrines and ceremonies, which the apostle taught. The socalled religious world have turned from the living God and are believing in fables, just as the 2nd chapter of Thes. said they would do. If we have believed the doctrines of a false church, we must let them go, and get hold of the true, the promises of God and the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, and then hold them fast till Jesus comes. Therefore brethren, stand fast and hold the traditions which ye have been taught whether by word or by epistle, 2nd Thes. 15th verse. Yes, they were to hold fast the traditions, the doctrines, the ceremonies, etc., which were delivered unto them, and so must we. If we have ... holding the doctrines of men, we must let them go, examine the Scriptures, believe its teachings, grasp the things of God and hold them fast.

In Hebrews the 3rd chapter, 14th verse we are told that we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. When we believed and were baptized we were confident that Christ would give us eternal life when he comes. We are to remain confident unto the end. Confident that God will keep his promises. Confident that Christ will come and receive us unto himself. This shuts out the luke warm or half hearted. There is little or no confidence in a luke warm or half hearted person. In the 6th verse of this chapter of Hebrews it reads, But Christ is a Son over his own house, whose house we are if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. Confidence and rejoicing seem to go together. If we are confident we will be rejoicing, rejoicing in that Blessed Hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

In the church at Thyatria they had much to try them, there was that wicked woman Jezebel, who called herself a prophetess, but she was a seducer, teaching false doctrines and unfortunately many had believed her teachings, and had lost their hope. I do not find that the faithful were to separate themselves from the false prophetess and her followers. They were to hold fast and the Lord promised to add no other burden. We should not separate ourselves from the church because everything is not right, because every thing is not just as it should be. We should hold fast till Jesus comes.

We have a great many injunctions in the Scriptures to help us to hold fast. We should not neglect to assemble ourselves together, we should not neglect to exhort one another. We must not neglect the Lord's Supper, the breaking of bread. We must love the brethren, pray one for another. If we do these things it will help us to hold fast till he comes. Jesus did not say hold fast till death overtakes you, although he knew that death would overtake them. We must be over looking for his coming and be ready for it. I am reminded of a conversation which took place at the Conference in Indiana a year and a half ago. One brother was saying that he was getting old and that he would soon have to die. But a brother said to him, Don't talk about dying, Jesus is coming, get ready to live. Jesus wants us always to keep in mind his coming, that we might live and live more abundantly.

J. C. THOMPSON.

2 Peter iii: 11.

I have chosen this subject of Peter's exhortation to a holy conversation and godliness, because I thought it was one that I most needed the study of myself. In the first part of this chapter Peter describes something of what the condition of the world shall be in the last days. He says that "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming, for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were since the beginning of creation. 2 Pet. iii: 3,4. Paul describes them as lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemous, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, dispisers of those that are good. Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. 2 Tim. iii: 2-4. It does not require any study for us to understand these predictions of the last time, the facts of these things are being forced upon us almst daily by their being literally acted out, and not by a few, but by almost the whole world. Peter tells us that they are willfully ignorant of the fact that God created the earth, and that the world which was then, being overflowed with water perished. But that the heavens and earth which are now, by the same word, are kept in store reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. iii: 6. And this generation who will not believe will not be permitted to see the future of the destruction of this present world. Paul says to the Thessalonians: "But of the times and the seasons brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you, for ye yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief, for when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape." 1 Thess. i: 3. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved what manner of persons ought ye to be, in all holy conversation and godliness.

two weeks ago we learned ... live to ourselves, but that our ... have some effect upon others, so that others, and not ourselves alone, must be considered, we are told to be living epistles of the faith we profess, and our conversation is always an indication to all of the character we build. The position we occupy today is used by Peter as an incentive to a pure and holy conversation—"seeing then that we have the knowledge that all these things shall come to pass, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." Isa has said; Isa lx: 2 "For behold the darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people;" But Paul says: "But ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief, ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day, we are not of the night nor of darkness." This comparison shows what our responsibility is—to show a just, sober, upright and pure conversation to the world which is in darkness, so that others may believe that we live in harmony with what we expect; because our conversation will always show in a certain measure the true character. We cannot expect to be an example by speaking spiritually of the gospel, and take up the spirit of the world in our conversation of secular matters: it is in the smallest of daily duties that one can as James says: show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom. Paul's desire for the Phillipians was: "That ye may be blameless, and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation among whom ye shine as lights. We all know that we have no light of our own, but we must reflect the true light which Jesus has shown in his life and by his words, and we may all well ask ourselves if our conversation shows this light to others, this may not only be done in speaking of the Truth but when carrying out secular duties. For Peter tells us in 1 Pet. i: 15 "But as he who hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation."

So our words may be shown acceptable to God in words of honor. 1 Pet. iii: 10. "For he that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips that they speak no guile," or in words of kindness. Eccl. x: 12. "The words of a wise man's mouth are gracious, but the lips of a fool will swallow up himself;" or in sound words, 2 Tim. i: 13 "Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." "Sound speech that cannot be condemned, that he that is of contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you" Tit. ii: 8. And Jesus says: Matt. xii: 36. "But I say unto you that every idle word that men shall speak ... shall give account thereof in the day of judgment," or by words of uprightness. Isa xxxiii: 15 (speaking of those who shall live in the future) "He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly:" or in words of mercy. Jas. ii: 12, 13. "So speak ye and so do as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty, For he shall have judgment without mercy that hath showed no mercy, and mercy rejoiceth against judgment," or in words of purity. Eph. iv: 29. "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good, to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." All of these things may seem too much to attain to, but if an effort is made to add one virtue at a time, we will surely grow, and if we keep in mind that our obedience to Peter's exhortation, is not only for ourselves, but so that others may see we are living above this present evil age; and also will be an example and an encouragement to our brothers and sisters to good works. David's prayer to God was; "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth, keep the door of my lips, incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works, with men that work iniquity, and let me not eat of their dainties." Psalms cxli: 3, 4. If David who was a man after God's own heart, so felt the need of praying for help to direct his words, how much more we need our Father's help, and each others to walk worthy of the high calling, and more so, because the time may be very short to prepare for the Lord's appearing; and we all know that it is not an easy thing to refrain from taking up the spirit of the conversation of the people of the world, but in a short time it shall vanish under the righteous rule of Jesus as king, and if we remember that we are to prepare now, to be co-rulers with him, it should be an in...

...t, and ... things above and not on things on the earth. So may our prayer be with David's, "Let the meditation of my heart and the words of my mouth be acceptable in thy sight O Lord. Psa. xix: 14. My humble prayer is that we may all be found striving to please our Father in word and deed, and so have an abundant entrance into the kingdom.

The Kingdom Restored.

Brother A. D. Woodrow sends us the following clipping from the Dallas, Tex, News of May 15, showing the views of the Kingdom by a Baptist minister.

Threat of work and chill of morning did not suffice to check the ardor of churchgoers yesterday morning and in nearly all of the churches of the city there was at least an average attendance. Sunday school exercises had been engaged in by large numbers of children and many of these had carried flowers, with which the pulpits of the churches were adorned for the morning services. At several of the places of worship visiting ministers preached. Revivals are in progress at several places. Night worship was rather more lightly attended.

Before a congregation at the Second Baptist Church yesterday morning Rev. A. N. Hull, the pastor, in a series of sermons on prophecy discussed the theme, "The Promised Kingdom." His text was: "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke xxii: 29-30. He said in substance:

"The true exposition of Scripture is ascertaining what it was intended to mean to the persons addressed. What did these disciples of Jesus understand by 'the kingdom?' They were Jews. Their education was in large measure a study of the sacred writings of the Hebrews, commonly called today the Old Testament Scriptures. For three years they had followed a teacher whom they had accepted as the Messiah. His teaching was, 'Believe all that the prophets have spoken.' The belief and longing of their souls found expression in the words, 'Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom of Israel?' Jesus knew what meaning his words would convey to minds trained as theirs and it is in this light we are to understand the kingdom herein promised.

"What is the kingdom? From childhood many have been taught to pray, 'Thy kingdom come.' What do we mean? As the farmer must clear the ground before planting the seed, so is it necessary to say what the kingdom is not to prepare the mind to see what it is. The church is not the kingdom. The King and kingdom is constant theme of Old Testament prophets. They located the kingdom, named the capital, saw the glory and blessings of the kingdom, but in all their writings the church is not even mentioned.

"Heaven is not the kingdom. The kingdom is to be on earth and have to do with the earth, while heaven is 'a building of God, a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.'

"The kingdom, primarily, is the hope of Israel. 'And say unto them (Israel)', thus saith the Lord God, 'behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one King shall be King to them all and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all.' Ezekiel xxxvii: 21-22.

"This prophecy was written 588 years after division of Jews into two nations. It yet awaits fulfillment.

"The kingdom is to be located on earth, 'and they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob, my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they and their children's children, forever; and my servant David shall be their Prince forever.'—Ezekiel xxxvii: 25.

"Jerusalem is to be the capital. 'At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem.—Jer. iii: 17.

"This kingdom will subdue and control all other nations.

"'And in the days of these Kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; ... the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.'—Daniel ii: 44. 'For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted."—Isaiah lx: 12.

Holiness and righteousness shall characterize this Kingdom. "Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions, but I will save them out of all their dwelling places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them, so shall they be my people and I will be their God. Ezekiel xxxvii: 23. "And in mercy shall the throne be established: and he shall set upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness." Isaiah xvi: 5. It shall be a nation of peace.

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah ii: 4.

Thus in broad outline is brought to you the Old Testament teaching regarding the Kingdom.

This Kingdom was offered to the Jews. For 400 years these Scriptures were complete, but no prophet of God or heavenly messenger spoke to Israel. Israel waiting and longing for the Kingdom. An angel appears to a Hebrew maiden with the announcement that she should bear a son and the Lord God should give unto him the throne of his father, David, and he should rule over the house of Jacob forever. In due time the son was born.

Thirty years roll away and a prophet appears in Israel preaching "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

Soon the King appears and in the waters of Jordan he is anointed to be King. Soon follows the royal proclamation, commonly known as the Sermon on the Mount, in which the laws and principles of the Kingdom are set forth. Coming down from the mountain the blessings of the Kingdom are displayed, lepers are cleansed, palsied cured, fever cooled, devils cast out, storms hushed. But his people would not have him; they turned away offended at the moral conditions he imposed. For three years he remains with them, but at last they cry, "Away with him; crucify him; we have no King but Ceasar."

Thirty years after their city is destroyed, and Israel scattered to the four winds. Is the Kingdom lost? Shall God's purposes fail because man fails? "I say then, have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid! but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy. Now, if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness?" The Kingdom is not abandoned but postponed.

When shall this Kingdom be brought in? In Acts xv, we have God's program. "Simeon hath declared how God at ...st did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophet; as it is written, after this I will return, and will build the tabernacle of David that is fallen; and I will set it up; that the residence of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." Note the order, taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name. This is going on now. In every tribe and nation an elect number are being taken out and united to Christ the man in the glory. After this will come the setting up of the Kingdom, Israel regathered, united, exalted. Then will come world-wide blessings, "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Then shall be fulfilled the saying that is written, "The Kingdoms of this world have become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."

Boys of Drinking Parents.

A son of a drinking man or woman has less chance of health and active mental faculties than of total abstinence parents. Statistics show alarming facts in this particular. Parents, give the boys a chance by being total abstainers yourselves and setting them an example in practice and a start without the hereditary peril. An eminent doctor in New York City found over seventy per cent of the children of drinking parents afflicted with organic nervous diseases in a large number examined.

A missionary lady had a little boy, doo orphan living with her. She had taught him about Jesus, and when he was six years old, she said to him, "Now a prayer of your own." And what do you think it was? It was a good prayer for any child to make: "Dear Jesus, make me like what you were when six years old."—Child's Gem.

Dreaming about crowns and palms and heaven's attire will never bring to you victory and joy. The long hard way, thorn fringed, rough, along low valleys oftentimes and through depressing experiences, is before the acclaim of angels and the "well done" of the Father in paradise.—A. H. Sturiel...ker.

"The Word of the Kingdom," is the title of a cloth bound book of over 400 pages, compiled by Bro. John O. Woodruff, and containing addresses and essays, interspersed with poems, all on subjects relating to the Kingdom of God, or in accord with that subject. The first edition of this book when issued last year had to sell for one dollar a copy, as the cost was comparatively large. The pages were sterotyped—hence additional copies can now be printed for the mere cost of paper, presswork and binding, which amounts to just 25 cents per copy in large lots. A second edition has now been issued, and will be sent postpaid for 40 cents, just enough to cover all expense. Order from this office.

Very interesting at a time when China is threatening to boycott American goods if our exclusion act is not repealed, is an article in the June Cosmopolitan by Broughton Brandenburg, entitled "The World's Competitor-to-be." In this Mr. Brandenburg discusses the "yellow peril" from a new view-point. Mysterious, age-numbed China long has been a negligible quantity in the world of industry and commerce. But the millions eager to work at remunerative employment, subsisting on the products of their own soil, under their own hands, represent a vast fund of potential energy that is like a huge reservoir. The establishment of a few factories, with a gradual increase in number as the market widens, would be like opening a floodgate. The loosed tide would have important results on the rest of the world.

True Charity.

If men valued the truth as they do their goods and their houses, they would not regard error with such cool contentment. The cant of the present day cries, "Charity, Charity," as if it were not the truest charity to grow indignant with that which ruins the soul. It is not uncharitable to warn men against poisonous adulterations of their food, or invasion of their rights; and surely it can not be more uncharitable to put them on their guard against that which will poison or rob their souls.—Spurgeon.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through time and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1.

Poetry.

He Careth for Thee.

O heart, that knowest amid friends and love
A loneliness that nothing can remove,
And beatest 'neath a burden unconfessed,
Why walkest thou in bitterness of soul
While carelessly the sullen billows roll,
When One has promised, "I will give you rest"?

Alone—with friends of youth on every side
Whose love the stress of years has proved and tried?
And still thou walkest solitary, sad?
Yea, in thine inmost heart none enters there
Save he who for rest it, chase it for his care,
And seeks to enter in and make thee glad.

Then art alone indeed, if he who made
Thy Spirit, shaped the burden on thee laid,
And knows thy griefs, may not thy burdens bear.
O child, bear hard! the Everlasting Arms
Are underneath thee. Cease thy vain alarms,
And yield thy sorrows to that gracious care.

And when thy strength is spent—when, weak and faint
Beneath thy load, thou utterest thy plaint
And sayest, "I cannot bear this crushing load,"
God hears and knows. He made the burden use,
Not for thy strength, but His, to undergo.
His step keeps pace with thine upon the road.

Beneath each crushing burden thou hast borne,
Through days of anguish, underneath each thorn,
Steals his soft pleading and his gentle hand.
Clasp it in thine. Thy lonely heart shall be
In dreariest night filled with serenity;
And thou shalt see his will and understand

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 5.

1. Belteshazzar the king made a great supper for his great men his thousand, and the wine was before the thousand.

2. And Belteshazzar while drinking said with the tasting of the wine, that they should bring in the golden and silver vessels which Nabouchodonosor his father had brought out of the inner-sanctuary in Hierousalem, and the king and his great men and his concubines and his wives should drink with them;

3. And the golden and silver vessels, which he brought out of the inner-sanctuary of God in Hierousaleem were brought, and the king and his great men and his concubines and his wives were drinking with them.

4. They were drinking wine, and praising the gods of gold and silver and copper and wood and stone.

5. In the self-same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand and wrote on the whitewash of the wall over opposite the lamp of the house of the king, and the king beholdeth the jointed-fingers of the hand that is writing.

6. Then the looks of the king were changed and his reasonings disturbed him, and the bonds of his loins were released and his knees knocked together.

7. And the king called for help with might, that they lead in magi, Chaldeans, treasure finders, and he said unto the wise men of Babuloon; whoever shall read this writing and shall make known to me the comparative meaning, shall clothe himself with purple, and the gold necklace shall be upon his neck, and third in my kingdom shall he rule.

8. And all the wise men of the king went their way in, and were unable to read the writing and make known to the king the comparative-meaning.

9. And Belteshazzar the king was disturbed and his outward-appearance changed thereby, and his great men were disturbed along with him.

10. And the queen came into the house of the drinking-feast and said, O king, live forever; let not thy thoughts disturb thee and thy looks be changed.

11. There is a man of mark in thy kingdom in whom God's spirit is, and in the days of thy father wakefulness and understanding were found in him, and the king Nabouchodonosor thy father made him ruler of enchanters, magoi Chaldaioi, treasure-winners.

12. Because exceeding spirit was there in him, and thoughtfulness and understanding were in him, as a comparative-interpreter of dream-visions and declarer of controling-things, and a solver of knotty problems: Daniel namely, and the king gave him an additional name Baltasar. Now then let him be called, and he will tell this his comparative-interpretation.

13. Then Daniel was led into the presence of the king, and the king said unto Daniel, Thou art Daniel, the one from the sons of the captivity of Jouda'a, which the king my father led away, art thou not?

14. I've heard about thee that God's spirit is in thee, and wakefulness and understanding, and that exceeding wisdom hath been found in thee.

15. And now the wise men, magoi, treasure-winners came in to read this writing and make known to me its comparative-meaning, and were unable to tell it to me.

16. And I heard about thee that thou wast able to judge things comparatively; now then if thou shalt be able to read this writing and to make known to me its comparative-significance, thou shalt put on under-purple and the gold necklace shall be upon thy neck, and thou shalt rule third in my kingdom.

17. And Daniel said in the presence of the king, Let thy gifts be thine, and do thou give the giving of thy household to another, but I will read the writing, and make known to thee its comparative-meaning.

18. O king, the Most High God gave unto Nabouchodonosor thy father the kingdom and the majesty and the honor and the glory.

19. And by reason of the majesty which he had given him, all the laities, tribes and tongues were trembling and fearing before his face; whom he devised he raised up and whom he desired he smote, and whom he desired he exalted and whom he desired he humbled;

20. And when his heart exalted itself and his spirit asserted self-control in showing supercilious pride, he was brought down from the throne of the kingdom, and the honor was taken away from him;

21. And he was driven away from mankind, and his heart was given to be with the wild beasts, and his dwelling to be with the wild-asses, and grass they morseled out to him like an ox, and from the dew of the heavens was his body wet until he became aware that the Most High God was ruling as Lord of the kingdom of men; and that to whomsoever he should think best he would give it.

22. And thou moreover his son Baltasar hast not humbled thy heart in the sight of God; art thou not aware of all these things?

23. And against the Lord God of the heavens hast thou exalted thyself; and the vessels of his house they brought into thy presence; and thou and thy great men and thy concubines and thy wives, ye were drinking wine in the use of them; and the gods of gold and silver and copper and wood and stone, which do not look nor listen, and do not comprehend, thou didst praise; and the God in whose hand thy breath is and all thy ways, him thou didst not glorify.

24. Therefore from his face was sent this jointed finger of a hand, and he directed this writing.

25. And this is the writing that was directed; Manee, Thekel, Phares.

26. This is the comparative-meaning of the oracular-word; namely, Manee; God hath measured thy kingdom and fulfilled it;

27. Thekel: It hath been weighed in a balance and found lacking.

28. Phares: Thy kingdom hath been taken away and given to Medes and Persians.

29. And Baltasar said the word and they clothed Daniel with under-purple, and put the golden necklace around his neck, and a herald proclaimed concerning him that he was third ruler in the kingdom.

30. In that very night Baltasar the Chaldaian king was removed, and Darelos the Mede (Medos) took the kingdom, he being sixty-two years of age.

COMMENT.

The reader will do well to take the C. V. and the R. V. and compare the reading of this narrative, clause by clause, and word by word and note the differences, and then if you are a scholar and have access to the two Greek texts (there is no original Hebrew of this book and never was) compare these two texts and judge for yourselves from which, if either, the C. V. and the R. V. were translated, as this translation is being made from the original Septuagint text as shown in the oldest and best manuscripts, and the other text belongs to the copies of the Septuagint which were altered to conform to the Hebrew text as changed and corrupted by the Hebrew rabbis in the second century of the Christian church along with the rest of the Old Covenant Scriptures to discredit and disprove the Messianic claims of Jesous the Christ, whom their fathers and rulers had rejected and crucified. The translation of Jerome into the Latin was also made from this corrupt text, and the Latin or "Vulgate" has been the text from which the English and all the European translations have since been made; and this principally for the reason that access to the better sources and manuscripts were not opened until about the year 1869 principally by Tischendorff who spent thirty years in opening up these sources and publishing the evidence which now is open and accessible to every scholar who is unprejudiced enough to investigate it, and who has the scholarly culture to apprehend it. "The Higher Criticism" so-called has been digging in the fields of "tradition," and inference, and is already floundering in the slough of contradiction and absurdity; and as in the times of John Knox the hard-headed English and Scotch common sense of the unlearned common people has already rejected this German monstrosity of so-called learning, and proving their faith upon what Jesous himself said about the first principles of righteousness and salvation, whether they agree with the theological creeds and interpretations or not. This explains the unrest in all the churches and the loss of prestige and power on the part of the leaders and preachers and teachers throughout the Christian world of today. The "common people" are coming to believe that there has been and is today an "apostasy" from "the Word of God" as "once for all delivered to the saints in light," and they want and sincerely desire to again "walk in the light as God is in the light;" and not to be wandering lost on the "mountains of mystery and false teaching" as followers of "blind leaders of the blind." "I have believed, therefore have I spoken."

CHAS. GARDNER.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

A WILLING MIND. 2 COR. VIII. 12.

For if there be first a willing mind it is accepted according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not. And Jesus called unto him his disciples and said unto them, Verily, I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury. For all they did cast in of their abundance, but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living. If ye be willing and obedient ye shall eat the good of the land. And it shall come to pass if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God to observe and to do all his commandments, which I command thee this day, that the Lord thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth. And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. And David said unto Solomon, My Son, know thou the God of thy father and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind, for the Lord searcheth all hearts and understandeth all imaginations of the thoughts. If thou seek him he will be found of thee, but if thou forsake him he will cast thee off for ever. And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee, for thou Lord hast not forsaken them that seek thee. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give not grudgingly nor of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver.

THE LOVE OF CHRIST.

2 Cor. v. 14, "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge that if one died for all, then were all dead, for in Adam all die, for Adam disobeyed God and sinned, and the wages of sin is death, so in Christ shall all be made alive, who obey God and keep his commandments, and are faithful, for the gift of God is eternal life, and that life is in the Son. Christ said, I come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly. This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. What a friend we have in Jesus. While we were yet sinners Christ died for us. We love him because he first loved us, he gave his life a ransom for many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. May Christ dwell in our hearts by faith that we being rooted and grounded in love may be able to comprehend the love of Christ which passeth knowledge that we may be filled with all the fulness of God. Unto him be glory by Christ Jesus through all ages, world without end. Amen.

1 John ii. 3.

"And hereby we do know that we know him if we keep his commandments." We are exhorted a great many times and commanded to keep his commandments. In John i. 3 we read, For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievious, for whatsoever overcometh the world is born of God, and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith. So if we keep his commandments we have the promise of overcoming the world. In Deut. vi. 25 we read, And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God as he hath commanded us. We see it has always been a very essential duty to keep the commandments of God, even in the first of the world. If Adam had not broken the commands God gave him, we would not all have been born in sin. In Psalm ciii. 17-18, But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting unto everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children to such as keep his covenant and to those that remember his commandments to do them. John xiv. 28, He that hath my commandments and keepeth them he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and will manifest myself to him. We see many precious things promised us if we only keep his commandments. Dear brothers and sisters, let us pray earnestly for strength and endurance so we will not step aside from God's commandments when the trials of this life come upon us. We know sometimes they seem hard to bear, but let us pray for strength to endure unto the end. 1 John iii. 24, And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him and hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us. 2 John vi., And this is how that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment that as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it. Yes, the commandments of God are not grievious, and great are the promises if we will obey them. My earnest prayer is, that we all may overcome to the end, and receive the gift of God, eternal life.

PSALM III.

The works of the Lord are great. Yes, when we look around and behold the wonderful works of God, we say with the Psalmist, The works of the Lord are great, "He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered." In Isaiah xl. 4, it reads, Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. And in another place it says, The desert shall blossom as the rose, everything shall be brought back to its former beauty, and shall stand for ever, for the Lord of hosts hath spoken it. Then, at that time will the Lord remember his covenant. The covenant made to the fathers to beautify and bring them back to their own land. In the last verse it reads, The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Prov. ii. 7. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous. Peter iii. 12, For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open to their prayers. But the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. May we be among those who are counted righteous, that we may be under God's care and protection. Isa. xxvi. 4. Trust ye in the Lord forever; for the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

MRS. E. V. BAKER.

2 COR. VIII. 12.

For if there be first a willing mind, a mind free to do whatsoever is required, cheerfully giving all that we can give, for what we give cheerfully will be accepted by the Lord, if it is only a mite. Paul in this chapter speaking of the Macedonia churches says to their power, I bear record, yea and beyond their power they were willing of themselves. They gave not only of their money, but first gave themselves to the Lord. Willing service is what the Lord requires. He would have us always ready and willing, so when he calls we will answer, Here am I, send me. Jesus said to the rich young man, One thing thou lackest, go sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and take up thy cross and follow me; and he was sad at this saying, and went away grieved, for he had great possessions. If he had willingly, with a free mind, done what Jesus required, taken up his cross and became one of Jesus' humble followers, though poor in this world without a home, yet how great would have been his possessions if he had received the promised gift of God, eternal life. Moses speaking to the children of Israel said unto them, Whosoever is of a willing heart let him bring an offering to the Lord, gold and silver and brass, and the children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the Lord, every man and woman whose heart made them willing to bring all that the Lord had commanded, and the people brought more than enough for the service of the work that the Lord commanded. Willing service is pleasing to God. O do not let our Savior say of us, One thing thou lackest, take up thy cross and follow me. But let our answer be, Here am I O Lord, send me. Serve God with a perfect heart and a willing mind. He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly, he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully, and every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give not grudgingly nor of necessity. But as God giveth and blesses us, so let us give cheerfully and we will receive of the Lord according to our needs, for it is written he hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the poor. His righteousness remaineth forever.

P. NEILL.

To the household of faith:

I am sorry to hear of the death of our aged Brother Townsend, beloved in the Lord, a pillar in the church of God, an example of faith and practice. Would that all the scattered ones would follow his example. The few that are left of the original faithful ones, remember our devoted brother, always at his post of duty, always rejoicing in hope, patiently waiting for the coming King. When the grim monster snatched the precious ones from the fold, till he was the only brother left, and a few faithful sisters, we still saw him driving a distance of five miles in obedience to the command, "Forsake not the assembling," meeting to commemorate the Lord's death till he come, and to exhort one another to love and good works. This obedience to the command strengthened the few and gave you courage to push the work with the assistance of Bro. and Sister Neill. And Brother Townsend was made to rejoice to see his oldest son and wife, and a number of others put on the all-saving name. Truly we can "rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

We shall miss our brother, but we sorrow not even as others that have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Wherefore comfort one another with these words. Are not these comforting words?

"Man's wisdom faults when standing at the grave,
And knows not him, whose love alone can save,
Can smile grim death and read from him his prey,
Can bid the sleepers rise to endless day.

Herein is love—abounding deep and pure,
That gives us endless life in Christ secure,
That guards us now, and restas our dying head,
Makes soft our pillow in our lowly bed.
Shall watch our sleeping dust until the dawn
Of that good day—the resurrection morn."

May that glad day find us ready is the prayer of your Sister in the Anointed.

The Bible in Poetry.

A writer in the Century Magazine, some years ago, speaking of the poet Tennyson, said:

"It is safe to say that there is no other book which has had so great an influence upon the literature of the world as the Bible. And it is almost as safe . . to say that there is no other literature which has felt this influence so deeply or shown it so clearly as the English. We hear the echo of its speech everywhere, and the music of its familiar phrases haunts all the fields and groves of our fine literature. It is not only to the theologians and the sermon makers that we look for Biblical allusions and quotations. We often find the very best and most vivid of them in writers professedly secular. Poets like Shakespeare, Milton, and Wordsworth; novelists like Scott and romancers like Hawthorne; essayists like Bacon, Steele and Addison; critics of life, unsystematic philosophers like Carlyle and Ruskin—all draw upon the Bible as a treasury of illustrations, and use it as a book equally familiar to themselves and their readers. It is impossible to put too high a value upon such a universal volume, even as a purely literary possession. It forms a bond of sympathy between the most cultivated and the simplest of the people."

As to Tennyson in particular, it has been found that there are nearly three hundred direct references to the Bible in his poems. Readers of the poet will readily recall the more striking of these, and will not need to be reminded how much, both in thought and diction, the famous laureate owes to his sympathetic acquaintance with the Bible.

One reason why many persons have lost faith in the efficacy of prayer is because they and others have made their prayers too small. Let us discard the notion that prayer is simply asking for things. Prayer is first of all adoration, pouring out the soul in the presence of manifested greatness and beauty. When in the Scriptures we catch glimpses of the worship which goes on behind the veil we do not hear angel or archangel or saint asking for things. The burden of prayer is, "Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty." Surely we violate no law of the universe when we adore.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 14, 1905. NUMBER 22.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

It now transpires that Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin, the brother of the Sultan of Turkey, who was reported to have died April 25, was really murdered by order of the Sultan.

At last Norway has taken the contemplated step, and severed her connection with Sweden. She is having a hard time to gain recognition by the other powers, as Sweden refuses to sanction the withdrawal.

The war in the Far East is at a standstill, and negotiations are pending toward peace. Japan wants control of Corea and Manchuria, a large money indemnity, and that Russian warships keep out of Pacific waters for fifty years. Russia seems willing to agree to any thing except the giving of money. In her present condition she cannot raise the means to make payments possible. Japan may have to whip her some more.

Selections.

Stick To Your Work.

"Many great men, of splendid talent, have failed in their life-work, because they lacked continuity of purpose. Instead of selecting some line of labor adapted to their taste and their ability, and persevering in it, they have attempted many things, and because of their diversified labors, have failed in accomplishing their purpose in anything. Their abilities being wrongly directed, have to a great extent been wasted.

A given force diffused over a large surface, is lessened at every point in proportion to the amount of surface covered, but when concentrated on a particular point, its intensity is proportionately increased. When a man attempts too much, he generally effects but little; but when he brings all his powers to bear on one work, and perseveres in it, he is sure to succeed, if success in possible."

There are people who have a great dread of being thought narrow, but in these days of wide-reaching thought and investigation, men, to insure success, must be specialists. It is impossible for one man to know everything or do everything, and in order to succeed he needs to know a few things thoroughly, and be able to do some one thing better than any other man can do it. Hence it is important that a man cultivate a breadth of view which will enable him to find his own true position, and following the lead and guidance of the Lord, fulfil his own mission, working with all his might and all his soul.

If a man is really where he should be and is doing what he should do, he will work more successfully with the consciousness that he is helped and guided of the Lord than he can under any other circumstances. Let each man find his own place and learn his own duty, and do his own work in the sight of God, and he will be blessed in his labors; and while he is ready for every good word and work, yet he will not be given to change, nor squander his life in useless and unprofitable beginnings, but rather have to show for his labors, some glorious and completed work.—H. L. H.

Perpetuity of the Bible.

The empire of Cæsar is gone; the legions of Rome are mouldering in the dust; the avalanches that Napoleon hurled upon Europe have melted away; the pride of the Pharohs is fallen; the Pyramids they raised to be their tombs are sinking every day in the desert sands; Tyre is a rock for bleaching fishermen's nets; Sidon has scarcely left a rock behind, but the word of God still survives. All things that threatened to extinguish it have only aided it; and it proves every day how transient is the noblest monument that man can build, how enduring is the least word that God has spoken. Tradition has dug for it a grave, intolerance has lighted for it many a fagot; many a Judas has betrayed it with a kiss; many a Peter has denied it with an oath; many a Demas has forsaken it, but the word of God still endures.—Dr. John Cumming.

Christ the Revelation of God.

We must look on that whole career, from the cradle to the cross, from Calvary to Olivet, if we are to know the deepest tenderness, and catch its gladest notes. That such a man has lived and died is beautiful, and the picture may stand forever as the fairest of the children of men. But that in that life and death we have our most authentic knowledge of what God is, and that all the pity and truth, the gentleness and the brotherliness, the tears and the self surrender, are a revelation to us of God; and that the cross, with its awful sorrow and its painful death, tells us, not only how a man gave himself for those whom he loved, but how God loved the world, and how tremendous is his law—this is good news of God indeed! We have to look for our truest knowledge of him, not in the majesties of the starry heavens, nor in the depths of our own souls; not in the scattered tokens of his character, given by the perplexed order of the world; nor in the intuitions of the wise; but in the life and death of his Son, whose tears are the pity of God, as well as the compassion of a man; and in whose life and death the whole world may behold "the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person," and be delivered from all their fears of an angry, and their doubts of an unknown God.

Home Happiness.

Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over, and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house, or have one little room in that house, you can make that little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you should ever transgress. You should always treat each other with courtesy. It is often not so difficult to love a person as it is to be courteous to him. Courtesy is of greater value and a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will but be courteous to each other you will soon learn to love each other more wisely, profoundly, not to say lustingly, than you ever did before.

Separation.

I believe that a Christian man should lead a separated life. The line between the church and the world is almost obliterated today. I have no sympathy with the idea that you must hunt up an old church record to find out whether a man is a member of the church or not. A man ought to live so that everybody will know he is a Christian. If there are certain things in your university which are detrimental to your Christian profession, you say, "No, sir."

In London they used to have a good deal of drinking among church members. Some time ago when I was invited to a late supper at the house of a Christian man, prominent in Sabbath School. I was going to meet some Sabbath School friends and I expected a religious time. To my amazement, they had seven kinds of liquor, and they drank until I should call them drunk, but, they would have considered it a great insult if I had said so. There was a young lady sitting next to me who kept refusing, and the deacons kept urging it upon her, until her cheeks became quite red. I finally said they would have to excuse me. I left the table and the host followed me upstairs. He wanted to know the trouble. I said, "There is too much drinking, I can't stand it." He said, "You are not a gentleman." "Well," I said, "I would rather be a Christian than a gentleman." I went out of the house, and the next time I went to London I heard it whispered around what an ungentlemanly thing I had done.

Your Lord is very jealous of your love, O believer. He loved you with such a love that he would sooner die than you should perish, and he cannot endure that anything should stand between your heart's love and himself. He is very jealous of your trust. He cannot bear that you should hew out broken cisterns, when the overflowing fountain is always free to you. He is also very jealous of your company. There should be no one with whom we converse so much as with Jesus.—Spurgeon.

How Readest Thou?

I find the genealogy of my Savior strangely chequered with four remarkable generations. 1. "Rehoboam begat Abijam;" that is, a bad father begat a bad son. 2 "Abijam begat Asa;" that is, a bad father a good son. 3. "Asa begat Jehosaphat;" that is, a good father a good son. 4. "Jehosaphat begat Joram;" that is, a good father a bad son. I see, Lord, from hence, that my father's piety cannot be entailed; that is bad news for me. But I see also that actual impiety is not always hereditary; that is good news for my son.

When in my daily service I read David's psalms wherin he confesseth his sins, or requesteth thy pardon, or praiseth for former, or prayeth for future favors, in all these give me to raise my soul to as high a pitch as may be. But when I come to such psalms wherein he curseth his enemies, oh, there let me bring my soul down to a lower note. For these words were made only to fit David's mouth. I have the like breath, but not the same spirit to pronounce them. Nor let me flatter myself that it is lawful for me, with David, to curse thine enemies, lest my deceitful heart entitle all mine enemies to be thine, and so what was religion in David prove malice in me, while I act revenge the pretence of piety.

I read of the two witnesses, "And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast, that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them." They could not be killed while they were doing, but when they had done their work; during their employment they were invincible. No better armor against the darts of death than to be busied in thy service.

Why art thou so heavy, O my soul? No malice of men can antedate my end a minute while my Maker has any work for me to do. And when all my daily task is ended, why should I grudge then to go to bed?

I read at the transfiguration, that Peter, James and John were admitted to behold Christ, but Andrew was excluded. So again, at the reviving of the daughter of the ruler of the synagogue, these three were in, and Andrew shut out. Lastly, in the agony, the aforesaid three were called to be witnesses thereof, and still Andrew left behind. Yet he was Peter's brother, and a good man, and an apostle; why did not Christ take the two brothers? But methinks I seem more offended thereat than Andrew himself was, whom I find to express no discontent, being pleased to be accounted a loyal subject for the general, though he was no favorite in these particulars. Give me to be pleased in myself, and thankful to thee for what I am, though I be not equal to others in personal perfections, for such peculiar privileges are concessies from these when given, and no injuries to us when denied.

St. Paul teaches the art of heavenly thrift—how to make a new sermon of an old. "Many," said he, "walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, that they are enemies to the cross of Christ." Formerly he had told it with his tongue, but now with his tears; formerly he had told it with his words, but now with weeping. Thus new affections make an old sermon new. May I not, by the same proportion, make an old prayer now? Lord, thus long I have offered my prayer dry unto thee, now, Lord, I offer it wet. Then wilt thou own some new addition therein, when, though the sacrifice be the same, yet the dressing of it is different, being steeped in his tears who bringeth it unto thee.—Thomas Fuller, 1644.

A Question Of Influence.

Perhaps many of us have wondered why it is so much easier to persuade others to follow our example in trivial things than in more important matters, though frequently the latter have every advantage of reason and argument on their side. The following incident, in that it suggests an answer to this perplexing question, is worth considering:

As two friends were walking leisurely down the street, the younger bowed smilingly to an acquaintance, and then when the girl had passed, her smile of recognition deepened to one of amusement.

"What is it, Clara?" asked her friend, who was well skilled in reading the changes on the pretty young face.

Clara was quite ready to explain.

"You noticed the girl I spoke to just now, Isabel Faye. Well, it's the funniest thing, the way she copies me. If I come out in a new gown, she promptly appears with one of a similar shade and style. If I go to church with my hair done in a new way, by Monday she has put up hers in the same fashion. I laughed when I met her this afternoon because I saw that she had trimmed her hat with rosebuds like those I got a week ago. I'm inclined to regard it as complimentary, on the whole. Don't you think I'm right?"

The friend replied with a question which Clara thought irrelevant: "Is Miss Faye a Christian girl?"

"A Christian?" Clara repeated. "I think not. She doesn't come to prayer-meeting ever, though she's quite regular in her attendance at church. Why do you ask?"

"Because," the friend returned, "I was thinking it a pity that your influence over her should only extend to matters of dress. She is quite ready to follow your lead regarding the cut and color of a gown. Why can't you direct her choice in weightier things? Why can't you make sympathy and kindness and Christian devotion appear attractive in her eyes, as well as your way of doing your hair, of trimming your hat?"

"I don't know," Clara confessed honestly. "I never thought about it before, but for that matter I certainly never tried to induce her to copy my way of dressing. Do you think it is my fault if I haven't influenced her in any but trivial things?"

The friend smiled reassuringly into her perplexed face.

"We won't make it a question of blame, dear, but surely it won't do any harm for you to be on your guard a little. Don't let your taste in dress outshine the beauty of your character. It is our strongest qualities that affect others most strongly, and sometimes it is well for us to test ourselves by the sort of influence we exert over those we meet. Put the emphasis of your personality on your highest traits, and force the others into the background."—Unknown.

National Lack of Seriousness.

Under the above heading the Congregationalist draws a striking picture of present indifference in the face of grave, national dangers. Its call for both spiritual and moral awakening is timely, and its quotation of Christ on last-day conditions will be taken more seriously by our readers than was probably intended.

Indifference in the presence of vast and ominous national perils is noted with alarm by British public speakers and by the press. The danger of war with Russia through the alliance of Great Britain with Japan seems to be imminent. the British government seems to be moving toward dissolution, the industrial situation is strained, the supremacy and peace of the empire no less than the moral life of the people are threatened in many ways, yet the public is indifferent. The Spectator says: "We look upon war like amateurs, upon taxation like millionaires, upon social warfare like superintendents of police. We postpone everything to the desire for excitement, and are happy if the news of the day, though it be of catastrophe, gives piquant interest to the day's talk. This tone, which is new to England, is as dangerous as it ever was in France in the time of the third Napoleon."

The British Weekly thinks that this lack of seriousness is due in no small degree to popular journalism. It says: "The old fairness has disappeared. One cause is frantically and recklessly pleaded for, the other side is not set forth at all—it is only mentioned to be jeered at." This want of fairness is characteristic of a well-recognized class of American journals, alongside of an equally recklessly disregard of truth with respect to current events. The abnormal appetite for news is not only fed with exaggerated accounts of what has actually happened, but with invented accounts of imaginary happenings, while tragedies, suicides, frauds, and scandals of public and private persons are daily dressed up and staged for the newspapers as elaborately as for the theaters.

The need of a spiritual awakening, now so much discussed in religious circles, is not more apparent than the need of a moral awakening to those who are concerned for their country and for the welfare of society. The pictures which our Lord drew of the carelessness and levity of the times preceding his coming, if they were not in the Bible, would be quoted in the newspapers as paralleled in these days. "They ate, they drank, they were given in marriage"—and the flood came. "They ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded"—till the day that fire rained on Sodom. "After the same manner shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed."

Preachers, statesmen, and reformers have a common cause. The sense of responsibility once aroused among the people, they will turn their backs on yellow journalism and the habit of regarding life to which it ministers, and face with seriousness the many pressing problems of society, government, and human destiny—all of them problems whose final solution is to be found nowhere else than in each individual's responsibility to God.

If Jesus is received as divine, and as the greatest of all teachers, will it not be well to take his teachings regarding the end of this age and the conditions which he foretold in a more serious way? If the clear and oft repeated warnings of Christ in the above field cannot be received and taken for their face value, how much confidence can we have in his teaching on other questions?

The Good Shepherd.

What a beautiful comforting gospel that is in which the Lord Christ depicts himself as the good Shepherd; showing what a heart he has toward us poor sinners, and how we can do nothing to save ourselves.

The sheep cannot defend or provide for itself, nor keep itself from going astray if the shepherd did not continually guide it; and when it has gone astray and is lost, it cannot find its way back again nor come to its shepherd; but the shepherd himself must go after it, and seek it until he find it; otherwise it would wander and be lost forever. And when he has found it he must lay it on his shoulder and carry it, lest it should again be frightened away from himself, and stray, or be devoured by the wolf.

So also it is with us. We can neither help nor counsel ourselves, nor come to rest and peace of conscience, nor escape the devil, death, and hell, if Christ himself, by his word, did not fetch us, and call us to himself. And even when we have come to him, and are in the faith, we cannot keep ourselves in it, unless he lifts and carries us by his Word and power, since the devil is everywhere and at all times on the watch to do us harm. But Christ is a thousand times more willing and earnest to do all for his sheep than the best shepherd.—Luther.

Basis of Good Conversation.

Take it altogether we do a great deal of talking. Some of this talk is profitable. Some is not. In the average conversation there is a vast amount of common-place.

Have you ever paid close attention to the things that are said at the average society reception or miscellaneous church gathering? What silly questions are asked, and what senseless answers given! The effort seems to be simply to fill up the time, and in some way or other to prevent awkward pauses. Thus people degenerate into mere talking machines. They run until they they run down.

Conversation is a charming accomplishment. It furnishes unusual opportunities both for imparting and acquiring knowledge. The gift should be cultivated. We should strive to talk intelligently, entertainingly and helpfully.

But to talk well we must think well. We cannot say what we do not know. If our knowledge is superficial we will talk superficially. We should study books. We should study people. We should study with great alertness events transpiring in the wide world and in the narrower world of our own community. Listen. Observe. Read. Think. Anyone who will do these things will soon be furnished with themes for profitable conversation, and will be able to give an intelligent opinion upon most questions that come up for discussion.

Oh, be little and thou wilt be content with little; and if thou feel, now and then, a check or a secret smiting,—in that is the Father's love; be not over-wise, nor over-eager in thy own willing, running, and desiring, and thou mayest feel it so by degrees come to the knowledge of thy Guide, who will teach thee, step by step, in the path of life, and teach thee to follow. Be still, and wait for light and strength.—Pennington.

There is no power but from God says Paul, "and therefore whosoever resisteth the laws and ordinances of the state resisteth God himself." That moral freedom, therefore, that allows us the full exercise of all our faculties within the limits of right, truth and justice is all the liberty that any rational being admitting God should claim. I say admitting God, for if there is no God there is no moral law, because no legislator. Surely man should not consider himself coerced or limited in actions because he cannot think, speak or act unjustly and injuriously to others and is not permitted to covet—to desire unjustly a neighbor's goods.—Bishop Lawrence Scanlan.

We Look for the Savior.

I cannot tell, I may not know,
When Jesus will be here;
But some day, when we least expect,
I know he will appear.
Then, Lord, may I be washed from sin,
And pure and spotless be,
That I may look for thee with joy,
And long thy face to see.

Each morning when I wake from sleep,
O teach me, Lord, to say—
"I know that thou art coming soon,
And this may be the day!
Then help me Savior, by thy grace,
To live this day for thee,
That I may look for thee with joy,
And long thy face to see."

I should not like him when he comes,
A wandering lamb to find;
If I were idle, selfish, proud,
Unfaithful, or unkind,—
How I should try to hide my face,
And from his presence flee!
I would not look for him with joy,
Or long his face to see.

Lord Jesus, as the years go by,
And thine own day draws near,
O make me know that I am thine,
For then I need not fear.
If I am cleansed, and kept from sin,
From Satan's power set free,
Then I may look for thee with joy,
And long thy face to see!

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. I think I will take a turn in selecting a topic for our study tonight. I will ask for a careful investigation of John i. 1-14. I know this Scripture is considered one of the most difficult passages outside of the Book of Revelation; but then, we must try and solve the difficult Scriptures as well as those easier to be understood.

The first verse speaks of something existing "with God" at "the beginning." Arloa will you please answer as to what it was?

Arloa. It says "the Word."

Q. Well, what was the Word?

A. "The Word was God."

Q. What was with God?

A. "The Word."

Q. If the Word "was God," and the Word was "with God," tell us, what sense is there in saying God was with himself in the beginning?

A. It seems rather a dark expression to me, it is a passage on which I desire light.

Teacher. Well, we will come to that as we progress with the lesson. Lud, will you please tell us your ideas about this word "God" which occurs so often in the Bible, does it apply to the Supreme Being?

Lud. Yes, but not exclusively.

Q. Who else then does it have application to?

A. To any person or object of worship. It refers to the Supreme Being as one God among other gods, to whom worship is offered.

Q. From what original words is the word God translated from?

A. From the Hebrew word Elohim, and also the Greek word Theos.

Q. Up to the time when the children of Israel were to experience deliverance from Egypt, by what name was the Eternal Father then known to his servants?

A. By the Hebrew word All-Shaddai.

Q. What is the meaning of that Word?

A. Strength of the Mighty Ones.

Q. After that time by what name was he then to be made known by to his servants?

A. See Exod. iii. 15: "Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, the Lord (Yahweh) God (Elohim) of your fathers, the (Elohim) God of Abraham, the God (Elohim) of Isaac, and the God (Elohim) of Jacob hath sent me unto you; this is my name forever, and this my memorial unto all generations." This is his name forever.

See Isaiah xlii. 8, xlviii. 8, "I am the Lord, (Hebrew, Yahweh) that is my name—the Lord (Yahweh) of hosts is his name."

Q. Is it his name alone, or does he share it with other gods, like we find the names Elohim and Theos applied?

A. It is his exclusive name, see Isa. xliv. 26; Psa. lxxxiii. 18: "I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord—whose name alone is Jehovah," (Heb. Yahweh).

Teacher. I have caused this distinction in names to be given, because when you read the word "God" in the Scriptures, and should you always suppose that it applies to the Supreme Being, you will be led into all manner of contradictions and confusion; as for example: "The Lord he is God; there is none else beside him."

"There be gods many, and lords many."

"He called them gods to whom the Word of God was sent."

"I have seen God face to face."

"No man hath seen God at any time." It is not possible for us to either understand the first chapter of John, and many other Scriptures, also when we misplace the word "God," by not noting to whom it applies.

Now, let us briefly examine the phrase in John: "The word was with God."

I will ask Carrie to tell us what the Trinitarian sects teach us to the Word that was "with God," in "the beginning"?

Carrie. They tell us that it was God the Son who was the second person in the Holy Trinity.

Q. What work do they say he accomplished in the beginning?

A. He was the Creator, by whom he made the worlds.

Q. From whom did they borrow such teaching?

A. The Gnostic sect.

Q. When did this sect exist?

A. In the days of the Apostle John.

Q. What did the Gnostics teach?

A. They taught that all matter was essentially evil, therefore the fathers could have nothing to do with either the composition or the arrangement of matter.

Q. To whom was the creative work left, then?

A. To an inferior deity, called the Word.

Q. What was this Word?

A. A spiritual Enon, which they called Christ, the Son of God.

Q. Did they believe Jesus to be the Christ?

A. No. They said that Jesus was only a mask, or habitation, in which the spiritual Enon, called Christ, dwelt until the death of Jesus; Jesus was nothing more than a habitation for Christ, he was not the Christ.

Q. Did Irenæus exist in the days of this sect?

A. He did.

Q. What did he say about this sect?

A. He said: "John, the disciple of the Lord, desiring by the publication of his gospel, to root out the error which had been sown among men by Cerinthus, (a Gnostic leader) and sometime before by those who are called Nicolaitans, (which I also hate, says Jesus, Rev. ii. 6).

Q. What did Irenaeus say was the object of John's opposition to this sect?

A. "That he might confute them, and satisfy all there is one God (Yahweh, our Elohim) who made all things by his Word, and not as they say, One who is the Creator of the Universe and another the Father of the Lord." He further said: "It (the gospel) knows nothing of the Christ flying from Jesus previous to his passion, it knows only him who was born, (not a previous existence in the beginning) who suffered and rose again from the dead."

Albert. These passages from Irenaeus, as to John's object in writing his gospel in opposition to the teaching of the Gnostics, seems all right, but I read many passages about Jesus coming from heaven, such as these: "What if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before?" "He that cometh from above, is above all." "The second man is the Lord from heaven." "Ye are from beneath, I am from above." "The bread of God is he that cometh down from heaven." Now, if he was not there at the beginning, when was he there? He also says, "He that seeth me seeth the Father." "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Are we to understand by this, that the Father and Son are one and the same personality?

Teacher. Albert's question brings us to the point at once. As to what has already been given with regard to various names applied to the Great Eternal, and also to minor deities, will pave the way for an intelligent answer, providing we comprehend it, and keep it in memory. I will ask George to explain how are we to regard Jesus' Word, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

George. It is a matter which must be understood representatively. We have the record of angels, who spoke representatively, as though they themselves were the Great Eternal.

Q. Please give some instances.

A. I will. See Exod. iii. 6: God appeared to Moses in the burning bush, and said: "I am the God of thy Father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God."

Q. Who was it that claimed to be the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob?

A. Verse 2, says: "And the Angel (elohim) of the Lord (Heb. Yahweh—Supreme Being) appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush." See Acts xii 35: "This Moses, whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush." The angel says: I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Jesus said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." He also said, "The Father which sent me, he gave me commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak." Therefore it was the Father himself, and not Jesus, that was speaking. Jesus was his mouth piece representatively. It was also the Yahweh speaking through the Elohim—angel, saying, "I am the God," etc. The angel being his representative or mouth piece, for the time being, hence he spoke as the Eternal, saying, "I am the God."

Teacher. Can mortal man behold the face of the great Eternal?

Ella. No. Jesus said: No man hath seen the (Eternal) God at any time." Says Jacob, "I have seen God face to face."

Q. Well, if he did not behold the face of the great Eternal, what God did he see?

A. See Hosea xii. 4: "Yea, he had power over the angel (Elohim God) and prevailed." He had seen the face of God the Elohim, but not the God whom the Elohim represented.

Again, "And Manoah said unto his wife, we shall surely die because we have seen God."

Q. What God had they seen?

A. "But the angel of the Lord (Yahweh the Eternal) did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife. Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the Lord" Eternal. He had seen the person of the Eternal One, representatively in the angel, only.

Q. Is it possible to behold the person of the Eternal?

A. No. See Exod. xxiii. 20: "And he said, "Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live."

Q. Was not Jesus in a much larger sense, the representative of the Father than angels.

A. He was. "Even as the Father said unto me so I speak." This was fully developed in the case of the logos spoken of in John i. 1, "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and God was the Logos." John i. 1.

THE GREEK "LOGOS."

The above translation from the Greek version, together with the following brief extract from a scholarly article in the Tribune, throws a flood of light upon the first few verses of John's gospel.

"That the Greek intellect, escaping from Pantheism, grasped the superiority of the Christian over the Pagan creed is shown in a monument of philology to live as long as history. The Greek version of the gospel according to St. John reads: 'In the beginning was the Logos.' 'Logos' comprehends, in Greek, thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love. The Logos was from the beginning with God and God was the Logos. In the English version, 'In the beginning was the Word,' the sublime ideality of the Greek term is lost. At the starting point of English speech, however, its infinite spirit was preserved in 'logic,' the science of reason. The architects of all modern Aryan speech projected it into philology as a foundation-stone and arch of theology, theos-logos, science of God; biology, science of life; geology, science of earth; genealogy, science of descent; anthropology, science of the human race; archeology, a science of ancient things. Thus it will continue to commission intellectual and moral activity as long as man's capacity to discover new truth, physical or abstract, shall endure.

"In this hour persistence of classic spirit in homage to Christianity is keen in the general consciousness. Every century has had its high tide of skepticism, its ebb of belief. Every century of the eighteen has returned at its close to the Logos; for man holds fast through all the vicissitudes of progress to the conviction that in the beginning was knowledge, wisdom, power, the Logos of the Greek, and sweetly bourgeons the evangel that the Logos was and is and will ever be God."

John i. 1, comprehends infinitely more than simply logos as a spoken word, or even of the science of biology, geology, genealogy, or anthropology.

Q. What is the logos of John i. 1?

A. Theos-Logos—the science of God.

Q. What does that comprehend?

A. According to the statement of the professional and profound Greek scholars, it comprehends, "Thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love."

Q. What was in the beginning with God?

A. Thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love. This Theos-Logos existed in the beginning as the foundation stones before everything else save the great Eternal himself, for proof of this see Prov. viii. 26-30: "While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the highest part of the world. When he prepared the heavens, I was there; when he set a compass upon the face of the depth. When he established the clouds above; when he strengthened the fountains of the deep. When he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment; when he appointed the foundations of the earth. Then I was by him, as one brought up with him; and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him."

The above is wisdom personified, and co-existent with the Eternal.

Other attributes found in the Theos-Logos are also personified. See John iv. 7, 8: "Love is of God," and like wisdom was with him even "while as yet he had not made the earth."

Q. Was God himself love as well as love being with God?

A. Yes. "God is Love."

Q. Was there any other personality, with him known as God at that time?

A. No. He testifies himself, and says, Deut. iv., "Unto thee it was shewed that thou mightest know that the Lord (Yahweh) he is God; there is none else beside him. The Lord (Yahweh) he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath; there is none else."

Q. Then God the Son, as the second person of the Holy Trinity, and the Creator of the worlds could not have been there?

A. No. "There is none else beside him."

Teacher. Have we any language in common use, that will parallel with that in John i. 1?

Ella. Yes. I remember reading an extract from a writer in which he used the following with regard to the War of Independence, he said: "In the beginning of the War of Independence, there was a hope to America, and that hope was with Washington, and that hope was Washington." It was "with" and "was" actually the one personality. And so, "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and God was the Logos," one and the same person.

Q. What does the Logos comprehend in Greek?

A. "Thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love."

Q. Is that the Logos which was in the beginning "with" God, and "was" God?

A. Exactly that, and nothing else.

Q. Then the Logos, thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love, in complete fulness never was in any other person, excepting the Logos made flesh?

A. Never.

Q. Did it dwell in him in complete fullness?

A. Yes, and in no other person. "In him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." Col. ii. 9. "It pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." Col. i. 19.

Q. How does the Twentieth Century Translation of John i. 14, read?

A. It reads as follows:

"The Word then became man, and made a home among us, we saw the honor given him—such honor as an only son receives from his father."

Q. At what time did the Logos become "a man"?

A. "Under the Law."

Q. How?

A. "Made of a woman," an "only Son" of God the Logos.

Q. Previous to being "made man," where was he?

A. With the Father in heaven.

Q. Speaking of his origin, then, he was "from God," "from above," "from heaven," "not of this world," etc., was he not?

A. Yes. Speaking of the origin of the two Adams, Paul says: "The first man is of the earth, earthly; the second man is the Lord from heaven," having no earthly paternity. See Jno. iii. 8: He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth; he that cometh from heaven is above all." A person cannot believe in Jesus, and believe in his human paternity; the statements of Jesus, claiming heavenly origin, are too numerous to be set aside. When the Logos, thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love, which "was God" in the beginning, and when made man, where was that man from?

A. "From God," "from heaven," "from above;" in other words, that which made up the man (excepting the substance derived from his mother) was all from above. It takes more than animal substance to make a man of God.

Q. In what other sense is it true, what Jesus said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father?"

A. See Heb. i. 3: "Who being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person." He not only acted like his Father, but looked like his Father. In seeing "the express or the exact impress of God's person in Jesus, in that sense seeing Jesus, is seeing the Father. We also see in Jesus the exact moral impress, or likeness of his Father. He was also like the Father in possessing in fulness the five attributes constituting the Logos. The question was asked, "Whence hath this man wisdom?" his wisdom being so extraordinary. Again "Christ the Power of God, and the wisdom of God."

Q. Whence comes this Wisdom and Power?

A. "Of God." The Logos which was "with God." Again, "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." These are found only in the "Logos which became man."

Q. Was it not by the power of the great Eternal he was "made" man?

A. Yes. "The Power (Logos) of the Highest shall overshadow thee (Mary): therefore (for that reason) also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God." The Power which gave him being was from heaven, and in this sense also, as among others, he was "from heaven," "from above." In the first few verses of John i., the Greek authorizes the use of the neuter gender "it," in place of the personal pronouns. The Diaglott so has it. "In the beginning was the Logos, and God was the Logos." Greek Version. This language comprehends but one person, while the Gnostics affirm that God is one person, and the Word another. Trinitarians also have "God the Son," "God the Father," and "God the Holy Ghost," three distinct Gods, all three of which gods are co-existent, co-eternal, and yet the three gods they say, are only one god. Confusion confounded!! The reader will now readily see that John believed in only one God in the beginning (while Trinitarians have three) and that the testimony of the early fathers given above, confirms such teaching of John.

Q. When we read the phrase "in the beginning" in Holy Scripture, does it always mean the Adamic creation?

A. No. Many have fallen into error by not discerning that the Bible speaks of two beginnings, and two creations. The Adamic and the New. See Rev. iii. 14: "These things saith the Amen, the beginning of the creation of God." Trinitarians may place this at the head of the Adamic creation, and yet they say God's Son was an uncreated deity; how then, could he be "the beginning of the creation of God?" Jesus, the Christ, is the One Logos, even the Eternal Utterance of the great Omnipotent.

Scripture teaching along this line is rich, majestic and sublime. "The foundation stone and arch of theology, theos-logos, the science of God."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example.
No. 3.

Little can be said of Paul's early life from a Scriptural standpoint, but a few things can be learned from our Bibles in regard to his character and early education. The great difference between his life and motives in early manhood and those of his later years is the grandest example of the power of the gospel that was ever known. He furnishes us a living illustration of his own words; "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." Acts vii: 5, 8. We find that he was in full sympathy with the enemies and persecutors of the Jewish Christians, taking charge of the outer garments of those who stoned Stephen to death because they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake. Acts vi: 10.

Seeing him numbered among this party of Stephen's persecutors, it is not strange that the record—Acts viii: 3—a year later shows him to have made havoc of the Church, even entering houses in search of Christians. His account of himself given in Acts. xxii: 3 shows him to have been a native of Tarsus an important city in the Roman Province of Cilicia but brought up in Jerusalem at the feet of Gamaliel.

Gamaliel was a well known teacher or scribe, who taught young men and boys in the Hebrew Scriptures. This accounts for Paul's wonderful knowledge of the Old Testament writings. It was also this knowledge of the Old Testament prophecies concerning Christ which convinced Paul that the hope of Israel was to be fulfilled in him—the despised Nazarene—and made Paul labor with his Jewish brethren so earnestly to convert them to Christ.

Those things which we find to admire in Paul are 1. His complete consecration to the service of God. 2. His earnest desire to show others the way of life. 3. His steadfastness in face of persecutions. 4. His love for the Church and unselfish ambition to serve the brethren.

In connection with the first thought Paul's complete consecration, I would quote from Acts xxi: 13, where speaking to the elders at Ephesus who warned him of his danger of returning to Jerusalem, he said; "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."

His earnest desire to show others the way of life was clearly expressed by him where he declared, "I could wish myself accursed (separated) for my brethren, my kinsman according to the flesh."

Concerning Paul's steadfastness nothing can better express it than his words in 2 Tim. ii: 8-10, "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my Gospel. Wherein I suffer trouble as an evil doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound. Therefore I endure all things for the elects' sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory." And the last thought, Paul's love for the Church and unselfish ambition to serve the brethren is expressed in Rom. xiii: 8, "Owe no man anything but to love one another, for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law, showing that he placed love of the brethren among our first duties to God.

Paul desires that we follow him in those things where we see that he followed Jesus. Brethren be ye imitators together of me, and mark them which so walk even as ye have us for an example.

We can be just as truly consecrated or set apart (separated from the world) as Paul was if we desire to be; though not with the same power that he possessed—for he was a chosen vessel unto the Lord, Acts ix: 15, for the spreading of the Gospel.

We can as earnestly desire to show others the way of life as Paul, but not with his ability which was very great on account of the early education in the Scriptures before his conversion and the gift of the spirit afterwards; we can contribute toward the support of others who can preach; we can help to support papers and send tracts.

We can imitate his steadfastness in refusing to conform to the world in our manner of conversation and habits, not being conformed to the world but transformed by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

We can show our love as certainly as Paul did though we shall all doubtless lack the full measure of his devotion. We love to be with those we love and we are convinced more and more every day that those that we love are our brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus and service for them becomes our chief pleasure.

And dear Brethren we should rejoice that although we cannot show our complete devotion as Paul, we may yet share in the glory, honor and immortality for which Paul sacrificed so much and so willingly—if we retain our first Confidence, Faith and Love firm unto the end.

Obituary.

Our worthy brother and sister, William and Ella Moore's home of Hillsburg, Ind., has been visited by the arch enemy death, and one of their dear children is now resting in the tomb. Virgil Moore was born May 10, 1893; died May 4, 1905, age 11 years, 11 months and 24 days. Virgil was stricken with heart trouble and rheumatism one year ago. He was patient in his affliction and conscious almost to the last. Though the hand of affliction rested heavily upon him he seemed hopeful and had a smile for all who visited his bedside. The following verse was submitted by Sister Elizabeth Shanks (his grandmother).

"There is one of our number,
A youth in his bloom,
Called away by death,
And is sleeping in the tomb,
There he will sleep,
Till the resurrection morn,
When his body will be changed,
In the likeness of Christ's own."

A father, mother, three sisters and and four brothers remain to mourn his loss, but they have the consolation of the Holy Scriptures, that they sorrow not as those who have no hope for they believe that Christ died and rose again, and those who sleep in Jesus, God will bring from the grave, and they will be with Christ forever in his glorious kingdom.

W. M. Hutzer.

Mrs. Melvina R. Root died March 21, 1905, at her grandson's, Orin Parkhurst, who lives near Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., aged 72 years. She went there to visit the family the previous Wednesday and was taken violently sick on Thursday afternoon with what was supposed to be pneumonia, and died the following Tuesday, at 11 a. m. Her only brother, Wm. M. Darrow, of a family of seven children who survives her, was at her bedside at the time of her death. She leaves a family of five children and 33 grand children to mourn her death. Her husband Elihu Root, died 35 years ago. They were both baptized by Eld. John T. Ongley, who was the first Adventist minister to preach in their neighborhood, something near 50 years ago, and by whom the writer heard the first Bible discourse on the unconscious state of the dead. The funeral services were conducted by Elder Wilbor Ongly, grandson of Elder J. T. Ongley. The text used was, "Comfort one another with these words," coupled with what John the Revelator said, "There shall be no more death." Elder John T. Ongley, now in his eighty-fifth year, was present and offered prayer. We laid her to rest in Rootville cemetery. The closing hymn that was sung was, "God be with you till we meet again." Six of her grandsons were the pallbearers.

Wm. M. Darrow.

Eliza I. Dobbs fell asleep in Jesus at Rootville, Pa., on May 2, 1905, aged 45 years, 8 months and 2 days. She had been afflicted for years, but yet would get to the church frequently. She was a strong believer in the one faith, and her work was well done. She leaves a husband and one son, two sisters, and one brother. I believe Sister Eliza will come up in the morning of the resurrection. My grandson who preaches here now conducted the funeral.

Consider this Outing.

By far the most attractive trip for health and pleasure the coming vacation season is that offered by the Seashore excursion Thursday, August 17th, over Pennsylvania Lines to Atlantic City, Cape May and seven other famous summer havens on the Atlantic Coast.

The fast through trains over Pennsylvania Lines take passengers in a few hours out of the heat and humidity of summer to the cool breezes of old ocean. This mid-August excursion occurs in this season for rest when it is most convenient to leave business. Excursionists have the added pleasure of seeing Atlantic City when it is in full tide of the fashionable season. The greatest representative gathering ever known at any resort are seen at Atlantic City. As many as 50,000 people at one time promenade the famous boardwalk. The fashionable bathing hours present an unparalled scene—fully 100,000 bathers in the sea and on the beach.

The healthful effect of the seashore trip is due to the salt and pine air. So beneficial has this proved that physicians send their patients there to get the benefit of breathing the pure ocean air.

Special low fares will be in effect for this Seashore excursion. Full information will be freely given by local ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 28d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 21, 1905. NUMBER 23.

Read

The first Restitution advocated the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christian King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PSALM CXIX.

In verse one hundred thirty of this beautiful Psalm, we read, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple." This reminds me of another similar Scripture, "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to these, there is no light in them."

How many, many teachers of today speak not according to the Word of God. Many are anxious to learn the truth, but they look about them and see learned men teaching conflicting theories, and they are unable to decide which is true, as they are continually reading the Scripture with a false idea in their minds, and trying to harmonize the Scriptures with this preconceived idea. Then if they find something which does not agree with their false notions they console themselves with the thought that it does not matter if they are only sincere. How many people use this as a last resort when presented with the glorious plan of salvation. Some one has conceived the idea of editing a Bible, printing the utterances of Christ in red. Would it not be a greater help to the searcher after truth if we had an edition of the Bible, giving God's plan of salvation in red, beginning with the creation of man, showing that he was created with a living instead of an immortal soul, the temptation and fall with the immediate promise, also the promises made to Abraham, and so on down. "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereunto according to thy Word. O how love I thy law! It is my meditation all the day. Thou through thy commandments hast made me wiser than mine enemies. I have more understanding than all my teachers for thy testimonies are my meditation."

EMMA C. RAILSBACK.

David, the beloved grandson of Ruth, destined to be the greatest king that ever ruled, and from whom was to descend the Christ, on account of ancestry and good organism, being of a poetic sentiment, small in stature and of great courage and pride, which revolted at cowardice, a warrior of unlimited success, a musician styled the "sweet singer of Israel," lulling Saul's melancholy away by his touching songs, working his way unto the affections of the people, thereby incurring the jealous of the king to such an extent that he thought to slay him, by his careful training and varied experiences, he had, under the law, developed a noble character, full of sympathy benevolence and trust. In this school of mental and physical development, he had learned to obey and to love obedience by adhering closely to the law of natural birth. Thus we behold him as an ideal man on the lower plain. But hark, as he breaks forth in childish innocence of Spirit life, "This is my comfort in affliction for thy word hath quickened me, therefore I can say, henceforth he is my refuge and my fortress, in him will I trust. I will delight myself in thy commandments." The cross from the human or earthly condition is death. The new man must be developed by the destruction of the old, a complete sacrifice of human desires where they hinder upward spiritual growth. How watchful and prayerful we should be in judging ourselves in every trial remembering they are given for the perfecting of the new man, bringing the human into subjection. Our Father has provided us with invisible helpers, the angels who do not come and go simply in times of great danger, when we are well nigh lost, but they tent with us all through the trials and rough places, which make life a furnace of affliction. But as judgments are the way, and victory the end, let us laugh and give thanks when they are executed, knowing these light afflictions become glorious in their results. And now, O Father who hast prepared for those who love thee, such good things that passeth man's understanding, pour into our hearts such love, that loving thee above all things, we may obtain thy promises, which exceed all we can desire, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

MRS. ESSIE TAYLOR.

Verse 33, "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end." All learners must be taught, all things are not taught in the same way; some by a living teacher, others by nature, but the greatest by the living Word of God. Some in olden times were taught direct by God, later ones by Christ and the apostles. Moses was taught of God. Christ taught the disciples. The disciples were sent forth to teach all nations. But what are the important things to learn or be taught? David said, "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes," also, "Teach me thy paths." The disciples asked of Christ, "Teach us to pray," and we need to be taught these same things. But how are we to be taught them? We cannot be taught direct of God as Moses was, neither can we go to Christ as did the apostles. To whom then can we go? We are by no means left comfortless. A record is left for us and to it we can go. This record as we all know is the Bible, the living Word of God. To it let us go and be taught. Let us search diligently that we may know the true way. We find in John xiv. 6, "Jesus saith unto him; I am the way, the truth and the life; no cometh unto the Father but by me." Acts iv. 12. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Now having learned the way let us take heed and follow it. Again, in David's prayer he made the promise, that if he be taught the way he would keep it unto the end, a very important thing. And it is just as important for us to endure to the end as it was for David. Psa. c. 5. For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations. By this we see that God's truths are as much for us as for those of long ago. Again, Matt. xxiv. 13, "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Mark xiii. 13, "And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake; but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Christ was despised and rejected of men. Can we expect to be better than he? Let us search the Scriptures daily to learn his ways and endure to the end that we may win the reward promised to all the faithful. Rev. ii. 10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

"The entrance of thy Words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple." Psa. cxix. 130.

The function of words is to convey thoughts or ideas. They are used to tell of events, to describe scenery, to picture to the imagination of others the impressions we ourselves have received. They produce either joy or pain, according to their import.

God in his wisdom has seen fit to employ words to inform us of his intentions, his acts, to warn us of danger, to invite us to co-operation with himself, to encourage us in his service; to teach us to know and do his will. These are the "words" referred to in this verse. God's thoughts, God's words. How deep the counsel they reveal. How lofty the thoughts they reveal. How they appeal to the heart and bespeak the affection. They are words such as no unenlightened man ever uttered. Words which are spirit and are life. Jno. vi. 63. Words of everlasting life. Verse 68. This being true, how eagerly we should hear them, how attentively we should receive them. "The entrance of thy words giveth light." What should they "enter" but the heart? David said, "Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." Verse 11. The heart is the seat of the intellect and affections, and out of it are the issues of life. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, either good or evil things. Out of the heart come evil thoughts, as well as good ones. How necessary that the Word of God should enter the heart as a corrective agency to restrain from evil, and constrain to good acts. The Word of God enters the heart by hearing. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x. 17. "When anyone heareth the Word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." Matt. xiii. 19. The seed is the Word. The soil is the heart. The Word enters the heart by hearing. How necessary that we should take heed what and how we hear, and that "we should give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. ii. 1-3.

We will now consider the effects of the entrance of the Word of God into the heart. As the living seed sown into the soil, the Word of God is a living force. Its presence is manifested by activity. It begins to sprout and grow. It giveth light. Light makes manifest. Eph. v. 13. As natural light makes manifest the tangible objects with which we are surrounded, so the light of God's Word makes manifest the things pertaining to God.

What would we know about God without his Word? Absolutely nothing. We would be in utter and hopeless darkness. But we have learned to believe God and have confidence in him. We look into his face with confidence. We love him who first loved us. We offer unto him the services which are acceptable through Jesus Christ. From whence this confidence, this boldness? We have learned it from hearing (or reading) the Word of God. By it we know him that created the earth and the heavens. We have been informed as to God's intention in the creation of the earth. We know something of the divine program of human redemption, having been invited to an active participation in its accomplishment. It gives light upon these and all other questions. It enlightens the eyes of the understanding. It answers the difficult questions which we are to solve. It not only tells us what to do, but how to do it, and places the proper means in our hands.

It also makes manifest the intentions of our hearts. Heb. iv. 13. It tells us whether our thoughts are pleasing to God or no, and brings pure thoughts and inspires holy aspirations. It is a safe guide for our faith and conduct.

It gives understanding to the simple. Understanding what the will of the Lord is. Eph. v. 17. And such understanding we are to possess, not only in a limited degree; we are to be "filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, that we might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful unto every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." Col. i. 9, 10.

MRS. A. H. ZIMMER.

Psalm cxix. 37, "Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity; and quicken thou me in thy way." We read in the [illegible] and fifth chapters of Ecclesiastes that all is vanity, all work that [illegible] hands may do shall pass away. [illegible] we behold some lovely [illegible] of work that is greatly admired [illegible] of its beauty, and ere [illegible] has lingered upon us, it has passed away and some other piece of work has taken its place, and again we look upon the beautiful flowers, that bloom forth in spring time and behold their beauty, and alas, they too fade away and are gone, giving place for others, likewise we mortal beings, come forth upon the stage of action, and play our part in life, then pass away giving place to the coming generations. So we see that all is vanity, and there is no reward to glory in vanity. so with the Psalmist of old, let us ask our Father in heaven to turn away our eyes from beholding vanity. Many are the trials that we pass through as we journey forth through this life, and oftimes we feel that the burdens that are placed upon us are greater than we can bear. But oh, how soon those heavy burdens shall flee away, if we but turn away our eyes from beholding vanity, and with an eye single to the glory of God, seek the holy way which the prophets trod. Some may seek for fame and much praise from man; others for wealth, who pride themselves in much riches of houses and lands, etc., and of all such is vanity, but glory be to God our Father, there is a way of holiness that fadeth not away, and may we dear workers turn our eyes and teach our hearts to view that way, and drink in of the beauty and untold richness that our Father has in store for those who delight themselves to walk in that holy way, and when that blessed morn shall appear, may we be numbered with the blest of all ages, where all is joy and peace for ever, is the desire of a sister in Christ.

L. WILHELM.

Dear sisters, all though inasmuch as I can not be with you in person, I shall try and send some encouraging thoughts that will help us to keep bound together as true sisters in Christ. Ever working and doing our dear Lord and Master's will. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season, we shall reap if we faint not. In religion as in agriculture everything depends upon the thoroughness with which the process is conducted. In opening the way for the reception of the gospel, the plow-share of the Spirit must be permitted to go deep enough not only to stir the thin soil of emotion, which lies upon the surface of the evil heart of unbelief, "That is by nature in us all, but to up-turn and remove the under-lying Rock itself. Only thus will the good seed of the kingdom find its way into that deep sub-soil where the conditions of permanent vitality and fruitful development can be found. No mere surface work will do here, nothing but such a radical regeneration as shall take away the heart of stone out of the flesh, such as will make old things to pass away and all things to become new. A religion that flourishes in time of revival in the Church, and withers as soon as they are gone, is a miserable cheat. The sooner it is detected and renounced, the better for the soul. Let us give God's Word some thought, for we know not the hour when the Lord cometh. Help us to be ready. Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. A. M. KELLY.

Dear Sisters:

Have you ever thought how many beautiful prayers we find in God's Holy Word? Let us look at Psalm cxix. 33rd verse, "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end." We are all learners, we are learning something every day. We can learn better and faster if we are taught. We pray with David, Teach me, O Lord. Yes, who do we want for our teacher? The Lord. He is wise. We can be taught wrong if the Lord is not our teacher. What do we wish to be taught? The way of thy statutes. How much that means, The way of thy statutes or laws. The best lawyers spend a life time studying human laws and then do not always agree as to their meaning, but God's laws, we ask him to teach them to us, and then what? What shall we do so fast as we learn these statutes? What does the Psalmist say? And I shall keep it unto the end. We see it is not enough to learn God's statutes but we must keep it unto the end.

In the 34th verse of the same Psalm David says, "Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law." And in the 104th verse, "Through thy precepts I get understanding." We find all God's statutes recorded in his Holy Word; and that we may be taught so as to get understanding and say with David, "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path," is my prayer.

JOSIE THOMPSON.

Psalm cxix. 105, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." How many of us have stopped to analyze those words of the Psalmist, and note the encouragement in them? Our life, so to speak is cast upon the sea of time, as one walking in utter darkness. This darkness is the sin of the world which surrounds every individual in this life, and the lamp that is offered to lighten our way through the dark shadows of sin, is the Word of God. But one might ask, how is the Word of God a lamp unto our feet? We go out in a dark night without a light, we are very apt to stumble over something, therefore we need a lamp to lighten our pathway. "For the commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life." Prov. vi. 23. God has given us commandments concerning his will, and we should study them carefully, so that we should not be groping in darkness, but have the light, or understanding of his Word, that we may not fall by the wayside, or stumble over the mistakes of life. The Psalmist said in verse 160, "Thy Word is true from the beginning, and every one of thy righteous judgments endureth forever. How encouraging to know the Word is true from the beginning, and that the Word has told us of Jesus, lightened our pathway all the way down from the beginning unto the present time, and now holds up Jesus as our example, and Jesus said in John xiv. 6, "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Therefore, dear brothers and sisters, let us take the Word as our guide, and study carefully and prayerfully the commandments laid down therein for us, asking God to help us understand them, and make us willing to obey their precepts. With Christian love to all we remain as ever, your sister in Christ.

MRS. ALLIE MAXEY.

"Thou art my hiding place and my shield, I hope in thy Word." Also, "My flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgment."

The 114th and 120th verses of the 119th Psalm. It is generally supposed that the 119th Psalm was composed by Ezra, one of the men who led the captives back into their own land, and helped in rebuilding the city of Jerusalem, and the temple of God, and settling up the affairs of the church and state. The two kingdoms of Israel and Judah, and the government of these two kingdoms under a long succession of their own kings had both been carried into captivity by the Assyrians. God himself and his prophets, throughout all ages, foretold the coming of the Messiah as some great deliverer, or Anointed of God, and Ezra, as he led the captives back into their own land, had composed this Psalm to be sung on their homeward march; and from the words expressed, he was in fear and trembling, yet had a hope and a hiding place. God in the creation of the world made man in his own image, but after the fall of Adam, and the wickedness of the people, he said he would destroy man from the face of the earth. But Noah being a just man found favor in God's eyes, yet through all the years of Noah's teaching, and the preparing of the ark, according to the covenant or promise with God, only eight souls escaped the flood, the end of the first dispensation. Did you ever think, dear ones, as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man? The first dispensation was destroyed by water. Out of all the people who inhabited the world at that time only eight escaped the wrath of God. After the flood Noah was told to multiply and replenish the earth, but through the ages down man has been dissatisfied. They have wanted different rulers, and cried for more kings. God has given them prophets, rulers and kings, yet they were not content. He has promised that the world would never again be destroyed, but the next destruction will be by fire. No wonder Ezra says, "My flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgment." He had a glimmering of the wrath of God, yet he was secure in his hiding place. The King that is now to come, will be our last Ruler. He shall reign time without end, and we who escape the wrath of God at his coming, will live, and he shall be our King, and we shall be his people. God will never give us another king. He has sent his only begotten Son, shall we live and believe in him? Are we looking for our Savior to come to set up his kingdom, are we walking in our daily life, that when he comes he shall say, Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord? Shall we be free from the wrath of God, and is he our hiding place.

MRS. ETTIE FRY.

My dear Christian friends:

I have read with interest the announcements of the Conference at Antioch this year and have wished that it might be my privilege to attend once again as I did several years ago. Isolated as I am from all brethren of like precious faith, I often crave a meeting with the dear ones where I may hear the gospel preached as we believe it. Although I shall not be able to attend the Conference this year, I am asked to send a paper on some thought from Psalm cxix. At first thought this seemed a large task for me. But on further consideration of the matter, I decided I must make the effort for the good it will do mens well as the mite of good it may do the Sisters' Meeting.

In looking up what information I have available on this subject, I find this particular Psalm to be written by Ezra, to be sung on the return of the captives—a song of praise and thanksgiving for God's mercies and deliverance from captivity. This Psalm is full of beautiful thoughts, but the one I shall apply to myself is found in the 116th verse, which reads, "Uphold me according unto thy Word that I may live; and let me not be ashamed of my hope." I have for the most of my life, in fact, lived among and come in close touch with people of other churches. And since I have understood the teachings of the Church of God, and accepted their interpretation of the Bible as the most reasonable I have yet known, I have often had discussions with my friends of other faiths, who feel that I should unite with them, and lay aside such little doctrinal points, and assist in the work as they are teaching it. I feel to do this would be "to be ashamed of my hope" and would not be defending the faith that Christ and the apostles taught.

Last fall I joined the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church, that I might not seem to be a parasite—always attending church and doing nothing for that church. And although the ides of these ladies is not in accordance with our belief I must say they are most earnest and sincere workers. They believe that the world is to be converted through PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 21, 1905.

THE condition of Norway and Sweden is still unsettled, no European prince seeming willing to be chosen to the post of King of Norway.

WE were much pleased to have our Sister Truby, of Sheridan, Ind., visit us while attending the Antioch meeting. We enjoyed her stay among us, and hope she will be able to come again when she may meet with more of the brethren of Plymouth.

THERE is the usual delay about appointing the representative from each nation who will talk the peace question between Russia and Japan. Russia does not want to commit herself until she knows the terms, and Japan does not wish to enter into any discussion unless the representatives have "power to act." Meanwhile Russia would like to have an armistice arranged, but Japan does not agree to this, and is pushing her operations in Manchuria, forcing the Russians to give battle or retire.

LAST week it seemed that Germany and France were very near the war point. Germany does not like the Morocco situation, the agreement of France and England on that subject being particularly displeasing. The German Emperor therefore gives notice to France that she must not make any agreements with other nations that are not sanctioned at Berlin. To this France could not agree, as the further demand was made that alliances already made of that nature should be annulled. Of course the blow was aimed indirectly at England, hence the calling of officers who were away from their posts to return at once. The matter is quieting down somewhat now.

THE hearts of the brethren and sisters at this place were made to rejoice when on June 12, we were permitted to see Brother Zilmer, after their confession of faith, immerse F. M. McCrory and his wife into the Christ.

The truth is not new to them, as they have been attendants at the meeting at Antioch and Plymouth for many years. Their children have attended our Sunday School, the oldest daughter, Geneva, having been immersed by Brother Zilmer on Nov. 27, 1898. Indeed this family has been so much a part of our church society for years that they have seemed almost a part of us, and now when together they have made up their minds to come into the family of God, and enroll their names with his children, our hearts are glad, and we take pleasure in introducing our new brother and sister to the Household of Faith, and our prayer is that they may ever be faithful to their vows, and have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of God.

Conference Report.

As per announcement the Second Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana convened at the Antioch Church Thursday evening June 8, 1905. The opening sermon was delivered by the President, A. H. Zilmer. His subject being "Character of God". Friday 10:30 found a few of the faithful gathered at that old accustomed place to worship the true and living God. The first after the opening was an address of welcome by W. D. Thompson the only living trustee of the church. He was also one of the building committee when the church was erected a little over forty years ago.

At 11:00 we listened to a sermon by J. L. Wince. Lesson Eph. iv. 1-20. Subject, "Apostolic Church."

At 2 p. m. W. H. Wilson presented "An Exposition of John i. 1-14". Illustrated by chart. At 7:30 a general social meeting was held after which A. H. Zilmer delivered a sermon on "Ye are not of this World."

At 10:00 a. m. on Saturday the Social meeting was led by R. C. Balleback, after which W. H. Wilson delivered an address on "Russia in Prophecy", Lesson read was part of Daniel xi. and xii,

At 2:00 p. m. Business meeting was called to order. Lesson read was 2 Cor. vi.

Roll call of churches showed the following represent —viz—Argos, Antioch, Bethany, Plymouth, South Bend and Hillsboro.

The committee on the Child's Paper reported that several letters were written but only a few were answered. So little interest was manifested that it was decided to drop the matter entirely.

A motion was carried that the chair appoint a committee consisting of a member from each church to gather data for a church history. Also a committee of three were appointed to receive this data and see to having it published. Latter committee consists of A. H. Zilmer, Mrs. J. H. Willey and D. T. Halstead.

Quite a little was said about appointing trustees for the church at Antioch, but no definite action was taken as the Conference had no power to do it.

A new feature in the Indiana Conference was the Sister's Meeting held at 2:45. This meeting was led by Mrs. Eva L. Underwood. The lesson read was the 90th Psalm. It being the oldest of the Psalms. The 119th Psalm being the longest one was chosen as a foundation for the meeting.

A number of papers were read from sisters present and absent. These papers were all written from some thought found in the foundation chapter. After the sisters were through some of the brethren made short speeches. They all being present during the entire session.

At 7:30 the social meeting was led by J. L. Wince. The lesson read was 1 Peter i. 1-19. At 8:00 we listened to a sermon by J. F. Wagoner on "The Things Most Surely Believed Among Us."

Sunday, 10:00 a. m. The social meeting was led by Wm. Railsback, he being the only person who has attended every June meeting at that place since the church was built. 10:45 A. H. Zilmer spoke on "The Kingdom, Present or Future." 2:00 p. m. J. L. Wince gave a short address on the "Character of Christ." after which the communion was observed.

At 7:30 the social meeting was led by J. H. Willey. Lesson, Psalm lxxii. 8:15 sermon by A. H. Zilmer. Lesson 1 Cor. viii. Subject, "The Change Necessary to enter the Kingdom of God."

Thus ended another June Meeting. Though the weather was bad on Saturday all day and appeared unfavorable Sunday morning by Sunday afternoon the grounds were filled as usual.

On Sunday morning we had the pleasure of seeing two step out to make the start for the Kingdom. May these June meetings continue from year to year and may each of us hear that "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Words will fail to tell of the many grand, good truths we learned at our Annual Meeting, and of the royal way we were entertained by the dear ones at Dutton. The attendance was not so large at first, but by Saturday and Sunday the attendance was large, and good interest all through. Sunday evening the church was crowded and there were nearly as many outside listening at the windows, as well as in the church. All were glad to have Sister Jessie M. Wilson of Austin, Chicago, Ill., and Sister Ruth Smith of Chicago, Ill. with us. It was a pleasure to meet with the brethern from the following places; Grand Rapids, Mendon, Richland, Brady, Vicksburg, Kalamazoo, Coats Grove, Marlborough, Central Lake, Byron Center, Caledonia, Watson, Millbrook, Plainwell, and other places.

By request of the Annual Conference held at Dutton, June 1st 1904 it was moved and carried that the Secretary obtain the records of the first organization of our State Conference held in Michigan.

FROM THE RECORDS OF THE FIRST MICHIGAN CHURCH CONFERENCE.

"At a meeting of the Grand River Quarterly Conference held in Jamestown, Ottowa Co. Michigan, August about the 20th A. D. 1858 initiatory steps were taken towards the organization of a State Conference by forming a Provisional [Association] and electing Elder Ephraim Miller, Jr. President, Elder O. R. L. Crozier, Vice President, Elder E. Hoyt, Secretary, Elder Joel A. Simonds, Treasurer, and Elder E. Miller Jr. and A. W. Seymour Evangelists, and said Evangelists were instructed to give public notice and make other necessary provisions for a convention at some convenient time and place, for the purpose of organizing a State Conference and transacting such other business as might be deemed necessary; which duty they performed."

Pursuant to public notice in the "Prophetic Expositor," Published by Elder Joseph Marsh at Rochester, New York:—A convention of believers in the Gospel was held in Leroy, Calhoun Co., Michigan, Friday, October 16th 1858, and continued its session over the following Sunday.

Elder E. Miller called the convention to order, and made a brief statement of the object for which it had been called. After singing a hymn and prayer, O. R. L. Crozier proposed the following inquiry, viz: Is it advisable for the churches and brethern in the State to try to unite in some common plan for Evangelical efforts.

Many of the brethern having made remarks in favor of such an effort and no one objecting to it, it was voted that a committee of five be appointed to draft a plan of union and effort, and also to prepare business for the Conference. A. N. Seymour, E. Hoyt, and Edward Richards were appointed by the chair. Said committee, and the chairman was added by vote. Elders Hoyt, Seymour, and Simonds were on motion appointed a committee to prepare subjects for Bible classes during the Conference.

At the next and subsequent meetings the committee having the matter in charge reported the following plan of organization of the Michigan Church Conference.

The election of officers for the ensuing year, resulted as follows.

President, Ephraim Miller, Jr., Mendon.

Vice President, E. Hoyt, Grand Rapids.

Secretary, O. R. L. Crozier, Grand Rapids.

Treasurer, J. A. Simonds, Grand Rapids.

Members of the Executive Board:—William H. Knapp, H. Currier, Daniel Weaver, and Martin Hadsel.

E. Hoyt, Ephraim Miller, Jr., A. N. Seymour and O. R. L. Crozier were chosen Evangelists, and O. R. L. Crozier to attend State Conferences in other states, and E. Hoyt, and Ephraim Miller to deliver Annual Sermons at next Annual Meeting.

A full report of the meeting was published in the Harbinger published at Rochester, New York, and in the World's Crisis, published in Boston, Massachusetts.—O. R. L. Crozier, Secretary, Leroy, Calhoun County, Michigan, Friday, October 16th, 1858."

There has been held an Annual Conference every year since the organization of the first Michigan Conference in 1858, making this the 47th Annual Conference.

We did indeed have a grand good meeting. How Blessed it is to meet with those of like precious faith.

"The Lord preserve thy going out,
The Lord preserve thy coming in.
God send his angels round about
To keep thy soul from every sin,
And when thy going out is dear,
And when thy coming in is o'er
When in death's darkness all alone,
Thy feet can come and go no more,
The Lord preserve thy going out
From this dark world of grief and sin,
While angels standing round about
Sing "God preserve thy coming in."

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

Dear brothers and sisters.

I want to call your attention to Bro. J. F. Wagoner's article in THE RESTITUTION of April 26th, "History of Man." It is so good and I am so thankful to him for writing it, but I am not satisfied yet as I now want it in tract form that I may hand it to others that I may be able to teach others as much as lays within my power. It is on the subject that I have been wanting a tract for so long and our own dear aged brother has so kindly granted my request and has done his duty. Brothers and sisters, did you ever stop to meditate and then be able to see that there is a work for you and I, even if we cannot speak in public, nor cannot write such articles as Brothers Joblin, Wagoner, Wilson, Zilmer and other writers, there is one thing we can do, we can furnish the money to get them in tracts and then hand them to others to read. Now do not think that no one will read them, there are always a few here and there that are willing to read and learn. I do not allow myself to be without a good supply of tracts on hand, and I give them to others when ever I have a chance, and I have good results with the tracts and THE RESTITUTION, as I have sent the paper to several each year for some time. I sent it an old acquaintance of mine in January and I saw him a short time ago and he thanked me for the paper, and said to me, I read every line of the paper." He said, "I always knew you had Bible proof for your doctrine, but did not know you had so much as I have found." His wife told me that he has his Bible right by him and hunts up the references. May the husband and wife both continue to search to see if these things continue to be true, and finding them so may they embrace them.

Now in regard to getting Brother J. F. Wagoner's article in tract form, I will give liberally and I know of others that will help. I will suggest that all those that are willing to help please write to Brother Wagoner stating the amount they can give. I feel sure if we all work together there is nothing to prevent the good new[s] from being spread. Brother Underwood has been so good in reducing the price of THE RESTITUTION so it is within the reach of all those who are willing to send it to others that they may also hear and learn the good news of our soon coming Lord. Oh that we may all do our duty and not fall short, lest we lose our reward and are not permitted to enter in, is my prayer. Yours in the Blessed Hope.

MRS. W. H. EMMELER.

Indiana Conference—Important Notice.

As will be seen by reference to the published minutes of the Indiana Conference, an Historical Committee was appointed to collect and publish either in the columns of THE RESTITUTION, or in pamphlet form, or both, a history of the introduction of the gospel within the bounds of the State of Indiana and its spread to the various localities in which churches have been or are located. To the end that this work may be expedited as much as possible, the Committee desires the co-operation of those who have labored or were identified with the work, or resided in Indiana in former days. Brethren who have moved away from the bounds of the Indiana Conference who are in possession of historical facts relative to the early introduction of the gospel in Indiana, its hindrances, its success, etc., will confer a great favor upon said Committee and the brotherhood in Indiana by furnishing such data as they may possess. This history is to be for the information of all, but especially the younger portion of the membership. Brethren, let us hear from you soon. Your responses will be greatly appreciated. Thanking you in advance for your contributions, we are yours in Christ.

Committee,
A. H. ZILMER,
MRS. J. H. WILLEY,
D. T. HALSTEAD.

To the ones assembled at Dutton, Michigan:

How much I would love to be present at this year's Conference, and share the feast of good things God's dear children will enjoy as they leave home and friends to meet each other in love and fellowship at this our Annual Conference time. May his richest blessings be with you, and your own hearts and lives be made strong for the battles of the coming year. I am still in Texas doing the Lord's will I trust, but longing for home and home friends. And as soon as the Lord wills husband and myself will return north to settle in Chicago, and there I hope to be with the Church of the one faith. May God speed the day, and may his will be done in me while waiting his glorious return; I am happy in his love and praising his name. May all be done for his honor and glory. Yours in Christ.

MRS. CLARA CHAFFEE.

Help.

Two blind men, so the story goes, used to beg in the streets of old Rome. The cry of one was, "He is helped whom the king helpeth" but the other cried, "He is helped whom God helpeth" At last the emperor answered the prayer. He had a loaf baked and filled with pieces of gold, and sent it to the beggar who had called unto him. When the beggar, however, felt the weight of the loaf, he did not like bread that had not been properly baked, and was only too glad to sell it to his blind comrade. When th[e] of his kindness, and who have been reconciled to him, take heed that they hide not this great secret within their hearts, but that they tell to all around the story of redemption, of salvation, knowing that he who has given this message will be with them while they declare it, and make it a blessing to others, as it has been a blessing to them.

Poetry.

"He Came to His Own."

A Jew of the Jews, when he came to his own—
The people he chose from the children of men—
The manger, the prison, the scourge and the stone
Were forms of the welcome they gave to him then.

Descendant of David, he came to his own,
The heir of King David's legitimate line;
A cross was his guerdon, instead of a throne,
And thorns on his brow were his royalty's sign.

The Father of all, when he came to his own,
His children refused him, denying their birth;
Nor knew that he came for their sins to atone,
To wipe the dark stain from the suffering earth.

A friend and a brother, he came to his own,
But never knew where he should pillow his head;
He died for earth's millions, but perished alone,
And journeyed alone to the place of the dead.

Son, Father, and Spirit, he came to his own,
Who mocked him, and scorned him, and put him to shame;
His name was denied—he no more was known
Until he returned to the heaven whence he came.

American. Coming in touch with these people individually often proves a test of the strength of one's faith. One day Mrs. Smith, the minister's wife, (formerly of Plymouth) said to me, "Mrs. Landon, you ought to be a Methodist." I informed her that I was a member of a church of which there was none in town. "What church?" she asked. I told her the Church of God at Plymouth, and told her she probably knew of it as she had lived there. She said she did. On the way home the presiding elder's wife said to me, "What does the Church of God believe? I never heard of them." I told her that one important feature of our belief was that we looked for the coming of Christ. She replied, "You believe he was here once, don't you?" "O, yes," I replied, "but we are looking for his second coming." She said that was a good deal as the Mormons believed. I did not know what the Mormons believed, but I did not like being classed with them, so dropped the subject. Here was an opportunity "to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear," but she being an elderly lady and seemingly so well versed in Methodism, I felt timid, and afraid to continue the discussion with her and so let my opportunity slip by. Then too, our belief is so different from the popular ideas of the religious world today, that to discuss it with persons to whom it is entirely new, I have feared in times past, lest they should consider me a little eccentric. And as a result of this timidity I have kept quiet and thus hid my light under a bushel. But during the last year I have, through talks with people, and through the study of tracts and the Bible, largely overcome this fault, and yet there is room for growth.

In a Sunday school class one day I was listening to a prominent Methodist teacher teaching a lesson on the resurrection. He talked some time in a figurative way without saying much of anything to my notion. And after a while I ventured to say, "Then you don't believe in a literal resurrection?" He dropped his book in the seat and straightened himself up as though he had a large task before him and finally said, "There may come a time when the angel of the Lord shall descend and the dead shall rise, but I would rather not believe that. I would rather believe that my loved ones are with Christ." I replied with several passages of Scripture in regard to Christ's coming and of his being the example and the first fruits of them that sleep, and of Paul's crown that is laid up for him and all those who love his appearing. He admitted there was room for argument on the subject and it was dropped. But I thought it is not a matter of which we had rather believe, but rather a matter of what the Bible teaches.

During the winter the Christian minister called on me, knowing that at one time I was a member of that church. When he found where my membership was he wanted to know what we belived. I said, In the first place we believe that man is mortal—subject to death, and may gain eternal life only through Christ at the resurrection. He replied, "That is what we believe." Then the question of the soul came up and I quoted to him Gen. ii. 7 and Psalms cxlvi. 4. He thought the Bible was not explicit on the subject of the soul, so that it was not possible or intended to be understood. Then we talked on the kingdom, which they believe was set up on the day of Pentecost, when Peter was given the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Of the coming of Christ he said he believed it, but that was God's business, and it was his duty to teach the essentials to salvation. He thought we had so little reason to separate ourselves from the Christian church as the name did not make much difference and the essentials to salvation were the same. I replied by asking him if he could go and work in the Catholic church, as to me there was as much difference between mine and his church as there was between his and the Catholic, to which he replied nothing. He said most of the thoughts I presented were new to him (he being a young minister) and he was glad for the talk. As for me it did me much good as from that time I studied more diligently than ever, as Paul says "to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of God."

Some time ago I noticed an article in THE RESTITUTION, in which some one was asking what our attitude toward other churches should be, as they some times accuse us of standing idly by and doing nothing. As yet I have seen no reply to this article and I for one would be glad to hear from some of our ministers on this subject.

In conclusion, let me ask your prayers that I may ever cherish and live faithfully to the Blessed Hope, and may the time speedily come when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters that cover the sea." Yours for a better knowledge of the truth.

MRS. E. A. LANDON.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 7.

1. In the first year of Belshazzar king of the Chaldaioi Daniel saw a dream vision, and the seeings of his head were upon his bed, and he wrote his dream-vision.

2. I Daniel was beholding, and lo, the four winds of the heavens struck into the great sea;

3. And four wild-beasts, great and differing from one another came up out of the sea.

4. The first as it were a lioness and she had wings like an eagle; I was gazing until her wings were plucked off, and she was taken away from the earth and stood upon a man's feet, and a man's heart given unto her.

5. And lo, a second wild-beast like to a she-bear, and she stood on one side, and there were three ribs in her mouth between her teeth; and in this wise said they unto her, Arise and eat much flesh.

6. After that I was gazing, and lo, another wild-beast as it were a she-leopard and she had four wings of a flying thing over and above her, and official-power was given her.

7. After that I was gazing, and lo, a fourth wild-beast, fearful and awe-inspiring and very strong, and his teeth of iron were eating and making fine, and the remnants he was treading together with his feet; and he was very different from all the wild-beasts that were before him; and he had ten horns.

8. I was scrutinizing his horns, and lo, another little horn came up in their midst; and three of his front horns were snatched off from his face; and lo, there were eyes as it were a man's eyes in this horn and a mouth talking great things.

9. I was gazing until such time as the thrones were placed, and an ancient of days took his seat, and his under-garment was white as it were snow, and the hair of his head as it were cleansed wool; his throne a flame of fire, his environments flaming fire.

10. A river of fire flowed (lit. "drew along") in front of him; thousands of thousand were publicly-serving him, and myriads of myriads stood in his presence; he took his seat as judge; and books were opened.

11. Then I was gazing with wonder by reason of the sound of the great words, which that horn was talking until the wild beast was taken away and destroyed and his body given to a burning fire.

12. And of the rest of the wild-beasts the authority was changed, and a prolonging of life was given to them until an appointed time and an appointed-time.

13. I was beholding in a vision of the night, and lo, in the midst of the clouds of the heavens as it were a son of man coming, even until he reached the Ancient of the Days, and was brought unto him.

14. And unto him (this son of man as it were) was given the authority, and the honor and the royalty, and all the latties and tribes and tongues will serve him as bond-servants; his official-power is an eternal (or "age-lasting") official-power (or "qualification") and his kingdom (or "royalty") will not have perished by corruption.

15. My spirit within my being was thrilled with awe. I Daniel (was thrilled with awe) and the seeings of my head disturbed me.

16. And I went to one of those who were standing by and sought to learn from him about these things the exact meaning; and he told me the exact meaning, and the comparative-significance of the words he made known to me.

17. These four wild-beasts mean four kingdoms will arise upon the earth;

18. Which will be taken away: and saints of the Most High will take the royalty (or kingdom) and hold it until an animate-age of the animate-ages.

19. And I sought accurately concerning the fourth wild-beast, because it was different from any wild-beast, very frightful, its teeth iron teeth, and its claws copper-claws, and it was eating and making fine, and was treading together the remnants with its feet.

20. And concerning his ten horns, the ten on his head, and the other that came up and shook out the first ones, and which had eyes and a mouth talking great things and its looks greater than the rest.

21. I was gazing, and that horn made war with the saints, and was strong against them.

22. Until the Ancient of Days came and gave the verdict (the judgment rendered) to saints of the Most High; and the appointed-time (or due-time) had arrived and the saints held the royalty (or kingdom).

23. And he said the fourth wild-beast will be a fourth kingdom on the earth, which will exceed all the kingdoms and will devour all the earth, and will tread it together and cut it down.

24. And his ten horns mean ten kings will arise, and after them will another arise, who will surpass in evil-doings all those before him; and three kings will he humiliate;

25. And words against the Most High will he talk; and the saints of the Most High will he wrestle with (or contend with) and he will think to change appointed-times and law, and it will have been with his hand (that is law will) until an appointed time and appointed times and half of an appointed-time.

26. And until he hath taken his seat to judge; and they will reverse the authority to make to disappear and perish unto completion.

27. And until the kingdom and the official-power and the majesty of the kings beneath all the heavens hath been given unto saints of the Most High; and its royalty is an eternal royalty, and all the authorities (or governments) will serve it as bond-servants and obey it.

28. Hereunto is the limit of the word. I Daniel (am speaking now), my thoughts were disturbing me exceedingly and my looks were changed, and the oracular-word I watched to keep in my heart (or "I committed it by heart" we would say perhaps).

COMMENT.

This dream-vision as herein written and explained seems to me clear enough as history before the event. Even Daniel himself could understand the coming events only as far as "hereunto," and the reader will observe that he prays for further light, and his prayer is answered as recorded in a later chapter of this book, which answer, the further light, we shall hope to make clear also when we come to it. What made him specially fervent and faithful in his votive-prayer just at that time we are told was, because he knew from an oracular word in Hieremias that the predicted "seventy years" of the captivity had been fulfilled, and the time, due time, had arrived for a restoration of Judah to their city and land. In short he was giving heed to "the more sure prophetic-word" that had preceded him. Some of us will do well to be following in the footsteps of faithful Daniel and giving heed to the unfulfilled prophetic word contained in this chapter, and "to be expectantly looking for this coming kingdom" on the earth here and not off up in the sky somewhere or in one of the planets like Mars for instance.

CHAS. GARDNER.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

The Bereans Column.

(Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.)

Dear Bereans:

The time is drawing near when we must decide what we will do about the Bible School. Can we afford to miss it? I am sure I can not.

Brother Lindsay is such a capable and willing teacher that after being under his instruction for ten days we must feel that "It has been good for us to be there." Let us all try to attend and make the meeting one grand good success.

With best wishes for same, I am,
Your Sister, in Christ.

ELISABETH EATON.

Dear Bereans:

My desire to be present at our assembly at Oregon, increases day by day. It is high time to set our hearts on going, and lay our plans accordingly.

A systematic study of God's Word for a term of ten days, to the exclusion of all other duties, cannot prove otherwise than beneficial. We are told to "Search the Scriptures" and while following that advice many hidden treasures are unearthed.

I hope to meet many new faces this year, as well as all of the familiar ones of past years. Come give it a trial and you will want to come again. Let it be a love for the truth that draws us there, and the motive not be lost sight of.

ALMEDA MITCHELL.

Dear Bereans:

Those of you who have been making a study of the lessons outlined in our booklets, realize something of the benefits derived from systematic Bible study. How much greater are the results when we have as a leader one adapted in every way as a teacher. This privilege is offered you in the Bible School at Oregon, Ill. The value of such work as we have experienced in our attendance the past two years has been such we wish every person to enjoy with us this feast of good things. Plan to be one of the class this year, it is worth making many sacrifices to attain to this end. The societies at a distance, we would urge to send one or two from their number. Let us learn all we can from God's Blessed Word. "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet."

ANNA E. DREW.

THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE.

"Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous, for praise is comely for the upright. He loveth righteousness and judgment; the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." Psa. xxxiii. 1-5.

We cannot praise the Lord enough for the many blessings he lovingly gives us; all around us daily we can see his goodness and great works; may we show forth our love for the Father at all times and not do or say anything that will grieve him. "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." Eph. v. 20.

ROSETTA C. JOHNSON.

Dear Bereans:

I have been requested to write a few lines of encouragement to you and to urge each to be faithful in the good work in which you are engaged, for we believe it to be such. What a pleasant sight to see the young trying to impress upon the minds of others the necessity of studying the Word of God! The Bible tells us "to search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." John v. 39. In the years that are gone there was no organization whereby the young, in our faith, could have the opportunity to give their views upon these subjects, but now how different; they have been brought into public notice through the Berean column in THE RESTITUTION, and have there the privilege of writing and explaining Scripture as they understand it. It has given confidence and courage to many to put forth efforts in this direction, who would have never tried to write at all, and has been a help, not only to themselves and their own number, but has no doubt aroused the older ones to fresh energy and more fervor in the cause of the Master. Will not this inspire you to renewed action? We older ones feel a deep interest in the Bereans. Your time will not be spent in vain, but it will redound to the glory of God. Will it not be a pleasant thought, as we near the end of life's journey, to think we did what we could to spread the glorious gospel? How much better to spend our time in such a cause than in the fleeting pleasures of earth; they pass swiftly away and leave an aching void in the heart. On the other hand, time spent in the cause of the Master, brings peace and happiness. Many of your number have already put on Christ, to those who have not I would say, do so at once, that you "may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." We are standing today upon the threshold of a great event. Christ told his disciples when he went away that he would come again. We have long been waiting for that return, we are still looking and watching for his coming. Our eyes shall see the King in his beauty and the land that is afar off.

We long to behold the land,
By prophets and sages foretold;
Earth being free from the curse
New beauties will then unfold.

To be with the ransomed throng,
And hear the heavenly strain;
With the angels to shout hosannas!
Our Savior has come to reign.

May we enter that glorious city,
Whose streets are paved with gold;
To gaze on its rapturous beauty,
For its glories have never been told.

MARY F. THATCHER.

Obituary.

Died, near Grovertown, Stark Co., Ind. May 25, 1905, Emma C. Collins, wife of Johnathan Collins, aged 37 years, 1 month, and 7 days.

The deceased was a daughter of William J. and Caroline Berry. Was born in Grant Co., Ind. Was married to Mr. Collins in 1884. To this union were born six children, four of whom, and the husband survive to mourn the loss of a loving and faithful mother and wife. One sister, four half sisters and four half brothers share with the bereaved family the grief consequent upon sundered ties of relationship.

About four years ago she was baptized into the saving name of Jesus the Christ, by the writer, and united with the little church at Eagle Creek, Stark County, and remained faithful up to the day of her death. The church looses by her death a faithful member. The funeral services were held on Saturday, May 27th at the Eagle Creek house of worship, and from thence she was borne to the cemetery near by and laid to rest, to await the coming of the Lord.

"How long shall death the tyrant reign
And triumph o'er the just
While the rich blood of martyrs stain
Lies mingled in the dust.

When shall the tedious night be gone,
When will our Lord appear?
Our fond desires would pray him down,
Our lives embrace him here."

JOHN L. WINCE.

Lewis Cuffel was born in Wayne Co., Ohio, Oct. 6th, 1833. Died May 28th, 1905, aged 71 years, 6 months and 22 days. He leaves three children, Mary J. Barr, of Hammond, Ind. Wm. H. Cuffel, of Akron, Ind., and Ezra E. Cuffel, of Chicago, Ohio. Sarah J. his beloved wife preceded him Feb. 10th, 1905.

He was afflicted for many years but patiently endured all until death relieved him. He died in hope of a glorious resurrection when Christ the Life Giver appears to judge the quick and dead.

Future life through Christ the Life Giver was the theme upon which the writer spoke to those assembled. Blessed hope, how it lightens the darkness of the tomb, how we long for deliverance through him who burst the bars of death and lives forevermore.

J. F. WAGONER.

Sarah Jennatie Appleyard was born near Sacremento, Cal., May 1, 1871. Died of blood poison at her home at Fort Dodge, Ia., April 10, 1905. On Sept. 27, 1891 she embraced the things concerning the kingdom and was baptized. Soon after moving to Wall Lake, Ia., where she lived until Oct. 1904. She graduated from the high school at Wall Lake, May 20, 1895. Was married to W. T. Alstrand, June 2, 1901, moving to Ft. Dodge, Oct. 8, 1904. All who know Nettie, as she was commonly called, could always testify to her sweet disposition and her eagerness to help others. She was the oldest daughter of Brother Thomas Appleyard who with his wife and three daughters are left to mourn, but not as others who have no hope. By request of Mr. Alstrand funeral services were conducted by Rev. Baird of the Presbyterian church after which she was laid away in the Ft. Dodge cemetery to await the call of him who said "I am the resurrection and the life." May the time soon come when the knowledge of the glory of the Lord will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

Do not live a single hour of your life without doing exactly what is to be done in it, and going straight through it from beginning to end. Work, play, study, rest, whatever it is, take hold of it at once, and finish it up evenly; then to the next thing, without any moment dropping between.

It is wonderful to see how many hours prompt people contrive to make of a day; it is as if they picked up the moments that the dawdlers lost. And, if you find yourself where you have so many things pressing upon you that you hardly know how to begin, take hold of the very first one that comes to hand, and you will find the rest all fall in line and follow after, like a company of well-drilled soldiers; and though work may be hard to meet when it charges in squads it is easily vanquished if you can bring it in line.

A man was asked how he accomplished so much in life. "My father taught me," was the reply, "when I had any thing to do, to go and do it."

The Ideal Student.

The ideal student is not a snob in any sense of the word. He is not dependent upon his good looks or his bad looks, on the part of his hair, the style of his eye-glass, the cut of his coat, the shape of his boot, the presence or the absence of the shirtwaist. Neither is he dependent alone upon the size of his muscle, the distance of his jump, his speed in running, the curve of his ball, or his agility and strength in football. He does not take pride in the number of parties and receptions which attends, and his general popularity. Neither does he become a book-worm, spending all his time and energy trying to make excellent grades, thereby becomeng a mere machine and drudge. He is not a dyspeptic mentally or physically. He is not a flirt, a shirk or a dude.

He is not wholly a negative creature. There are many positive points in his character. He is neat in dress and easy in manner. He enjoys the best society and the best entertainments. He is fond of outdoor sports, but looks upon them only as a means of recreation, in order to put himself in condition for the more serious duties of life. He is systematic in his work, having regular hours for study, pleasure, and recreation, and allows nothing to interfere with his work. He has high ideals of morals and does everything in his power to make the moral standard of his college higher than ever before. He is independent in thought and in action without being dogmatic and self-centered. He is a severe critic of himself and charitable towards others.

In a word he uses every legitimate means to cultivate to its highest capacity every good and perfect gift with which he has been endowed.

Low Fares West and Southwest.

Anyone contemplating a trip West may take advantage of the reduced fares for the special Home-Seeker's excursions via Pennsylvania Lines to points in Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oregon, Washington, Texas and other sections in the West and in all the States of the South.

Stop-over privileges permit travelers to investigate business openings These tickets will be on sale certain dates during the summer. Detailed information as to fares, through time, etc., will be freely furnished upon application to Local Ticket Agent of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 15.

Consider this Outing.

By far the most attractive trip for health and pleasure the coming vacation season is that offered by the Seashore excursion Thursday, August 17th, over Pennsylvania Lines to Atlantic City, Cape May and seven other famous summer havens on the Atlantic Coast.

The fast through trains over Pennsylvania Lines take passengers in a few hours out of the heat and humidity of summer to the cool breezes of old ocean. This mid-August excursion occurs in this season for rest when it is most convenient to leave business. Excursionists have the added pleasure of seeing Atlantic City when it is in full tide of the fashionable season. The greatest representative gathering ever known at any resort are seen at Atlantic City. As many as 50,000 people at one time promenade the famous boardwalk. The fashionable bathing hours present an unparalled scene—fully 100,000 bathers in the sea and on the beach.

The healthful effect of the seashore trip is due to the salt and pine air. So beneficial has this proved that physicians send their patients there to get the benefit of breathing the pure ocean air.

Special low fares will be in effect for this Seashore excursion. Full information will be freely given by local ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1

That the hearts of all who will be present will burn within them with renewed zeal and sincerity of purpose, that whatsoever is done will be done heartily as unto the Lord and not unto men, knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. Be sure to come. Address all communications to J. C. Thompson, Sec'y, 146 Brookdale St., Cleveland, Ohio.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

Seeing America.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through lines and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 1.

Different Minds.

Some murmur when the sky is clear,
And wholly bright to view—
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue;
And some with thankful love are filled,
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God's good mercy gild
The darkness of the night.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 6.

1. And it was pleasing in the sight of Darelos and he established in his royalty one hundred and twenty satrapies to be in all his kingdom.

2. And over them three directors, of whom Daniel was one, to whom the satraps were to give an account, that the king might not be annoyed.

3. And Daniel was over them, because exceeding spirit was in him, and the king established him over all his kingdom.

4. And the directors, and the satraps sought to find a pretext against Daniel; and they found no pretext nor stumbling-step nor fault to bring against him; because he was faithful.

5. And the directors said, We shall find no pretext against Daniel, unless in the laws of his God.

6. Then the directors and the satraps stood in the presence of the king and said unto him, O king Darios, live forever.

7. All those over thy kingdom, military-leaders and satraps, subordinates and local-rulers, have taken counsel together to establish by royal institute, and to make it strong by limitation, that whoever shall ask anything from any god or man for thirty days other than from thee, O king, shall be cast into the pit of the lions.

8. Now then, O king, set the limit and promulgate it in writing, that it may not be changed, a decree namely of Persians and Medes.

9. Then Darelos, the king, directed the decree to be written.

10. And Daniel, when he became aware that the decree had been ordered, entered into his house; and with his windows opened in his upper-suite toward Hierousalem, and three stated times a day he continued to kneel and offer votive-prayer, and confess in the presence of his God, even as he had been accustomed to do before.

11. Then those men covertly watched and found Daniel asking and beseeching of his God.

12. And they go and say to the king, O king, Didst thou not set a limit, that any man who shall ask anything from any god or man for thirty days, other than from thee O king, should be cast into the pit of the lions? And the king said, The word is true, and the decree of the Medes and Persians may not be evaded.

13. Then they made answer and they say in the presence of the king, Daniel, the one from the sons of the captivity of Joudaia hath not subjected himself to thy decree, and three stated times a day he asketh for his things from his God.

14. Then the king, when he had heard the thing said, was very much grieved on his own account and for Daniel's sake he strove to deliver him, and until evening he was struggling to deliver him.

15. Then those men say to the king; know, O king, that it is not lawful for Medes and Persians to change in the way of any limitation and disposition, the decree which the king may dispose.

16. Then the king said the word and they led Daniel and cast him into the pit of the lions; and the king said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou dost serve (for him) unremittingly, he will deliver thee;

17. And they brought a stone and placed it upon the mouth of the pit, and the king sealed it with his finger-ring and with the finger-ring of his great men, so that the affair with Daniel might not be changed.

18. And the king went home and lay sleepless, and delicacies were not brought in unto him, and sleep stood away from him; and God shut the mouths of the lions, and they did not annoy Daniel.

19. Then the king arose at dawn with the light, and went with haste unto the pit of the lions;

20. And while drawing nigh to the pit he called with a strong voice, Daniel thou bond-servant of the living God, thy God whom thou art serving unremittingly has been able to deliver thee out of the mouth of the lions has he not?

21. And Daniel said unto the king, O king, live forever.

22. My God sent his angel and shut the mouths of the lions and they have not harmed me because uprightness was found to be mine, and in thy sight, O king, I had committed no error.

23. Then the king showed himself very good to him, and said that Daniel should be brought up out of the pit; and Daniel was brought up out of the pit, and no corruption was found in him, because he had trusted in his God.

24. And the king said the word and they led the prominent men who had falsely accused Daniel and they were cast into the pit of the lions, they and their sons and their wives; and they had not reached the bottom of the pit e'er the lions had mastered them and munched all their bones.

25. Then Darelos the king wrote unto all the lailies, tribes, tongues who were dwelling in all the land; may peace have been multiplied for you.

26. From my face hath this decree been promulgated, namely, That in every realm of my royalty, ("en pasee archee mou" here translated "In every realm of my") they be trembling and fearing from before the face of the God of Daniel, because he is a God who liveth and abideth forever, and his kingdom will not have perished by corruption, and his lordship will be unto completion.

27. He interveneth and delivereth and he causeth (or is the author of) signs and prodigies in the heavens and upon the earth, he namely who delivered Daniel out of the hand of the lions.

28. And Daniel went straight forward in the royalty of Darelos and in the royalty of Kuros the Persian (Persos).

COMMENT.

The student should take his "Herodotus" and read what "the Father of History" says of this same Darelos king of the Medes and Persians. For he has a great deal to say about him and Kuros (Cyrus) and the city of Babuloon. Of course the account which Herodotus gives is given from the standpoint of secular and uninspired observation of this wonderful old civilization, while the glimpse and broad generalization we get historically here is from the divinely inspired standpoint and for a higher moral purpose than the mere writing of history. Naturally God and his bond-servant Daniel do not appear in the account Herodotus gives; but the invisible controlling power—the unseen hand does appear through all the heathen divination and superstition that Herodotus traces and the unaccountable nobility of character which he depicts in both these notable men Darelos and Kuros (Cyrus). The differences of reading in this chapter though not as marked as in the preceding chapters are worthy of notice on the part of the diligent student and inquirer.

A religion of effortless adoration may be a religion for an angel, but never for a man. Not in the contemplative, but in the active, lies true hope; not in rapture, but in reality, lies true life; not in the realm of ideals, but among tangible things, is man's sanctification wrought.—Henry Drummond.

Exhortation at the Breaking of Bread.

PSALMS CXVI. 12.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?" What shall I render? This is a great question that we should ask ourselves. Not what shall some one else return or give to the Lord, but what shall I render for his benefits to me, how can I thank him? How can I tell of all his benefits? It is more than tongue can tell. If I gave him all my time, all my thought, my life, I could not render unto him or return in any measure his great benefits. Then how can I render or pay him? Only in the way he asks. By having faith in his promises, by believing on the Son whom he sent? By having confidence in his Word, for we are made partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end; endure, believe in just his Word, for God is grieved with those who disbelieve his Word; and without faith it is impossible to please God. By faith the elders obtained a good report. Then if I believe in God and his Son Jesus, and that in him only can I gain eternal life; that Jesus my Savior died and rose again, that he is coming again, that he will be King and rule over the whole earth, that if I obey him and live godly, take his name by being immersed, and keep him in memory by gathering with those of like precious faith and partake of the emblems of his death, keep him in memory till he comes. By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually; that is the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name, with such sacrifice God is well pleased. Then if I keep the faith and keep myself unspotted from the world, give unto him a continued thanksgiving, then I and all who will serve him can render unto the Lord that which is well pleasing in his sight. Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him. O what a benefit, what a favor conferred upon us by God, that through his Son we can become heirs with Christ, sons of God. How can I tell, and what can I render when the Word of God is so full of benefits, that has bestowed upon you and me? Jesus when speaking to the Jews concerning tribute money, said unto them, Render unto Cesar the things that are Cesar's, and unto God the things which are God's. Then let us give unto the world only such things as are commanded, and to submit to the laws and ordinances of men. But render to God the sacrifices that are well pleasing in his sight, a continual thanksgiving to his name for all his benefits.

O render thanks to God above,
The fountain of eternal love;
Whose mercy firm through ages past,
Has stood and shall forever last.

Who can his mighty deeds express,
Not only vast but numberless,
What mortal eloquence can raise,
His tribute of immortal praise.

ELLA KNOWLES.

"Let thy tender mercies come unto me." We have a very merciful Father, if we had not I am afraid we could not be accepted of him. In Lam. iii. 22, we read, "It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not." 1 Cor. i. 8, He is called the Father of mercies. The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy. Yes, the earth is full of his mercy. If every one could only realize that it is God who should have all praise, and honor, and glory, for the wonderful mercy and love displayed in the earth. "For thy mercy is great above the heavens, and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds. Not unto us, O Lord, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy's and for thy truth's sake."

When all thy mercies, O my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view, I'm lost
In wonder, love and praise.

To the brethren in Ohio:

We have been invited to Cleveland and Glenville to take part in special meetings there, Sister C. Cowell having been granted the use of the school at Glenville. May the Lord find some minds there that the truth may enlighten to obedience. From Cleveland we go to Sisterville, West Virginia, Saturday June 17th, for one week or more. Bro Farley having secured the city hall for a series of meetings. Much interest was shown at our last visit there. We hope for fruit to the glory of God.

Dear Sister Woodward:

Most timely is the call in THE RESTITUTION sent out by Bro. Woodward and yourself to all in Michigan who exalt the Lord Jesus by faith in his near coming, and through whom only we have promise of eternal life. Will a goodly number respond by being present at the little church where for so many years near by believers have welcomed all who come to this yearly feast? So prays writer of these lines, who, six years ago counted one at the June Conference in Dutton. I am thinking of the sisters banded together as an "Aid Society," and would ask each member to consider whether she would have been likely to do as good service outside of the organization as within. Look where you will results of separate individual efforts do not measure up to that produced by co-operation. Shall we not be wise in these things as people working for civic righteousness? Union is strength in all lines of endeavor. I think of Paul's picture of Christian warfare in his Ephesian letter—the various means for good equipment. And by this, he says, "having done all, to stand." Surely we may rightly infer that he would counsel standing together. In this gospel age it becomes us who profess love for Christ, the emancipator of woman, to neglect no opportunity for special work in his name. O let us not have need of the prophet's admonition, "Rise up, ye women that are at ease." We may be hard workers for what makes for material prosperity, but let us see to it that we leave not undone that which makes for deeper spiritual life. In closing, I would recall to our minds the burden of a message once sent by that dear saint, S. R. Wince, whose faith and works are in unison. She pressed the duty of giving "tithes" as one of great importance in right discharge of Christian duty. It is good to know of many who are inquiring for the "old paths" as regards this practice. Suffer me to repeat the Aaronic benediction, praying it may abide in all our hearts. The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.

Yours in the hope of Israel.

Obituary.

George Henson died at his home five miles southwest of Paris, Ill., June 14, 1905. He was born June 15, 1840, and thus lacked but one day of being 65 years old. He enlisted in the War of 1861, as a private in Co. K., 62, Illinois Infantry. In February, 1868, he was united in marriage with Cynthia LeMasters. To this union were born seven children, the eldest, Dollie, dying in infancy, the living are Frank, Nancy, Thomas Jefferson, Hatch, Maud Ethel and LeRoy. George Henson united with the Church of God when a young man and has lived a Christian life, a devoted husband and loving father. Through all his sickness, dating back almost two years, he has been a remarkably patient sufferer, loved and respected by all. He has lived to see all his children married and settled in life, which was a great comfort to him. The widow will be so lonely now, but she cared for him so tenderly, which is her comforting thought. The children have lost a loving counselor, the grandchildren of whom there are fourteen, have lost a loving grandfather, but some of them are old enough to remember him in the years to come. Words of comfort were spoken by Mr. Sylvester Eldrige, based on the 14th chapter of Job; after which we followed George to the beautiful cemetary in Paris, where amid beautiful flowers and warbling birds he is taking his last sleep, waiting the voice of his Master, who will call him from his (to him) short sleep to meet him in the air. Then in the earth made new we that are faithful will meet him, never more to be separated again, for there will then be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, nothing to mar the happiness of the faithful. George seemed very near to us, having married a cousin of my husband.

Oft we have mingled together,
Sometimes in prayer and song;
Now when we meet this one we greet,
Never again in our throng.

Sweetly the form will be sleeping
Under the cypress shade;
And though we be fondly will we
Cherish the name of the dead.

They are going down the valley,
The dark death valley,
We'll see their faces never more
Till we pass down the valley,
The deep dark valley;
And meet them on the other shore.

AZORAH M. SCHOUGH.

Lorenzo Ray Horning was born in Otsego, Michigan, March 3rd, 1881. Died in Kalamazoo, Michigan, May 28th, 1905, of tuberculosis. Ray had been in poor health for three years, confined to his bed since January. He died believing in the all-atoning blood of Christ being sufficient for his salvation. He was buried in Watson. We were absent from home at the time of his death, and could not officiate as we had promised to do, but sympathize with the mother, our dear sister in Christ, and pray God to stand by her in her trials. She has already had many hard places to pass through, never faltering from her trust in God, may she still cling to the blessed promises.

Volney S. Bourne was borne Aug. 25th, 1819, in New York. Died March 26th, 1905, in Plainwell, Mich., of pneumonia. Several years ago Bro. Bourne came into the gospel truths and has always received much comfort in his hope. The only gospel preaching he has had for years has been the reading of THE RESTITUTION, which has afforded him great pleasure. He leaves a wife, who thank God is also trusting in the blessed promises of God. We commend her to the keeping of the great Guardian of his flock. We were also absent from home at his death, and the funeral services were conducted by one of the village pastors.

Selections.

What Can You Do?

There are certain things that you can do which no one else can do. Either through peculiar ability, or special opportunity, these things lie within your reach as within the reach of no one else. There are also certain things which you can do better than you can do some other things. You may not know what they are, but there are some things for which you have a special aptitude and ability. If then, you can find out what thing you can do which no one else can do what things you can do better than you can do any thing else, you may find some light upon the special work to which God may be calling you.

It is also true that you may not only be able to do some things which no one else can do, but you may be able to do certain things better than any one else in the world can do them. You may have so investigated certain questions, so familiarized yourself with certain methods, and so trained yourself to certain specialties, that you can do those things as no other living person can do them.

If this is the case, then the question may arise, Are those things which you can do better than any one else can do them, things which really need to be done? There are many things which one can do, which are not important. It is said that Dr. Johnson once heard a piece of music which was pronounced "very difficult" to play.

"Difficult?" said the old grumbler, "I wish it were impossible."

There are things which are so hard to do that they are not worth doing, like the horse which was hard to catch and was good for nothing after he was caught. If we devote our energies to practicing and doing trifling things, needless things, and worthless things, no matter how well we may do them, nor how expert we may become, we are still doing useless work. But if we can do work which must be done, and work which others cannot do; or if we can do needful work, and do it better than any one else can do it, then we have our place to fill and our parts to act in the world's affairs and find ourselves needed in the great system of human effort and existence.

The man who is not wanted in the world in which he lives, has by some means or other missed his course, and failed of the training which would best have developed his powers. The man who has learned to act his part and do his work, that part being a needful one, however humble it may be, will find that he has not lived in vain, and that he holds a place in this world which cannot be left vacant, and which he is especially qualified to fill.—Christian.

Power of the Sweeter Song.

We can fight the world's evil best, not merely by trying to shut it out of our life, or ward it off, but by having our hearts so full of good that the evil power will be more than counterbalanced. In the old legends the sirens sang so sweetly that all who sailed near their home in the sea were fascinated and drawn to their shore only to be destroyed. Some tried to get safely past the enchanted spot by putting wax in their ears, so that they should not hear the luring bewitching strains. But Orpheus, when he found a better way. He made music on his own ship which surpassed in sweetness that of the sirens, and thus their strains had no power over his men.

The best way to break the charm of this world's alluring voices is not to try to shut out the music by stopping our ears, but to have our hearts filled with the sweeter music of the joy of Christ. Then temptation will not have power over us, because there is a mightier power within us. A deep love for Christ is the best antidote against the debasing influences sin.

Asbury Park Tour. "National Educational Association Special" to Run Over Pennsylvania Lines.

Teachers and others who contemplate taking advantage of the excursions to Asbury Park for the National Educational Association Convention will be interested in "The National Educational Association Special," which will run over the Pennsylvania System through to Asbury Park. This solid train of Pullman sleeping cars, Pennsylvania standard vestibule coaches and dining car will be run July 1st, receiving Asbury Park excursionists at Plymouth at about 1:20 p. m. on that date. "The N. E. A. Special" will make a daylight run over the Alleghany Mountains, the trip which travelers declare excels the view of the Alps or along the Rhine, and reach Asbury Park on the afternoon of July 2nd. The train will be in charge of a representative of the passenger department to personally conduct all arrangements for the comfort of tourists, and insure a pleasant trip. Holders of tickets reading via Washington may return through New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, with stop-overs at all those cities. Excursion tickets to Asbury Park will be sold for regular trains over Pennsylvania Lines June 29th and 30th and July 1st and 2nd. PEACE negotiations are being arranged very slowly, as if neither nation wished to be in any haste about it.

FRANCE and Germany have not yet settled the Morrocco affair, though it is hoped that moderation will win, and war be averted.

BROTHER Gardner's articles got mixed by accident, and chapter seven got in before chapter six. Readers can arrange them in order easily.

THE cabinet of the King of Sweden are accused by their parliament of being too moderate with the seceding Norwegians, and now demand that Norway be forced back into the union by force of arms.

WE will have an article from Brother Joblin for next issue. He has been contending with sickness, and is yet in much deep affliction, but is hopeful of a brighter day coming soon. May the Father sustain him and his is our prayer.

ALL over Russia, there is the red flag of revolt. Cossack soldiers are given full liberty to shoot down the people who want relief from the burdens that are heaped on them. In places the Jews are given the worst of it, and in rural districts the peasants are sacking the estates and applying the torch. Meanwhile the Japanese are forcing the War in Manchuria, and some unofficial reports indicate that the Russian Army is in a very dangerous position, and may be surrounded completely soon.

The Christian and the Secret Society; An Appeal to the Conscience.

Christian is from Christianos, and is derived from Christ. A Christian is a person who is related to Christ. He is a disciple of the Bearer of this title. Like the first disciples of the Lord, he has been called out of the world. He is a person who, having been redeemed with the precious blood of Christ, considers himself not his own, but Christ's. To him Christ is all in all. In Christ he has redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. In Christ he has access to the Father. In Christ he is an heir to the promises of God. Christ is his life and his hope. In suffering he has consolation in Christ. If he would be victorious over the flesh and the world, his triumph is in Christ. He has been crucified with Christ, and reckons himself to be dead indeed to sin. All spiritual blessings are to be found in Christ. As the members of the human body are governed by the head, so he, belonging to the body of Christ, the Church, is subject to Christ, the Head. He counts all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus the Lord. Christ will awake him from the sleep of death, and give him eternal life. Is there any blessing, favor or benefit for this world or the world to come, which may not be obtained in or through Christ? Not one. Does he seek holy companionship which will make him Christ-like and God-like in his character? It may be found in communion with those who, like himself, have Christ for their pattern. Does he crave gratification of mind? In Christ may be found joy unspeakable and fullness of glory. The Christian may truly sing,

> "Thee, O Christ, art all I want;
> More than all in thee I find."

Has the Christian need of joining a secret society to enhance his riches in Christ? Or to brighten his prospects in this or the world to come? Or to give him a keener appreciation of Christ? Either the lodge supplies a real need which can not be gratified in the service of Christ, or there is no reason and no excuse for a Christian to identify himself with a secret order. Union with a lodge is equivalent to a confession that there is a sense of need which can not be, or at least is not, satisfied by anything offered in the service of Christ. Can the Christian, who can truthfully claim all that is set forth above, and more, afford to cast reflection upon his Lord and Master? Is he justified in saying, either in words or in effect, "The secret order offers some real good which is not to be found in Christ?" This is what he must do and does by joining the lodge.

But what is the lodge, and who are the men composing it? Here are men of all shades of character and belief: Professed Christians, Jews, Mohammedans, skeptics and agnostics; who have met upon a common level. As one has aptly said of the members of a certain order, "A.....lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers, deacons and whoremasters, decent men and loafers, drunkards and rowdies that the allseeing Eye ever looked upon." It is said of one order that its "religion" is so broad, "and so carefully are all sectarian tenets excluded, that the Christian, the Jew, the Mohammedan may and do harmoniously unite in its moral and intellectual work with the Buddhist, the Parsee, and the worshipper of deity under every form." This sentiment also finds expression in song, thus,

> "In one immortal throng we view,
> Christian and Pagan, Greek and Jew,
> But all their doubts and darkness o'er
> Only one God adore."

The man whose interests are in the lodge is a fraternity man. No matter what he may have, or claim to have, in Christ and His teaching, this sinks entirely from view within the precincts of the lodge. Nothing is here said about the gospel of Christ; nothing about redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins; nothing about the covenants of promise; nothing about any of the things that pertain to the precious faith of the gospel. Whatever he may think about these matters outside of the lodge, he must dismiss them the moment he enters. Christ as the Giver of all the blessings of God, the Mediator between God and men, is ruled out, if not in so many words, nevertheless just as effectively.

That which makes men "brethren" in Christ does not make them brethren in the lodge. This is proven by the fact that a man can not gain admission to the lodge and its real or imaginary benefits simply because he is a Christian, be he ever so devout. He must first apply for membership in the manner prescribed by the order, pay his fees, solemnly agree not to divulge the secrets and signs of recognition, whatever these may be, promise unconditional obedience to the behests of the lodge, and be duly "initiated" into the secrets of the order. This, and this only, constitutes the basis of brotherhood in the secret society. He may possess every moral virtue, but if the foregoing requirements are not fulfilled he is not received or continued as a member of the order. Upon the other hand, that which makes men brethren in the lodge does not make them brethren in Christ. A man can not gain admission to the Church of the living God upon presentation of his lodge credentials, be they ever so flattering. This proves that the two have nothing in common. They originate in different sources, their interests are not the same, their aims are not identical.

The candidate for initiation confesses in effect, if not in so many words, that up to that time he has been groping in the darkness, and is now seeking for light at the doors of the lodge. "There he stands on the threshold of his new.....life, in darkness, helplessness, and ignorance. Having been wandering amid the errors and covered with the pollutions of the outer or profane world, he comes inquiringly to our doors seeking the new birth and the removal of the veil which hides divine truth from his unitiated eyes."

If he is a Christian, his attitude is a tacit admission that, notwithstanding he is identified with Him who is the Light of the world, there is some darkness which the lodge, and not Christ can dispel. He further says in effect that he expects to find more light in the lodge, no matter who and what its members, what its work, what its secrets, or how offensive to God and repugnant to decent men, than he could find in Christ. At the same time he is in utter ignorance of what light or want of light may exist in the lodge. He is required to solemnly promise not to divulge the secrets of the order which he expects to join, though he is not told beforehand what they are. Is that the proper way to give light to those who are in darkness? Is it the way for the Christian to obtain it?

A minister was once called upon to offer an "invocation" at a lodge banquet, and ended his prayer with an appeal to "Jesus Christ our Lord." He was afterward sharply criticised by a member of the lodge for offering prayer in the name of Jesus. The critic said that Jesus Christ had better be left out so as not to offend the Jews who are members of the order. This shows conclusively that Jesus Christ was not mentioned in the regular lodge meetings, and those Jews were not familiar with the petition used. So the Christian who desires to offer prayer in the name of Jesus in connection with the lodge finds himself confronted with these alternatives: Either he must leave out Jesus Christ; or he will offend those "brethren" who are not friends of Jesus Christ. Shall he be ashamed of his Lord and Master and deny Him in the presence of his lodge brethren for fear of offending them? Or shall he be so forgetful of common courtesy as to bring Jesus Christ with him into lodge associations, when he knows beforehand that there are some "brethren" who will take offence at the mention of the Lord whom he loves? He can do neither of the two. Christ was the Sent of God, and whosoever receives Him, receives God whose representative He is. John xiii:20. But "he that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which sent him." John v. 23. And "whosoever denieth the Son the same hath not the Father." 1 Jno. ii. 23. Therefore to deny and hate, and not to honor and receive the Lord Jesus Christ as God's Representative is to deny, hate, dishonor and reject God Himself. In other words, to be Christless is to be Godless. All the pious talk about belief in a "Supreme Being" which is done by lodges and lodge members is not sufficient to exculpate them from the charge that they are rejecters of God.

There are many in the lodge who do not believe in God, who reject the Bible, who look with disdain upon the Church, and regard Christianity as out of date and unworthy of their notice. The "Supreme Being" in which they profess to believe when received into the lodge is no more the God of the Bible than is Buddha or the fetich of the African savage. With these a man becomes identified when he joins the lodge; and if there is any real brotherhood between himself and them, it is either because they have been elevated to his level, or he has been degraded to theirs; or else he has been elevated, and they degraded. He can not bring them to his own level, for Jews, Mohammedans, skeptics and agnostics will be offended at the mention of Jesus Christ. Hence he must accommodate himself to them, and leave out his Master whom he professes to love and serve outside of the lodge. Is such an attitude to be understood as loyalty to Christ? Or is it not rather an evidence of friendship with the world and disloyalty to the Lord? The Christian, to be sure, is and ought to be as obliging and accommodating as anyone in the world, but he is always and everywhere a Christian. Inasmuch as he is neither a Christian, a Jew, a Mohammedan, a skeptic, or an agnostic in the lodge, there is but one reasonable course left open to him, which is this: He will never knowingly commit himself to any principle or be identified with any association or party which excludes or sets aside his Lord and Master. He is consistent with his profession of loyalty to and love for the Lord Jesus Christ.

It is claimed the "work" of some orders is taken from or based upon the Bible, and that the latter is used in the lodge. From what portion of the Scriptures might that work be taken? Is it from Moses and the prophets? They wrote concerning Christ. Luke xxiv. 44; John i. 45. He is that Prophet whom we are commanded to hear. Deut. xviii. 18; Acts iii. 22. Do they read these portions of Scripture in the lodge and seek to impress them upon the minds of the hearers? And do these, as in the days of the apostles, believe the things concerning Christ so brought to thier attention? Acts xvii. 1-12. Do they go forth from the lodge obedient believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, whereas, on entering, they were Jews, Mohammedans, skeptics, or agnostics? If such were the case, there would certainly be no objection to prayer in the name of Jesus at a lodge gathering. Since such objections do exist, it is evident that those portions of Scripture relating to Jesus Christ are not impressed upon the members of the lodge; the real motive of the careful culling of isolated Scripture texts becomes apparent, and the claim that the work of the lodge is taken from the Bible falls flat. They do not get at the heart and core of the Scriptures which is Christ, but sedulously avoid it. The members of one order, at banquets and other public gatherings, speak volubly of King Solomon, one of its degrees is dedicated to him, and opened and closed "in the name of God and King Solomon." "And behold a greater than Solomon is here." Matth. xii. 42. They are so absorbed in their devotion to the less as to have no time or place for the Greater. They speak of "the Holy Saints John," meaning John the Baptist and John the evangelist, but they seem to overlook or forget that John the Baptist bore witness to "that Light" which is Christ, that men might believe on him. John i. 7-8, and that "the holy Saint John" the evangelist, according to his own words, wrote his narrative concerning Christ for this specific purpose, "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." John xx. 31. To what purpose is all this pretended veneration of those servants of God, one the "friend of the Bridegroom" John iii. 29, the other a chosen apostle Matth. iv. 21, and both faithful witnesses of the Lord Jesus Christ, when not one word of their testimony is allowed to be presented in a place "dedicated to the Holy Saints John?" What mockery!

What is the effect of devotion to the secret society upon the Church member? Is he more loyal to Christ and more faithful in the performance of his duties toward the body of Christ on account of such devotion to the lodge, or is he less so? It can not be truthfully said that his interest in the concerns of the Church is enhanced by his affiliation with the lodge. But it is beyond contradiction that many, very many, are regular and punctual in their attendance at the lodge meetings, while they are seldom seen at even the Sunday morning gatherings of the Church, to say nothing of the midweek social and devotional meetings. And not a few who belong to both the Church and the lodge, join in the sentiment expressed by the prominent secret society man, that "the lodge is as good as the Church." The lodge is manifestly a human institution, and as such has no valid claim to divine origin, while the Church is built by Jesus Christ. Can uninspired men build as wisely and as well as the divinely-commissioned and Spirit-filled Son of God? The proposition under discussion is just another effort to set aside Jesus the Lord and to place something else in His stead as being "just as good". The Church has its charter from Jesus the Son of God. The lodge has its from the Supreme Lodge. Who gave the latter authority? Did it receive its authority from God? It certainly did not, for if it did, its votaries would recognize and give honor to him whom God sent. The Church not only recognizes but is subject to Christ. Eph. v. 24. Upon what ground can it be said that the lodge is "as good as the Church?" Are subjection to and rejection of Jesus Christ equally "good?" Does the lodge or the lodge member wish to convey the impression that they are? Only upon such a hypothesis could it be said that one is as good as the other.

What about the "secrets" and the secret "work" of the lodge? We are told by members of the various orders that there is nothing about the secret work which might not with propriety be known to everyone. Then why guard those secrets so carefully? Why draw the blinds, close the doors, and have a special officer on duty to guard the entrance to the lodge? Why require the applicant for membership to solemnly promise that he will never reveal the secrets of the order? Why all these precautions if there is nothing terrible, and nothing of importance, in the lodge? Why read the Word of God behind closed doors? Why jealously guard the entrance to an assembly where prayers are made to Almighty God, even if the name of Jesus must be omitted? Are all these good things under the ban in this land of Bibles and churches, so as to necessitate those secret nocturnal assemblies? If "good" is the only feature of the lodge system, why not "clear the darkened windows, open wide the door, let a little sunshine in," and above all admit those who should know and understand the good things so much in evidence in the lodge? Why light a candle, and cover it with a vessel, or put it under a bed? Luke viii. 16. No good reason can be assigned for the secrecy that is maintained, if there is as much good in the secret society as men would have us to believe. Besides, there are very few secrets of almost any order, whether patriotic, religious' industrial, social, or insurance, which may not be known to persons who wish to be informed. There are three sources of information which are quite reliable: 1. The public services, such as laying of corner stones, the dedication of lodges, and burial services, where lodge rituals are used. 2. The literature published by those orders. And 3, The testimony of those who have become disgusted with the puerilities of the lodge system and have turned their backs upon the secret orders.

If the secret initiations were stripped of their secrecy and exposed to public view, thousands of men who take part in the rough sport they afford would turn from them in disgust and hold them in contempt, and the public would wonder how dignified men, Christians, and even ministers, could ever descend to ceremonies so puerile. It is the secrecy that gives "mystery" to those performances, that wields its power over men, benumbs their reason, and holds them captive. Secrecy is the life of the lodge; publicty would be its death. The first thing demanded of the candidate for initiation is a promise of secrecy; the next is the promise of obedience to the behests of the lodge. When a man gives his pledge of secrecy and obedience, men can do with him as they please; he is not his own, but at the command of those to whom he has abandoned himself. In one order, by the time a man has received seven "degrees," he has made forty-eight oaths, accompanied by the most horrible and shocking penalties which he is made to call upon himself, should he ever violate his promise of secrecy.

The Church exacts no obligations of secrecy from those who knock at her doors for admission; her portals are open to everyone without money and without price, to rich and poor alike. Her services are attended by men, women, and children; none who are disposed to observe proper decorum are forbidden or ejected. She can say of a truth as did her Lord, "In secret have I said nothing." John xviii. 20. Or as Paul said, "This thing was not done in a corner." Acts xxvi. 26.

It is claimed that "the best people" belong to the lodge. If this be true, then either only the best are admitted; or good, bad, and indifferent are received, and the worse are improved by their association with the better. The good are already good, or good enough, without the ennobling influences of the secret order; in which case there is no need for them to unite with the order. They need not join to elevate the rest, for they, too, are "good." And the bad are not admitted, for in some orders a special committee is appointed to investigate and report upon the standing and character of applicants, so that the undeserving are not admitted. Therefore it is evident that those who do not need the uplifting influences of the lodge are admitted, while those who really do need them are excluded.

Lodges give banquets and dances to raise money, and have public parades for show. It might be said these are the "revivals" of the lodge system. Every "good" member, be he a Christian, a Jew, a skeptic, or an agnostic, is understood to be in full sympathy and accord with the lodge and its doings. Thus the Christian is compelled to join in many things to which he is opposed. He does not wish to be known to be on terms of intimacy with those who are enemies of Christ and the Church, and here he parades the streets in all kinds of weather and conditions of the roads, with men who are enemies of the very things he stands for everywhere but in the lodge. If this is not a case of being "unequally yoked together with unbelievers" 2 Cor. vi. 14, such a condition would be hard to find. And think of the minister who in his public discourses says there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved than the name of Jesus; who warns against friendship of the world as being enmity with God; who says at Church that he is crucified and dead to the world and the world to him; think of this man parading the streets, giving banquets, and furnishing amusement for the giddy pleasure seekers, in the company of men who are offended at the mention of the name of Jesus. Calmly and candidly, dear reader, is this the proper place for the Christian?

A man who belongs to a number of secret orders is required to be present at lodge gatherings when he should be with his family. He is away from home all day, and when night comes, he goes to the upper room where he remains until the members of his family have been long asleep. He is where his presence is not needed and where he would not be missed, and is absent where he ought to be present. What about the faithful wife who is at home with the children, night after night, while he who owes them his presence and sympathy is away having sport at the lodge meeting. But he consoles them with the insurance on his life and the support they will have when he is dead. Ask that wife which she would prefer: Those hours of loneliness and anxiety, of deprivation and waiting, or the presence of him who is so much needed.

In addition to this, though he be otherwise ever so true to her, and though there should be nothing in the lodge which would tend to shock her sensibilities, he is bound to keep his lodge secrets from the wife of his bosom, and thus the first seeds of alienation of affections and finally divorce proceedings are sown. There should be no secrets between husband and wife. The divine intention was that they should be one; and that which God has joined together, let no man or set of men put asunder. The lodge is no promoter of domestic confidence and happiness.

The insurance lodge tends to encourage the disposition in men to get something for nothing. And a man, instead of laying up his earnings spends them with the consolation that after his death his family will be provided for. Why not labor with his hands the thing which is good as we are told in the Word of God, that, instead of waiting to die, when he will be worth more to his family than while he is living, he may have enough not only for himself and family, but to give to him that needeth.

What I have written I have written from a deep sense of conviction that it is true in every particular, and to call attention to the dangers that are connected with the lodge system. I myself was formerly a member of a popular secret order, and know whereof I speak. I have ceased to attend the meetings and pay the dues, and am no longer a member of the order, because I can not reconcile or harmonize loyalty to my Lord and Redeemer with the principles of the secret society when considered in all their bearings. To me it is impossible to love and serve the Lord Jesus Christ and at the same time enter heart and soul into the doings of the lodge. Moreover, I can see infinitely more good in the service of Christ, though I may not be popular with men, than in the worso than trifling and meaningless performances of the lodge and the association of lodge members. In the gospel comes the call for separation both loud and clear, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. vi. 17-18.

We are told that "the friendship of the world is enmity with God; whosoever therefore will be the friend of the world is the enemy of God." Jas. iv. 4. I would not knowingly be guilty of the kind of "adultery" referred to in this passage by dividing my friendship and affection between the world and God. It is impossible to serve two masters who are so unlike each other, whose interests differ so widely and so radically, as these. I want nothing to stand between myself and God. I know there are men who seek to enhance their "usefulness" as preachers by uniting with secret societies. But such a course is utterly useless. They dare not speak their convictions, if they have any, in the lodge room, and cannot draw men to Christ by participating in that which is opposed to Christ and rejects him. If the gospel does not draw men to Christ; if the minister is obliged to join the secret society in order to reach them and have influence with them, it is more than doubtful whether he can do them any good. Can he face those men with an earnest and positive message concerning Christ when he remembers that he stands identified with a society in which Christ must be left out for fear of offending some one? Experience teaches me that such a condition tends to weaken if not paralyze every effort he may make in the direction indicated.

Another feature of the lodge system, which has doubtless come under the reader's observation, is that often at the "service" which is read at the burial of lodge "brethren," wicked men officiate, while the minister of the gospel who has been called to speak words of comfort from the Bible is set aside as soon as the discourse is ended. These words are not written because the author's dignity has been offended at being set aside to give place to another,—they are prompted by the conviction that there is something wrong where such a condition exists. Why is not the "chaplain," "prelate," "priest" and what

Poetry.

Dear Little Wife at Home.

The dear, little wife at home, John,
With ever so much to do—
Stitches to set and babies to pet,
And so many thoughts of you.
The beautiful household fairy,
Filling your heart with light,
Whatever you meet today, John,
Go cheerily home tonight.

For though you are worn and weary,
You needn't be cross or curt;
There are words like darts to gentle hearts,
There are looks that wound and hurt,
With the key in the latch at home, John,
Drop troubles out of sight;
To the dear little wife who is waiting
Go cheerily home tonight.

You know she will come to meet you,
A smile on her sunny face,
And your wee little girl, as pure as a pearl,
Will be there in her childish grace;
And the boy, his father's pride, John,
With the eyes so brave and bright,
From the strife and the din, to the peace, John,
Go cheerily home, tonight.

What, though the tempter try you,
Though the shafts of adverse fate
May bustle near, and the sky be drear,
And the haggard fortune wait;
You are passing rich already,
Let the haunting fears take flight;
With the faith that wins success, John,
Go cheerily home tonight.

Revelations xiii.

Having noticed the chronology, and the class of men that constituted the two horned symbol of verse 11, it remains to notice the "image" of veres 14-15. Speaking figuratively, the right hand, the head and shoulders of which is the doctrine of the trinity. First, last and all the time, this doctrine has been the distinguishing mark of the apostasy, and it would be hard to conceive of any doctrine that is farther from the truth of the Word of God; or that more flatly contradicts the revelation God has given of himself in the Old and in the New Testament. A few of the many testimonies to the unity of the Deity—as against the idea of a triune Deity, will suffice to show the extent of the triune Deity apostasy. "Unto thee it was showed, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God; there is none else beside him. Deut. iv. 35. "Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord." Deut. vi. 4. "That all the people of the earth may know that the Lord is God, and that there is none else." 1 Kings viii. 60 "And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord." Mark xii. 29. "Now a Mediator is not a Mediator of one, but God is one." Gal. iii. 20. "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." 1 Tim. ii. 5. If anything more was necessary to show the deformity of the doctrine of the trinity; it is found in the words of Christ. Hear him, "Why callest thou me good? None is good, save One, that is God." Luke xviii. 19. "I can of mine own self do nothing." John v. 30. Now compare with the foregoing testimony, the Orthodox Edicts of Theodocius. A. D. 380. "Let us believe the sole Deity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; under an equal Majesty, and a pious Trinity." This doctrine naturally produced the doctrine of the incarnation. Romes two pro found mysteries. Rev. xvii. 5. "Before the end of the 7th century, the creed of the incarnation which had been defined at Rome and Constantinople, was uniformly preached in the remote islands of Britain and Ireland. Gibbon Vol. 4, p. 538. The doctrine of the trinity has been the mark of the apostasy for more than 1800 years. It is referred to in its germ form in 1 John iv. 3. "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." If the Lord Jesus Christ was a pre-existing spirit in heaven, he did not come in "the flesh" of our common humanity, as foretold by the prophets—the Seed of the woman—the prophet like Moses and of your brethren—neither could it be truthfully written that he "was made of a woman—made under the law." The woman and the law must first exist, before any thing can be made of, or from them. Do not say this is a great mystery—because "mystery" is written on the forehead of the "harlot." The pre-existence of Jesus was first taught by Cerinthus in the time of the Apostle John, and John informs us that it is "the spirit of antichrist." Now taking a view of the spirit manifested by the head of the antichristian system, ask yourself the question, Did not Paul express the exact truth when he described the man of sin as the one, "Who opposeth and exalteth himself?" 2 Thes. ii. 4. This exalting spirit—the mark of the apostasy exalts the man Christ Jesus to a pre-existence; and man in general to immortality—to live to all eternity, and finally one of our race is said to be the eternal God—by the doctrine of the trinity. To establish this doctrine the Scriptures has been changed and interpolated more than on any other subject.

Now as to the image, to the Roman power in the third and fourth century, the time when the empire received the wound by a sword. What do we believe that they did not believe? What did they believe that we do not believe? I speak of the popular—the orthodox faith. They believed in the triune God as expressed in the Orthodox Edicts of the emperor Theodocius; so does the self-styled orthodox of today. It was my privilege a short time ago to listen to a lecture by a Catholic priest; and when he spoke of the sacrifice of Christ on the cross, he exclaimed with his right hand raised, and the other pointing down, "He died to save immortal souls from hell, and to raise them to heaven; and to do this it required a sacrifice equal to the one sinned against."

The adoration of the trinity is the most prominent feature in the Episcopal worship—"Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, Amen." These words in their ceremony come in so often, and are joined in by the whole congregation, worshiping a strange God—mental idolatry. Dan. xi. 39. Going to heaven at death, the church is the kingdom of God, the immortality of the soul the eternal torment of the impenitent in hell, is the faith of the orthodox of today, and was the faith of the Catholic Christians in the time of the Orthodox Edicts of the emperor Theodocius A. D. 380. And all that is needed now to complete the image is to enact into the law of the state, the faith of the orthodox.

In conclusion it is necessary to notice the claims of the Sabbatarians that Sunday is the "mark of the beast." And here I would remark that Sunday observance was a prominent part of the faith of the orthodox in the third and fourth centuries and one of the things to be believed according to the law of the state; but was not nearly so prominent in the faith as the doctrine of the trinity. Now let us reason together. If God designed the seventh day Sabbath to be of universal obligation to all, Jew and Gentile, would he not have said so sometime in the period of time from Adam to Moses? And would he have said by Moses when rehearsing the law of which the Sabbath was a part: "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us who are all of us here alive this day?" Deut. v. 3. And further, would he have said of Israel, I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them? Eze. xx. 12. And would Christ have said, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is the Lord of the Sabbath." Mark ii. 27-28. If the Sabbath was a part of the new covenant, would Paul have written to the Colossians, Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in repect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days; which are a shadow of things to come but the body is of Christ. Col. ii. 16-17.

I will conclude this article with a sample of how Subbatarians attempt to prove that the first day sabbath is "the mark of the beast." In verse 12 it is written, "And he.....causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast." Remarks on the above by W. A. Colcord, Secretary Religious Liberty Bureau. "The only way the earth can worship is for it to keep Sabbath; and the only way it can be made to keep a sabbath is to cause work to cease upon it on that day." There is an error in this position, that should appear to all investigators. It is the person ceasing work on the seventh day that rests, and not the earth; the earth continues to produce the crop planted by the man who worked on the days before the Sabbath. Then in a foot note he says, "Israel's Babylonish captivity of 70 years, under Nebuchadnezzar and his sons, was because that for 420 years, or for six times 70 years—from the days of Solomon to Nebuchadnezzar's time—they had largely neglected to keep the Sabbath. See Eze. xxii. 8.

This is evidently an error to attribute the 70 years' captivity to be on account of the violation of the seventh day Sabbath. Now let us examine what is written for our instruction on the subject. "Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; but in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a Sabbath for the Lord; thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard." Lev. xxv. 3-4. Verse 21 reads, "Then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it (the earth) shall bring forth fruit for three years." In Lev. xxvi. 33-35 it is written, "I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste. Then shall the land enjoy her Sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; then shall the land rest, and enjoy her Sabbaths. As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your Sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it." To the same effect is the testimony in 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21, "To fulfil the Word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her Sabbaths: for as long as she lay desolate she kept the Sabbath, to fulfil three score and ten years."

In the light of the foregoing testimony, it will be seen that the Sabbath referred to is the seventh year, and not the seventh day. It seems reasonable that the earth, that is caused to worship the beast—is the symbolic earth: the earth that in chapter 12 is said to help the woman; the earth out of which John saw the two horned symbol "coming up." The only objection that can be urged to the symbolic earth is that the passage reads "and they that dwell therein." In Psalm lxxv. 3, we read, "The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved." It cannot be the literal earth that is dissolved, but the earth—the common people—and the officials who inhabit it. Again we read, "Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice; and let men say among the nations, the Lord reigneth. Let the sea roar, and the fullness thereof." 1 Chron. xvi. 31-32. Here we have the inhabitants of the earth called the heavens, the earth, men and the sea. In this book of symbols, the symbolic is the rule, and the literal the exception. Therefore we conclude that where we read, in verse 12, "And causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast." That it is the common people, that is the earth, and the dwellers therein are the officials who have their positions in the earth. "Not on the earth" as in verse 14.

The Christian and the Secret Society; An Appeal to the Conscience.

not who perfunctorily reads the burial service a proper person to preach the funeral discourse? He leads the procession to the burying ground and reads from the ritual the amalgamation of Scripture texts and paganistic ideas furnished for such occasions, committing the dust of "our brother" to the mother earth, and the "soul" to God who gave it—why not, in addition, open the Bible and preach the discourse to the living? If it be said he has no "license" to preach, such statement is a tacit admission that he has no authority to do what he does—that the lodge has no power to authorize him to "officiate" at a burial service. And if his life and character are not in keeping with the teaching of the Word of God, he should not take the Word and name of God into his mouth upon any occasion. Such an act is a travesty upon religion; it is making mockery of sacred things.

What mean the high sounding titles applied to lodge members, such as Worshipful, Grand, Noble, Illustrious, Master, Chancellor, etc., when it is known to all that there is nothing particularly "worshipful," "noble," "grand," or "illustrious" in the character of many to whom such titles are applied so far as it appears to men?

Has it ever occurred to the reader that during funeral services over deceased lodge brethren it often happens that lodges attend in a body, the members dressed in their regalia and tinsel, carrying wooden spears and axes and tin swords, occupying the most prominent place in the church, while the brethren who erected the building for the proclamation of the gospel and the glory of God, and are faithful in their attendance at the Church meetings, are obliged to stand up in some corner or outside of the building?

The form of the burial service for lodge members is, as one has said, "the same for all persons, and whether the deceased died of delirium tremens or as a Christian should, makes no difference."—Blanchard's Modern Secret Societies. There is not a lodge in the writer's knowledge which does not at its burial services, directly or indirectly, teach the pagan doctrine of the immortality of the soul. Besides the sprig of evergreen or acacia which is thrown upon the casket of the deceased, the members are told that our deceased brother has gone to the Grand Lodge above, when it is a fact that there is no such "Grand Lodge above," and no one to go to.

Thus it is seen that there are serious objections to a Christian's being identified with secret societies:

1. Because the Christian who joins them tacitly admits that the lodge fills needs which are not met by Christ.

2. Because in belonging to secret societies the Christian is forced into an endorsement of men who are opposed to the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. Because he is brought to the same plane as the secret society man.

4. Because it cannot be proven that the secret work of the lodge is found in the Bible, or that the Bible is used to any considerable extent in the lodge.

5. Because loyalty and devotion to the lodge detract from faithfulness to the Church.

6. Because the lodge secrets are worth nothing when known.

7. Because attendance at the lodge takes men away from home when they should be with their families.

If the reader is a member of the secret society, and his conscience is not yet seared, he must acknowledge that what I have said is true. And possibly he has often said, in the language of another, "O wretched man that I am! who will deliver me from this body of death?" Rom. vii. 24. It may he lacked the moral courage to openly sever his connection with the institution with which he is identified. Let him candidly consider the fact that he cannot serve two masters; and let him place fealty to Christ above the cords of iniquity with which he is bound to an institution that ignores, sets aside, and dishonors Christ. If he is still free from the idolatry and slavery of the oath-bound secret society, I would make an earnest and loving appeal to his conscience. Let him compare the things which make the lodge system with the dignity of the high calling in Christ Jesus with which he has been called. If he is a member of the lodge, and at the same time identified with the Church, let him forsake those mysterious secret assemblies and the enervating associations of "brethren" who are anything but in sympathy with his convictions of right and his purpose in life. Let him come into the light of day, having come, as he thinks, into the light of the glorious gospel of Christ; and, rather than have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, reprove them. Let him not only be but regard himself as the Lord's freeman; free from entangling and embarrassing associations, and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ makes free. Only in this way can he look with complacency into the benign countenance of our Savior, who is now at the right hand of the Father; and when Christ shall appear, he shall not need to be ashamed before him at his coming. 1 John ii. 28. At his coming he would be found in him and in the company of those who deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, rather than in the secret chamber, his eyes bandaged, he almost naked, kneeling before a hideous skeleton, leaping upon spikes, going through mock assassinations and other compromising and shocking attitudes, and furnishing sport for the fellows of baser sort. When he returns from those secret conclaves, long after legitimate hours of human activity, he feels the sting of his conscience rebuking him for the associations in which he has been moving. When he goes to his home from the place where the Word of God is read to some purpose and prayer is wont to be made in the name of the Lord Jesus, he feels that he has been built up on his most holy faith, and thinks with satisfaction of the Lord's coming, saying with a glad heart, "Even so, come Lord Jesus." He will not need to divest himself of his lodge "jewels" or other paraphernalia, and hurriedly take leave of his lodge "brethren" to hail the coming of the Lord whom he professed to love and serve at Church, but disowned at the lodge where he fraternized with those to whom the name of his Lord was offensive. Reader, can you not see the difference? On which side will you take your stand? Be true to Christ.

The Ohio Conference.

The time for the Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Ohio is drawing near. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Do we realize that Christ will soon come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory? Yes, he is coming soon to gather his jewels into his glorious kingdom. Then let us come to this Conference with plans to push the work as never before. There are so few to do the work, the great work of proclaiming the good news. One evangelist says:—"If all the brethren would give a tenth, a half dozen evangelists could be kept in the field in the state of Ohio, and the state aroused with the gospel of the kingdom of God." Would this not be grand, and do we not want to be instrumental in pushing this work?

Another evangelist says, "O, that we had ten times the workers and the means to keep them going." Let this gathering be one with each heart filled with a desire, and a determination to push the work. The harvest is truly great, and the laborers few.

"O watchman on the mountain height
Proclaim the coming day;
Behold; the spires of golden fires
Point upward far away.

O, watchman, bid a sleeping church
Awake, arise, and pray;
The heavenly Bridegroom soon will come
And now is on the way."

Let us awake out of sleep and work as never before to spread the glad tidings of great joy. How joyful will be the sight if we are found heralding the glad news. Yes, we will see the glory and hear the "well done." May this be the message to all who have named the name of Christ.

Will Figures Lie?

It is universally admitted, or has become a maxim, that figurers will not lie if rightly computed. Nevertheless I read in a Sabbatarian "Religious Liberty Leaflet, No. 2, by W. A. Colcord, Secretary Religious Liberty Bureau," "Israel's Babylonish captivity of 70 years under Nebuchadnezzar and his sons, was because that for 420 years, or for six times 70 years—from the days of Solomon to Nebuchadnezzar's time—they had largely neglected to keep the Sabbath. See Ezek. xxii. 8 26; Jer. xxv. 8-11; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 15 21. The 70 years desolation made up for the 420 years of Sabbath desecration. So during the millennium or the 1000 years after Christ's second advent, the whole earth will lie desolate, or keep Sabbath, because that for 6000 years earth's inhabitants have disregarded the Sabbath."

Now if the Jews for a period of 420 years did as claimed disregard the Sabbath, why punish them 70 years, when a seventh of 420 years is only 60 years; and if during the 6000 years, the inhabitants of the earth have disregarded the Sabbath—a seventh part of the 6000 years; why should a just God desolate the earth for 1000 years or 142 years more than a seventh part of the 6000 years of desecration? This is a well of untempered morter, a cistern that will hold no water. The 70 years captivity was to make up for their failure to comply with the law concerning the rest of the land, or Sabbath of the land. See Lev. xxv. 3-4; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 21. The desecration was for 490 years, and the 70 years of captivity in Babylon was a 7th part or the Sabbath time of that period. The desolation of the earth exists for 1000 years, only in their mind, and is in direct opposition to the Word of truth. Their position on the 1000 years reminds me of a short story:—An irishman's house took fire, Pat in the hurry put his pants on wrong side front; and while looking at himself, his wife says, Pat, are you hurt? No, says he, But badly twisted. So is this 70 and 1000 years theory.

Last Notice.

As will be seen by reference to the published minutes of the Indiana Conference, an Historical Committee was appointed to collect and publish, either in the columns of THE RESTITUTION, or in pamphlet form, or both, a history of the introduction of the gospel within the bounds of the State of Indiana and its spread to the various localities in which churches have been or are located. To the end that this work may be expedited as much as possible, the Committee desires the co-operation of those who have labored or were identified with the work, or resided in Indiana in former days. Brethren who have moved away from the bounds of the Indiana Conference who are in possession of historical facts relative to the early introduction of the gospel in Indiana, its hindrances, its success, etc., will confer a great favor upon said Committee and the brotherhood in Indiana by furnishing such data as they may possess. This history is to be for the information of all, but especially the younger portion of the membership. Brethren, let us hear from you soon. Your responses will be greatly appreciated. Thanking you in advance for your contributions, we are yours in Christ.

Committee,

Low Fares West and Southwest.

Anyone contemplating a trip West may take advantage of the reduced fares for the special Home-Seeker's excursions via Pennsylvania Lines to points in Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oregon, Washington, Texas and other sections in the West and in all the States of the South.

Stop-over privileges permit travelers to investigate business openings These tickets will be on sale certain dates during the summer. Detailed information as to fares, through time, etc., will be freely furnished upon application to Local Ticket Agent of Pennsylvania Lines.—July 15.

Consider this Outing.

By far the most attractive trip for health and pleasure the coming vacation season is that offered by the Seashore excursion Thursday, August 17th, over Pennsylvania Lines to Atlantic City, Cape May and seven other famous summer havens on the Atlantic Coast.

The fast through trains over Pennsylvania Lines take passengers in a few hours out of the heat and humidity of summer to the cool breezes of old ocean. This mid-August excursion occurs in this season for rest when it is most convenient to leave business. Excursionists have the added pleasure of seeing Atlantic City when it is in full tide of the fashionable season. The greatest representative gathering ever known at any resort are seen at Atlantic City. As many as 50,000 people at one time promenade the famous boardwalk. The fashionable bathing hours present an unparalled scene—fully 100,000 bathers in the sea and on the beach.

The healthful effect of the seashore trip is due to the salt and pine air. So beneficial has this proved that physicians send their patients there to get the benefit of breathing the pure ocean air.

Special low fares will be in effect for this Seashore excursion. Full information will be freely given by local ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—July 15.

Announcement.

The Committee in charge of the Ohio State Conference to be held in Cleveland from August 17 to 20 inclusive, 1905, do extend to all both in Ohio and elsewhere a very hearty invitation to attend. It is our desire that this gathering may redound to the honor and glory of God and the spiritual upbuilding of all that come. That the hearts of all who will be present will burn within them with renewed zeal and sincerity of purpose, that whatsoever is done will be done heartily as unto the Lord and not unto men, knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. Be sure to come. Address all communications to J. C. Thompson, Sec'y, 146 Brookdale St., Cleveland, Ohio.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshal., co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Seeing American.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 28d and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the Scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensively than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the West. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of Conventions, through time and passenger service apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—Jul 1.

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Shun Delays.

Shun delays, they breed remorse;
Take thy time, while time is lent thee.
Creeping snails have weakest force.
Fly their fault, lest thou repent thee.
Good is best when soonest wrought;
Lingering labors come to nought.

Hoist up sail whilst gale doth last,
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure.
Seek not time when time is past.
Sober speed is wisdom's pleasure.
After-wits are dearly bought;
Let thy fore-wit guide thy thought.

Time wears all his locks before,
Take thou hold upon his forehead.
When he flies, he turns no more,
And behind his scalp is naked.
Works adjourned have many stays;
Long demurs breed new delays.

Seek thy salve while sore is green,
Festered wounds ask deeper lancing,
After-cures are seldom seen,
Often ought, scarce ever chancing.
Time and place give best advice;
Out of season, out of place.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 4.

Dear brothers and sisters:

We have studied the life of Paul up to and beyond his conversion. Our Sister Hattie Pate has described to us his labors as far as his first journey to Antioch. In order that your memory might be refreshed and my talk not seem to begin abruptly, I will go back a little and outline briefly his start as a preacher.

After his conversion we first find him in Damascus proclaiming Jesus, also here is his first persecution, but aided by his disciples he escaped to Jerusalem. At Jerusalem he was introduced to the brethren by Barnabas. Here also was he presented by the Hellenists, so called because although Jews they were natives of Hellen, Greece, and spoke the Greek language. For this cause and also because God in a vision had commanded him to go unto the Gentiles we find him leaving Jerusalem after a stay of about two weeks, going overland to Ceasarea, from thence by water to Tarsus. Then follows a period of some 10 years of evangelizing amongst the Gentiles of the provinces of Cilicia and Syria. Finishing with over one year of labor in the city of Antioch.

Antioch was situated on the Orontes river at the northeast corner of the Mediterranean Sea about sixteen miles from the coast. It was the royal city of the Syrian kings from the time of Antiochus the 4th, and later the residence of the Roman Proconsuls. It was the 3rd city of the empire, illustrious and wealthy. The seat of learned men and liberal sciences, it had a population of over one million. The chief street was broad and ran in a straight line through the city, a distance of 2½ miles, and was paved with polished marble. It had a large Jewish population, and their synagogue was one of the finest in the world. While here at Antioch Paul made a trip to Jerusalem with funds for the relief of the Judean brethren, who were experiencing a famine. It was here at Antioch that the name Christian was first applied to the church.

After eleven years as a servant of God we find him starting out on what was called his first missionary tour. In reality this was not so as he had already traveled through Cilicia and Syria. But as he was not officially recognized by the church as an apostle until after his sojourn in Antioch, this next tour is commonly called his first. Accompanied by Barnabas he journeyed to the Isle of Cyprus. Cyprus is about 140 miles from Antioch. They walked to Seleucia, a distance of 16 miles, and then took a boat to Salamus. Barnabas was a native of Cyprus and this no doubt induced them to go there first. With them was a young man by name of John Mark, a cousin of Barnabas.

Beginning at Salamis the missionaries journeyed through the whole Island to Paphos, preaching in every synagogue. Paphos was the chief city of Cyprus and the residence of the Roman proconsul, Sergius Paulus. The distance from Salamis to Paphos is about 100 miles. The sea voyage from Paphos to Perga, the next journey was about 175 miles. No stop was made here, the missionaries going right on to Antioch in Pisidia. At Perga the young man, John Mark, left them and returned to Jerusalem.

Antioch was not in Pisidia but near the boundary line, about 90 miles in a straight line northeast from Perga, but much further by any traveled road. It was a Roman colony founded by Augustus and consisted of veterans of the 5th Gallic legion. The privileges of provincial colonies were not always the same, but those in Antioch were in the main: liberty from the control of the governor of the province, immunity from poll and land taxes and full possession of the land. The administration of the government was in the hands of two magistrates who were over the secret and the popular assembly. We cannot tell definitely how long they were at Antioch, but evidently it was several months.

The scene of their next effort was Iconium about 80 miles southeast of Antioch and either in the province of Phrygia or Lycaonia, according to the earlier and popular division it was Phrygian, according to the Roman governmental organization it was Lyconian. Iconium was an important city, colonized in the reign of Claudius 41 to 54 A. D.

Lystra, their next stop is about 18 miles southwest from Iconium. It seems that they had been followed in their journeys by Jews from Antioch who made use of every opportunity to stir up strife against them and they were so successful in Lystra that they finally incited the people to stone Paul and he was dragged out of the city as dead. By the aid of converts he had made, however, he was revived and was able the following day to go to Derbe, about 16 miles southeast of Lystra. His stay at these two cities was several months, and during this period he made two notable converts, Gaius from Derbe and Timothy from Lystra.

Derbe was the end of their tour and they were now ready to return, and they might easily have done so by going through the Taurus mountains to Tarsus. But they did not, they retraced their steps although they knew it would bring them in contact with their persecutors. But they did not hesitate because they wanted to strengthen the disciples they had won. In each community as they returned they arranged for the appointment of elders. The only new field in which they preached was Perga through which they passed, you will remember without stopping. From Perga they went to the port of Attalia and from there sailed directly to Antioch.

The total distance traveled by the missionaries on this trip was about 1400 miles, half by land and half by water. The time occupied approximately 3 years. Churches were established we know in 4 cities and perhaps more. There being both Jews and Gentiles in these churches, the Gentiles predominating. Paul's chief success seemed to be amongst the proselytes and other Gentiles. Indeed, certain of the Jews persisted in their persecution of him, following him from city to city. His best results were in Iconium. In the city of Paphos he performed his first miracle, in Lystra the second. In Antioch Paul seemed to recognize as his church home returning there after every tour.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 8.

1. In the third year of the royalty of Baltasar the king, a seeing appeared unto me, I Daniel, (saw) after the authority (vision) appeared unto me;

2. And I was in Sousoi the capitol (of Babuloonia) which is a province of the Oubal (river);

3. And I lifted up my eyes and I saw, and lo, a ram was standing before the Oubal, and he had high horns, and one was higher than the other, and the high one arose last.

4. And I saw the ram hooking along west and north and south; and all the wild-beasts would not stand in his sight; and there was no one delivering himself out of his hand; and he did according to his will, and was magnified.

5. And I was one who understood, and lo, a he-goat of goats came from the southwest over the face of all the land, and he was not touching the ground; and the he-goat had a horn between his eyes.

6. And he came as far as the ram that had the horn, the one I saw standing in sight of the Oubal; and he ran toward him with the might of his strength;

7. And I saw him reach the ram, and he locked horns with him; and he smote the ram and broke both his horns; and the ram had no strength to stand in his sight; and he cast him to the ground and trod him together and there was no one delivering the ram out of his hand.

8. And the he-goat of the goats was magnified exceedingly; and when he had become strong his great horn was broken, and four other horns arose beneath it towards the four winds of the heavens.

9. And out of one of them came forth a strong horn, and it was magnified exceedingly toward the south and toward the host (Ounam's, God's host in which was God's ability).

10. And it was magnified even unto the host (ability) of the heavens; and these fell upon the earth from the host of the heavens, and from the stars, and it (this horn) trod them together, (into a mass).

11. And until the chief military-leader shall deliver the captivity, and him (Jakoob) on whose account sacrifice hath been rent asunder (that is the continuity of it) and he hath prospered for him, (namely Jakoob) even the sanctuary will have been made desolate.

12. And sin will have been allowed over the sacrifice; (namely the Mosque of Omar) and the righteousness will have been cast down to the ground; and until he (that chief-leader) hath done and prospered.

13. And I heard a saint talking; and a saint said to his fellow-saint who was talking; until when will the vision stand, namely the sacrifice that hath been taken away and the sin of desolation that hath been allowed, and the sanctuary and the host be trodden together (into a shapeless mass)?

14. And he said unto him, Until an evening and a morning two thousand and four hundred days; and the sanctuary will have been cleansed.

15. And it came to pass when I Daniel saw the vision and was seeking understanding, lo, there stood in my sight also a sight of a man as it were.

16. And I heard a man's voice between the banks of the Oubal, and he called and said,—Gabriel, make that man understand the seeing (or the vision).

17. And he came and stood next to where I was standing; and when he had come I was dumbfounded, and I fall upon my face; and he said unto me, Understand, O Son of Man; for still unto the end of an appointed time is the vision-way (or the way of vision).

18. And while he is talking with me I fall upon the ground; and he touched me and stood me upon my feet;

19. And said, Lo, I am making known to thee the things that will be during last times of the wrath; for yet unto the end of a definite period is the vision-way.

20. The ram that thou sawest, the one that had the horns, is a king of Medes and Persians.

21. The he-goat of the goats is a king of Greeks; and the great horn which was between his eyes, it is the first king.

22. And when it had been crushed, four horns stood beneath it (means) four kings will arise from out his nation, and not with his strength.

23. And during the last days of their royalty, while their sins are being made full, there will arise a king fierce of face and who understandeth problems.

24. And his strength will be a controlling strength, and he will corrupt wondrously, and he will prosper and do; and he will corrupt strong ones and a saintly laity.

25. And the yoke of his collar will prosper; deception with his hand and his heart will have been magnified; and with deception will he corrupt many, and he will stand upon the loss of many; and like eggs with his hand will he crush them;

26. And the vision of the evening and the morning that hath been oracularly told is truly told; and do thou seal the vision, because it is unto many days.

27. And I Daniel lay down to sleep and was sick; and I arose and was doing the work of the king, and wondering at the vision and not understanding it.

COMMENT.

Whole tomes have been written in the way of interpretation of this chapter of history before the event or prophetic history, and the C. V. and R. V. and all the versions I have seen give 2300 instead of "2400 days" as it is here, and on "the year day" theory of interpretation which they all seem to follow and which I think is correct, the time period or periods would be 100 years out of the way and too soon, as the reader will easily see.

Even Daniel himself confesses that he does not fully understand the latter part of the vision, which he is told to "seal;" but he is given to understand it later as we shall see in another chapter. Stick a pin here and look for later developments as we proceed with this translation.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Read at Dutton Conference.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of the household of faith, greeting:

I am striving to live so as to be counted worthy of meeting you all in the kingdom; reading THE RESTITUTION every week and sending it to brother Henry—the only one of mother's children who has not obeyed the divine injunction. May his life be spared and his heart troubled until he yields in answer to his mother's prayer—that she might meet all of her children in the kingdom.

I am sorry that I cannot send an offering at this time, but believe the good Lord is helping me to get a home, and it is the desire of my heart to give according as the Lord prospers me. I have given small amounts at different times to "Our Helping Fund," but have not been able to send an offering of suitable proportions to the Church in Michigan.

I accepted a position as messenger at the Branch Hydrographic Office here during the navigation season of 1901, at a small salary, and my appointment has been renewed each season since that time. On the 8th of April, 1905, my superior (Ensign Creighton Churchill, U. S. Navy) was detached from duty at this office and ordered to Boston as Executive officer on board the U. S. S. Enterprise (a Nautical Training Ship), and directed to turn this office over to me until further action by the department at Washington. If I am continued in charge of this office—and I hope I may be with an increase in salary, I assure you that you will hear from me once a year at least in a substantial manner, or according as I am prospered over and above the necessities of life.

My greatest desire is to meet the Lord and his chosen ones, and of course we all desire to meet him as quickly as possible, but I for one, am willing to wait, watch and pray, and go down to my grave if need be, rather than have one poor soul shut out through my anxiety to receive an early reward. It is far more to be desired to be one of the "ninety-and-nine" left in the "wilderness," even though it be for ages, than to be the one "lost sheep" and never be found; for after our eyes are closed in the sleep of death, although it be a thousand years, it will seem only a short moment to us when we are awakened at the resurrection day.

Let us hold fast to the faith although the whole world are against us; even if animate life—which is being experimented with by certain professors—be produced, and God's Word disregarded and disbelieved, for there is no other name under the Sun whereby we can be saved, except through our Lord Jesus Christ. Pray for the isolated that we may be found faithful as well as all the rest of the dear ones, and may the good Lord bless your efforts and multiply the fruits of your endeavors, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

ROMAIN A. DANIELS.

Dear Restitution:

The following is a description of Jesus Christ as it was found in an ancient manuscript sent by Publius Centulus, President of Judea, to the Roman senate.

"There lives at this time in Judea, a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The barbarian esteems him as a prophet, but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of the immortal God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtue as to call back the dead from their graves, and to heal every kind of disease with a word or touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped, his aspect amiable, reverent. His hair flows in those beautiful shades which no united colors can match, falling into graceful curls below the ear, agreeably couching on his shoulders and parting on the crown of his head like the sect of the Nazarites. His forehead is smooth and large, the cheek without spot save that of a lovely red; his nose and mouth are formed with exquisite symmetry; his beard is thick, and suitable to the hair of his head, reaching a little below his chin, and parting in the middle like a fork. His eyes are bright, clear and serene. He rebukes with majesty, counsels with mildness, and invites with the most tender and persuasive language. His whole address, whether in word or deed, being elegant, grave, and strictly characteristic of so great a being. No man has seen him laugh; the whole world behold him weep frequently; and so persuasive are his tears, that the multitude cannot withhold theirs from joining in sympathy with him. He is modest, temperate and wise. In short, whatever this phenomena may turn out in the end, he seems at present a man of excellent beauty and divine perfection, every way surpassing the children of man."

And Bro. Underwood, I do not believe that such as he was only the "son of Joseph." Please publish this article. Isn't it grand and beautiful?

Selections.

Give and Take.

Willingness to give is commonly accounted of higher rank in point of merit than willingness to receive. Yet there are those who need reminding that the latter is also a duty. There is a proud independence which finds pleasure in bestowing, and exalts in the superiority to which such bestowment testifies. It is prone to forget that others also find joy in such privilege and have a right to such joy, which right their haughty attitude would deny. To exclusively appropriate and arrogate this pleasure to one's self is a mark of smallness. "More blessed to give than to receive?" Yes; but not always more noble, not more obligatory. That life expands which imparts. But can there be an imparter unless there be an accepter? And we may not excuse ourselves from sometimes playing the latter role. When properly done it is twice blessed. It benefits us to feel that we are so bound up in one bundle with our fellows as to be sometimes indebted to them, and lifted up in the isolated superiority of continuous donation; and it benefits others in that it furnishes them the sweet opportunity of conferring an obligation, not thus paying back a little, at least, of that debt which otherwise, wholly undischarged, would crush out their self-respect. Only they who freely receive have a right to freely give.—Zion's Herald.

In Debt.

The Christian's debt to Jesus Christ has been assigned and made payable to humanity. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

What is the measure of the indebtedness of the Christian to Jesus Christ? Let each Christian heart here ask itself, "What is my indebtedness to Jesus Christ?" One is ready to say that it is so great that I have gone into bankruptcy. There is no shrinking of this responsibility, and by loyal ones no desire to shirk, for this indebtedness is our wealth.

What I owe to Him is the measure of my possessions. I would not have it a farthing less and it cannot be added to. Christ himself can add no more to his royal gifts and regnant provisions. My obligations and indebtedness to him are the measure of my being—as much as in me is.—Nazarene Messenger.

Making a Life.

Making a life is a larger thing than making a living. Many a man has made a good living who has made a poor life. Some men have made splendid lives, who have made very moderate, or even scanty livings. Such was Goldsmith's village preacher, who "was passing rich on forty pounds a year." Such was the citizen of Germany, and of the world, who earned hardly three hundred dollars in any single year of his journey here—yet few men have ever had more out of life than Martin Luther. It behooves us, therefore, to consider how we may add to our making of a living the making of a life. So to make a living as to make also the capability of enjoying a living, or using a living after we have made it.

Fatal Consequence of Neglect.

Fatal consequences follow not only positive wrong-doing, but simple neglect of duty also. The ten foolish virgins in the parable were guilty of nothing but neglect, yet their lamps went out and they were shut out from the wedding. The man with one talent did nothing but omit the thing he ought to have done, yet he was cast out. Those who shall stand on the left hand of the Judge of the whole earth in the last day shall be accused only of omitting to minister to their Lord in his affliction, yet they shall go away into everlasting punishment. It is fatal to leave things undone.

Indiana Conference—Important Notice.

As will be seen by reference to the published minutes of the Indiana Conference, an Historical Committee was appointed to collect and publish, either in the columns of THE RESTITUTION, or in pamphlet form, or both, a history of the introduction of the gospel within the bounds of the State of Indiana and its spread to the various localities in which churches have been or are located. To the end that this work may be expedited as much as possible, the Committee desires the co-operation of those who have labored or were identified with the work, or resided in Indiana in former days. Brethren who have moved away from the bounds of the Indiana Conference who are in possession of historical facts relative to the early introduction of the gospel in Indiana, its hindrances, its success, etc., will confer a great favor upon said Committee and the brotherhood in Indiana by furnishing such data as they may possess. This history is to be for the information of all, but especially the younger portion of the membership. Brethren, let us hear from you soon. Your responses will be greatly appreciated. Thanking you in advance for your contributions, we are yours in Christ,

VOLUME LIV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 5, 1905. NUMBER 25.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 5, 1905.

MATTERS between Germany and France have settled down, so there is not so much talk of War, though some writers deem it only a question of a little time when arms will have to decide the issue.

THE friends in Ohio are very anxious that there be a full representation of all the brethren in the State at the coming Conference, and wish to hear from all localities. Write to Brother J. C. Thompson, 164 Brookdale St., Cleveland, Ohio, and if you cannot attend, give the body encouraging words and help in every way possible. Brethren from other States are also asked to come to their aid by visiting the Conference. Illinois has announced the time for their gathering, as has Iowa, and the brethren should make every effort to make this year the very best of any year they have had. Work for the time is short.

FROM all parts of Russia there are accounts of trouble. In the Black Sea the crew of one of the largest battleships revolted, killed the officers, and took possession of the vessel. One or two others followed their lead, and other ships are ordered to sink the rebels. What the result will be is hard to tell. On the land some of the regular soldiers refused to fire on the people, saying that only Cossacks would do that. The red flag of revolution is over the land, and the Czar is fearful of the outcome. The situation at home is so full of terror that the peace negotiations with Japan will be hastened. The Japanese army is keeping quiet, waiting the outcome of the peace talk.

"If Thy Hand or Foot Ensnare Thee, Cut It Off."

And throw it away; it is better for thee to enter life maimed or crippled, than having two hands or two feet, to be cast into the age-lasting fire." This is also said of the right eye,—"pluck it out," if it cause you to stumble. These are the words of him to whom we have sworn allegiance,—whose sin-covering name we have taken, whose stainless blood was accepted as a sacrifice in our behalf. We cannot disregard them without the direst consequences. What wonderful figures he employs to show us that the most precious things in the world must not be allowed to obstruct the path to life,—or if we do our loss will ultimately be infinite. The great lesson for us is to close our senses against dangerous objects or practices, to avoid what occasions sin, and deprive ourselves of all that is most dear and profitable in order to attain the aim and object of our faith. It is not enough, however, to shut the eye, or stop the hand or foot that leads astray. The one must be plucked out, and the other cut off. Neither is this enough,—we must cast them both from us. Not a moment's truce with an evil passion or sinful appetite is allowed. If they are indulged they gain strength till they accomplish one's ruin.

We are one week nearer the end of the race for the crowns of life than we were when we last met here. And nothing has happened in the interval to shake my conviction that Gentile times are drawing to a close, and that then Jewish times will begin again, with Jesus as King of kings and

LORD OF LORDS.

You see they are not ushered in under a confederacy of States,—or a world-wide republic where Jack is supposed to be as good as his master, if not a trifle better,—and every one having a voice in the government. A republic under human administration may be as good or better, perhaps than many other forms of human government; but all, without exception, are bad enough; and growing worse. The kingdom which God will set up will be a divine kingdom. Every official from King of kings upon the throne, to the lowest, if I understand it, will be of divine of nature. Absolute powers, as well as wisdom and justice, will be entrusted to them and exerted. Remember candidacy for seats upon the throne of the world along with Jesus will at this time be a thing of the past. Faith, repentance, baptism and a godly walk and conversation as conditions upon which men by overcoming themselves and the world may live and reign with Christ will have been withdrawn. These were imposed to develop rulers of the ages to come; and fulfil the oath of Jehovah to fill all the earth with his glory. The mission of these world rulers is to cause all to know the Lord from the least to the greatest. When we consider the eternal weight of glory laid up for those who purify their hearts by obeying the truth we cannot wonder at the conditions which the gospel of that kingdom imposes. And on the other hand, when we consider that it is loyal subjects that the will seek after, and promote, we would not expect the conditions to be so exacting. The inducements made, or the reward offered would not compare with those who had to take God at his word for glory, honor and immortality, thousands of years in the future, and live the present life as strangers and pilgrims, then die, and live again before their hope would be consummated. Those who make out that God would be partial to save men under the wonderfully improved conditions on earth under the rule of Jesus, Jehovah's King on his holy hill of Zion, and his glorified saints, when we have to come up out of great tribulation, and wash our robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb, and hosts of them lose their lives as witnesses of Jesus. Evidently those who make that objection do not know what God has been doing for 6000 years, nor what it is his purpose to do in the future. The words of the text are addressed to those who do know his purpose, and have taken the initial steps to share with Christ the glory of his kingdom. And all though our course of instruction was made clear to us that there was no crown without a cross,—that the cross comes before the crown. And that it is an absolute condition to

KINGDOM OF GOD

SUFFER WITH CHRIST

if we would reign with him; and that we have to deny ourselves, and take up our cross when it presents itself before us. We must not try to evade it, by going around it, or getting over it; but take it up and bear it—as did Jesus. These and scores of other like Scriptures are as familiar with us as household words. But does their full import come home to us? When we meet with a cross—that is, something to endure in behalf of Christ, are we quick to recognize it? If so, do we promptly take it up,—unpleasant though it be? If not, why not? I can suggest no reply, except it be that our minds have not been assimilated to the mind of the Spirit; or to express it in another way,—our minds have not been taken up and incorporated, as it were, with the Spirit;—have not, as they should have been, made conformable to, or like the mind of the Spirit. In nature, assimilation is the transformation of digested nutriment into our integral part of an organism. I hold that the same law pervades the realm of spiritual things. If a person hurriedly crams himself with half masticated food,—it can as a rule, be only half digested, and the result is that only a small portion can be assimilated; and this continued for a time the whole system begins to run down.

IN SPIRITUAL THINGS

neither growth nor strength can be gained without spiritual food, plenty of it, and at frequent intervals,—not feast today and fast tomorrow. Our brother Dr. Mason used to say that the gastric juices of the stomach are secreted to digest the kinds of food usually taken, and when food is eaten that one is not accustomed, to a great disturbance is sometimes the result. So in spiritual food—when one partakes bountifully and regularly of spiritual food it is easily digested and assimilated. But if people partake of spiritual food as carelessly as many do food for the physical system, there will be little growth or increase of strength, either. I am satisfied that I have known those who sit down, take the book which reveals God's purpose and will as regards man and earth, including the conditions upon which they can be ransomed from the power of death and live for ever here on earth under conditions incomparatively better than the very best in this life. The eyes glance along the lines,—the words are read, which perhaps were opened upon, to the end of the chapter, the book is closed, and conversation on different matters begins at once, no meditation on what has been read takes place; and have a satisfied look which seems to say, that they have done a very commendable act. They have read the Bible as a duty and feel relieved by doing it,—just as if the act itself was a meritorious act and really in some measure improved their credit with God,—or caused them to grow in his favor. But how different the facts in the case! God communicates his loving purpose toward man with a view to inducing man to love in return.

THE LOVE OF GOD

once begotten in man makes him anxious to know what will please him,—and to know what will be the position or reward of those who please him. The things offered or set before man, to hope in induces him to change his manner of life, so that he may become God-like, and meet to be a partaker with saints in light. All can see that too mechanically read the Scriptures will have no such converting power or influence over people, as to make them do and suffer all things that they might receive the end of their faith, the salvation of their souls. The divine truths, that is, the spiritual food served up in the passage read had to be digested before it can be appropriated spiritually. I have taken pains to point out that it is possible to read the words, ye are not your own, having been bought with a price, even

THE PRETIOES BLOOD

of Christ,—without considering what is involved by being owned by another. If we do not own ourselves even, could there be clearer evidence that we cannot possibly own anything? All we have belongs to him who owns us. Have we any right to squander any of his money on useless things and gratify the flesh? And when we read, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do,—do all to the glory of God." O, do we make it a rule to enquire before doing a thing,—yes, is it a rule of our lives to enquire if what we are about to do, or contemplate doing, is being planned with a view to God's glory, or, to our personal advantage, or to please the flesh? As we would not dare avow that we will not be tied down with such strict rules; this should cause us to think how much better it is to ignore so many of such-like injunctions as if they did not exist? Pardon my persistence,—but when we reach this point of view things look serious. And when we read that we are to avoid even the appearance of evil, what do we do? Do we look into the matter and ascertain what customs or habits in us who have been called to be holy ones or saints, would have the APPEARANCE OF EVIL?

What habits have we picked up, and practiced, that men low down in the scale of humanity practice almost universally and the world generally who make no profession of religion? And when we are told to glorify God in our bodies, and the Spirit in Paul beseeches us by

THE MERCIES OF GOD

to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, (that is, set apart,) acceptable unto God your reasonable service, after the profession we have made; and be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed, by the renewing of your mind, that ye might prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. If we cling to practices that have the appearance of evil, even if in themselves they may not be evil, we are called to avoid all such things because we have to live holily—because they appear to others to link us to the world, while we claim to be separate, and not of the world. And the command is not to conform to this world, and then we shall ascertain what is the will of God, the good, and well-pleasing and perfect. Plainly the Spirit here teaches that we cannot ascertain what the perfect will of God to reward is, while we conform to this age. And Romans xii. 1, instead of presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, it should read, presenting a living indulgence, if the law of the Lord tolerated conformity to the practices of this age. I deem it safe to say that when we notice that the minds of some earnest souls seem befogged, so that they fail to see the necessity of *non*conformity to the world in what are thought to be, or are called trifling things, it grows out of the fact that their minds have not been brought into entire conformity to God's mind. There is lurking in some corner of the heart something that prevents them from ascertaining as stated in Rom. xii. 1, 2, what is the good and well-pleasing and

PERFECT WILL OF GOD.

How clear and beautiful Jesus states the same truth in John vii. 17, as does Paul in Rom. xii. 1, 2,—It strikes at the very root of the moral obtuseness we are speaking about. He says, "If any man wish to perform his will—the Father's will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it be of God, or I am speaking from myself." I understand this to be a broad principle of the divine economy, and goes far to explain how slow some are to see the necessity of denying themselves of fleshly gratifications. Jesus has let the secret out. They do not wish to perform the will of God, and try to shirk responsibility by saying they do not understand the teaching. Jesus knew what was in man, and it is ours to profit by his exposures. The desire to do the will of God would remove the scales from their eyes; as they do not want to do his will, but their own wills, their foolish hearts are blinded. In a word, as elsewhere stated, they are wilfully ignorant.

Brothers and sisters, there is tremendous energy in the words of Jesus in the text. Solemnly they are repeated twice here. Solemnly they are repeated three times in Mark's gospel The urgent stringency of the command, the terrible plainness of the alternative put forth by lips that could say nothing harsh,—and the fact the same injunction appears again in the Sermon on the Mount, show how profoundly the Lord felt the principle to be, which he was here laying down. Did you notice that the whole stringency of the commandment rests upon that if. If they cause thee to stumble, then, and not till then, amputate. All the organs and powers of man are natural, he is not over-loaded. The operation of each one is innocent. But a man can be ruined by innocent things. The idea of a possible injurious issue of innocent occupations, rests upon the principles that our organism has an ideal order, so as that some parts are to be in subjection, and some are to rule; and where the lower clog the operations of the higher, they are harmful,—and have to be cut off,—and there can be no question but what unwise exercise of natural faculties and much more is that the case in regard to our relations to God. And if there be anything in my organism which is drawing to itself energy that ought to be exerted for God it is harmful to me. It is a wen that is sucking all the vital force into itself, and turning it into poison; and there is only one cure for it, and that is the knife. But in considering whether a certain thing is harmful to me, I must not forget my brethren and sisters. All things may be lawful, says Paul, yet will I not be brought under the power of any. I must keep master of them, and abstain altogether rather than to become their slave. I think it would be well when we are almost obliged to inhale somewhat of the world, to do so as patients inhale chloroform, and keep the finger on the pulse and watch the first sign of weakness, and take no more. When safety lamps begin to burn blue, I have read that is a sure sign that there is choke damp close by. And when we begin to find prayer wearisome, and pious meditation dull, and the remembrance of God an effort or a pain it is a time to CALL A HALT.

DESTROY MEN,

If thy hand offend thee, never mind though your brother's hand is not offending him,—do the necessary thing for your health,—cut it off, and cast it from you. But this does not mean that we must abandon all that is susceptible of abuse, for everything is so; and if we are to regulate all our conduct by that rule,—the amputation of a hand will not be enough. We may as well cut off our heads at once, for everything is susceptible of being abused.

Did you notice that each one of us must apply the remedy for him or herself? We have to lay the hand upon the block, and with the other hand grasp the axe and strike. That is to say, we are to suppress our inclinations, our practices, and abandon pursuits and break with associates when they damage and hinder our likeness to Jesus Christ. This is plain common sense—as in physical intoxication,—it is easier to stop altogether than to take a very little and then stop. The only safe rule is total abstinence. Every man has to give up many things if he means to excel in one. Christians have to do the same, and shear off a great deal that may be legitimate in order to have a reserve of strength for essential and eternal things. Brethren and sisters, if we are hungering and thirsting after righteousness we will lose our taste for a great deal that is innocent,—and give up many allowable things in order with all our heart and soul and mind and strength we may love and serve the Lord more perfectly. There are no half-measures to be kept. The only thing to do with the viper is to shake it off into the fire and let it burn. Depend upon it we will have to empty our hands of earth trivialities if we would grasp Christ with them. We must turn our eyes away from the world call good and great if we would keep the Master in sight. We must rigidly apply the principle of excision in order that we may advance in the life divine. It is the only way to ensure progress. We all know there is no such certain method of securing an adequate flow of sap up the trunk of a tree, as to

OUR SPIRITUAL LIFE,

CUT OFF THE SUCKERS.

If we want to have a current going down to the main bed of a stream, sufficient to keep it clear, we must dam up all the side channels. But if we cut off the members that ensnare us,—besides the sin that beats us, we saw the command to lay aside every weight. Christianity has been called a selfish religion, when it says, your life or your death depends upon your faith and conduct, and because our text quotes Christ as saying, "It is better for thee to enter life maimed," etc. But it will be time enough to notice such fantastic arguments when the men that urge them refuse to turn down another street if they are warned that in the road they are going they are liable to meet their death. Till then we will listen to our Lord and Master saying to us, "Do not do this or thou shalt perish"—and "do this, that thou may est enter into life."

Brethren and sisters, Jesus says there is no man that hath left any of his possessions, affections, tastes, fancies, for my sake "but he shall receive a hundredfold more in this life, and in the age to come life everlasting." This warrants us in saying, that no man will be a loser by giving up anything for Christ's sake. On the other hand the complete man, who has not cut off any ensnaring members,—is complete in body and estate,—complete in everything except completeness in Christ, yes he has to go through a stripping process. "Take it from him, and give it to him that hath ten talents."

For many weeks I have been warned that before long my work account will soon close. I cannot tell you how anxious I am to do all that I can to fortify you against the wicked in the closing days of Gentile times,—and if the Lord delay his coming, and I am seized by

THE GREAT ENEMY,

I hope and pray that I may be able to fall asleep with the expectation of meeting you again on the evergreen shore. Ample provision has been made for the salvation of those who heed the warning voice I have been calling your attention to this morning. No one can afford to neglect it. As sure as we attempt to direct our own course and neglect the direction of the Captain of our salvation, we will have to take up the awful lament,—"the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved." I do not think the lines of any congregation in the world today have fallen in pleasanter places. There are power helpers within reach at all times, and we neglect them at our peril. And every day brings fresh evidence that the Lord is at hand to come; the same Lord who gave the instruction we have been considering this morning, and which was given with the object of securing to us a share of his throne and kingdom. Yes, it is the same Lord Jesus, who after conquering death on his own territory, went away to heaven, promising to come again and receive us to himself, and be forever with him. Yes; he is the first-born among many brethren,—the first ripe sheaf of the grand harvest of those redeemed from death. Let us be ever on the watch for him, ever keeping our lamps trimmed and burning; ready to go into the marriage Supper of the Lamb. Let us bend our energies in the direction of his divine instruction of the text, and present our bodies as living sacrifices, remembering that we cannot reign with him, unless we suffer with him.

Keep the Lights Burning in the Home.

When the young prodigal son tired of home discipline and wished to go out into the broad world and try the battle of life without being hampered by what the youth thinks unnecessary restraint, he thinks, if I only could have my own way and do as I please life would be a success and a gay time and happiness would be sure. The Father knows about how much happiness and peace the world gives its servants, and what the wages will be in the end. But the boy is content with nothing less than experience, so he takes his portion of the father's goods and goes. And oh! how dreary were the days and long nights in that home for father and mother. His room is silent, the snowy couch is vacant, while mother's pillow is wet with tears. She hears no call for loving little cares she loved so well to bestow. Mother and father come quietly to a bountiful breakfast, but the sight of the vacant chair causes a choking sensation and they can't linger long there. As they wander listlessly about there are little remembrances every where, a bit of his handiwork here and there, musical instruments by which he cheered the home. And there hangs the hat just where he left it. The home is lonely indeed and the fire burns low. Is it any wonder that for a moment the thought comes to these weary souls, Let us give up this toilsome struggle and go with him out into the wide world, may be we can find peace and rest, so let us sell out our possessions, our birth right, our home and all be together anyway. If the boy could have heard that resolve he would have cried out like the rich man in the parable, Go tell them not to come to this place. But it was not a resolve, it was only the thought of desperation. Will we go with him to feed swine when God said, Feed my lambs? Will we eat shucks with the swine when we are invited to eat the bread from above with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the bountiful kingdom of God? No don't give up the birthright for a few days of uncertain pleasure. Don't leave the home, the narrow way and wander out into the broad way in the vain hope of being together. If we can't keep together in the narrow way with so few travelers, are not we sure to be separated in the broad way where multitudes throng the great thoroughfares, each seeking his own pleasures and clinging to hopes that slip through clinging fingers like melting snow? Yes, stay in the old home whose foundation is the Rock of Ages, where God pours down bountiful blessings plenty and to spare so that if our boy asks bread we need not give him a stone. What would be the boy's feelings if when he tires of eating shucks with the world's swine and proved the world a hard master, hungry and weary, he resolves to return to the father's house, he finds the old home for which his heart longed, lone and desolate, no light in the window, no fire on the hearth, no one to welcome him home. His heart sinks as the thought comes to him. They have gone out into the broad way to be with me, will they faint by the way with the buoyancy of youthful hopes and fancies gone, can they bear up with the world for a master and the world's shucks for food? No, the wanderer must not find the home desolate when he wearies of the world, he must find the lights brightly gleaming, the fire already lighted, the calf fat and ready, and parents waiting with outstretched arms and a bountiful feast to meet and welcome the wanderer home. The Christian should always be found in the church home ready with supporting arms to meet the prodigal, but don't think to go out into the "broad way" to bring him back, or you may be overwhelmed and lose the narrow way. Reach as far out as you can to support the wanderer without stepping off the solid Rock. You can give no support to the fallen with your feet in miry clay.

Adhere to Principle.

Let the winds and the waves of adversity blow and dash around you if they will, but keep on the path of rectitude, and you will be firm as a rock. Plant yourself upon principle, and bid defiance to misfortune. If gossip, with her poisoned tongue, meddles with your good name, heed her not, carry yourself erect; let your course be straightforward, and by the serenity of your countenance and the purity of your life give the lie to all who would underrate and belittle you.

Diligence is the mother and procurer of good luck.

Poetry.

O Lord, How Long.

They tell me
Some have heard his mighty chariot wheels
Roar in the distance that the world's salt tears
Are cleaving their last furrows in her cheeks.
It may be so; I know not. Oft the ear,
Attent and eager for some coming friend,
Construes each breeze among the vocal boughs
Into the tokens of his wished approach.
But this I know; he liveth, and shall stand
Upon this earth; and round him, thick as waves
That laugh with light at noon, uncounted hosts
Of his redeemed.
O dawn, millennial day! Come, blessed morn!
Appear, Desire of nations! rend thy heavens
And stand revealed upon thy chosen hill.

Communicated.

Notes by the Way.

On Thursday, June 8th, I took the train for Argos, Indiana, for the purpose of attending the Annual June meeting at the Old Antioch Church, which is located between Argos and Plymouth.

On arriving at Argos, Bro. T. O. Taber met me at the depot, and escorted me to his home, where I received the hearty welcome of Sister Taber and family.

The Household of Faith in Indiana enjoy so much these annual, social gatherings at the Old Antioch Church. Many events of sacred memory cluster about that hallowed spot, and as we gather there year after year, memory recalls them; and many dear ones in Christ whose heads are now whitened by the frosts of many winters, hold sweet converse together, as they greet each other under the shadow of the Old Church, where so many victories have been achieved, and from which many date their birth-place in the Christ life. Sweet memory is "Like a gale that sighs along

Beds of oriental flowers
In the grateful breath of song
That once was heard in happier hours;
Filled with balm, the gale sighs on,
Though the flowers are sunk in death;
So when pleasure's dream is gone,
Its memory lives in music's breath."

After ten, Bro. Taber conveyed us to the old church, built forty-two years ago. Many of the old gospel warriors were on hand, as they have been in the many years now past. Threatening weather prevented the attendance of some.

Brother Zilmer favored us with an able address on the Character of God. We shall long remember the treat we received.

On Friday morning the Conference proper was opened by an address of welcome by Bro. W. D. Thompson, who is the only surviving trustee of the old Antioch Church. He has attended the annual meetings here for forty-one years. He made quite a feeling address as the memory of the past filled his mind. May God bless Bro. Thompson in the few remaining years he may be permitted to remain with us. He is an accomplished vocalist and dearly loves to sing God's praises. He has been a leader in church singing for these many years.

I shall not attempt to give a detailed report of the Conference, as the Secretary has already given that.

The preaching of the Word was done by Brothers Zilmer, Wince, Waggoner, and myself, which was appreciated by those who heard it. They were all of one accord, no one had hobbies to ride, peace, love and good will, prevailed from first to last.

A new feature at this session was the Sister's Meeting. All hands declared the new feature a decided success. This meeting was led by Sister Underwood.

The Social meetings led by Brethren Railsback and Willey were enjoyed so much. All had an opportunity to express themselves concerning our faith and hope, and tell how encouraged they were, and declared their determination to hold fast and to live a life in harmony with the gospel, and to press on, until victory is achieved.

"Press on! surmount the rocky steeps,
Climb boldly o'er the torrent's arch;
He fails alone who feebly creeps;
He wins who dares the hero's march.
Be thou a hero! let thy might
Cramp on eternal snows its way,
And through the ebon walls of night,
Hew down a passage unto day."

During a large part of the time during which these meetings were held, cloud and rain prevailed, but sunshine dwelt within. On the Sunday morning came the clear sunshine after rain, and a large concourse of people turned out, and listened attentively to the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. Two hearts were touched, who wanted an heirs interest in the glorious coming kingdom, and asked for baptism into the sacred name for the remission of sins. They received the hearty congratulations from the dear ones in Christ Jesus. Press onward, dear ones, in Christ, you have a work to do, there is no time to waste upon the trifling things of this world.

"'Tis not for man to trifle; life is brief,
And life is here.
Our age is but the falling of a leaf,
A dropping tear,
We have no time to sport away the hours;
All must be in earnest in a world like ours."

On Sunday afternoon we gathered about the sacred board, in holy communion, to remember our dear Lord. It is on occasions like this that memory brings to view the past. Yes, and to the tragic scenes of ages past also.

"Behold, the blessed Christ upon the cross!
Approach and gaze and wonder till ye weep!
Convulsive limbs of torture grave his face!
Listen, My God! my God! why dost thou forsake?
'Tis o'er, the blood-red eye is dim'd and shut!
The last heart-pulse hath beat, and now behold!
With waxen limbs, and gore-wreathed locks, and lips
With sweet compassion printed on their curve,
The Christ,—a sacrifice for lost mankind."

Sunday night closed with social meeting and preaching. Then the faithful ones said farewell, with tones of love in their eyes. Thus closed the forty-second annual gathering at Antioch, which is numbered with the others now past.

On Monday afternoon I bid farewell and took the train for my Chicago home, where I remained until Saturday morning, when I took the train for Oshkosh, Wisconsin. On arriving there, I took the electric cars to Omro, Wisconsin. I found Sister Bradley waiting for me at Omro. She then conveyed me by carriage to her home where I was welcomed by Sister Jagar, and the balance of the family.

I anticipated much pleasure in meeting the dear ones in Christ at Omro, where on previous occasions I had buried fifteen with Christ in baptism. Smiling faces and warm hand-shakes greeted me at every turn. It is so sweet when dear ones in Christ truly love each other.

I was pleased to meet Sister Eva, the President of the Omro Berean Band.

Meeting opened upon Sunday morning in the Methodist Church, (which church I occupied on two other visits.) As the meetings progressed, the Word preached began to take effect. On three different occasions during these meetings a goodly number gathered each time upon the banks of the Fox River, where I buried dear ones in baptism with Christ. Brother and Sister Daggett feel happy over so many of their sons and daughters obeying the gospel. In addition to those who have obeyed the gospel, the seed found lodgment in other hearts. At the communion service, the solemnity was such, that some were moved to tears. These communion services to remember our dear Lord are so blessed, they build up and strengthen. Don't neglect them.

This service points forward as well as backward. Yes, he is coming again.

"But not the homeless orphan of the world,
To wander on in pain and woe, and weep,
And perish on the tree; but on thy car
Of lightning, rolling from th' unfathomed depths
Of heaven while angels robed in radiant light,
Brandish their glittering banners o'er thee,
And all the clouds, like burning billows flash,
And bound beneath thy feet! The trump shall peal
The dead awakening blast, more full and deep
Than thunder in its maddest roar!—The sea
Shall yawn, and all her buried saints arise."

On Sunday night I attended the Young Berean meeting, held at the residence of Sister Bradley. There were twenty-five present. They used the Berean Lesson Booklet. They had, indeed, a very interesting meeting, and all present seemed to enjoy it so much. They meet once a week.

At this meeting I had another application for baptism. I had intended to leave next morning for Chicago, but remained over until Tuesday in order that I might baptize this applicant. On Monday morning, at ten o'clock, we once more met on the banks of the river, and performed this sacred service. I have baptized eighteen in all at Omro. May our Heavenly Father preserve them unto his heavenly kingdom.

My relation with this people has been very pleasant, a sweet bond of union has sprung up between us.

On Tuesday morning I took the steamboat for Oshkosh. Sister Eva accompanied me as far as that city.

On Monday night I arrived at home and found my family as well as usual.

All being well, I expect to meet with the Chicago Church on Sunday morning.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Immortality.

No other word touches the heart-strings of all mankind as does this. No other theme is so worldwide. Whatever be the concepts concerning the Almighty, however crude and savage, however refined and enlightened, be the man, he has some sort of faith in another life. The very rare exception but proves the rule.

The people of the antipodes, the red men of the Americas, the black races of Africa and Australia, the numberless tribes of islanders, the whole world of uncivilization, have been found to believe in a Supreme Being and his power to restore life. How this faith was imbibed man may not know. Primitive man carries knowledge from parent and child, inaccurate, widely modified, it is true, after some generations, yet with a basis of resemblance. Valueless though savage beliefs may be as to truth, they give us much insight in to the march of the human family.

Civilized peoples show a similar tendency in the spread of faith. Generation after generation departs from the conviction of its ancestry and yet leaves many marks to trace its genealogy.

The topic of immortality is a worthy one for Sunday contemplation and we bespeak for these lines a careful reading. Indeed the subject should be re-read and re-considered many times, until the mind is filled with the cheer of its contemplation. But the pondering over assumed plans of God is useless. If our faith be false to him it is as though it were no faith. Who teaches as of God what is foreign to him is not a disciple.

The world's faith in immortality may be classed in two groups, spiritist and resurrectionist, in other words as inherent and conditional. Both are found widely among savages, possibly according to direction and distance of descent and to peculiarities of mind.

The belief of ancient Egypt was both spiritist and resurrectionist. Bodies were mummified for preservation unto the new life. But the ghost of man might wander for cycles through other flesh, yea through plants and rocks, though with the expectation of re-incarnation into its former life. Ancient Babylon seems to have been less spiritist and more materialistic in its varying speculations concerning the future. Socrates, Plato and Aristotle developed an early Greek school of spiritism, that has had wide-spread influence upon the faith of mankind through the centuries of the past. Yet their theories were but crude. The great spirit of the world gave off emanations that might live through cycles of development in human bodies until fitted to be again lost in the original spirit body. Living several centuries before Christ and being outside the influence of the early Hebrew school, their faith knew nothing of a resurrection. They were entirely spiritist.

Since the days of Plato there have been many kinds of spiritualists. In the main they have no regard for the doctrines of the Bible of the Hebrew, of Christ and of the Christian. The Swedenborgian school has made some effort at fabricating and mystifying it, but its faith is utterly foreign to the Book of books.

The early Hebrew people were resurrectionists. The Pharisees held to the ancient faith, mingled somewhat with Platonism, but the disciples of the Lord strove more persistently to instruct in the One Hope. The Apostle Paul has no more difficult task than to keep the young church in the One Faith. In Corinth some of the converts taught that there could be no resurrection from death and Galatia also departed from the true gospel. The apostle trained them to the truth and so far as we know they heeded his teaching.

If a man die, shall he live again? Yes, though he die, yet he shall live. But every one in his own order. Christ is the first-fruits of the resurrection. Afterwards, at his coming, shall be raised they that are his. Later the rest of the dead shall be raised, some of whom shall eventually also attain to everlasting life, but the persistently impenitent shall suffer everlasting destruction and death.

May this resurrection hope be logically combined with spiritism? The martyred Tyndal, next to Wickliffe the earliest translator of the Bible into English and, like him, a persistent and clear-sighted Scripture student, pointed out forcibly the inconsistency of such a double faith. He called the one the spiritual doctrine of Christ, the other the human doctrine of heathen philosophers. These, he said, are so contrary that they can not agree. If the ghosts of men go to heaven or hell in death, what cause or need is there of a resurrection? Tyndal was known as a Baptist, but not a Calvinist. He preferred to be called a Christian and of the Church of God.

The combined faith makes this statement a logical outcome, however foolish it may seem, that God has planned to send the ghosts of the human family to heaven and hell at death, or to a good and bad part in purgatory or intermediate condition, to stay there until the resurrection, when they will be called back to join their bodies for judgment and then to be sent back to the skies or into the fiery lake. The spiritist teaching of the Roman church is far more sensible.

The words immortal and immortality in the Bible apply only to a present quality of God and to a promise and pledge to man. God is immortal and incorruptible, 1 Tim. i. 17. He only hath immortality, 1 Tim. vi. 16. We should seek for immortality, Rom. ii. 7. It is brought to light through the gospel, 2 Tim. i. 10. Immortality and incorruption shall be put on by the blest upon the resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 42-54.

There are some translations in the common version of the Scriptures that are supposed to lend color to this combined faith. In Christ's promise to the penitent malefactor on the cross the use of the word "today," and the punctuation are misleading. If it read as in the Greek, "Verily now I say unto thee, thou shalt be with me in Paradise," of course when he should come into his kingdom, there would be no difficulty. Purely as a parable, there is nothing in the sketch of the rich man and the beggar, or Lazarus, to apply to individual death, especially if the rich man is understood to be the Jewish house and the beggar the Gentile. Paul's strait, or indecision, as to the two things, life and death, leaves no doubt when he desires a third, a very different thing, which modern scholars have shown to be the appearance, or second coming, of Christ, to which the apostle looked forward.

The Old Testament starts right. When God breathed into man the breath of lives, man became a living soul. In the Hebrew dead men were called dead souls. When God takes away the life-breath, man dies and returns to the dust. In Gen. xxxv. 18 there is supposed to be a difficulty in the King James version. In speaking of the death of Rachel it says, "as her soul was in departing, for she died," when the Hebrew word is not the modern idea of soul at all, but is life, as in Gen. xliv. 30, Lev. xvii. 11, 14, and more than a hundred other passages, in which it is translated life and many others where it is mistranslated. Solomon is supposed to teach the same in Ecclesiastes xii. 7. The translators have used the words spirit and breath for the same Hebrew word, thus deceiving the English reader. Solomon has taught that by nature man is like the beast, has no natural pre-eminence over it, as to life and death. As the one dieth, so dieth the other. They all have the same kind of breath. No one knows the breath of man to go upward and the breath of the beast to go downward to the earth. When they die, their love, their envy, is perished. The dead know not anything. Eccl. iii. 19; ix. 5, 6. The twelfth chapter is a pathetic description of death. It is sad beyond the seventh verse. The expression of hope is in the last two verses. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter; Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgement, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." Our breath is in God's hand. Dan. v. 23. Isa. ii. 22. Job. xii. 10. God takes away our breath, we die and return to the dust. Ps. civ. 29. A correct rendering of Job xii. 10 is, "In whose hand is the life of every living thing and the breath of all flesh of man."

But the true Christian has hope. His hope is the superstructure, the tangible outcome, the result of his faith, for faith is the substratum, or the basis, of hope, that which stands under hope, not altogether properly called the substance of things hoped for. Heb. xi. 1. Hope refers to the things not seen, of which faith is the conviction, the trust, the evidence. This hope is in unseen things, Rom. viii. 24, the ends of the promises of the gospel, which are consequent upon the final adoption, the redemption, or resurrection, of the body. By faith we rejoice in the hope of the glory of God, or rather, in the hope of a glorified condition like unto that of God and the immortal, transcendent Christ. 2 Cor. iv. 18. This involves the hope of eternal life, for this life will be a life of glory. It is a blessed hope, Titus ii. 13, that will be inaugurated by the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. This hope is laid up for us in heaven, Col. i. 5, to be revealed to us or brought to us when our Christ shall come a second time unto salvation. He will bring his reward with him.

From 2 Peter iii. 7-12 it is claimed by some that this earth-ball will be literally burned up and the home of the blest be elsewhere. The sixth verse shows that the former heavens and earth were destroyed by water, in the sense in which God used the expression. The meaning is that the sin, the uncleanness, of earth was drowned. The new cleansing will be more thorough, as by fire, for no sin shall remain to pollute the earth. The thirteenth verse assures us. "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

J. G. Harris.

Godly and Worldly Spirit.

"But we have received, not the spirit of the world, (kosmos) but the spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us by God." 1 Cor. ii. 12.

In considering these statements of the inspired Apostle, we may divide them into three parts, for the separate examination of each.

1. The Spirit of the world.
2. The Spirit which is of God.
3. The things freely given to us by God.

We might, with propriety, inquire first, what is spirit? before we discuss the conduct of a man possessing either spirit. Spirit is the principle of life, it is the source from which all life springs. We may see its effect or power, and discern it by comparison, as it manifests itself in flesh and vegetable matter, but it is only perceived in connection with matter. The power and duration of life exerted by it depends entirely upon the organization of the body, for we cannot analyze, divide or subdivide spirit. It emanates from God, as the sunshine from the sun. Its movement upon the face of the waters, brought forth moving creatures. Light, Life, Word were all manifested in the creation by the Spirit. It is God's manifestation of himself, for God is Spirit. "For in him we live and move and have our being." It is almost universally believed, throughout the world, by Catholic, Protestant and heathen, that the spirit in man is a personal conscious being, and exists after death without the body, but that this is not the case, can be found by a careful examination of the texts where spirit occurs.

The primary meaning in Scripture is wind, air, or breath, then, it is spoken of as an influence, for good or evil, also as a state or quality of heart or mind, again as a quickening or vivifying power, and an animated condition. Another fact is, that the spirit of man is a noun, in the neuter gender, hence it is not an intelligent ghost entity inside the man. The impartation of this spirit in man produced life, its withdrawal produces death. All the animal creation have this spirit of life. Now man, being a unit, made up of the union of spirit of life and body, becomes a living soul. At death, the soul is annihilated, destroyed as water is, when the elements composing it are separated, but the spirit of all flesh goes to God who gave it, while the body goes back to dust, and while man, like water, is non est, but the elements from which he was formed still exist, and God through Christ will raise him up at the last day. The man in his natural life, in the flesh, has what is termed, "the spirit of the world," he is of the earth earthy, and naturally follows the inclinations of his nature and is restrained only by law, and the fear of the consequences is the only thing that holds him back from doing anything the life or spirit of the flesh desires. Some enjoy one thing and some another, but whether physical or intellectual it is all fleshly and of the world. "For the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him." He has the spirit of the world, and gratifies it when he can with propriety do so. But now the gospel is preached, and "God commandeth all men everywhere to repent, because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained," (Jesus Christ and the saints). If he obeys, and confesses Jesus Christ, is immersed in water in his name, he receives the Spirit which is of God. He is then a spiritual man in the flesh; by the renewing of his mind, waiting for the redemption of his body at the coming of the Lord. He now breathes the atmosphere of heaven, the untainted air of the kingdom to come, the breath of God, he thinks by an inspired mind, as a son of God, he has the mind of Christ, the things of this world concern him not, and every thing he does is as unto the Lord, and not unto men. He lives for the future, and accepts not his reward now. "In the volume of the Book it is written, I delight to do thy will, O God." That which he found so difficult by sacrifice, he now finds easy by the obedience of faith. When he sleeps unconsciously at night, his life is hidden with Christ in God, should he fall asleep in death, his life is hidden with Christ in God, but "when Christ who is his life shall appear, then shall he appear with him in glory." He loves to meet together with the brethren to study the Word, and learn those things which are freely given him to know by God. Having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust by these precious promises he is made partaker of the divine nature. He is a son of God, a joint-heir with Christ in all creation of God, and because Christ is of the seed of Abraham, he has put on Christ, and inherits the promises to Abraham to be a blessing to all the kindreds of the earth, for it is more blessed to give than to receive, by means of a just rule in a righteous kingdom to be established at the return of his Lord. These are some of the things freely given by God for the spiritual man to discern. And if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost, and the judgment shall determine the punishment of those who will not believe, because the god of this world, or the possession of the spirit of this world while yielding to its pleasures, "hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." So the ministration of the spirit is glorious to the believer, for as he grows in grace, in knowledge and obedience, he reflects as in a mirror, the glory of the Lord, and is transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the spirit, for "in this gospel is revealed the righteousness of God from faith to faith, as it is written the just shall live by faith." Penetrating the unseen future by the spirit, he is translated from this kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of the Son of his love. He belongs to the church of the firstborn, which is the Lord's body, the fulness of God, that filleth all in all.

E. D. McCrea.

"Cannot Kill the Soul."

Said Jesus: "Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (psuche, life); but rather fear Him who is able to destroy both soul (psuche—life) and body in hell." Matt. x. 28. The Christian, by obedience, secures a life that is not affected by the death of the body, here called soul or psuche; but this psuche, which is forty times translated life and lives in the New Testament, can ultimately be destroyed with the body in Gehenna, if its possessor is unrighteous; hence, it is not immortal; neither is it a personality that lives independent of the body. There is a psuche, or life, for both saint and sinner beyond the reign of temporal death; but in the sinner's case, that psuche or life will be destroyed with the body in hell; but in the case of the saint, a life indestructible is secured; "for this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." 1 John v. 11.

Here is a life that cannot be obliterated by the hand of man. Men can only suspend temporal life; it will be resumed at the resurrection, when in the case of the sinner God will "destroy both soul and body in hell," beyond which time their life will never be resumed. "Our life is hid with Christ in God," and we now possess it by faith only, till "Christ, who is our life shall appear," when we shall awake to life everlasting. This life is not a personality.

Drunkenness is not only the cause of crime, but it is crime, and if any encourage drunkenness for the sake of the profit derived from the sale of drink, they are guilty of a form of moral assassination as criminal as any that has been practised by the bravos of any country or any age.

Those have but little fear of God's rod, that have no compassion for those who feel it.

When you open the Bible, never forget that it is the Word of God. That he is as really speaking to you there, as he spoke with Moses on the mount. As you read, let Scripture explain Scripture; and use the more easy portions to shed light upon the more deep and difficult. Never be satisfied with merely skimming the surface of the Bible. You are to search the Scriptures. "Plough into the Bible," was the saying of a wise and good man.

David often tells how he stood in awe of God's word; and so of many other saints and holy men of old.

It is said of King Edward VI. of England, that once, when quite young, he could not reach to some book, and an attendant put down a large Bible that he might stand on it to reach up. But the king refused reverently, and rebuked him for the careless disrespect shown to the Word of God. There may sometimes be outward respect without inward piety; but in his case we know it arose from real love of the truth, and honor to the Author of the book.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Waiting.

I am waiting for the dawning
Of the bright prophetic day,
When the darkness night of sorrow
Shall have vanished far away;
When forever with the Savior,
Far beyond the gloom of tears,
I shall swell the song of worship
Through the everlasting years.

I am looking at the brightness—
See, it shineth from afar—
Of the clear and joyous beaming
Of the "bright and morning star."
Through the dark gray mists of morning
Its I see its glorious light;
Soon shall flee the darkest shadow
Of this sad and weary night.

I am waiting for the coming
Of the Lord who died for me;
Oh! His words have filled my spirit,
"I will come again for thee."
I can almost hear his foothill
On the threshold of the door,
And my heart, my heart is longing
To be his forevermore.

The Wanderings of Israel.

Although from before the days when Abraham was called to offer his son as a sacrifice to God on Mount Moriah, even to the present time, the children of Israel have been God's favored and chosen people, and at different periods of their history have witnessed his power manifested in their midst and upon their enemies and although they have had showers of blessings which were beyond their comprehension to measure or enjoy, yet no people on the face of the earth (unless it be the church of the present dispensation) have been so unthankful and regardless of their high privileges as this people. Wandering from God's law, doubting and complaining, seemed to make up a very great portion of their life's history. Although the burdens which they were required to bear while under Egyptian bondage were heavy and cruel in the extreme, even calling forth the pity and power of God in their deliverance from their Egyptian task masters, yet the waters of the sea had scarcely closed over their pursuers and while the sight of their dead enemies as they lay strewn upon the dark sea shore were yet fresh in their minds and long before the notes of Mariam's glad song of deliverance from their enemies had died away are the distant hills of the wilderness of Sinai they had now entered, the Israelites began to murmur and with longing hearts look back to Egypt and cry out, "Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt when we did eat bread to the full, for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger." Ex. xvi. 3. Not withstanding these cruel words of murmuring and lack of frith in God, the Lord said unto Moses, "Behold I will rain bread from heaven for you, and the people shall go and gather a certain rate every day that I may prove them whether they will walk in my laws or no." Ex. xvi. 4, 14, 15. "And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, It is manna, for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat." Still the people of Israel longed for the flesh pots of Egypt, saying, "We remember (O! how many of us remember) the flesh which we did eat in Egypt freely, the cucumbers, the melons, the leaks, the onions and the garlicks. But now our soul is dried away, there is nothing at all besides manna before our eyes." Num. xi. 4 6.

As Moses, the tried servant of God listened to the murmurings of this discontented and faithless people, in the anguish of his great heart he cried out to God saying, "Whence should I have flesh to give to all this people, for they weep unto me saying, Give us flesh that we may eat. I am not able to bear all this people alone because it is too heavy for me." Num. xi. 13, 14. "And the Lord said unto Moses, Say unto the people, I will give you flesh and ye shall eat not one day, not two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days. But a whole month until it came out at your nostrils, because ye have despised the Lord which is among you, and have wept saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?" Num. xi. 19-20. For 40 long years the children of Israel wandered about in the wilderness of Sinai, almost within reach of the warm rays of God's sunlight that gladened the beauty and richness of Canaan's promised land to which God desired to lead them and yet they knew it not. Still they murmured and wandered on, provoking God and wounding the heart and crushing out the spirit and life of Moses their leader by their ceaseless murmurings. Oh, what a sad history these 40 years brought to that faithless, complaining and wandering people. Even the life of Moses was warped and his sweet and trusting spirit yielded to words of murmur and complaint. Sad indeed is the fact, that of all the vast multitude of Israelites that God safely marched to the other shore and saw the waters of the mighty sea close over the horse and the rider of their pursuing enemies and that listened to the sweet song of deliverance as they came from the joyous lips of Moses and Mariam, none save Caleb and Joshua were permitted to enter the promised land. Not even Moses, their leader was permitted to enter that fair country for they angered him at the waters of strife so that it went ill with Moses for their sake." Psa. cvi. 32. For many long years Moses lead the children of Israel in the wilderness land as God's servant. But finally patience gave way as he heard the murmurings of the people, and he also sinned against God, thereby preventing him from entering Canaan. Yet God took him to the top of Mount Pisgah, and for a time lifting the veil, permitting him to view the promised land, and then the scene vanished from his sight and with the rock for his pillow and the blue sky for his covering, he lay down to die, and God buried him. The mountain cloud which night hung round him was his only shroud, and the thunder of the passing storm his only dirge. There he sleeps while centuries roll by, his grave unknown and unvisited by man. Even after that people entered Canaan they did not cease to wander from God, calling for another leader as king, and God answered their request and cursed them with Saul as their king. Still they wander and murmur until their harsh voices and loud footsteps are heard echoing along the corridors leading to Pilate's hall, and their rough voices cry out, "Away with him, away with him, we will have no other king but Cesasr." John xix. 15. Then Pilate delivered him unto them, and they took Jesus and lead him away to be crucified and the dark night of Gentile rule closed over that people and land, their beautiful temple burned, their city destroyed, the people scattered among all countries, to be a by word and a hissing among all nations until this age shall close.

As the Church looks back upon the wanderings of the children of Israel, noting the many crooked paths they made in the wilderness, and the lack of faith in God, their deliverer, we cry out, O, how discontented and unfaithful? Yet how much more contented, how much more faithful are we, how much closer to God do we walk than did they? Let us see.

As the song of deliverance had hardly left the lips of Mariam and before Moses had returned from Sinai with the law, even while the base of the quaking mountain yet tottered by the power of the passing earthquake as it went marching by, they had wandered from God and changed the "similitude of their God to that of an ox that eateth grass." Even so, the words of praise and joy that filled Mary's soul as she ran to tell of the empty tomb and the risen Lord, had not echoed far out over Judean hills, neither had God's law as given by Peter on the day of Pentecost mingled with the same feeling that saddened the heart of Moses as he dashed to the earth the two tables of stone, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel." Gal. i. 6.

Although God gave the children of Israel, Moses, a true, loving, faithful leader, even a type of Christ, they murmured and complained, so we murmur and complain when we should rejoice in him as our Leader and King. Although God gave the children of Israel manna from heaven, yet they murmured and cried out for meat, and God gave them their desire to the full and sent leanness to their soul. Christ also as John declares has offered us the true bread of which their was only a type, yet have we not seen many a one with longing heart look back into the world, and in sadness of soul cry out for the pleasures of earth as they did for the flesh pots of Egypt, and has it not brought leanness to their lives and death to their souls thereby filling many a grave in the wilderness of an unknown land? Have you not seen many in the church lay aside the garments of salvation that need not wax old with the wearing and cast aside the robe of righteousness they once received and don the gay attire of the ball room, and again dance with the gay and thoughtless world? Oh, the privileges of the high calling the church might receive and forever possess. Many of its members will find their graves in the wilderness of complaint and doubt, while but few, the Calebs and Joshuas will "enter the rest that remaineth for the people of God."

While the Jews were forbidden to touch the mountain where God revealed his glory and power, Paul declares in the 12th of Hebrews, We are come to Mount Zion (that may be touched), the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and yet we murmur and hesitate to enter in. Let us take heed that we by our murmuring, backbiting and complaining, do not crush out of the heart the bright, happy and joyous spirit of some Moses that may be lovingly leading the people to a better land, so that we anger him and it go ill with him for our sake. Oh, if by our murmuring we must loose the blessing and the pleasant land God offers us. Let us not drag a Moses with us, but let us labor more faithfully than ever before and strive to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God, lest we fall after the same example of unbelief as did the children of Israel in their wandering from God.

The Book of Daniel.

CHAPTER 9.

1. In the first year of Darelos, the son of Asoneseros, (from the seed of the Medes, and who had become king over a kingdom of Chaldaioi.

2. I Daniel understood in the books the number of the years, a word of the Lord namely that occurred unto Hieremias the prophet, unto the completion of the desolation of Hierousaleem, to be seventy years;

3. And I gave my face unto the Lord to seek out votive-prayer and supplications with fastings and sackcloth.

4. And I offered votive-prayer unto the Lord my God, and I confessed and I said, O Lord, thou great and wondrous God, thou who dost watch to guard thy covenant and thy mercy for those who love thee and who watch to guard thy commandments.

5. We have sinned, we have done iniquitously, we have transgressed and stood away (apostatized) and inclined away from thy commandments and from thy judicial-renderings (verdicts).

6. And we have not hearkened unto thy bond-servants the prophets, who were talking in thy name unto our kings and our rulers and our fathers and unto all the laity of the land.

7. Thine, O Lord, is the righteousness and ours the shame of face, as it is today, our man of Jouda and our people who dwell in Hierousaleem and all our Israael, those near and those afar in all the earth where thou hast scattered them in their faithlessness in which they proved faithless.

8. In thee, O Lord, is our righteousness and in us is the shame of the face, and in our kings and our rulers, and our fathers, in us who were sinning against thee; the feelings of pity and the feelings of favor are the Lord our God's because we did stand away.

10. And did not hearken to the voice of the Lord our God to go our way in his laws, which he gave before our face at the hand of his bond-servants the prophets.

11. And because all Israael evaded thy law, and inclined out from hearkening to thy voice; and because the curse had come upon us, and the oath written in a law of Moousees, a bond-servant of God, because we had sinned against it.

12. And he had established his words which he had talked to us and to our judges, who were judging us, to lead upon us great evils, such as had not occurred beneath all the heavens, such namely as occurred in Hierousaleem.

13. Even as had been written in the law of Mousees, because all these evils had come upon us; and we had not besought the face of the Lord our God, to turn us away from our iniquities, and to give us understanding in all his truth.

14. And the Lord had awakened and led them upon us, because the Lord our God is a just Lord in all his doing which he hath done, and we had not hearkened to his voice.

15. And now, O Lord, our God, thou who didst lead out thy laity out of a land of Aiguptos with a controling hand, and who didst make for thy self a name as it is this day, we have been sinning and we have transgressed.

16. O Lord, thy merciful-doing is in all things, may thine anger and thy wrath have been turned away from thy city Hierousaleem, from thy sacred mount, because we have been sinning, and in our iniquities and their iniquities of our fathers Hierousaleem and thy laity have become a reproach unto all those round about us.

17. And now mayest thou have heard, O Lord our God, the votive-prayer of thy bond-servant and his supplications, and mayest thou have manifested thy countenance over thy sanctuary that is laid waste; for thine own sake.

18. Mayest thou have inclined thine ear, O my God and hearkened; mayest thou have opened thine eyes and seen our desolation and the desolation of thy city, upon which thy name hath been invoked; because not on account of our own acts of righteousness do we cast our plea for pity before thee, but on account of thy many feelings of pity, O Lord.

19. Mayest thou have hearkened, O Lord, mayest thou have become favorable, mayest thou have heeded. Do not tarry for thine own sake, O my God, because thy name hath been invoked upon thy city and upon thy laity.

20. And while I was still talking and offering votive-prayer and discoursing my sins and the sins of my laity Israael, and casting my sense of mercy before the Lord my God in behalf of the sacred mount.

21. Even while I was yet talking in the votive-prayer, lo, a man Gabriel, even him whom I saw in the vision, the authority (vision) namely, flying; and he touched me about the hour of the evening-sacrifice.

22. And he made me to understand, and he talked with me and he said; Daniel now I have come forth to instruct thee in an understanding-way.

23. To the full extent of thy supplication did word go out, and I have come to tell thee, because a man who longeth to know art thou; and do thou apprehend in the oracular-spoken way and understand in the seeing-way.

24. Seventy periods of seven have conjointly determined (cut off in one piece) in respect to thy laity and in respect to the sacred city, in which to consummate sin and to seal up sins and to wipe away the iniquities and to expiate iniquities and to lead everlasting (or age-lasting) righteousness and to seal up vision-way and prophet and to anoint a saint of saints.

25. And thou wilt comprehend and understand that from the going forth of a word to make answer and to build Hierousaleem unto an anointed (a Christ) leader there are seven periods of seven and he will return and public-square and wall will have been built, and the definite-periods will have been emptied out.

26. And after the sixty-two periods of seven ointment (or unction) will have been utterly destroyed (meaning the Levitical form of it) and there is no judgment (or verdict) in it; and the city and the sanctuary will corruption destroy along with the Coming Leader; (the Christ meant). They will be cut off in a flood (of corrupt iniquity) and unto the end of a war that hath been conjointly-determined, he (God) will arrange for desolations.

27. And he (God) will enable a covenant for many for one period of seven (early Christianity); and in the half of this seven-period my sacrifice and libation will be taken away, and upon the temple-site there will be an abomination of the things that desolate, (an idolatrous temple probably the Mosque of Omar meant). And until a consummation of a definite period a consummation will have been allowed for the desolating influence.

COMMENT.

I was recently asked to make a translation of a portion of this chapter, namely from the 24th to the 27th verses, both inclusive and it was published and along with it was also given eleven other translations of the same passage by the most noted scholars and commentators of Europe and America; and no two of them agreed even substantially in their thought, to say nothing of the wording of it. I speak of this to show what difficulties have been encountered by students of God's Word in interpreting and trying to get at the truth herein revealed.

In the light of past church history the meaning of what was revealed to Daniel by the angel Gabriel seems to me reasonably clear as I have translated it above—at least that portion of the prophecy which has already been fulfilled in the first coming of "the Saint of saints" or the Christ, and the experiences of early Christianity down to the Latin and Greek—church apostasy. We are also seeing "the River Euphrates dried up," in the growing weakness of the Turkish Empire and the long-prevailing, and wide-spread Moslem abomination. With the culmination of the 2400 days (not 2300 as given in all the versions) which is still in the future, we can confidently look for "the return" spoken of in this passage, the return of the Christ namely and the fulfilment of the rest of this prophecy, or "the restoration of Israel" and the "cleansing of the sanctuary."

Summary of Abraham's Faith.

Abraham is the father of all them who believe, and who walk in the steps of that faith which he had while yet uncircumcised. This is the apostle's testimony. I think I need scarcely add, yet it may be useful to do so, that no one can walk in the steps of Abraham's faith who does not believe the same things. This is self evident. It is to be to Abraham according to his faith; and this is the rule for every one else. If we have an understanding faith in the truth, we shall inherit the truth; but if we believe in what is not true, and therefore visionary, we shall inherit nothing but the whirlwind. Now, if it be asked, "What is the truth?"—the answer is, the things which Abraham believed, with the acknowledgement that Jesus is the Seed spoken of in the promises made to him. It is therefore essential to our salvation that we be familiar with the matters of his faith. I would just remind the reader here, that Abraham was justified because he believed on God. This does not mean, because he believed in the existence of God. This is implied. To believe in God in the Scripture sense is the "being fully persuaded that what He has promised He is also able to perform;" and because this was the case with Abraham, "therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness." Furthermore, this does not consist in saying, "whatever it is God has promised I know not, but of this I am persuaded, He will perform it." This is not the sort of persuasion God accepts. He requires men to acquaint themselves first with what He has promised, and then to consult the testimony He has given until they are fully persuaded as Abraham was, "Now," says the apostle, "it was not written for Abraham's sake alone, that his full persuasion of the divine promise was counted to him for righteousness; but for us also to whom it shall be imputed if we believe on God." In studying the life of Abraham his biography presents him—

1. As an idolator under condemnation with the world;
2. As a believer of the gospel preached by an angel of the Lord;
3. As justified from all past sins by faith in its promises; and
4. As justified by works unto eternal life.

These four particulars are affirmable of all Abraham's spiritual children. Born of the flesh they are all denizens of the world, and heirs of condemnation; then they believe the gospel; afterwards they are justified by faith from past sins; and subjected to a subsequent probation by which their faith is tried and made perfect. .....It is not the instant a man believes that he is justified. A man may believe the truth for many years, and yet not be the subject of the righteousness of God. If so, it may then be asked, when is a man's faith in the truth counted to him for remission of sins? The scriptures say that through Jesus is now preached the remission of sins to those who believe the gospel of the kingdom; and that justification by faith is through his Name, that is, God has appointed an institution through which remission of sins is communicated to believers of the things of the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus: so he has caused a general proclamation to be made, that "through Christ's name" believers may obtain the remission of sins. Now, there is but one way for a believer of the gospel to take this name, to wit, by being "baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." The answer to the question, then, is this, that "a man's faith in the gospel is counted to him for righteousness in the act of being baptized into the name. There is no other way than this; and even a believer of truth will die in his sins unless he puts on this name, "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12.....If a man believe and obey the gospel his past sins are forgiven him in Christ; but, if after this he walk in the course of the world, his faith is proved to be dead, and he forfeits his title to eternal life. But if on the other hand, a man, become an adopted son of Abraham, and "by a patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory, honor, and immortality" he will find everlasting life in the Paradise of God.—Selected by Mrs. C. W. Russel.

Forbearance and Toleration.

If the peculiarities of our feelings and faculties be the effect of variety and excitement through a diversity of organization, it should tend to produce in us mutual forbearance and toleration. We should perceive how nearly impossible it is that persons should think and feel exactly alike upon any subject. We should not arrogantly pride ourselves upon our virtues and knowledge, nor condemn the errors and weakness of others, since they may depend upon causes which we can neither produce nor readily counteract. No one, judging from his own feelings and powers, can be aware of the kind or degree of temptation or terror, or the seeming incapacity to resist them, which may induce another to deviate.—Abernethy.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

THE news from the east the past week has been tame compared with other times. The peace talk still continues. In Manchuria there is a halt in operations. The Japanese navy has taken the island just north of Japan that has been a Russian penal colony for some years. France and Germany do not now talk of war over the Morroco affair. Sweden and Norway are in a fair way to adjust matters. There is still much disturbance in Russia, but it is quieter than a week ago.

Consummation of our Hope.

Beloved, for some time I have been applying the Divine plumbline as faithfully as I knew how. And I sincerely hope that we have all been lopping off suckers that were sapping our spiritual vitality, and may be, defiling the the temple God desires to dwell in,—and laying aside weights and renouncing things which hinder growth in God's favor, and are approaching nearer to that state of mind implied in the words of the Spirit which says: "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." This implies that we have to ask ourselves before doing a thing, if it be for God's glory, or merely for our own gratification. If we are making no progress in this direction, we were better off if we never had heard the Word of life. The Word will judge us. Hoping better things for us, than this, I want to call attention to the consummation. It reaches away beyond trials, beyond suffering, beyond faith, beyond mortality,—to realization, to enjoyment. As a foundation for remarks I have chosen 1 Epistle of John iii. 2, 3, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now, are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear, it is not yet seen, what we shall be,—but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, and every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." There are many points of great importance here that can have but a passing notice. First, we are sons now,—because Gal. iii. 26 says, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." We are legal children, and are in consequence

HEIRS OF GOD;

and have the spirit of adoption and have the right to call God our Father. See Rom. viii. 15, and Gal. iv. 6. Secondly, it doth not yet appear what we shall be. Our nature has not yet been changed,—the life to come for us, is for the time being concealed with Christ in God. Col. iii. 4. And we learn from Rom. viii. 18 that there is glory to be revealed in us; we are to be glorified with Christ, and appear with him in glory. So that the life and glory are ours now: we are entitled to it, it belongs to us, but it is not yet possessed. But the word glory in this connection gives but a faint idea of what we shall be; it does not yet appear, is not yet seen; but we do know that we shall be made like to his most glorious body; yes, like him, in life, light, bliss,—like him, in honor, power and glory; our brightest apprehensions of him now, are dim; but it will not always be so! The beloved John we see begins this chapter by expressing admiration of the height, depth, length and breadth, the excellency, the sovereignty and riches of that love which the Father hath bestowed upon us. The gospel of this John used to be called the gospel of the FATHER, because that endearing epithet is about 70 times applied to God in the course of it. We can trace the same spirit and the same pen in the three epistles that bear his name. The world has a vulgar, coarse eye, that can only see the gaud and glitter of this present evil world. But that makes no difference; it is true for all that, that we are the sons of God, so that we must not allow the world's denial of our relationship to interfere with the comfort of hope. Let the world deny that we are if they want to; let its gibe and sneer strike us; let its reproaches fall upon us, but they must not be allowed to shake our conviction that we are sons of God. Faith is the basis of the things we hope for,—and this is just what the world does not have; for this reason we must be patient. Having no eye of faith, of course they cannot be expected to see what we do. We must not expect them to know us. Indeed we should be glad they in their present condition do not know us, because they do not know the Father, nor the Son. But what glorious company are these, for sinners saved by grace! What associates for those once under the law of sin and death. If they be for us, what does it matter who are against us?

SONS OF GOD

To all intents and purposes these words in 1 John iii. 2, "We shall see him as he is," express the same thing, give expression to the same hope as those of Paul in Titus ii. 13, "Looking for that blessed hope,—that is, waiting for the blessed hope even the appearing of the glory of our

GREAT GOD AND SAVIOR

Jesus Christ, who gave himself on our behalf, that he might redeem us from all lawlessness, and cleanse for himself a peculiar people, devoted to good works." And this again is only another way of expressing the hope cherished by David a thousand years before:—"As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I will be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." These words constituted the comfort of David in the midst of his troubles; he lifted up his head in times of sorest distress, and disclosed the fact that the hope he cherished centered in redemption from death. He was surely going into the sleep of death; and was just as certain that he would awake out of it,—and that he would then be for ever beyond all the evils and trials incident to mortals; because, in the 16th Psalm he sings concerning this matter, "I foresaw"—saw beforehand,—a thousand years before it happened—"I foresaw the Lord always before my face,—for he is on my right hand that I should not be moved." You see it was faith that reached forward and brought these things near to him, when the Spirit revealed the histor in advance. And he goes on to say, "Therefore," because of this advance intelligence, "therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad moreover, also my flesh shall rest in hope;" when it goes into the grave that will not be the last of it: because here follows the reason of his joy: "Because thou wilt not abandon my life in hades, nor give up thy holy one to see corruption. Thou didst make known to me the ways of life; thou wilt make me full of joy with thy countenance." We are sometimes told by popular religionists that the Old Testament saints knew nothing about resurrection life. The divine evidence has just been given you that they did. David says to the Almighty, "Thou hast made known to me

THE WAYS OF LIFE."

And then he explains how it is to be done. The grand secret of the whole matter is found in the words, "Thou wilt not suffer thine holy One to see corruption." On discovering that his greater Son was going to conquer death, and rise triumphantly, the glorious idea seized him that this was also his way out of death's dominion. And Peter rehearses this matter in his model sermon on the day of Pentecost,—saying of David, "Therefore being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ that he was not left in hades, neither his flesh did see corruption." Seeing the way out of death to life thrown wide open to him, no wonder he adds, "Thou shalt make full of joy with thy countenance." Returning to the 17th Psalm a moment,—he says, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; his faith being imputed to him for righteousness. I shall be satisfied, when I awake in thy likeness." How far removed is this, from the teaching of the day? Not when he dies,—not when he sleeps the sleep of death,—but when he awakes with thy likeness, will he be satisfied. Considering that this was uttered 3000 years ago, and,—considering that he who uttered them was David, a king upon a powerful throne, ruled a mighty people,—a loyal people,—was popular with them,—and received an allegiance rarely interpreted,—yet there was nothing in all this that satisfied him; he is not satisfied with the applause of his people, the splendors of a palace, the power of a great sceptre, the allegiance of a loving people, the defence of a great army,—he looks away to the future, not as a blessing for the present,—royal as he was, he had a hope of something better. The life he had was but a vapor; it may be puffed out any moment,—but the God of Israel had sworn to raise up from the dead a Holy One, of his Seed, who should occupy the throne of Israel for ever, and of his kingdom there should be no end; and that he himself should be a witness of it, by a life from the dead through that same seed of his, and this glorious reign shall be universal as well as everlasting,—all kings would bow to him, and that this promised Son of his should reign before the ancients gloriously,—he, David himself being one of them; this intimates the cause of David's dissatisfaction with all the splendor of his exalted position.

Returning to my text,—I call attention to its wording. At first sight it looks as if our seeing him as he is will be the cause of our being like him, or similar to him. But this cannot be, because all the fulness of the Godhead, now dwells in Jesus bodily; and only the pure in heart shall see God; and we learn in 1 Thess. iii. 4, that at the sound of the trump of God the dead in Christ first rise,—then the living ones in Christ we are told 1 Cor. xv. 52, will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, that together with the raised ones they will meet the Lord in the air. Conclusive evidence of change before they meet him. He knows them that are his. His issues, his commands to the angels to gather his saints unto him,—who have made a covenant with him by sacrifice. It is of the greatest moment to realize the condition; and that we must not expect to reap without sowing. The purifying process must go on; or else we will not see him, nor be made like him. Brethren and Sisters, I feel bound to speak again of the Glad Tidings that the pure in heart will see him; a most gracious and saving clause for poor, short-sighted mortals like us. If perfect purity of thought, word and conduct were exacted of us, we would all be left out; we would be irretrievably lost, with our biased organisms,—and peculiar temperaments; but the goodness and mercy of God has taken all this into account; and if he sees that in spite of all our short-comings, from the bottom of our hearts we love him,—and are heading in the right direction, and, are ourselves grieved when we realize that we have grieved him, and avail ourselves of the All-Powerful Advocate with the Father, he freely forgives us, and allows us to call him Father still. Speaking for myself, I will say, it is solid comfort to me to know that he to whom all judgment has been committed has been fitted for that exalted position by partaking of our nature and by being tried in all points like as we are; and is familiar with the inmost recesses of my heart, notwithstanding many weaknesses. Oh, I thank God, and magnify his holy name, because the Judge of all the earth will do right; a righteous Judge will he be, and cannot be turned aside.

As our eyes alight upon the Words of the Spirit, if we did not know to the contrary we would suppose that they express the hope of all who pass by the name of Christian. This Epistle has come to us from God through his servants,—and John speaking for himself and all of his faith, says "We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." They contain not the slightest intimation of any other blessed hope, and yet the solemn fact confronts us that not one professing Christian in ten thousand cherishes the hope that he did, who once leaned on Jesus' breast, and received such marvelous revelations from heaven after the ascension of his Lord. They all cherish hopes of some kind doubtless,—but in view of the fact that John's hope as here expressed agrees with Paul's in Titus ii. 13, 14,—and in view of the fact that Paul distinctly says there is but one hope, it is extremely painful to think of the consternation of those who expect recognition because they sincerely hoped for what has not been set before them. Painful,—ah, painful indeed! He will say to them, "I never knew you; depart!" With one heart and voice let us praise and magnify the name of the Lord that he hath shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, and so enable us to lay hold of the

in the gospel. And one of the chief aims of this service is to incite one another not to let go of it,—to cling to it as a wrecked sailor clings to the last plank; and thats just what it is to us;—the very last plank. If we let the things we have heard and believed slip away from us; let things of the world seep into us and force the things of the Spirit out of us, we will do despite—insult—the Spirit of grace; we will trample on the Son of God; we will esteem the blood of the covenant as a common thing; for if we voluntarily sin; of choice sin after having received the knowledge of the truth, there is no longer a sacrifice left for sin,—but some terrible expectation of judgment which is about to consume the opponents. And then the Spirit graciously reminds us that any one having violated a law of Moses, died without mercy by the mouth of two or three witnesses,—but that those who do despite to the Spirit of favor deserve a much sorer punishment than that. This explains to us why the beloved Paul sacrificed everything dear to him in order to secure a resurrection out from among the dead, like Christ was; he wanted to experience the power of Christ's resurrection; and then he explains that in order to attain to that by and by, it is necessary to fellowship his sufferings, —that is, to share his sufferings now. and the extent of this fellowship of Christ's sufferings is also indicated, as conformity to the very death of Christ; compliance with the death of Christ. This is something he was in danger of every day, indeed he was stoned at Iconium and dragged out of the city being supposed to be dead, but as he afterward wrote to Timothy, the Lord delivered him out of it all. And this being the condition of things he had to sit down and count the cost of a resurrection out from among the dead,—and be ready for it; and so he deliberately threw overboard everything naturally dear to him! But after all that, he says, "Not that I have already received it, or have been already perfected, but I pursue it, if indeed I may lay hold on that for which I was laid hold on by Christ. Brethren, I do not reckon myself to have attained it; but one thing I do,—even forgetting the things behind, and stretching forth towards the things future. I press along the line, towards the prize of

THE HIGH CALLING

of God by Christ Jesus. The prize of the high calling is what we want to make prominent to-day. This has inspired the faithful all down the ages. We learn from Jude that Enoch the seventh from Adam had a bright vision of the Lord Jesus coming with holy myriads of saints to rule the world in righteousness, and of course he hoped to be one of them; how could he help it? What other object would he have in walking with God after being told the Good News? And Noah the preacher of righteousness surely had some prize to offer as inducement to faith and its obedience; and Abraham through the eye of faith that justified saw the day of the Anointed One and was gladdened by it; and so also David tuned his harp and sang joyously of the time when he should come down like rain upon the mown grass, as showers that water the earth, and all kings should fall down before him and all nations serve him, —till his cup was full and running over with the thought that the whole earth was to be filled with God's glory. And Isaiah caught a glimpse of the Wonderful Counsellor, the Prince of Peace, as also the virgin-born One, the Man of sorrows, but the Lamb led to the slaughter and the wreath of thorns about his brow so darkened his intrinsic glory that the prophet could scarcely believe it was he. Another celebrated his birthplace hundreds of years before he was born, "Bathlehem Ephratah." Another closed the prophetic age with the prediction,—"Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings," and another, "The desire of all nations shall come." In short the subject of

OUR BLESSED HOPE,

the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to clothe his priests and kings with salvation is, and always was, the ultimate object of the groaning creation. And it is no wonder that Bible Christians long to see Jesus as he is. He has suffered so much, done so much, said so much and promised so much and given them the earnest of so much, that it has become with them the established spiritual instinct, to desire to see him whose blood cleanseth from all sin,—and by whose stripes they are healed,—to hear one word from the lips of him who spake as never man spake,—to draw near and sit like Mary, not at the feet of the awful sufferer, but at the feet of him who is crowned King of kings and

LORD OF LORDS,

—see him whose words are like waves of music on the shores of every land, —whose love even angels cannot fathom, and which the experience of eternity will not be able to exhaust. Blessed Expectancy! Precious Assurance!! We shall see him; and not only see him,—we shall not only see him, but we shall see him just as he is; not as he was,—just as he is; and glory be to the Father through the Son—even this is not all, either, we shall be like him! If we get there. It will pay you to turn the words, As he is, over in your minds occasionally. Some few of the Redeemed Host will have seen him as he was. What a sad and sickening sight! Pierced with griefs, the Man of sorrows,—what a prophetic name! As if his whole person were saturated with sorrows as the earth is saturated with heavy morning dews,—Yes; Man of sorrows, buffetted, wounded, nailed to the tree, laid in a stranger's grave. Thousands saw him as he was,—and I thank God for it. If we see him as he is,—it would appear that every trace of what he was will not be obliterated. But the was will be transparent through the is. John saw in the midst of the throne as it had been slain. So that is the Divine Purpose that the past shall be traceable even amid the splendors of the present; we will see Calvary, Gethsemane and the cross, and the Man of sorrows, but irradiated with the glory of God. I thank God for this wonderful feature in the kingdom of heaven; and I think you will join with me, in this, when reminded of what the Purpose of it is, by quoting the song that will be sung on the occasion of the inauguration celebration—they sing, says John, our witness:—a new song—it never could have been sung before, for want of such occasion,—It was as follows:—"Thou art worthy to take the book and open the seals thereof, for and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation,—and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." And the next verse says ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands say with loud voices, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom and strength, and glory, and blessing." And this is not enough,—the next verse says every creature in heaven, earth and sea will unite in saying, "Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."

A LAMB

What does my text say? It says "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." Truly it does not yet appear what we shall be; but for all that John was permitted to see in advance a symbolic representation of what he will be; and he intended for us to know something about it,—for John was told to write in a book what he was about to see, and send it to the seven churches of Asia,—and it is through them the information has reached us. I will here read from the 10th to the 19th verse of the 1st chapter of the Revelations:—

"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea. And I turned to see the voice that spake to me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; and in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars; and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword; and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth, and was dead and behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death. Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter."

What a marvelous description! Is this the person we have been saying we know we shall resemble when he appears? Great God! Is this what Paul had in mind when he said we look for the Lord Jesus from heaven who shall change this vile body, that, it may be fashioned like unto

HIS GLORIOUS BODY?

Can it be the Divine Purpose that these poor worms of earth shall ever be like him whose voice was a trumpet, and whose appearance caused the the beloved John to fall at his feet as dead? In answer, I say again, this is a symbolic representation of the Son of God's majestic and awful presence when he comes; it is positively not a literal representation of him; because the first verse of the book of Revelation says that Jesus Christ sent and signified it, by his angel unto his servant John. To signify, is to make known by signs,—to communicate by token, gesture or symbols. But although not literal, the symbols were of such imposing character, and the effect of them on the apostle so marked, that the person represented will certainly have most imposing presence. Myriads of redeemed ones cast their crowns at the feet of him who redeemed them, saying, Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto our God; unto him be glory and thanksgiving and praise for ever and ever. What a sight to witness! Before his presence sin, sorrow, death will gradually disappear. The mock sceptre will have blossomed into the sceptre of the world, the wreath of thorns will have become the crown of glory. And oh, if we get there, we shall see him as he is, because we at present can only see him through the medium of faith, the evidence of things not seen. Peter says, "Whom having not seen, we love, in whom, though now we see him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." This conveys the idea that we have a faint likeness, but it is calculated to fill with joy, nevertheless; but remember, our capacity for seeing is limited now; because as Paul says, we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. But the medium will be changed by and by,—we shall not see by the eye of faith, then, but in the clear light of everlasting noontime we shall see him as he is,—it will be a sight so magnificent that we will count all sights worthless, and all things pale, and all beauty deformed, and all excellency dross in comparison of the excellence of him who is the chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely one!

In closing allow me to remind you that if we appropriate the language of the text, we must not forget the fact that we are only as yet,—that we have now to prove our fitness to rule the world in righteousness, by ruling ourselves. May God help us to remember that we are on probation, and what probation means. If we cannot rule one we will never be allowed to misrule many. Yes; may God help us to remember this and be ready for the appearance that means so much of glory and honor to overcomers. Wonderful day! A day without a cloud, a day without a sorrow, a day without a pain,—or tear or sigh. If faithful we will realize as never before possible,—that it has paid to be good soldiers, paid to fight the good fight of faith; paid to deny ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly desires and live soberly, righteously and godly in this evil world,—because the spoils belong to the victors. There is no guess-work about this. We have a despatch from the throne of the universe saying that each overcomer shall sit with Jesus on his throne.

CANDIDATES FOR CROWNS

WHAT A DESTINY!

What a prospect? What a prize to hold out for us; kings and priests to God and reign upon the earth. What an inheritance! Incorruptible, undefiled. It fadeth not away! These characteristics, apply to all its elements—bodies with no tendency to corruption,—faculties exalted so that we can take hold of the infinite source of all knowledge, and wisdom, society with immortals radiant with life, and light, and praise,—dominion over all the earth, honor, wealth, renown and joy our portion. To this may be added a smiling paradise,—its valleys jubilant with right-eous mirth,—health, blessing and plenty crowning all lands with joy, and time will not dim the glory, nor weaken the zest,—then shall there be glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men. But I might speak for hours of millenial blessedness, but it would be nothing without the central Figure! Beloved, if we get there, we shall see Jesus,—the blessed Jesus,—the very Jesus who died and rose again for us; and glory to God.—this is not all,—we shall be made like him, and reign with him evermore. With one heart and voice today, let us say with the beloved John, Quickly come, Lord Jesus. Amen.

Abram's Sacrifice.

The morning sun rose bright and clear,
On Abram's tent it gaily shone;
And all was bright and cheerful there,
All save the Patriarch's heart alone.

When God's command arose to mind
It forced into his eye a tear,
His soul was chaste and all resigned,
Yet nature fondly lingered there.

The simple morning feast was spread,
And Sara at the banquet smiled;
Joy o'er her face its hues spread,
For near her sat her only child.

The mother raised a speaking eye,
For all a mother's soul was there;
She feared the desert drear and dry,
She feared the savage lurking there.

Abram beheld and made reply,
On him from whom our blessings flow,
My helpmeet we by faith rely.
'Tis God's command and we must go.

The duties soon in haste obeyed,
The steps were lifted, the asses prepared
And with the third day's twilight shade
Moriah's lofty hill appeared.

When on the mountain's brow they stood,
With smiling wonder Isaac cries,
My Father! lo, the fire and wood,
But where's the lamb for sacrifice?

The Holy Spirit stayed his mind,
While Abram answered low and calm,
With steady love and look resigned,
God will himself provide a lamb.

But lo! the father bound his son,
And laid him on the funeral pile,
And then stretched forth his trembling hand,
And took the knife to slay his child.

But when he raised the blade full high,
To execute his God's command,
An angel's voice as from the sky,
Cries, 'Abram, spare thine only son.'

Now, let no pen profane, like mine
On hallowed themes too rashly dare,
Turn to the Book of books divine,
And read the sacred promise there.

Ages on ages rolled away,
At length the time appointed came,
When on the mountain Calvary,
God did provide himself a Lamb.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 5.

Dear brothers and sisters:

At last our meeting we learned of Saul of Tarsus, while at Paphos, appearing before the Proconsul with his companions Barnabas and John Mark. Saul had been summoned here by the Roman Governor, and he had boldly spoken the word of the Lord to the Proconsul, Sergius Paulus, exposing one of this magistrate's teachers, and causing him to become temporarily blind; this testimony given by Paul had secured from the magistrate both his favor and admiration; to Paul's companions these circumstances seemed very favorable to continue their work at Paphos, especially so, just at that moment when, with the conversion of the Governor of the Island, the Apostles had gained an unexpected and powerful ally to the great cause, and besides this Sergius Paulus was to remain but a few months longer in office, and so they opposed Paul in his wishes to leave; but Paul, who had since the departure from Antioch merely accompanied Barnabas from one Synagogue to another, while in Cyprus, had the conviction that God had not destined him for the audiences, for he says: I am ordained a preacher and apostle, a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity. 1 Tim. ii. 7. So here we see one of Paul's strong points of Christian character, he would listen to no voice, but that of God, so he then took a band in the guidance of the band, and bade his fellow missionaries to turn their eyes toward the neighboring coasts of Pamphilia, and there seek out not merely other children of Israel, but Pagans as well, who were now ready to receive the gospel message. It may be well to mention the fact here that at this time Saul of Tarsus dropped his Hebrew name of Saul and thereafter became known as Paul.

Their course of travel from Paphos took them across the sea seperating the Island of Cyprus from the coast, through the Bay of Attalia, and up the Cestrus River as far as Perga, lying in the very heart of the lowlands, which are so unhealthy and, with the coming of spring breezes, bring the dangers of fevers; and all sorts of maladies; and as it was about this season of the year the Apostles had come, they found Perga as well as other villages along the coast deserted; it was the custom for the entire villages to climb the mountains as a refuge from the dangers of disease and death during the summer season, these circumstances, however, did not in any way discourage Paul, he set out at once to carry out his first plans to visit Asia Minor, although difficulties faced him in this, at the very start, they must follow a dangerous road across a range of mountains, which would lead along the verge of high precipices, and through passes infested by brigands, while the bridges were carried away with fierce torrents, or, better described, as Paul gives his impressions some years afterward "In perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of my countrymen, in perils in the wilderness," toil and weariness of every sort 2 Cor. ii. 26. To Paul's companion who had been accustomed to all the advantages of a Synagogue and the comforts enjoyed when among the Jewish people this journey, Paul wished them to take seemed appalling, and so it was that John Mark was not willing to risk his life on a journey to preach to the Gentiles, so he departed from them and returned to Jerusalem. But Paul was so resolute in his purpose to go where God had chosen for him to proclaim the Gospel of Christ; although one of but two companions would turn back; in these circumstances we can see how Paul followed Christ, he had the same zeal as when he persecuted the Christian Church, but now his will was subdued by God's will, and his ambition was to carry out the work of his mission—to teach both the Jews and the Gentiles the way of salvation.

Paul and Barnabas traveled for some days over the steppes of Asia Minor, which was a dry and uncultivated land where there were but a few scattered hamlets made up mostly of a simple folk living in huts, and but very few Jews had settled here.

The first place chosen by Paul for public preaching was a large city of commerce called Antioch in Persidia, where there were a number of Jews, also a Synagogue; the people here were composed of Jews, Romans, and Orientals who had mingled their doctrines to the confusion of the multitude. The Israelites, although in a minority had gained a great influence over the people, both religously and in financial interests; the higher class of Gentiles and more especially among the women, were with the Jews very zealous of the Word of God, and at the worship on the Sabbath Day. There were also a number of Proselytes here among the men of Israel. Paul's desire was to proclaim salvation to all men, and so as it was the Jewish custom made it a point of duty to salute the brethren on their arrival and present themselves to the Elders, Paul as "Doctor of the Law," and Barnabas as "Levite." And on the Sabbath after the service was opened they were given an invitation to speak. Paul endeavored to show the people first what God had done for Israel as a nation, how he chose and exalted them while in Egypt, how he had brought them out of Egypt, how he cared for them during the forty years in the wilderness, and that when they desired a king, God gave them David, and from his seed had raised up to them a Savior Jesus, and then the very fact he knew the Jews rejected —the shame of the cross, he held up to them as divine testimony that Jesus was the Messiah, because the Jews, by putting Jesus to death fulfilled the prophecies concerning him. But, that God had raised him from the dead. "Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins. "And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts xiii. 38,39.

We may readily suppose that this sermon was given in much the same manner as Paul says he preached at Corinth, and that it was to the glory of God. "And I brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God; for I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." And I was with you in weakness and in fear, and in much trembling, and my speech and my preaching, was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of Power." 2 Cor. i. 4. For Paul had already won many to the belief of the truth, and before the meeting dispersed there was a general demand that he should continue the same subject before them on the following Sabbath. Paul and Barnabas, no doubt continued to instruct others in the faith during the week they remained in Antioch, for they had many anxious inquirers follow them, and we find that before leaving the city he had founded a zealous Church who had believed the good message even among the opposition and bitter denunciation of their faith, by the Jews; who had become jealous of the great numbers which came to hear Paul on the next Sabbath; while they had labored for some years and had only succeeded in winning a small number after all, and now in eight days a stranger has attracted almost the whole city to listen to the Word of the Lord; their jealouly rose to such a height that Paul was hardly permitted to speak when they contradicted all he said and ridiculed his testimony for Jesus as the way of salvation, heaping blasphemies on His name. All in vain did the Proselytes and Gentiles, deeply touched by such blind hatred, endeavor to testify their good will toward Paul, the fury of the Israelites grew more and more violent. The Apostles, knowing that they could not subdue this outbreak, boldly said to them: To you it behooved us first to announce the Word of God, but since ye reject it and deem yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo, now we go forth unto the Gentiles, "For so the Lord hath commanded us, —I have set thee a light of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be their salvation unto the ends of the earth." Acts xiii. 43-47. When the Jews found that the good news preached by the Apostles was not only received in Antioch but had spread over the surrounding country, they persuaded the Roman rulers that the new preachers were undermining the established order of things, and upon this accusation an order was issued banishing the Apostles from Antioch and from all territory round about. The two exiles, obedient to their Master's command, shook off the dust of their feet against the city and took their departure. However, they left within the city some who did believe and rejoice in the freedom of the gospel of Christ, from the doctrines of the Jewish law, the worship of the sun and moon and other confusing teaching.

Paul and Barnabas also go to other cities to preach the Word, and suffer the same persecution from the Jews, but even more violent than at Antioch. But in these trials they looked to God for strength and help, knowing that he has appointed them to this mission, and he will also be with them in their persecutions. We learn where Paul received his comfort in his letter to Timothy i. 11-12. "Whereunto I am appointed a preacher and an apostle and a teacher of the Gentiles. For which cause I also suffer these things, nevertheless I am not ashamed, for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

After visiting three other cities,—Iconium, Lystra and Derbe, we find them retracing their steps, comforting and encouraging the brethren, at the several cities where they had preached. In all Paul's work and labor of love, he truly proves himself to be an ambassador for Christ; and while in this first missionary journey, he had overcome trials and endured hardships, he was fitting himself for the greater trials of the future, and he did this through Christ who gives us all the victory. So may we take an example of Paul's life and follow him, as he followed Christ.

JENNIE SALISBURY.

The Isolated Brethren.

I frequently receive letters in which writers tell of their isolation from the brethren, and express the desire at some time to be able to meet with the household of faith. Sometimes they say, "We wish you could come and visit us, but though rich in faith, we are not rich in this world's goods, and for the present must forbear that pleasure." Brethren and Sisters of the one faith and hope of the gospel, who can meet as often as you wish in a convenient place of meeting, and have all the means of grace intended for your upbuilding on your most holy faith, have you ever thought what a privilege is yours? You think your burdens are heavy and your trials are sore and grievous, but while you can meet with those of like precious faith, and in those hallowed associations gather spiritual food, strength and encouragement, there are others who have all the trials to bear to which you are subject, who are obliged to plod along by themselves with no human being near upon whom they may cast their burdens or from whose lips they may hear words of interest and sympathy. They eagerly read their Bibles and are familiar with their contents. They also read THE RESTITUTION and send for our literature both for their own confirmation in the faith and to preach the gospel to others by this means. They eagerly watch the signs of the times, looking as they do for that blessed hope and the appearing of the glory of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

Do we make the most of the means which God has placed before us? Do we study our Bibles as earnestly and persistently as we should and they deserve? Do we attend the gatherings of the Church with as much interest, regularity and punctuality as we should? Do we get out of the meetings all that can be had? If not, are we blaming some one else for it? Are we too tired to meet with the brethren and sisters? Did you never rest, physically and mentally, in the gatherings of God's people?

And think of it, too, those assemblies are not intended to be a weight, a burden, a drag. It was the intention that in them God's people should enjoy themselves. And why not? Here is the reading of the exceeding great and precious promises of God by which our faith and hope are to be encouraged. Here is the contemplation of God's great love by which the flame of our affection toward Him and our love for His people is to be kindled. Here is the fervent and intelligent singing of hymns and spiritual songs by means of which the flames of devotion are to be increased. Here is the offering up of prayer in which not only the mind of the leader but all who hear him are lifted into the august presence of the Most High enjoying communion with Him. Here is the proclamation of the gospel as the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, entering as a living and life-giveng force into the minds and hearts of those who hear, quickening, energizing, renewing, and sanctifying all who intelligently yield to its requirements. Here are participation in the bread and the cup in remembrance of the Savior's dying love, and the communion of the body and blood of Christ. Are these things a burden to any of the faith? Such who should find them burdensome can not have entered with their whole heart into the gospel and its privileges. Perhaps they regard these more as a duty to be performed to satisfy an angry God than a privilege given us of a loving Father and attended with blessings of inestimable worth. Or perhaps they have not entirely severed their connection with the world, and are looking back with wishful eyes, as did the children of Israel toward the flesh-pots of Egypt, to the pleasures of sin. They do not, perhaps, consider that the pleasures of sin are but temporary, while the doing of the will of God is attended with profound satisfaction in this life, and has the promise of a nature which shall endure forever. What a privilege to serve God with the whole heart.

We know of those who live in isolation who attend every meeting they can reach. They are seen and heard at our Conference gatherings receiving spiritual food, and making progress in the work of faith and labor of love. For six months they live in the enjoyment of the pleasant memories of association with God's people, and for another six months they live in anticipation of the good they expect to gather at the coming meeting. They do not begrudge the means and time it requires to attend those means of spiritual growth. Their eager attention at the preaching of the Word, their joyful participation at the social gathering, are evidences of their intense interest in matters pertaining to the precious faith.

I would say to the brethren and sisters who may read these lines: When you contemplate a move to better your condition in this world, do not forget or overlook your interest in the world to come. Remember, man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, and a man's wealth consists not exclusively of the things he possesses. You may, by moving far away, become the possessor of 80 or 160 acres more land, but you may deprive yourself of privileges which are of more value than many farms.

Another matter which deserves attention is this: When it becomes necessary to remove to another locality, write an occasional letter to the Church of which you are a member, especially if you have not the privilege of becoming identified with another. By showing an interest in those with whom you were formerly associated you will encourage others and enlarge your own sympathies as well.

Obituary.

We mourn the death of our dear Sister Mrs. M. Cole. She had been ailing for some time. A gradual breaking down of a vigorous constitution, lately a decided change for the worse set in. She bore up bravely, having a fear of being confined to bed and need some one to wait on her. More than a year ago she was mercifully led to the meetings of the Church of God in Salem, Ohio. She had always thought that the Bible could only be understood by Ministers or the learned, but, the simple Gospel of the Kingdom appealed to her, she became a constant attender, an attentive listener, and careful reader of the Bible. She was always very sensitive and retiring, extremely conscientious, had an almost slavish fear that she would do some one an injustice. It took her a long time to find faith and courage to obey the gospel, but when she was baptized on December 8, 1901, she was a thorough convert, Under the influence of the gospel she was steadily adding to her faith, courage, knowledge, etc. No one seemed to enjoy the glad tidings of Salvation more than she, faithful to the last, she was with us at meeting Sunday morning June 25, went home feeling quite sick, was still able to be round the following Monday and Tuesday, retired as usual Tuesday night, was, by her daughter, found dead at her bedside Wednesday morning, June 28, about 6:30. Was born 49 years ago in New Springfield, Mahoning County, Ohio. Married in 1874 and moved to Salem, is survived by husband and three grown children, a son and two daughters. She loved her children, and had much anxiety for their eternal welfare. She had their full love and respect. May they follow in her footsteps to the belief of the gospel. We miss her very much, we are few in number, we love the truth, we love and esteem each other in the Lord. Our loss is great.

The funeral was largely attended. We briefly outlined the blessed hope of our Sister, then laid her to rest in Hope Cemetery. If we are faithful to the end, we hope to meet her in the Kingdom of God.

"The once loved form now cold and dead,
Each mournful thought employs,
And nature weeps, her comforts fled,
And withered are her joys.
Hope looks beyond the bounds of time
When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more."

P. NEILL.

Dear Restitution:

I will say a few words anent Bro. Zilmer's article in refrence to secret societies, which appeared in last issue of THE RESTITUTION. I must say that I was exceedingly pleased with the way the production was written and very glad to see such an article in the paper. And I desire to say also that in my humble opinion no milder term than the word "Excellent," with a big initial letter, can honestly be applied to any of Bro. Zilmer's articles that I have had the pleasure of reading. They have all had the right ring and, in the opinion of the writer of this, have been eminently Scriptural. I hope his article on secret societies will be published in tract form, if so I pledge myself to take at least a dozen copies.

Before closing I desire to add a little, (to what Bro. Zilmer has so well said) in reference to another phase of the secret society question, and it is this: The result of secretism is to unman and make machines or tools of many of those who are members, for, for instance when it comes to voting for men to fill any public position many members of secret societies will vote for a brother, who may be totally unfit to fill the position, in preference to a man who may be eminently qualified in every respect excepting in one particular, (in their opinion) and that is, he is not a secret society brother. By this they simply sacrifice their manhood and better instincts and make themselves mere slaves. And this is not all, for a man who is in business nowdays, has no show when compared with the secret society man; and many business men are members of probably half a dozen secret societies largely for the purpose of bringing grist to their mills. In fact I believe secret societies are running, to a large extent, the government of the civilized portion of the world at the present time.

In closing I wish to remark that I cannot believe that any one who fulfills the obligations of a secret society man has really caught on to the real spirit of Christianity, and I could not imagine one well grounded in the Truth being a member of a secret society. "The Truth shall make you free." A. ROBINSON.

Dear Restitution:—

Wife and I went to Cleveland, Glenville, and Sistersville, W. Va. At Glenville few came besides the brethren, but that we expect, for few indeed seek first the Kingdom of God. However we were much refreshed among those of like precious faith. At Sistersville the weather was hot, we hardly dared hope for any to attend, but every meeting was more or less interesting, some very much so. We commended enquirers to Brother Farley, who will gladly instruct them more fully.

He has no pet hobbies, nor theories. He and Sister Farley stand by what is written. It is refreshing to meet them. Those interested in Sistersville can have from Brother Farley the pure truth to salvation.

I expect to visit the Church throughout Ohio, beginning Monday, July 10. Will be gone about four weeks. Wife will take care of the church in Salem.

May we all strive to grow in knowledge, and the favour of God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

P. NEILL.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to send a few words to the dear ones of like precious faith. We have just entered in upon a time when the trials will be severe and it behoves us dear ones to have our lamps trimmed and burning, not to let the cares of this life choke the words that becomes unfruitful. We must expect to be tested and tried, Paul says, "It is given to us not only to believe but to suffer for his sake, and if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. I am your brother in the Blessed Hope.

Is Abraham's Soul in Heaven?

God said to Abraham, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace." Gen. xv. 15. Theologians often adduce this as proof that Abraham's soul has gone to heaven. But in the first place, nothing is said about Abraham's disembodied soul; and in the second place, not a word is said about heaven. But if theologians are correct in guessing that heaven was meant, and that the soul of Abraham was intended, though not mentioned, one of two shocking conclusions must follow. 1. If Abraham's soul was to go to the souls of his fathers in heaven, heaven must be the receptacle of idolaters, for such were Abraham's fathers. 2. If to escape this conclusion, it should be insisted that Abraham's fathers went to hell at death, then in order for Abraham's soul to be with their souls, his too must have gone to hell. Thus one part of this admits the wicked into heaven, and the other part drives the saints into hell. What is the meaning, then? Evidently the same as in the following text: "I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace." 1 Kings xxii. 20. It is said that David "fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption." Acts xiii. 36. Whatever part went to the fathers, both "fell on sleep" (died) and saw "corruption." The whole verse containing this promise to Abraham reads thus: "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Disembodied souls are not buried, nor can they see corruption, according to modern theology.—Bible Banner.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind.'

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

Do'nt Worry.

Do'nt worry so; it is wrong you know
For the hail will pass and the floods will go,
The thunders roll and the rain will cease
The frightful winds will be at peace
The dainty grass and the grain will grow.
God sends the rain!

He is everywhere and he has a care
For the stately trees and the flowerets fair,
The buttered leaves he will mend again,
And give a joicing in place of pain.
The storm is his and the sun a bright glare,
God sends the rain!

There's naught can befall but for the best it all,
And in direst struits he can bear our call.
As his Word is true he will care for you,
And what he has promised he surely will do.
Trust on! Trust on! Though you drink the gall.
God sends the rain!

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. I have received the following question for our examination from Bro. John Fish, Jr., of Kansas:

"What is your understanding of the meaning, of 1 Cor. xv. 37, particularly the clause, 'Thou sowest not that body that shall be.'

This verse is used by the followers of the World's Hope, to prove the duality of man, and the non-resurrection of the body."

Let us go into a critical investigation of this question, and I feel sure that no honest student can believe in the socalled duality of man and the non-resurrection of the body. Of course, the resurrection of the body would be unnecessary if the separate conscious existence of an immortal soul can be proved. Bible and science harmonize beautifully on this question of life. In order to show this harmony, frequent quotations will be made from a book entitled: "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

How is it Lud? to prove "the non-resurrection of the body," is to prove that no dead body can ever live again, is it not?

Lud. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Does the Bible speak of the resurrection of dead bodies?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. See Isa. xxvi. 19-21: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise, awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

Q. What does this text say lives again?

A. "Dead men."

Q. What are living men made of?

A. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Gen. ii. 7.

Q. When he loseth his life what is he then?

A. A dead man, or dead soul, in place of a "living soul, which "soul" or "man" was made of dust.

Q. When dead, where do we place the dead soul or man?

A. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 19.

Q. When awakened to life, where are they to be found?

A. "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust."

Q. Are those dwellers in dust who shall "awake," called bodies?

A. Yes. "Together with my dead body shall they arise." All their dead bodies, together with his dead body, shall they arise. Hence the World's Hope, and the Bible are as opposite to each other as light is from darkness.

Teacher. But how about the text under consideration, "thou sowest not that body that shall be?"

Albert. That refers to a change taking place in the sown body.

Q. What Scripture have you for that?

A. See Phil. iii. 21: "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Q. While the "vile body" is "changed," it is no longer the same kind of a body is it?

A. No. But it is the same "vile body, which is changed, and not some other creation, which never experienced a change. We don't sow the changed body, and hence, it is true, "thou sowest not that body which shall be," because the body which "shall be," will be the "vile body" "changed." Job asks the question, "If a man die shall he live again?" Shall the identical man who dies (immortal souls don't die) live again? Listen to his answer: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait until my change come." Job xiv. 14. He expected to wait until the "change come," "thou sowest not that body which shall be," because the body that will be, will be a changed body.

Teacher. Where does life come from either the natural, or the natural changed to spiritual? What has science to say? Carrie, what have you to offer?

Carrie. I was reading in "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," that science was divided, as to the origin of natural life. One side takes the view "that matter can spontaneously generate life, while the other affirms that life can only come from pre-existing life."

Q. Have experiments been made to test the truth or falsity of these theories?

A. They have. Dr. Bastian filled glass jars two-thirds full with an infusion of hay and other organic matter, which were boiled to kill all germs of life, and then hermetically sealed, to exclude from outer air, the inside air being for hours subjected to boiling heat to kill all germs in that; therefore, if life did appear, it must spring into being of itself. "In Bastian's experiments, after every expedient to secure sterility, life did appear inside in myriad quantity. He, therefore, argued it was spontaneously generated."

Q. Were any errors detected in this test?

A. Yes. Two of them.

Q. What were they?

A. Dr. Tyndall repeated the same experiment, but to a greater extent, until he was sure the air" was absolutely germless. Here not a vestige of life appeared.

Q. What about the other error?

A. Dr. Dallinger "found among the lower forms of life, the most surprising and indestructible vitality, many animals could survive higher temperatures than Dr. Bastian had applied to annihilate them."

Huxley said that the doctrine of Biogenesis, or life only from life is victorious." Death can never of itself generate life. Spontaneous generation is a failure. "Life can only come from the touch of life."

Spiritual life in man can only come from pre-existent spiritual life; and natural life can only come from pre-existent natural life; natural life cannot generate spiritual life.

Q. Does the Bible teach that the natural and spiritual life are cotemperaneous, and exist at the same time in each personality?

A. No. See 1 Cor. xv. 46: "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual." Before the natural can become spiritual, it must first come in contact with the spiritual life; there is no spontaneous generation of the spiritual life. "Thou sowest not that body which shall be."

Q. Is the spiritual man a development from the natural?

A. By no means. "The spiritual life is a gift of the living Spirit. The spiritual man is no mere development of the natural man. He is a New Creation from above. As well expect a hay infusion to become gradually more and more living, until in the course of its process it reaches vitality, as to expect a (natural) man to become better and better, and thus gain eternal life.

Q. "Of the multitudes who confess Christianity at this hour, how many have clear in their minds the cardinal distinction established by its Founder, between being born of the flesh, and 'born of the spirit?"

A. "This fundamental postulate is persistently ignored. A thousand modern pulpits each week preach spontaneous spiritual generation," which is also 'the leading theology of the religious novels of today."

Q. What law interposes between the natural and the spiritual?

A. It is this, "the spiritual world is guarded from the natural, by a law of Biogenesis—'except a man be born again * * * except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God.' The word is cannot. His admission is a scientific impossibility. Except a mineral be 'born from above'—from the kingdom just above it—it cannot enter the kingdom just above it. And except a man be born 'from above,' by the same law, he cannot enter the kingdom which ranks above the temporal. The intervention of life is a scientific necessity, if a stone, or an animal, or a man, is to pass from a lower to a higher sphere. The plant stretches down to the dead world beneath it, touches its minerals and gases, with its mystery of life, and brings them up ennobled and transformed to the living sphere. The breath of God blowing where it listeth touches with its mystery of life, and bears them across the bridgeless gulf between the natural and spiritual, and endows them with its own high qualities, and develops within them these new and secret faculties, by which those who are born again, are enabled to enter the kingdom of God.

Q. What is the essential difference between the natural and the spiritual man?

A. "The natural man belongs essentially to this present order of things. He is endowed simply with a high quality of the natural animal life. The higher (zoe) life, he has not. "He that hath not the Son hath not life; he that hath the Son hath life—the new zoe life, hid in the Son—"In the vision of the spiritual world, presented in the Word of God, the first thing that strikes the eye is a great gulf fixed. The passage from the natural world to the spiritual world is hermetically sealed on the natural side. The door from the inorganic to the organic is shut, no mineral can open it; so the door from the natural to the spiritual is shut, and no man can open it. The world of natural men is staked off from the spiritual world, by barriers which have never yet been crossed from within. No organic change, no modification of environment, no evolution of character, no progress of civilization, can endow any single human soul, with the attributes of spiritual life."

Q. Why not?

A. Because of an unalterable Scripturally scientific law.

Q. What is that law?

A. "Except a (natural) man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

The Twentieth Century Translation, expresses the thought clearer: "Unless a man owes his birth to water and Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. All that owes its birth to human nature alone is only human, and all that owes its birth to the Spirit is spiritual. Do not be surprised at my telling you that you all need to be born over again. The wind blows where it wills, and you can hear the sound of it, but you do not know where it comes from, or where it goes; and it is the same that owes his birth to the Spirit."

Q. The second birth is a re generation is it not?

A. Yes. "You all need to be born over again."

Q. What did the first birth consist of?

A. The flesh or natural life.

Q. The second?

A. The Spiritual or eternal life.

Q. Then no one can possibly secure the spiritual, only through the medium of re birth?

A. Re cannot. It would be just as sensible to expect the natural life without birth, as to expect the spiritual without birth. Birth is just as essential in the second birth, as in the first.

Q. Who is "to be born" over again?

A. That which was born of flesh.

Q. That is commonly called the body is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. When does this natural or flesh body exchange the natural for the spiritual?

A. See 1 Cor. xv. 44: (Twentieth Century) "That which is sown is an animal body, that which rises is a spiritual body."

Q. Suppose the "animal body," never rises again. how is it to become a "spiritual body?"

A. It never can by any known natural or spiritual.

Q. Then there cannot be much hope in "The World's Hope," which affirms "the non-resurrection of the body?"

A. Such teaching is the negation of all hope. The Christian hope promises life from the dead. The World's Hope no life from the dead. If the dead rise not, then those who went to their rest trusting in Christ, are perished. Which hope shall we trust, "The World's Hope," or the Christian hope. The contrast is all the time between the natural and the spiritual.

Q. What about the immortal soul, the so-called dual part of man? What is its nature said to be, natural or spiritual?

A. Its advocates claims that it always was, and can never have any other life than spiritual.

Q. What kind of life is experienced by re-birth?

A. Spiritual life.

Q. This being the case, then, the soul cannot experience re-birth, can it?

A. No.

Q. What is the doom of all who are not "born again"?

A. "Cannot enter the kingdom of God." Therefore none of these so-called immortal souls can enter the kingdom of God, because they cannot be born again—experience by re-birth a change from the natural to the spiritual life.

Q. Do immortal souls come into being in the first place by birth?

A. We are told not.

Q. Then, tell me, if they have never experienced a first birth, how can they ever be "born over again?"

A. They cannot.

Q. This being the case, then, what show is there for immortal souls to enter the kingdom of God?

A. None whatever.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

The Universal Fatherhood of God.

We hear so much in these days about "the universal Fatherhood of God" that it seems necessary and proper that this proposition should be an analysis and examination.

Fatherhood implies sonship, and sonship involves brotherhood. Fatherhood represents the idea of a begetting, and the relation of the begetter to the begotten. Brotherhood represents the relation of the begotten to each other. Universal Fatherhood would mean the Fatherhood of all, extending to or comprehending the whole number according to this tenet. Those to whom God, is represented as being thus related are the entire number of human beings. Fatherhood may be physical or moral. The Fatherhood under discussion could at best relate to men in a physical sense, and even here it is inappropriate, for 1st, God is not in the Scriptures represented as having begotten anyone born into the world except Jesus; and 2nd, there are very many in the world who have been begotten in total disregard of God's regulation respecting the marriage relation. And when we come to the moral aspect of this question, we encounter still further and greater difficulties. Men are in Scripture represented as being "children of wrath" Eph. ii. 3, and "children of disobedience." Eph. ii. 2; v. 6; Col. iii. 6; Titus iii. 3. Such we are "by nature." As such we are not the children of God, and in that sense God is not our Father. In order, then, that we may be the children or sons of God, something must take place which "nature," whatever she may do for us in other ways, can not do. A change of relation from "children of wrath" and "children of disobedience" to "children of God" must be effected. A figure employed in Scripture is that of adoption. This act brings persons into the relation of sonship with God. How is it accomplished? "By Jesus Christ," as we read Eph. i. 5. Jesus Christ occupies an unique position in the plan of God. He is the Mediator between God and man, God's agent. God sent Him with a message, and we enter into negotiations with God through Him. To ignore Him is to set aside God. No man can come to the Father without Him. God can not and will not recognize any one apart from the Mediator. Whoever has not been adopted unto God by Jesus Christ, no matter what his claims or his intentions, is still outside of the number of God's children.

What is necessary on our part to "become the sons of God"? "Faith in Christ Jesus." See Gal. iii. 26-29. "For ye are all the children of God by Faith in Christ Jesus,.....and if children, then heirs. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. xi. 6. Likewise it is not possible to be or become children of God without faith. Then to establish the postulate of "universal Fatherhood" it will be necessary to prove that all men will have faith. This, however, can not be done by the Scriptures, for these declare emphatically that "not all have faith" (Diaglott). 2 Thess. iii. 2. Therefore if men are children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, and not all have faith, how can it be said that God is the Father of all men? Either there is another way of making men children of God than the one outlined in the Scriptures, or men have ignored God's way and have sought entrance by some other way than by the door. The same facts which destroy the theory of "universal Fatherhood" will also overthrow that other fancy of "universal brotherhood." What is the effect of adopting this pleasing theory? On the surface it may appear very beautiful and attractive and worthy, but when we penetrate a little beneath the play of words, and inquire into its nature and origin, we discover that it is full of the most deadly poison. It renders null and void God's plan of adopting men unto Himself by making them believe that "all have God for their Father—all are brethren," when they have not done one thing that makes men children of Most High. By this arrangement a grave reflection is cast upon the wisdom of God in projecting the plan of reconciliation and adoption, Jesus Christ ruled out as of no consequence whatever, and God's plan effectively set aside. God forbid that we should ever endorse, much less lend a helping hand to such a course of folly.

A. H. ZELMER.

Table Talk.

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Heb. iv. 9.

Therefore take heed brethren lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. We must believe God and obey him if we have any desire to enter in to the rest prepared for us. Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest lest any man fall because of unbelief. If the children of Israel had believed God and had trusted in and obeyed him they would not have had to wander in the wilderness for forty years. It was those who sinned whose carcases fell in the wilderness and to whom he swore that they should not enter because of unbelief. Their trials should be a lesson to us to teach us obedience. Without faith it is impossible to please God. If we have faith in him we will serve and obey him, and our reward is sure, for the meek shall inherit the earth and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Let us therefore come bold unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. For by grace are we saved through faith and that not of ourselves, it is the gift of God. Christ said, Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light. To God be glory through Christ for ever.

ESTHER BURTON.

The fruit of the Spirit. Gal. v. 22, 23, is, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance against such there is no law." And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lust. If we live in the Spirit let us also walk in the Spirit. For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth. Through our Lord Jesus Christ we have access by faith into his grace wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness as always so now also Christ shall be magnified. Who hath also sealed us and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts. In whom we also trusted after that we had heard the Word of truth, the gospel of our salvation in whom also after we believed we were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise.

ANNIE BURTON.

Fruit of the Spirit. Gal. v. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law." Then knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, and for any thing that is contrary to sound doctrine. All that are under the gospel, or do the things that are the fruits of the Spirit have no fear of the law, for rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. If then we fulfil the royal law according to the Scriptures we will not come under the law, for if we love our neighbor as ourself we fulfil the law, for love is the fulfilling of the law. There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God. Sin shall not have dominion over us; and the law was added because of sin, but we are not under the law but under grace or the favor of God and are his children, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God. Dear brothers and sisters, let us do the works of the Spirit, live under favor of God, then our lives will be full of love, joy and goodness and we will have no fear of rulers or powers, for there is no law against good works.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 2, 1905.

YELLOW fever is raging about New Orleans, and the Southern part of the country. Strict measures are being adopted to check it, and prevent its spreading to other places.

THE prospect for peace is not so bright as it was, as the Russian representative declares he is only in attendance for the purpose of learning the terms that Japan will demand. Should this be the extent of his power to act, the Japanese may decline to go on with any further business, and block affairs for the present.

THE programme for the Ohio Conference to be held at Cleveland, is published in this issue. This is the third Conference to be held in Ohio, and the brethren are anxious to have it a success. The only way to make this is to attend and encourage by words of cheer, and contributing to its support. Let all attend who can, and if you cannot go write a few words and send a few dollars to help the work along. The Conferences in Iowa and Illinois are advertized for this month, and we hope will be as enjoyable and profitable as other years have been. The camp ground at Waterloo is a beautiful place, and should attract all who can possibly arrange for it. In Illinois the Bible Institute is to convene on August 7, and this year Brother Lindsay is to be assisted in the work by Sister Ruth Whitehead of Chicago. Let all attend who can.

AFTER a stormy session of the Zionist congress, at Basle, it was voted by an overwhelming majority not to accept the offer of Great Britan of a tract of land in Uganda, Africa for colonization purposes. The following resolution was adopted:—"That the Zionist congress firmly maintains the principle for the foundation of the colony in the Jewish fatherland, Palestine, or in that vicinity. The congress thanks Great Britan for her offer of African territory, the consideration of which, however, is terminated, and hopes that Great Britan will continue to aid in the solution of the Jewish question." The socialist member loudly protested and finally left the building. The sitting was closed with enthusiatic cheering.

"The Word of Truth"

Jesus said "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." Grace and truth came by him. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Truth. Jesus prayed that the disciples might be "sanctified through the truth." "In the beginning was the Word," "and the Word was God." "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." It is manifest that "the Word" and "the truth" are identical, and either or both are expressions or manifestation of the Father—the unoriginated I am.

The employment of human language as a vehicle through which to communicate a knowledge of God is a gracious condescension that ought to be reverently cherished and humbly received, to be handled with profound care. Hence Paul urged Timothy to "study to show himself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." Thus it is manifest that Paul realized the immeasurable value of divine revelation and urged its right and proper division, because "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

From these apostolic premises it is manifest that the words of Scripture cannot be used indifferently or lightly, or confusedly. The author of human language possesses the best estimate of the meaning of human words, and in using them undoubtedly used them definitely, distinctly with the purpose of being understood, and certainly not with the purpose of confounding and confusing the reader. When then, he chooses definite and distinct names for classes and individuals, it undoubtedly is because he would not have them contended or misapplied, [illegible] or applied [illegible] promiscuously. He wished to preserve the distinctions they imply.

Now he has classified the human family into four distinct classes, to each of which undoubtedly certain portions cannot be made to apply to either of the other classes. As, for instance, the language of Jer. xii. 3, and of James v. 3, can only refer to Peter's "natural brute beasts." 2 Peter ii. 12.

Again the apostle speaks of servants who are bound by the law." "For the law hath dominion over a man so long as he liveth." Therefore "whoso committeth sin is the servant of sin." While occupying this relation, "The servant knoweth not what his Master doeth." No doubt the former class were servants, but it does not follow that all servants possess their reprobate character. A servant is only entitled to his legitimate wages.

There is still another class of men whom Jesus has specially designated, namely, Friends. He said to his disciples, "thenceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends: for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you," even as "Abraham was the friend of God." It will be readily seen that the language of Scripture addressed to them as friends, could not have been applicable to them as servants. For only those servants who did whatsoever he commanded, did he constitute friends. But he lifted some if not all his friends to a still higher plane of existence. This plane was separated from the plane of perfect obedience by a voluntary death.

Natural brute beasts, servants and friends were all men, existing in or on the plane of death, friends seeking to win life by obedience. This class were invited to become sons. The condition of sonship was and is a voluntary relinquishment of all that belongs to manhood, by a burial into death; thereby ignoring the rights and immunities of manhood, that the rights and immunities of Godhead may be acquired. Hence the apostle could say of such, "Knowing this that our old man is crucified with him that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin." Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh (as men). For if you live after the flesh you shall die; but if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, you shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For you have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but you have received the spirit of adoption; whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be glorified together."

If we would follow Paul's teaching to Timothy, we must study to be "approved workmen, rightly dividing the Word of truth." "The Word of truth" is the living Word, or the source of life, to handle it carelessly, indifferently or dishonestly is worthy of the severest reprobation.

To affirm that what is predicated of friends, of servants and of natural brute beasts is also (and because they were once men) predicated of the Father's adopted sons, is, to say the least, not to "rightly divide" the Word of truth. It is to ignore the fact that they have "been buried into death," that their "old man is crucified with the Christ, that their body of sin might be destroyed," that they "are dead and their life is hid with the Christ in God," that while they live it is simply "the Christ who liveth in them," that "if any man be in the Christ Jesus he is a new creature" or creation, that what Jesus said is true of them, namely, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment but hath passed out of death into life," possessing the evidence in themselves that "they love the brethren." It is to deny that "the Spirit itself beareth witness with their spirits that they are the children of God, and if children then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with the Christ; if so be they suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Not at different times. When the Christ is glorified his brethren who are joint heirs with him are also. He is heir to more than they are. They are equally with him God's heirs. Their fellowship is complete, they are [illegible] the Son, as the Son is one with the Father. His exaltation, his glorification carries theirs, and they cannot be separated. His brethren have "passed out of death into life." It is truly said of them, "You hath he made alive who were dead in trespasses and sins." Yea, he made us alive with the Christ, he raised us up together with him, and made us sit together in heavenly places.

These things are only predicated of children, not of either of the other classes. It is the province of the heirs to sit on the throne and judge, that of the other classes to be judged. Heirdom is never jeopardized by judgment. It is conferred by grace, and is never in any sense contingent. Therefore there is now no condemnation or judgment, to them which are in the Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in the Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death." And why, because we have already been judged by our Father. The evidence of which is we have been chastened. The apostle affirms "when we are judged we are chastened of the law, that we should not be condemned with the world." He or she who affirms that the judgment of God's children is in the future, ignores all the testimonies cited and a multitude of others to like effect.—C. B. Stacy in Restitution, 1886.

A Coincidence.

Pilate, when Jesus was brought before him, asked: "What is truth?" It is very singular that, if we translate this question into the original language in which it was asked (Latin), we can give the answer by simply transposing the letters. The question, "What is truth?" is in Latin "Quid est veritas?" The answer, composed out of just the same letters, is: "Est vir qui adest." It is the man who is present. It seemed to us that this fact is well worth knowing, and so we give it, with the remark that never a truer answer was given to a question than the above.—J. B.

"HERE THEY ALL ARE."

Two negatives in English destroy each other, and are equivalent to an affirmative; but not so in Greek. In that language the negation is strengthened, and a third negative makes it stronger still, and so does a fourth and a fifth. How strong must five negatives be! But do five occur? Yes!—In the Greek of the New Testament; and connected with one of the "exceeding great and precious promises" which are there given us. It occurs in Heb. xiii. 5: "for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Only two of them are translated; but there they all are, as any one can see who reads Greek.

There must have been design in thus multiplying these negatives. I do not believe it was accidental. God meant to be believed. He would secure the confidence of his children in that particular. He knew how prone we are to doubt his constancy, and how liable we are to the dread of being forsaken by him; and he would therefore, with the humble trembling Christian, make assurance more doubly sure; so instead of saying simply, "I will not leave thee," which alone would have been enough, he adds, "nor forsake;" and instead of leaving it thus, "I will not forsake thee," he uses language equivalent to the following: "I will not, I will not leave thee; I will never, never forsake thee."

A Golden Thread.

A golden thread of unity ties together all the experiences and possessions of a redeemed man from the first moment of the change that delivers him from the kingdom of darkness right way on through the endless pulsations of an unbroken eternity. Grace is glory in the bud, glory is grace in the flower; and all which we hope for in the future is but the evolving of that which is planted in our hearts to day, if we love him; it may have to fight with much antagonism to itself both without and within. The tender green is prophet of the full ear. We do not get one gift here on earth, and another perfectly different hereafter. It is the measure, not the kind which varies. That which here, as a spark of grace, lies often almost hidden among green and smoky wood, there flames out triumphant as all-brightening glory. The inheritance is a hope, but the earnest of the inheritance, which is of the same stuff as the inheritance, is a present possession. — Alexander Mc Laren, D. D.

Sense shines with a double lustre when it is set in humility. An able and yet humble man is a jewel worth a kingdom.—Penn.

Power of a Holy Life.

The beauty of a holy life constitutes the most eloquent and effective persuasive to religion which one human being can address to another. We have many ways of doing good to our fellow creatures; but none so good, so efficacious as leading a virtuous, upright and well ordered life. There is an energy of moral suasion in a good man's life, passing the highest efforts of the orator's genius. The seen but silent beauty of holiness speaks more eloquently of God and duty, than the tongues of men and angels. Let parents remember this. The best inheritance a parent can bequeath to a child is a virtuous example, a legacy of hallowed remembrances and associations. The beauty of holiness shining through the life of a loved relative or friend, is more effectual to strengthen such as do stand in virtue's way, and lift up those that are bowed down, than precept, command, entreaty or warning. The beauty of that holiness which is enshrined in the four biographies of Jesus of Nazareth, has done more and will do more to spread his religion in the world than all that has ever been preached or written on evidences of Christianity.—Dr. Chalmers.

Millenial Blessedness.

There is no glory for creation, no deliverance from the curse, no loosening of the fetters of bondage, no millenial blessedness, until the Lord himself arrives. And who, save Him, can claim the honor of wiping off creation's curse, and as the last Adam, undoing the wrong which the first Adam wrought to this material earth, the seat of His royal dominion, which God at first pronounced so good? It was creation's curse as well as man's that he bore.

The symbol of that man's curse was the thorn, and therefore it was with thorns that he allowed himself to be crowned, that he might show himself to be the Redeemer of man's earth, as well as of man himself; the breaker of creation's bonds as well as of the fetters of the flesh; not merely the restorer of man to Paradise, but the restorer of Paradise to man.—*H. Obituary.

Mrs. Phoebe L. Bennett, daughter of Alexander and Mary Ann Ewing, born April 21, 1841. She had eleven brothers and one sister, of which only three are left. She also leaves a husband and four children, three sons and one daughter, of which all live to mourn her death. She was diligent and obedient to her parents, a good wife, and unexcelled in devotion to her children. She was a member of the church since early womanhood, and of late years has been wholly devoted to God. Her last words were to God and her family. She passed away July 20, 1905, at the age of 64 years, 3 months and 30 days. She was respected by all and loved by her many friends, and her death is sincerely felt by all, her children will miss her sadly.

Sunday July 23rd we paid the last sacred rights to our dear sister in Christ. The funeral was held from the Methodist church in Byron Center. Sister Bennett came into the faith many years ago, and we think was baptized into Christ by B. W. Woodward. The text for this sad occasion was from Psa. xl. 4, "Blessed is that man that maketh the Lord his trust."

M. A. WOODWARD.

On July 21st I was called to the house of morning. Little Nelson B., the 6 years old son of Henry and Lottie Rawlings, while playing in the barn fell, fracturing his skull. He never recovered consciousness, and died Saturday, the 22nd, in the afternoon. The funeral was held Tuesday, the 25th, from the U. B. church, a very large congregation was in attendance. The beautiful words from Rev. xxi. 4 were used, "And there shall be no more death." May the bereaved parents receive help from this heavenly friend that they may be blessed with the joys of a renewed earth, when the Life-giver comes to destroy death and fulfil this blessed promise of "no more death."

Something to Think About.

Dr. Gladden makes a tremendous point in a sarcastic way on the people who pile up excuses for not taking their church paper, after commending them for taking their county paper, a farm paper, a fashion journal, and some others, he says: "But when it comes to knowing what the King of kings is doing in the world a great many of us have a stock of excuses ready. 'We take so many papers already, we get no time to read them.' 'Two dollars and a half a year? Why, we can get as big a paper for a dollar and a quarter! Why you must think we are made of money!' And so we do not know what the Lord is doing; do not keep run of the war. Our souls have no chance to catch the sacred fire. We never get above our acres, our crops, and our stock. Not realizing that we and our little churches are part of God's great army that is conquering the world, we are liable to grow petty, complaining, fussy, quarrelsome, childish. Our work as Christians is naught. The local church grows down-hill, and the weaker it becomes the harder it is to harmonize." The worst thing about all the above is its painful truth. How often are our pastors confronted with just such excuses for not taking the Religious Telescope.

Thanking God for Thorns.

My God, I have never thanked thee for my thorn. I have thanked thee a thousand times for my roses, but not once for my thorn. I have been looking forward to a world where I shall get compensation for my cross, but I have never thought of my cross as itself a present glory. Thou divine Love, whose human path has been perfected through sufferings, teach me the value of my thorn. Show me that I have climbed to thee the path of pain. Show me that my tears have made my rainbow. Reveal to me that my strength was the product of that hour when I wrestled until the breaking of the day. Then shall I know that my thorn was blessed by thee, then shall I know that my cross was a gift from thee, and I shall raise a monument to the hour of my sorrow, and the words which I shall write upon it will be these: "It was good for me to have been afflicted."—Geo. Matheson.

How dangerous to defer those momentous reformations which conscience is solemnly preaching to the heart! If they are neglected, the difficulty and indisposition increase every day. The mind is receding, degree after degree, from the warm and hopeful zone, till at last it will enter the arctic circle and become fixed in relentless and eternal ice.

Jesus the Christ. As Jesus he is the Savior of sinners, the helper of the weak; as the Christ he is anointed of the Father, the coming King, whose kingdom shall be from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

There is power in the gospel to save men if we would just exhibit it in our lives. God has given us the privilege of choosing; and you can have the blessing if you want it, the curse if you want it, life if you want it, death if you choose it.

We have to judge our whole course down here in the light of his coming. To all I would say, are you in life and ways like people who wait for the Lord? Like the Thessalonians, occupied with that thing, can we honestly say, "If thou, Lord Jesus, hast thine heart set on coming to gather thy children home, the sooner the better for us?"

The great mistake men make is in the idea that they must become holy to become heirs; the truth is that they must become heirs to be holy. We do not serve in order to become sons, but we must become sons in order rightly to serve. It is those who believe on his name that have the power, and the privilige to become the sons of God.

What is really wanted is to light up the spirit that is within the boy. In some sense and in some effectual degree, there is in every boy the material of good work in the world; in every boy, not only in those who are brilliant, not only in those who are quick, but in those who are stolid, even in those who are dull.—Gladstone.

Long ages ago a fern leaf grew in a deep valley. No eye ever saw its beauty, and it fell at last into the earth, and sank away, and was lost. Surely no record ever was made of its life and story. But the other day a man of science, with hammer in hand, was peering into the mysteries of nature, and breaking a rock, there lay, in perfect outline, the whole delicate traces of the little fern leaf. After laying thousands of years in the darkness, lost and forgotten, it came forth to be looked at by admiring eyes. In like manner obscure lives drop away and are forgotten, but in manner, also, will they reappear. No smallest deed done for Christ shall be forgotten.

Slipping Away.

They are slipping away—these swoop, swift years,
Like a leaf on the current cast;
With never a break in their rapid flow,
We watch them as one by one they go
Into the beautiful past.

As silent and swift as a weaver's thread,
Or an arrow's flying gleam;
As soft as the langnorous breeze kid,
That lift the willow's long, golden tid,
And ripple the glassy stream.

As light as the breath of the thistle-down,
As fond as a lover's dream;
As pure as the flush in the sea-shell's throat,
As sweet as the wood-bird's wooing note,
So tender and sweet they seem.

One after another we see them pass,
Down the dim-lighted stair;
We hear the sound of their steady tread
In the steps of the centuries long since dead,
As beautiful and as fair.

There are only a few years left to love,
Shall we waste them in idle strife?
Shall we trample them under our ruthless feet?
These beautiful blossoms, rare and sweet,
By the direct way of life?

There are only a few swift years—oh, let
No service-thanks be heard;
Make life's fair pattern of rare design,
And fill up the measure with love's new wine,
With never an angry word!

Selections.

The Lord Jesus Christ our Hope.

Many and varied are the terms used in Scripture descriptive of the relation which our Lord sustains to the Christian. To one of these the reader's attention is here especially invited. In the superscription of his first letter to Timothy, the apostle Paul describes himself as "an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the commandment of God, our Savior and Lord Jesus Christ—our hope.

This is an aspect in which it is of immense importance to consider our Lord and Savior.

There are many precious things which in the New Testament epistles, are spoken of as the object of the believer's hope; yet all these are only the consequences or results that follow from the fact of the Lord Jesus Christ Himself being "our hope." He is the ground, the basis—the source or cause of those precious things for which we hope. Without Him not one of these inestimable blessings could be to us an object of sure hope.

Thus Paul speaks of "The hope and resurrection of the dead," Acts xxiii. 6, but the resurrection of the dead is so much dependent upon the Lord Jesus Christ, that he claims to be "The Resurrection and the Life," and the possessor of "the keys of the grave and of death."

Again, we read of the "Hope of eternal life," but it is through him alone we have such blessed hope. He is our life. The bread of God, which came down from heaven, that whosoever will may eat and live for ever.

Once more. We have "The hope of glory." Yes, but it is Christ in us the hope of glory: and it is "when Christ who is our life shall appear that we shall appear with him in glory;" and it is only those who are found in him, and in sole consequence of their being in him, that such become partakers of his glory.

Most emphatically, the Lord Jesus Christ is our hope. What a store of strength, comfort, and consolation there is for us in this fact! The Son of the eternal God—Jesus Christ. The same yesterday, to-day, and forever—He is our hope!

Let us realize this truth more than ever before. Too often are human apprehensions of the truth about Christ and his kingdom regarded and spoken of as the basis of our confidence; and it is not an uncommon thing to hear men speak of being "baptized into the kingdom," or "into the things of the kingdom," etc., but the phraseology is not found in the Scriptures, and it is unsound and misleading. There we read of being "baptized into Christ," or "into Jesus Christ."

Not our conceptions of divine revealed truth—however accurate these may be, and however important it may be to have them—form the ground of the Christian's confidence for safety and life eternal; but the strength, love and faithfulness of God's dear Son!

The apostles preached the Christ—a living, personal Savior, and called on men and women to believe in him. "Whom we preach, warning every man and teaching every man, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus."

To preach the Christ it is necessary to tell something about him; but it is [illegible] to preach a good deal of truth about him and not preach him himself. And it is possible to believe a great deal about him without believing in him.

To believe in the Lord Jesus is to trust him—to have confidence in him for something relative to ourselves. "I know whom I have believed, am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

Yes; to have confidence in a person we must know him. To trust in Christ for our eternal safety we require to know him, and none who know him as he is revealed in the Bible need hesitate to believe in him. He is faithful and true. Our faith in him may vary, but he is unchangeable.

Our apprehension of the prophetic word regarding him and his kingdom may require correction and adjustment, but he, in whom we trust, changeth never. The more we learn of him the more we love and believe in him; but the ground of our confidence is the Lord himself.

Such, reader, is my conviction, strengthened by more than thirty years experience. When I first trusted in Christ, I knew little of his coming kingdom and glory, but I read and believed that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, and to him I glndly fled for safety. From what I had learned in the Scriptures I had confidence that he was anxious and "able to save me," and so I was led to believe in him then; and all that I have learned about him since increases my confidence and joy; and now, as then, he is my trust.

Forgive, dear reader, these personal references—their object is to lead you to believe more firmly and rejoice in Jesus Christ, without confidence in anything that is your own.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlating life."—W. Laing.

The Grave.

The grave—what a word—what a mystery! There is no other word in our language of such meaning and awful import. The very sight of the grave makes humanity shudder, and shrink and cling to life, when even life is an intolerable burden. Yet, why should it be so? What is the grave that it should so unman stout hearts and fill humanity with terror? What is there in the grave that even the very word should be awful? Look at it; look down into it; look through it—it is only a little narrow opening in the fresh, sweet earth; a retired, shaded spot, aside from the bustle, whirl, and commotion of a restless world; a little mound, when completed, and rounded up, and sodded over, planted with shrubs and flowers; a little palace, with its marble shaft standing up in the midst of the bounties of nature, surrounded by the decorations of art; a suburban retreat, where the weary and careworn can retire and find rest and repose. Ah! well—adorn, paint, embellish the grave as we may, the very word is still awful, and its solemn import still clings to it, as the perfume clings to the rose after it is crushed. Beautiful as the place may be with natural loveliness, lavish as may be the adornments of art, the sight is yet appalling. To tell the afflicted that it is the most frequented place of earth; that the great and small of all generations resort to it, and there all distinctions are blotted out; that all grades meet there on a common level; that in the grave all oppressions cease and all wrongs have an end, does not meet the wants of the afflicted soul. Both of the views of death and the grave may be literally true, outward and materialistic, but they cannot satisfy the living soul when going to its baptism of suffering and despair. The grave is the end of life, for only the dead dwell there. It matters not what we say to the sorrowing about the beauties of the place where the dead repose, it does not relieve the subject of any of its terror, nor bring to the sorrowing any relief or comfort. But tell them that their loved ones shall rise again; that the grave shall give up its dead; that they who are in their graves shall hear the voice of God and shall come forth, and you have instantly transformed their their night into day, their sorrows into rejoicing, and robbed both death and the grave of their terror. The Lord says: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death." That meets the case; that annihilates death and the grave; that sends the tide of joy bounding through the hearts of a sorrowing world. Some long to be laid at rest after vainly battling with the troubles of the world.

Report?

The third Annual Conference of the Church of God held in Ohio in recent years will convene in Cleveland, Ohio, 626 Woodland Ave., Aug. 17th to 20th inclusive.

The past two Conferences held at Salem, O., have been productive of much good, the first year we placed an Evangelist in the field and last year we added another.

The evangelists report a busy year. Bro. P. Neill states it has been the busiest year of his life, and further states it is almost impossible to put on paper a full and proper account of evangelist work done by himself and wife in the State of Ohio and elsewhere during the past year. For instance the great amount of work necessary in preparing for meetings, also the great number of letters written, and private talks proclaiming the gospel and correcting errors all of which cannot be put on paper.

They have endeavored to fill all the calls for evangelist work in Ohio, and have gone outside of the State to fill engagements, visiting some places twice. They have officiated at baptisms and funerals, and have preaching every Sunday, both morning and evening, at the Salem church, besides holding the mid-week meeting. They report holding a series of meetings in different places the interest in which has not yet died out, and fruit may yet be born to the honor and glory of God.

Over 600 dollars have been received and paid out for evangelistic work in the State of Ohio during the past year.

Your presence is earnestly requested at the Conference. Come and receive a blessing.

Conference Notice.

The Conference of the Church of God will meet at Brent, I. T., on Thursday night, before the second Sunday in August. Brent is twenty miles west of Ft. Smith, Arkansas. It is a small place, and you may not be able to find it on the maps. Now, dear brethren, come to this Conference if possible. If any of our preaching brethren out of the bounds of our Conference can come, we would be so glad, and would give you a hearty welcome. If there are any isolated brethren any where that can come, come and be with us. Board and lodging will be free for all. We are expecting a glorious time at this meeting. All who come should buy their tickets for Hanson, I. T., where they will be met with conveyance to take them to Conference. We especially invite Bros. Zilmer, Wilson and Underwood. Of course we want all to come who possibly can. We have about twel preachers who belong to this Co rence, and we want them all to be there. While Uncle John Foore is not a member of our Conference, we count him among us, and would be sadly disappointed if he were not with us. Do not forget the time, nor place and be sure and come and enjoy the feast of fat things in store for us. Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

F. J. DANIEL.

Saintly Faces.

Sometimes, in passing through a crowd, we see a face that attracts us by its sweetness of expression. Perhaps it is an old face, crowned with a glory of hoary hairs, yet love, joy and peace shine out of every dot and wrinkle in it. Sometimes it is a young face that beams with health and purity and beauty. But whether old or young, when we see that unmistakable soul-light in a face we know that the heart behind is pure, the life is good and that the body thus illuminated is the temple of the Holy Spirit. To keep the mind occupied with good, pure, useful, beautiful and divine thoughts precludes the possibility of thinking about, and thus being tempted by things sinful, low and gross. It is because Paul knew this that he says so earnestly: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever are of good report,...think on these things." In the well-formed habit of thinking pure thoughts lies the secret of being pure in heart; and in the daily and nightly meditation in the law of the Lord is a safeguard against many of the sins which defile the carnal heart and debase and blacken the countenance.—Scottish Reformer.

Report from Oklahoma.

Our Sister Nancy Barber came to Oklahoma to visit relatives and recruit her health. As she began mingling with the people, meeting the intelligent and responsive and serious which would congregate at given opportunities, her interest and zeal in the Master's cause went out to these people. To make known to them the "the true way of life," God's plain and positive plan of redemption, the restoration of the kingdom, the glorious reward in store for Christ's people. Adding to her clear Biblical knowledge and zeal, a little courage she began in February to preach. Since that time has held regular meetings each Sunday, visiting four different points once per month, and making visiting discourses. One of said places being out of doors, in a beautiful grove, where some two hundred people gathered with basket dinner, that they could be present at both forenoon and afternoon sessions. Sister Barber's labors for the Lord have been heartily received, and a means of the gospel reaching many who had never before been permitted to hear. Interests were expressed, votes of thanks extended for her efforts among the people, and an expression of regret at her departure to her Ohio home. Sister Barber will make a stop in Caddo county and use the opportunity to hold some meetings. ELLA W. TONG.

Envy is soonest and best overcome by humility.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Sweetest Things On Earth.

What are the sweetest things on earth?
Lips that can praise a rivals worth,
A fragrant rose that hides no thorn,
The love of gold untouched by scorn,
A happy, little child asleep:
Eyes that can smile though they may weep,
A brother's cheer, a mother's praise,
The mine to-day as one of days
A heart with peace [illegible]
A gift that looks for no return,
Wrongs [illegible] pain's swift release,
Pure [illegible] good to none,
[illegible]
Age that is young as well as wise,
An hour of hand that needs no word,
A life with light as true a word,
A hope shall waking into joy,
A happiness without alloy,
A mother's kiss, a baby's birth—
These are the sweetest things on earth.

Faith in God's Word.

The word of God liveth and abideth forever. 1 Peter i. 23.

The Bible purports to be a revelation from God, through the medium of prophets, apostles, and his Son Jesus Christ. "Thus saith the Lord" is the stamp which it puts upon itself. The question to be asked is whether this claim is true; and, if this question be answered in the affirmative, that so far as the faith is concerned, is the end of all questions, with the exception of those that relate to the meaning of the language used in the Bible. What we are to do with the book, after having accepted it as of divine authority, is to read it, understand it so far as we can, and then believe what it says. God himself is the best possible authority; and what he says must be true. He can neither lie, nor be deceived; and, if we believe that the Holy Scriptures contain a record of his sayings through the inspiration of men, and through the teaching of Christ, then, in order to be consistent with ourselves, we must believe in the truth and authority of the sayings, and accept them as the infallible rule of faith and practice in respect to all the matters which they embrace.

We are strongly of the opinion that this is just the sort of faith for men to have, whether as preachers in the pulpit or hearers in the pew; whether as actors in the duties and work of life, or as persons hearing the summons of death; whether as Christians rejoicing in the hope of glory, or as penitents coming to God through Christ for forgiveness and salvation. It is the only sort of faith that possesses real power either to rule the life or bless the soul with its comforts. The power of the Bible to affect and move the human heart depends upon the ideas which it contains, and in part—and by no means a small part—upon the authority which stands behind these ideas. The ideas are great and good, whatever may be their source; yet, being God's ideas, his thoughts, doctrines, and rules for man, they are of infinite moment. When he speaks let the world hear. When he commands let men obey. A revelation from God is imperial in its source. It is his prerogative to dogmatize for humanity. Reason is never more reasonable than when it believes what God has said, and because he said it. A revelation from him ascertained is the end of all dispute touching the matter to which it refers.

If some one refuses to believe that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, then, so long as he thus refuses, he will not apply to Christ for salvation, and will not be saved by him. Belief in the doctrine of redemption by his blood is the first condition of profit from that doctrine. So, if one substitutes blind and unintelligent laws and forces for the Christian doctrine of God's direct and immediate providence, alike general and particular, and the former only because it is the latter, and thus managers in thought to get God out of the world; he will practically have no God for the world, certainly none to whom he can pray, or whose forgiveness he can ask or enjoy. If one has a theory of inspiration which divorces God from the words of the Bible, then those words have lost their power with him as divine words and he can play with them at his pleasure. If one denies the Bible doctrine of future punishment, then he assumes to know more on this subject than the author of the Bible, and in effect cancels that fearful emergency in human condition, for the relief of which Christ came down from Heaven. There was no need of the atonement made on the cross, and there is need of pardon, if the punishment of sin be a mere bubble.

The plain dictate of common sense is that if we accept the Bible at all as of divine authority, we should accept it absolutely, believing what it says and doing what it commands. We must not in the same breath accept and dispute a divine revelation. He who is afraid of his doubts, and yet has not the courage of faith, is in a sad plight. He is troubled with the one, and not comforted by the other. There is no danger that we shall believe God's Word too strongly. It is only when one believes it with all his heart that he will be able to say from his experience: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." Then he can look up to the great Father of spirits and say: "In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts delight my soul." Ah! then the Bible, with its high authority and sweet message of love, is a power alike to govern and to comfort. Those who believe with conditions, qualifications, modifications and reservations, and hence mingle what faith they have with a set of half-way cavils, which at best are semi-disbeliefs, and may be even worse, know very little of this power. They do not treat the Word of God in a way to get the power out of it. Its blessings may lodge in other souls, but not in theirs. They are too wise in themselves to be the best sort of believers. They know too much in and of themselves to be well taught of God.

If there is one thing which we would emphasize more than another, that one thing is simple, child-like, trustful, unhesitating, loving and complete faith in the Word of God. This will do more for the soul, for its sanctification and its joy, than all the speculations of the speculators that ever lived or died. It will answer were they to live a thousand years. It will place the soul in the guest chamber of the great King, and feed it with manna that comes from the skies. Try it, ye doubters and cavilers, and after that you will have no heart to try anything else.—N. Y. Independent.

Christ the Exalted Redeemer.

"Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." Acts v. 31.

"Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high."

Observe the three words, "exalted and is extolled, and be very high;" language pants for expression. Our Lord is now exalted in being lifted up above all angels, and principalities, and powers. The Man Christ Jesus is the nearest to the eternal throne, ay, the Lamb is before the throne. "And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain." He is in his own state and person exalted, and then by the praise rendered him he is extolled for he is worshipped and adored by the whole universe. All praise goes up before him now, so that men extol him, while "God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name, which is above every other name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Deep were his sorrows, but as high are his joys. It is said that around many of the lochs in Scotland the mountains are as high as the water is deep; and so our Lord's glories are immeasurable as were his woes. What a meditation is furnished by these two-folds and incalculable heights and depths! Our text says that he shall "be very high" It cannot tell us how high. It is inconceivable how great and glorious in all respects the Lord Jesus Christ is at this moment. Oh, that he may be very high in our esteem! He is not yet exalted and extolled in any of our hearts as he deserves to be. I would we loved him a thousand times as much as we do, but our whole heart goeth after him, does it not? Would we not die for him? Would we not set him on a throne as high as seven heavens, and think that we had not done enough for him, who is now our all in all, and more than all.

You notice what is said, concerning the Christ, as the most astonishing thing of all, "So shall he sprinkle many nations." Now it is the glory of our risen Lord, at this moment, that his precious blood is to save many nations. Before the throne men of all nations shall sing, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us unto God by thy blood." Not the English nation alone shall be purified by his atoning blood, but many nations shall be sprinkled with his reconciling blood, even as Israel of old was sprinkled with the blood of sacrifice. We read in the tenth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, at the twenty second verse, of "having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience," and this is effected by that precious blood by which we have been once purged so effectually that we have no more consciousness of sins, but enter into perfect peace. The blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctified to the purifying of the flesh, and much more doth the blood of Christ purge our conscience from dead works to serve the living God. The sprinkling of the blood was meant also to confirm the covenant: thus Moses "sprinkled both the book and all the people, saying, this is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you." Our Lord himself said, "This is my blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." But is it not a wonderful thing that he should die as a male-factor on the tree, amid scorn and ridicule, and that he is this day bringing nations into covenant with God? Once so despised, and now so mighty? God has given him "for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles." Many nations shall by him be joined in covenant with the God of the whole earth. Do not fall into the erroneous idea that this world is like a great ship-wrecked vessel, soon to go to pieces on an iron-bound coast; but rather let us expect the conversion of the world to the Lord Jesus. As a reward for the travail of his soul, he shall cause many nations to "exult with joy," for so some read the passage; the peoples of the earth shall not only be astonished at the griefs, but they shall admire his glories, adore his perfections, and be filled with an amazement of joy at his coming and kingdom. I can conceive nothing in the the future so great and glorious to result from the passion and death of our divine Lord.

The Silence of Power.

Those among our fellow-men who impress us with a sense of power and greatness are not the restless and noisy, the fussy and talkative and meddlesome, but those who move quietly in their own orbits with the least apparent effort, or echo, or collision. It is not when the engine is blowing off steam at the wharf, with a shriek which startles the town, that it is putting forth its real power. It is when you see it out upon the waves, moving at its quietest. Nor is the power, then, where the noise is greatest, in the paddle wheels or at the hissing prow. In order to find it you must go down to the engine-room, and peep into the great incandescent silence of the fires, and at the dark, cavernous boilers wherein the imprisoned steam is mutely putting its shoulder to the wheel.

Do not all great things belong to the kingdom of quiet? Are they not all born of silence? You go forth at night and look upward and outward into the starred universe, and how this universal frame of things has gone up without noise, and it goes on without noise. "There is no speech, nor language; their voice cannot be heard." And yet they do speak to thought and feeling, declaring the glory of God. The stillness of those stars is more impressive than their sparkle. And the sun, which is the world's life, and the great driving-wheel of all its powers, makes no sound. And the moon,—never was step of maid, bearing her lamp through the corridors of a sleeping house, so muffled. The huge world beneath your feet rolls on its axis with an inaudible and an absolutely imperceptible motion, and all over its surface a mysterious and irrepressible life is going forward whose growths make no appeal to our hearing. It has built itself up, stratum on stratum, and formation on formation, storing away its treasures of stone and iron and gold and fuel and fossil through countless millenniums of silence. There have been exceptional and abnormal stages which have been attended with jar and uproar, but these cataclysms have not been so truly great as the budding of a tree, or the shining of a single star.

Perhaps you are standing by the sea, whose shallows are sounding and resounding all along the beach; but you know that away out yonder where the depths are almost fathomless it is as still as the grave,—which so often it proves to ships and men. Those vast forests of gigantic trees, inland, have grown from seeds and saplings as lightly as the snowflakes which descend upon them, and the woods have known no noise, unless the breaking of a branch, the cry of a bird or beast, or the snapping of twigs under your puny step.

What are the motor-powers of this world of silent life? They are light and heat and electricity; they are gravity and cohesion and chemical attraction, even as the forces which sway and mould the higher realms of being are thought and feeling, intellectual affinity, moral conviction, and the Spirit of God. And all these are "still, small voices." And when the history of the universe shall reach its culminating moment, there shall be silence in heaven! Is it not, then, a fitting "ambition" to be quiet, that one may be in harmony and not in discord with this divine order of things, in this kingdom of the greatest and the best, while the "soul, like a quiet palmer," traveleth toward that supreme, still hour?—F. N. Zabriskie, D. D., in New York Observer.

The Egyptians Who Wrote for the Future.

Let us look first of all at the Egyptians, who seem to me to possess the consciousness of the most distant, an almost immeasurable, past. They did not adorn their temples with inscriptions for their pleasure only. They had a clear idea of the past and of the future of the world in which they lived; and so as they cherished recollections of the past, they wished themselves to be remembered by unknown generations in times to come. The biographical inscription of Aahmes, a captain of marines of the 18th dynasty, is addressed, as Champollion says, "to the whole human race," (Ast a-eaten rat neb.) A monument in the Louvre (A. 84) says: "I speak to you who shall come a million of years after my death." These are the inscriptions of private persons. The kings, naturally, are still more anxious that posterity and the world at large should be informed of their deeds. Thus Sishak I., the conqueror of Judah, prays in one of his inscriptions at Silsilis: "My gracious Lord, Amon, grant that my words may live for hundreds of thousands of years."

The great Harris Papyrus, which records the donations of Rameses III. to the temples of Egypt, together with some important political events, was written to exhibit to "the gods, to men now living, and to unborn generations (hamemet), the many good works and valorous deeds which he did upon earth as a great king of Egypt." Whatever motives, high or low, may have influenced the authors of these hieroglyphic inscriptions, one of them was certainly their love or fear of humanity, their dim conviction that they belonged to a race that would go on forever filling the earth, and to which they were bound by some kind of moral responsibility. They wrote for the world, and it is in that sense that I call their writing the first germs of a world literature. And as in Egypt, so it was in Babylon, Nineveh and Persia. When the dwellers on the Euphrates and Tigris had learned that nothing seemed to endure, that fire and water would destroy wood and stone, even silver and gold, they took clay and baked it, and bid the cylinders covered with cuneiform writing in the foundations of their temples, so that even after the destruction of these temples and palaces future generations might read the story of the past. And there, in their safe hiding places these cylinders have been found again after 3000 years, unharmed by water, unearthed by fire, and fulfilling the very purpose for which they were intended, carrying to us the living message which the ancient rulers of Chaldea wished that we, their distant descendants, should receive.

Often these inscriptions end with imprecations against those who should dare to injure or efface them. At Khorsadad, at the very interior of the construction was found a large stone chest, which enclosed several inscribed plates in various materials; one tablet of gold, one of silver, others of copper, lead and tin; a sixth text was engraved on alabaster, and the seventh document was written on the chest itself. They all commemorate the foundation of a city by a famous king, commonly called Sargon, and they end with an imprecation: "Whoever alters the works of my hand, destroys my constructions, pulls down the walls which I have raised, may Asshur, Ninib, Raman, and the great gods who dwell there, pluck his name and seed from the land, and let him sit bound at the feet of his foe."—Max Muller.

The King's Son.

There was once a King's son, who heard that the people in one of the King's countries a long way off, used to be afraid of the King, and used to say that the King did not care for them. So he thought to himself, "I will go and teach them better!" But he said, "If I go with my fine robes and crown, they will say, 'What do you know about a poor man's life? You do not know what it is to be cold and hungry.' I will put off my royal dress, and I will wear clothes like the poor people, and live and eat as they do." So he changed his clothes, and left his palace, and went to that distant country, and there he lived among the poor, leading a harder life than any of them. And yet, though he was often hungry and cold, and sometimes did not know where to find a night's lodging, he never complained, and never broke the laws.

After he had lived in that country for some time, he went back to the King at home. It happened that soon afterwards the people of the country sent messengers to the King to complain that the laws were too hard. The King's son then said to the messengers: "Believe me, the laws are all for the best, and the King loves you as though you were his own children."

"Ah," said the messengers, "but you do not understand our way of life, how poor and miserable we are, and how hard it is to live."

"You are wrong," said the Prince; "I understand your life quite well, for I lived myself as a poor man among you for a long time. I know you have to suffer a good deal; every one of your troubles is known to me, for I have suffered the same things. Yet still I assure you that the King is very fond of you, and will make you perfectly happy in the end."

Then the people when they heard that the King's son had lived among them, and knew all about their troubles, began to be more hopeful, for they said: "He knows what it is to suffer and he will surely help us."

The King's son is Jesus, who is the Son of God the Father. Jesus was, as we are, tempted to do wrong. He knew what it was to be poor and hungry and homeless—he felt the bitterness of death. More than this, he knew what it was to be persecuted by enemies and to be misunderstood and deserted by his dearest friends. Do not fancy that when you have your little trials and troubles that Jesus knows nothing about them and cannot understand them. Jesus was a child as you are, and he has never forgotten that he was a child. You may tell him of your troubles—he will understand and sympathize with them all.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Bible.

No fragment of an army ever survived so many battles; no citadel ever withstood so many sieges; no rock was ever battered by so many hurricanes and so swept by storms; and yet it stands. It has seen the risen and downfall of Daniel's four empires. Assyria bequeaths a few mutilated figures to the riches of our national museum. Media and Persia, like Babylon which they conquered, have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Greece faintly survives in its historic fame; and iron Rome of the Cæsars has long since ceased to boast. And yet the book that foretells all this still survives. While nations, kings, philosophers, systems, institutions, have died away, the Bible engages now men's deepest thoughts, is examined by the keenest intellects, stands revered before the highest tribunals, is more read and sifted and debated, more devoutly loved and more vehemently assailed, more defended and more denied, more industriously translated and freely given to the world, more honored and more abused, than any other book the world ever saw. It survives all changes, itself unchanged; it moves all minds, yet is moved by none; it sees all things decay, itself incorruptible; it sees myriads of other books ingulphed in the stream of time, yet is borne along till the mystic angel shall plant his foot upon the sea and swear by him that liveth forever and ever that time shall be no longer.—H. N. Lane.

A Living God.

Did you ever, I ask you, hear a religious man say, as years went on, that his religion had disappointed him? Nay, the life of our God is continued even now upon earth; and where that life is, there is the full, unending, irresistible power by which God will lead us from strength to strength, until at length we come to appear before our God at Zion. We serve no lifeless abstraction. We devote ourselves to no mere idle idea. We are buoyed up by no mere inflated enthusiasm. We serve a God who bids us trust him to the uttermost as we patiently pursue the path from whose end, even now, he is beckoning to us, whispering to us the while as our minds are dark, and our hearts are cold, and our fears are great, these rich words of most abundant promise, "I have many things to say unto you, but you cannot bear them now."

"Much good is done by persons of great energy, but as much by persons of sweet will. For energy is at times in danger of provoking opposition, but gentleness wins upon its object unawares."

Faith is something besides mere hope, opinion or speculation; it is simply trust in the truth and might of our Lord. Opinion is ruled by the world; faith overcomes the world.—A. C. Thompson, D. D.

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example. No. 7.

At the close of our last lesson we left Paul at Jerusalem. He had returned from his first missionary venture, a venture that had been fraught with dangers, hardships and many discouragements, but nevertheless had been successful and had added many converts to Christ.

Paul was now ready to start on a second journey; the perils and dangers of his first journey would perhaps have discouraged and intimidated a less courageous leader, but not Paul, he had enlisted to suffer and bear all this for the Master, and like a valient soldier, he did not shrink from the fight because the odds were so heavily against him, or, because he would be endangering his life.

At this time Antioch was well provided with teachers and ministers for Christ. Here were gathered beside Paul and Barnabas,—Titus, Mark, Silas and many other zealous evangelists. To Paul it seemed quite unnecessary for him to stay longer amongst these brethren who were so well supplied with leaders, so he said to Barnabas, "Let us return and visit our brethren in all the cities wherever we have preached the Word of the Lord, and let us see how they are thriving." Acts xv. 36

Barnabas agreed to this, but on the condition that they take with them John Mark, as on their former journey. This proposal was quite unexpected to Paul, because no sooner had Mark started to encounter the hardships on the previous journey than his courage failed and he deserted the little band just when they needed him. Paul saw what a drawback such an one would be now, when all their courage would be called into play, and he spoke out with his usual plainness of speech and told Barnabas that it would be impossible, that he could not agree to such a proposal and that if he insisted their only course would be to separate and each start out separately. It grieved him greatly to have to do this as he had grown to love and greatly admire the gentle character and devotion of his companion in trial and hardship, but with his usual firmness to do what he believed to be his duty regardless of his personal feeling he took the step which would cut him off from the friend of his earliest days. And so they parted, Barnabas and Mark going to Cyprus to minister to the scattered followers there, and leaving Paul to follow out his original plan. His infirmities and oft re-curring sickness made it imperative that he have some close companion, and so he chose Silas to be his partner in joy and tribulation.

On starting out they chose a route along the sea coast and at the foot of the mountains of Judea. This Northward route took them through the towns on the Syrian Coast and through the valley of the Orontes River and finally brought them to the Gulf of Issus on whose coast stood the city of Alexandria. They passed through many communities in which they found small parties of believers; these they encouraged and strengthened.

After a short stay at Alexandria they continued on to the towns of Mopsuestia and Adana and finally arrived at Paul's old home city, Tarsus. Here they stayed for a short time, but finding the church in a thriving condition they continued on toward the distant churches of Galatia, crossing the mountains of Taurus. The road by which they had to cross this range of mountains led them through one of the wildest and most desolate mountain districts of this part of the world. It took five days to accomplish the trip, part of which they were in deep ravines and gorges, or following a mere path along the side of a precipice or crossing mountain streams to toil up steep cliffs.

After staying at Derbe for a short time the little band pushed on to the town Lystra. As you will remember this was the home of Lois and her daughter Eunice. On his first journey Paul had encountered these two women and was much impressed with their sincerity and goodness of heart and found it an easy matter to convert them to the Master's cause. Eunice had a son, who, at this time was but a mere lad, but he had been well trained by his mother and grandmother in their religious belief and he also readily believed Paul and his teaching. In the time between Paul's first and second visit, this son, Timothy, had grown "to the estate of perfect manhood, in the fulness of the Christ." His mother had heeded most carefully the apostle's injunction to plant the seed of truth in the lad's mind and heart and Paul was pleased beyond measure to find where he had left a mere babe in Christ a young man full of zeal and enthusiasm for the Master's cause and with a character strong, fearless and lovable. A strong desire arose in Paul to make this young man his constant companion in labor, he needed such an one and it seems but another manifestation of God's watchfulness, in providing help when it was needed. We can have but little idea of what benefit Timothy's presence was to the apostle. He learned to lean on him and depend on him as he did on no one else, and when well nigh discouraged or grieviously ill, it was his custom to turn to Timothy for comfort and support.

Thus increased in number and with blessings at Lystra, Iconium and other cities in the immediate vicinity the little band departed to cover a long route which covered the central part of Asia Minor and was to end at Troas. Many towns and churches were visited and much seed sown, and when encouragement was needed the apostles would exhort and pray with them.

When they reached the borders of the province (as we might call it today) of Mysia, Paul was for going to the valley of the Coyster and Meander Rivers that they might preach the Word to the people in Smyrna, Pergamos, Sardis, Philadelphia, Laodicia, Trollis, Miletus, Ephesus and many other thriving towns to be found there, but God commanded that they should not go unto these cities. Here we get another glimpse of Paul's faith and trust in God. Although these towns seemed to him to promise a bountiful harvest he did not complain or argue, nor even question, his was a faith which knew no "whys" or "hows" or "ifs."

Following the only way left open to him he traveled on to Troas, or as the full name is Alexandria-Troas. Here another problem confronted him, should he embark and go to Italy, or to Greece, or to the land of the Macedonians, it was a thing which he seemed to be unable to decide until at last he had a vision one night in which "a man from Macedonia appeared unto him and besought him in this wise, "Come over to Macedonia and help us." Forthwith the Word tells us, "we sought means to pass over into Macedonia doubting not that God was calling us thitherward to preach the gospel." Acts xvi. 9-10.

Passage on a sailing boat was secured by the party and after a rather uneventful voyage they were landed at Neapolis. This town was not unlike Troas, a busy trading port thronged with Greeks and Levantines and seemed an unlikely place to start the preaching so they decided to continue on to Philippi. Here occurred some of the most stirring scenes of Paul's life.

Philippi was at this time a most prosperous city, in its immediate neighborhood were situated valuable mines about which many stories and legends had been told. It was said that gold grew up as fast as it was taken out, consequently many people of all kinds and classes had been attracted toward this supposed wealth. While Philip was ruler in Rome he had seized these mines for his own and had built a fort there to protect them, from this fort the town had taken its name.

On their arrival Paul and his companions found not a single man to meet them, only a few women who had gathered together for prayer. These women greeted the apostles heartily, and one of them Lydia almost immediately embraced the new faith. She was most hospitable and urged the little band to enter her house and abide there. Although Paul, up to this time, had never consented to live at the expense of disciples, he showed his faith in this God-fearing woman by accepting her invitation and soon this house became thronged with women and men, many of whom when they had heard the Word, believed.

But not only at the home of Lydia did they proclaim the truth, they lost no opportunity of speaking in public when ever they could, especially in the Prosenk. It so happened that one day as they were on their way to a public speaking, they passed the home of a young girl who had often followed them about calling out, "These men are servants of the Most High God, who preach unto you the way of salvation." She was possessed of an evil spirit and used by her masters as a means of earning a living, by her phrophesyings, etc. On the occasion of which we speak Paul turned to her and bidding the evil spirit to depart, said, "I command thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, to go out of her." Immediately the demon departed, leaving her as other women, but powerless to ever again utter divinations which had made her valuable to her masters.

This naturally angered the men who were reaping the profits from her misfortune and seizing Paul and Silas they dragged them to the Agora, before the city magistrates. In order to make out a case these wicked men asserted that the apostles were preaching a new religion contrary to the laws of the Romans and that they were Jews who had no rights.

As a large mob had now collected, the magistrates became excited and believing the two were Jewish Charlatans, commanded that they be whipped, without the formality of a trial, which was their right. A post was set in the public square to which the apostles were hurried and after binding them naked to the stake, the official lictors proceeded to scourge them with rods until they were covered with cuts and wounds which bled profusely. To still further pacify the mob it was commanded that they be cast into prison. The jailor intent upon fulfilling his instruction to the limit threw them into his worst dungeon and put their feet in stocks.

And this is what they came over into Macedonia for. To be set upon by a mob, dragged into the square to be publicly beaten and then cast into prison, what a plight, truly they had cause to be discouraged and downcast: but were they? Nay verily, they rejoiced, and about midnight they broke forth with hymns and rejoicing which were heard by all the other prisoners. Suddenly the earth trembles and the foundations of the prison are shaken and the doors fly open. The jailer seeing what has happened is about to kill himself, thinking that the prisoners had escaped, but Paul calls out, "Do thyself no harm, we are all here."

The jailer is greatly amazed and overwhelmed at such marvels, falls at Paul's feet and asks what he must do to be saved. "Believe in the Lord Jesus," was the reply, "and you shall be saved, you and your family." He then expounded to them the truth, and they believed and were baptized. The wounds of Paul and Silas were washed and they were then lodged in the house of the jailer.

When morning came the magistrates who had begun to feel uneasy because of their hasty actions of the night before, sent to the jailer and said, Release the prisoners and let them go. They feared the prisoners might appeal to the Roman governor, in which case it would have gone hard with them.

When it was told to Paul that the magistrates had commanded that they be set free he said, "What, after having us publicly beaten with rods, with no sentence passed by law, they proceed to cast us, who are Roman citizens into this prison, and now they thrust us out in secrecy, this shall not be, Let them come themselves and bring them forth."

This the judges hasten to do, asking as a favor that Paul leave town and thus avoid further trouble. Paul agreed to depart as he saw that to stay would bring further trouble and perhaps no good.

Romans viii. 1.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit.

We have again gathered around the table of the Lord to partake of the emblems which do show forth his death until he comes, and I have thought this verse an appropriate text to consider on this occasion. What food for thought there is in this and in the preceding and following verses.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. When we consider that we are by nature the children of wrath, that in the flesh dwelleth no good thing, what a blessed thought to know that we can be without condemnation, that in the sight of God and the Lamb we can be without sin. How our hearts ought to go out to him this morning, and praise and magnify his holy name. We can be without condemnation. However, to be without condemnation we must with the mind serve the law of God. The mind must be in subjection to the will of God. As Bro. Joblin told us last Sunday we must set the Lord always before us, that implies a constant walk with God. In Romans vi. 12 we read, Let not sin therefore reign (rule or control) in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. We have made the good choice of casting in our lot with the people of God; God's people are followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, they walk after the Spirit, let us strive to be worthy followers of Jesus. Paul knew the tendency there is in the natural mind to be carried away with the world to forget God and his commandments, hence his counsels and warning, Let not sin reign in your mortal bodies.

In order to do this it is not only necessary that we hear or read the Word, it must be carried about with us, it must find a lodgement place in our hearts, and put into practice. We must be doers of the Word and not hearers only. The heart must be moved by the teachings of the Spirit, or it matters nothing what is in our heads.

It is possible to know the gospel to be able to give a good difinition of what the gospel is and yet our hearts be not right in the sight of God. The Word must be the means of regulating our walk and conversation in the world, thereby separating us from the world. Paul says in the 13th verse of this 8th chapter of Romans, For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live.

There is a constant warfare going on between the flesh and the spirit, providing we are endeavoring to live after the spirit, if we mortify the deeds of the body the end will be glorious, the victory will be won and life and peace forever more will be ours. A Christian in name only is a mockery and a sham. It is a covering which will not stand in that day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, the righteousness of the law must be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit.

Before partaking of these emblems let each one of us ask the question, Am I walking after the spirit, am I through the spirit mortifying the deeds of the body?

We must examine ourselves in the light of Scripture to see how we stand before God and to know what progress we are making toward building up a Christian character, a character well pleasing in God's sight.

When we went down into the baptismal fountain we agreed to give our lives to God, and surely it is but right that we devote our lives to him, who has given for us his Son, and who has promised so rich a reward to those who are faithful in his service.

The mind is ready to be carried away with its surroundings, and we must keep it in check. We are all exposed to temptations of a greater or less degree, and we need to have our minds well grounded in the Scriptures to enable us to resist those temptations to which we are exposed. The Apostle Paul says to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.

To keep in mind the teachings of the spirit and be guided by them is life and peace. Paul says in the 9th verse, Now if any man hath not the spirit of Christ he is none of his. Does not this language of Paul come home to us just as aptly as it did to those Romans who received it from his pen. These teachings are of no account to us unless they are applied to our lives. We must examine ourselves and see if we are really and truly seeking to manifest their spirit. The question comes to be, Have we the spirit of Christ, Are we seeking to follow in the footsteps of the meek and lowly Jesus? Is it our aim and desire to do the Father's will? Are we striving to promulgate the gospel, are we denying ourselves? Are we seeking to cultivate that meek and quiet spirit manifested by our Lord? Remember he that ruleth his spirit, is greater than he that taketh a city. If these graces be in us we have learned somewhat of the spirit which was in Christ Jesus, and if they are, let us go on unto perfection, so that we may obtain the blessing. There is no condemnation if we hold on unto the end.

The pleasures of the world are a hindrance to spiritual growth and should not be indulged in. We attend the theatre, the card party, the dance or use strong drink and tobacco at our peril. These desires of the flesh are not in accord with the spiritual life and should be overcome. We are to avoid the very appearance of evil. And we are to be careful lest the cares of this life choke the Word and the spirit of Christ be not found in us. Brothers and sisters, let us give all diligence to make our calling and election sure so that when the Lord comes there will be for us no condemnation.

Idleness is contrary to the will of God. Men are created with a disposition to do something in the world; and if they are not engaged in the service of God they will be serving the wicked one. God has a work to do for every one. The father in the gospel said to his son, "Go work today in my vineyard." The great Father above gives the same command to every man today.

The Conference of the Church of God will meet at Brent, I. T., on Thursday night, before the second Sunday in August. Brent is twenty miles west of Ft. Smith, Arkansas. It is a small place, and you may not be able to find it on the maps. Now, dear brethren, come to this Conference if possible. If any of our preaching brethren out of the bounds of our Conference can come, we would be so glad, and would give you a hearty welcome. If there are any isolated brethren any where that can come, come and be with us. Board and lodging will be free for all. We are expecting a glorious time at this meeting. All who come should buy their tickets for Hanson, I. T., where they will be met with conveyance to take them to Conference. We especially invite Bros. Zilmer, Wilson and Underwood. Of course we want all to come who possibly can. We have about twelve preachers who belong to this Conference, and we want them all to be there. While Uncle John Foore is not a member of our Conference, we count him among us, and would be sadly disappointed if he were not with us. Do not forget the time, nor place and be sure and come and enjoy the feast of fat things in store for us. Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

Harvest.

With throbbing heart and tearful eye,
I watched the Spring-time fleeting by;
I saw the snow-drop at its birth
Felled, by spears of rain, to earth;

The violet burst its emerald sheath,
And showed the amethyst beneath;
The painted tulip fade and close
Before the glory of the rose.

And soon, down fields of sun-burnt grass,
I saw the withering, rose-leaves pass,
And night by night, and day by day,
The life of Summer ebbs away.

I saw the granaries overflow,
The mellowing orchards bending low;
Oh, God, my heart in awe and fear
Looks back upon thy perfect year!

Thy bounty covers all the lands;
I lift in prayer my empty hands;
To all the Summer of my life
My harvest is but sin and strife.

Oh could those tears, like April rain,
Make moist my heart's hard soil again,
And stir the seeds which thou didst sow,
Oh never should they cease to flow!

Could prayer but melt this ice away,
Never, never would I cease to pray,
Till thou in mercy, Lord, didst bring
Into my soul a second Spring.
Oh give that rich reward and sweet;
I'll lay its harvest at thy feet!

The Assembling of Ourselves Together. No. 2.

A very essential part of these assemblies is participation in the memorial of our Lord's death—eating of the loaf, and drinking of the cup of the Lord. It was instituted by the Lord Jesus himself "the same night in which he was betrayed," and it was his will that it should be continued "till he come." 1 Cor. xi. 23-29. This is evident from his own words (Matt. xxvi. 26-29; Mark xiv. 22-25; Luke xxii. 15-22), and also from those of Paul.

This is not a meal at which to satisfy physical appetite. This must be attended to "at home," and not in "the Church of God." 1 Cor. xi. 22, 34. This supper is, first of all, commemorative. "This do in remembrance of me." Luke xxii. 19; 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25. Being familiar with the circumstances of the crucifixion, the believers are forcibly reminded of the body of the Lord Jesus which was "broken" for us, of the shedding of his blood and the giving up of his life on our behalf. "As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show the Lord's death till he come." 1 Cor. xi. 26. Let it be observed that, what we eat and drink, is still bread, a part of the loaf, and the fruit of the vine when so received. It has undergone no change at the hands of a priest; for, first of all, there is no "priest" to officiate at the distribution of the bread and wine; and secondly, no one has been authorized or charged to "charge" bread and wine into the literal flesh and blood of the Lord. Such things can only exist where men have wandered far from the order instituted by the Lord and observed in the early Church.

"The cup of blessing which we bless (blessing stands for giving of thanks, See 1 Cor. xiv. 16), is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" 1 Cor. x. 16. Communion is fellowship, and here is a fellowship in which all the members of the Church participate. In the body of Christ there are no "orders of the clergy" to whom belong special privileges, and who alone have the right to conduct this memorial service. It belongs to all the members of the body. All stand related to Christ the Head, all may eat of the loaf and drink of the cup, thus enjoying in common the blessing of communion with the Lord.

We are to remember the Lord "till he come." Our minds are carried back to the scenes of Calvary, where the blood of Jesus was shed for the remission of sins. Matt. xxvi. 28. His blood ratified the New Covenant which alone secures life from the dead; which blood brought again from the dead that great Shepherd of the sheep, even our Lord Jesus. Heb. xiii. 20. Into this covenant we come through obedience to the Lord, and in it we have "remission of sins." All this we remember when we "eat that bread and drink the cup of the Lord." But not only this. He has also promised that he will come again. And inasmuch as we are commanded to do this till he come, we are at the same time reminded of the Lord's promise to come again, and of our obligations toward him. His coming again is as important in its place as his death. By his preaching he manifested the mystery of God to men; by his death he ratified the covenant, and he comes again to assume the reins of that kingdom which was announced in the proclamation of the gospel, and to give that eternal life which he procured under the terms of the new covenant. Thus are the past and the future linked together by the communion of the body and blood of our Lord.

I have noticed that in nearly every place where the communion is celebrated unleavened bread is used, and in most places the unfermented juice of the grape, but not in all. Why fermented wine should be used when care is exercised to supply unfermented bread, is not clear to me. Has it ever occurred to the brethren what danger lurks in the fermented wine, especially to those who have been drunkards? Inasmuch as no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God (Gal. v. 19-21), why place a cup to the lips of the converted drinker which has at least the tendency to arouse his old appetite? And why create the awful craving in others by the use of the intoxicating article, when the unfermented juice of the grape answers every requirement, and does not contain the fumes of alcohol?

After the reading of the Scripture lesson and an appropriate exhortation by the one in charge, all should be perfectly quiet during the observance of this memorial, thus allowing the participants to quietly ponder the meaning and significance of the occasion. Think of him who said, "This do in remembrance of me." Remember his loyalty and devotion to his Father's will; his obedience unto death, even the death of the cross; his love for the Church in giving his life as a ransom for many; his death that we through him might live. Remember our lasting obligations to him, our debt of gratitude and loving service. In thus communing with our glorified Savior, and exercising communion with one another, having a common interest in our Lord, our hearts are drawn toward him, and toward each other; the bond of union with him and one another is strengthened, and we go from such a celebration with renewed energy to fight the good fight of faith.

As to how often this communion should be observed, let the reader notice the apostle's language to the Corinthian brethren, 1 Cor. xi. 17, 18, 20, 33, 34. For what purpose did those brethren "come together"? Their coming together was ostensibly "to eat the Lord's supper" (v. 20), but on account of certain unwarranted and sinful practices, described at v. 21, 22, it was "not for better, but for worse." v. 17. That such "coming together" was frequent is apparent from the use of the word "often" at v. 26: "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." But how "often" was this memorial to be observed? Notice the fact that the apostle was absent, and the case demanded immediate attention. It could be left as "the rest" which he would not "set in order" when he should come. v. 34. When would he "come"? "Shortly," or soon, according to 1 Cor. iv. 19. Here was another circumstance which could not be deferred until his coming, even though it be "shortly." Other matters could be set in order then, but this must be attended to at once. Either they celebrated the communion once a year, and the time of its observance was very close at hand, or it was celebrated more "often" than annually. Again, either they "came together" but once in each year, or they "came together to eat" oftener than annually. 1 Cor. xi. 33, 34. It is clear from the apostle's references to their assemblies that these were held at frequent intervals, and hence the memorial supper was also observed frequently. In this connection I ask attention to the apostle's "order" to the Corinthian Church. 1 Cor. xvi. 1. They were commanded to do two things:

1. Each one was to lay by itself on the first day of the week as he had been prospered.

2. That so laid by or set apart was to be treasured up, or deposited in the Church treasury. This treasury, according to apostolic advice and sanction, was in charge of the deacons. See Acts iv. 34-37; vi. 1-4. How could that which had been put by itself be deposited in the treasury on the first day of the week, if everyone did not attend to this weekly "gathering" and depositing? The said gathering was to be attended to before the apostle's coming, so that there might be no gatherings at that time. This matter, like the other, required immediate attention, and was to be attended to the first day of each week by every one of them. Thus we have two facts before us:

1. The Corinthian Church gathered together on the first day of the week.

2. At these gatherings they observed the memorial of the Lord's Supper, and also remembered their poor brethren. And all of this was by apostolic authority and "order." The Church today will do well to observe this order for its own edification. If the apostle's exhortation to not forsake the assembling together, as the manner of some was (Heb. x. 24), was applicable at that time, it is "so much the more" applicable now as we "see the day approaching." Religious indifference, worldliness, and the love of money are about us on every side, pushing their claims; and hence the need of constant watchfulness and the conscientious and diligent use of all the means God has given us to cultivate the spiritual mind, even in this present evil world. They who separate themselves, will all too soon manifest the absence of that Spirit by which the true believer is known, and sensuality will be the result. Jude 19. They who faithfully use every means placed before us for our edification and comfort, grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; they are filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; they walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and, increasing in the knowledge of God, are strengthened with might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness. Col. i. 9-11. They love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and the brethren out of a pure heart fervently. Their heart is warm, their hand is ready to help, their purse is open to assist in every good work; in short, they have turned to the living God to serve him, and to wait for his Son from heaven. 1 Thess. i. 9, 10.

To the Sisters in Indiana and Elsewhere.

Dear Sisters:

You will see by referring to the Program of the Indiana Conference, that I have been requested to take charge of the "Sister's Hour." Now I would just love to hear from every Sister in the state. Some kind of an exhortation, greeting, comment on favorite passage of Scripture, your hope, suggestions as to special work that we might do, needs in your own home church, etc. I have asked for some special papers on "The Sermon on the Mount," but that does not mean that other subjects are excluded. There are many Sisters now living in other states who have formerly lived in Indiana. Let us hear from you. We will be so glad to hear that you are still trying to serve the Lord, and anxiously waiting for him. To Sisters outside the State, I say:—Dont you think we had better get acquainted? I do. Let us hear from you. We are commanded to exhort each other, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Send all communications to me, at Plymouth, Ind.

Your Sister, hoping that this service will be acceptable to our Heavenly Father, and an up-lift to each one of us.

Mrs. Eva L. Underwood.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

The Ohio Conference.

Dear Restitution Readers:

In reference to the Ohio State Conference of the Church of God, to be held in Cleveland, August 17 to 20, of which ample notice has been given, it gives me great pleasure to say that the Church in Cleveland has been both active and liberal to make the place of meeting a comfort and pleasure for all who may attend. The Conference Committees have been untiring in their efforts to prepare and to bring together, and to shape matters with an earnest desire for edification and success. So that those who make a sacrifice to attend may return to their home realizing that others also made a sacrifice, and that the meeting was truly a meeting of the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, and that such a Conference is a grand means to the grander end of upholding the Church, spreading the truth and glorifying God and our Lord.

THE 18TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCHES OF GOD IN CHRIST JESUS, IN IOWA.

Brothers and sisters of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, greeting:

The 18th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at their beautiful Campground at Waterloo, commencing 10th and continuing over Sunday, August 27th, 1905.

Full fare is paid on the going trip and ½ fare on the return trip, if you present your certificate properly signed by the President of the Conference. Be sure!!! to get your certificate of the agent when you buy a ticket; otherwise you can get no reduction.

On arriving at Waterloo if the Conference Baggageman is there give him your checks. If he is not there bring checks to Campground. Our baggageman will have a badge upon his hat reading, "Conference Baggage man." Give checks to no other.

Take the street car for Cedar River Park and get off at the Campground.

Tents will be furnished for all. Bring your straw ticks and a few comforters. Board at the Dining Hall, ten cents per meal; or three meals for 25 cents. This is cheaper than you can board at home.

Begin at once to plan on being at the meeting. We need your presence and counsel on the questions of vital importance which will come before the Conference. Come on the first day and stay throughout the entire meeting.

Now brethren and sisters, can you not afford to go to meeting once a year? Some have not the opportunity of attending one of our meetings for a year. Let the words of the prophet sink deep into your hearts and create within you a stronger desire than ever before to be present at this meeting. Invite your neighbors and friends to come and spend a ten days' vacation in this beautiful park. If we cannot interest them in our Campground, there are plenty of amusements in the park to enable them to pass away the time very pleasantly.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

In the Chambers of the King.

In the chambers of the King—as a guest—
We have access, after business, to the best:
All the hurry and the tumult dies away,
And the spirit through its Advocate can pray:
In the chambers of the King, there is rest.

In the busy tides of life, cares annoy,
And the gold is here a mixture of alloy:
But within this calm and holy resting place
We have glimpses of his glory and his face:
In the chambers of the King, there is joy.

For the privileges of hope there is release;
Here the evil thirsts of the spirit all may cease:
Though without the storm increases with the night,
And we're weary in our wanderings of delight:
In the banquets of the King, there is peace.

Like the pilgrims of the olden time we roam,
And like Jacob, have our visions on the stone;
But the coming of the Master draweth near,
And the final gladsome meeting in the air:
In the chambers of the King, there'll be home.

Christians and Amusements. No. 2.

I wish to speak in this article of Sunday ball games and Sunday excursions. Both are what is called "popular," and both are hurtful in their moral effect. Neither has in it a redeeming feature. Both tend to lawlessness and licentiousness. They are frequented for the most part by persons who have little regard for the rights of others. Base ball clubs often show disregard for the rights of mankind and very little respect for law and order. Sunday base ball games in small towns and in the country are in violation of the law. And yet in almost every town, whether large or small, as well as in the country, great crowds assemble every Sunday during the warm season to witness the ball game. The spectators who pay their admission fees and watch the game with intense interest—who are they? They are the citizens of the community in which the game is played, many of them church members. What is the effect of such attendance at the Sunday ball game? Does it tend to heighten spirituality? Does it soften the disposition and elevate the character? If from its tendencies I have judged the institution rightly, these things can not be attributed to the Sunday ball game. But on the contrary, it does harden the heart, estrange both the participants and spectators from God, and is a breeder of lawlessness. Not only is ball playing in certain localities a violation of the law; it also breeds other forms of lawlessness. Liquor is taken to the ball ground, and is either vended or given away, and drunkenness is the result. Gambling and betting, both lawless and sinful, are carried on and encouraged.

The Sunday excursion is evil in its tendencies. The railroad company which runs the excursion finds this an easy way of increasing its revenues. The "rest" and the "enjoyment" advertized in the bills are the bait with which the dollars are drawn from the pockets of the pleasure seekers. But instead of getting "rest" at the Sunday excursion, the rest usually follows after the excursion is past and continues for several days before the normal condition is reached. As to the promised "enjoyment"—by the time one has weighed all the hardships incident to the Sunday excursion, the early rising, perhaps at midnight, the hurry and bustle to the train, the smoke and dust of the road, the scorching heat before the destination is reached, the tobacco fumes, the boisterous talk of some of the pleasure seekers, the chase for enjoyment after arrival at the destination, the repetition of the same discomforts on the way back, often drunkenness and fighting,—when one has weighed all these things in comparison with the scant enjoyment that is derived from a day's trip to some large city, the "enjoyment" sinks into utter insignificance. The "day out" that is "enjoyed" at the Sunday excursion reminds one of the old lady who had been sick for a number of years. Said she, when questioned as to the state of her health, "I have enjoyed very poor health these many years." What about the Christian whose body is the Lord's and should not be abused by the kind of treatment it receives on the Sunday excursion? What about the follower of Christ whose mind is to be filled with holy thoughts instead of the humdrum and clatter of the Sunday excursion, besides the profanity and boisterous noises he is obliged to hear? Do such surroundings contribute toward a spiritual mind? Not at all, but quite the contrary.

If he has one spark of spirituality at the start, it has not only not received any new material, but has been lost, and it requires days and weeks to get back to his normal spiritual condition. Reader, am I not telling you the truth? I am not trying to deprive you of any real enjoyment that may import to you some lasting good, but am seeking to warn you against the things that will rob you of your crown. There are "fleshly lusts which war against the soul." 1 Peter ii 11. Remember, we are not now in this world as permanent residents who may settle down to the enjoyment of the things the world has to offer. We are "strangers and pilgrims," as the apostle so aptly pointed out. Hence it is necessary to "abstain from" those fleshly lusts which war against the soul, the real interests of the self. We are living in a time when men shall be lovers of their own selves and lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. 2 Tim. iii. 1-4. This is an evidence of the apostasy and a mark of the last days. The departure from the faith can not but have its effect upon the conduct. When men become satisfied that it matters little or nothing what they believe, it will not take them long, if they reason correctly, to reach the conclusion that it matters not what they do. This condition now exists. Men are lulled to sleep with the pleasing fancy that they may be saved regardless of whether they believe God or not; in fact, they rather think that all men will be saved in the end, whether they believe in God's Word or no. And thus has this erroneous idea filtered into men's minds until they have come to believe they may be saved regardless of what they do. Some time ago the writer of these lines earnestly entreated a man whose parents had been believers to obey the Lord Jesus Christ in order to obtain eternal salvation (Heb. vi. 9), when the person answered, "Well, I believe in the larger hope." This means that all men will finally be saved. With this so-called "larger hope" a man will justify himself to continue in the liquor business, and to put off his salvation, flattering himself with the vain hope that if he does not embrace the opportunity of the present life to "lay hold on eternal life," another and perhaps better opportunity will come to him later on. I mention this because it shows the tendencies of the time in which we are living. Let us be careful, and not run in the same excess of riot and godlessness into which the vain and thoughtless world goes, but let us deny ourselves of every sinful pleasure; deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and be looking for that blessed hope, and the appearing of the glory of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. Titus ii. 13, 14.

Brothers and sisters of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, greeting:

Full fare is paid on the going trip and ½ fare on the return trip, if you present your certificate properly signed by the President of the Conference. Be sure!!! to get your certificate of the agent when you buy a ticket; otherwise you can get no reduction.

Tents will be furnished for all. Bring your straw ticks and a few comforters. Board at the Dining Hall, ten cents per meal; or three meals for 25 cents. This is cheaper than you can board at home.

Now brethren and sisters, can you not afford to go to meeting once a year? Some have not the opportunity of attending one of our meetings for a year. Let the words of the prophet sink deep into your hearts and create within you a stronger desire than ever before to be present at this meeting. Invite your neighbors and friends to come and spend a ten days' vacation in this beautiful park. The Ohio Conference.

Dear Restitution Readers:

In reference to the Ohio State Conference of the Church of God, to be held in Cleveland, August 17 to 20, of which ample notice has been given, it gives me great pleasure to say that the Church in Cleveland has been both active and liberal to make the place of meeting a comfort and pleasure for all who may attend. The [illegible] Committees have been [illegible] their efforts to prepare and to [illegible] together, and to shape matters [illegible] an earnest desire for edification and success. So that those who make a sacrifice to attend may return to their home realizing that others also made a sacrifice, and that the meeting was truly a meeting of the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, and that such a Conference is a grand means to the grander end of upholding the Church, spreading the truth and glorifying God and our Lord.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

We trust that the different state conferences to be held soon will each be well attended, and that good work will be done for the Master.

The yellow fever at New Orleans is still gaining, in spite of the efforts to check it. So far it has been confined to prescribed limits, and it is hoped that the authorities will soon have it under control.

There is little to say regarding affairs between Russia and Japan. The peace negotiations are going forward very slowly. Nearly every day there is report made of a rupture narrowly averted, so that it is in no way certain that peace will come yet.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. The question has arisen: "Is the Bible conception of eternal life scientific? Suppose we study this topic briefly. Now, Albert, will you be kind enough to favor us with a thought upon this line?

Albert. All right. We will make some quotations from scientists, but especially from Drummond during this study. I think that when science can demonstrate to us what natural life is, it will have some show in defining what spiritual life is. Science has shown one thing, and that is that life, either natural or spiritual can only be derived from some pre-existing life; but it cannot demonstrate to us, what that life is. The spiritual life cannot be an evolution produced by the cultivation of the natural man. Mental effort, moral character and an exemplary walk in life, can develop an improved natural man, but it can never evolve the spiritual man from the natural by cultivation.

Q. Why not?

A. Because science has shown that as the natural life can never come from spontaneous generation; neither can death generate life of any kind. "Life can only come from the touch of a prior life;" so likewise, the natural life can never be exchanged for the spiritual life, except by the touch of prior existing spiritual life. No cultivation of the natural will give that touch.

Q. How can the natural come in touch with the spiritual?

A. Only by a strict compliance with the law of regeneration. Scientific principles or laws govern the development of each kind of life. If the natural law which governs the successive stages in the development of the natural life is interfered with in any one of its stages, the new life which has been started, will never come to maturity as an earth-born individual.

Q. Are the laws which govern the development of the spiritual life equally as necessary to be complied with, as those which govern the natural?

A. Yes. They cannot be interfered with in any of their development stages, if they are, there will be just as great a failure in bringing to the birth children after the power of an endless life.

Q. Did Paul recognize the fact, that the new life must be developed according to some well defined law?

A. Certainly.

Q. What did he call that law?

A. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

Q. What attaches to the natural?

A. Sin and death.

Q. Where can the "Spirit of life" be found?

A. "In Christ Jesus."

Q. Where must we go to secure the spirit life?

A. To where is it found—"in Christ Jesus."

Q. Won't it do to go to Adam for that life in place of Jesus Christ?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because the "Spirit of life," is not found in him.

Q. What law is found in Adam?

A. "The law of sin and death." "All in Adam die." Death is found in Adam.

Q. What relation does the "law of the Spirit of life" sustain to "the law of sin and death?"

A. Paul says: "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Rom. i. 2.

Q. What distinction does Paul draw as to the origin of these two Adams?

A. "The first man Adam was made a living soul." "Is of the earth, earthy." "The last Adam was made a quickening Spirit." "The second man is the Lord from heaven."

Q. What did the first Adam originate from?

A. "Earth, earthly."

Q. What are all in Adam?

A. "Earth, earthy." Neither science or Scripture will admit, or teach, that the earthy can generate the spiritual. "Like cause, like effect," is true in all cases.

Q. Now we have ascertained the nature of Adam and his descendants. What was the origin of the last Adam?

A. "The last Adam was made a quickening (or life-giving) Spirit."

Q. Where is the second man from?

A. "The second man is the Lord from heaven."

Q. To what is his origin attributable?

A. To the Holy Spirit. Says the angel to Joseph, "Do not be afraid to take Mary for your wife, for her unborn child has been conceived by the power of the Holy Spirit." "She was found to be with child—by the power of the Holy Spirit." Matt. 20th Cent. Trans. "The Holy Spirit will come to you, the angel replied, and the power of the Most High shall envelop you, and therefore it is that your child shall be called holy, and Son of God." Luke 20th Cent. Trans. Thus it is that one Adam is of "the earth earthy," and the other "the Lord from heaven." "The power of the Most High," which begat Jesus, is "from heaven."

In place of the personality of Jesus being from heaven, the power which begat him was from that source, in place of being of "the earth, earthy," like the "first man." If his paternity had been from an earthy man his origin could not have been "from heaven," and would have been just as much earthy as was Adam.

Q. What is the nature of all those who are in Christ Jesus?

A. "Earthy."

Q. Will they always remain earthy in nature?

A. "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. xv. 48, 49.

Q. What will produce the change?

A. By coming in touch with the heavenly life, in accompliance with the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

Q. If the "Spirit of life (is) in Christ Jesus," we must look to him for quickening power, should we not?

A. Yes, providing we seek for it in accordance with the law—"the law of the Spirit of life"—governing the impartation of that life. The quickening power is in him. "The Son quickeneth whom he will." John v. 21.

Q. Is that "Spirit of life," the quickening power?

A. Yes. "If the (quickening) Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. viii. 11.

Q. From whence did Jesus derive the "Spirit of life?"

A. For as the Father hath life ("the Spirit of life") in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have (the Spirit of) life in himself." "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so, the Son quickeneth whom he will." Hence we must look to the Son for quickening power. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made free from the law of sin and death." That life can only be imparted in harmony with the law relating to that life, even also as the natural life can only be generated in harmony with the law which governs that life. As far as science goes the spiritual life is as scientifically generated as the natural life.

Teacher. Now, Carrie, will you please give us the views of Drummond on the science of eternal life?

A. Yes. He says: "We are now all but in sight of our scientific definition of eternal life. The desideratum is an organism with a correspondence of a very exceptional kind. It must lie beyond the reach of those mechanical actions, and those variations of available food, which are liable to stop the process going on in the organism. When the action of food ceases the organism will disintegrate. The natural life must go beyond this.

"Before we reach eternal life we must pass beyond that point at which all ordinary correspondences inevitably cease. We must find an organism so high and complete, that at some point in its development it shall have added a correspondence which organism, death is powerless to arrest. We must in short, pass beyond that finite region where correspondencies depend on evanescent and material media, and enter a further region where the environment corresponded with, is itself eternal. The environment of the spiritual life is outside the influence of these mechanical actions of (the natural) which sooner or later interrupt the processes going on in all finite organisms. If then, we can find an organism which has established a correspondence with the spiritual life, that correspondence will possess the elements of eternity."

Ella. Before we go any further, I would like to know in what sense the words "correspondence" and "environment" are used?

Teacher. Different kinds of organisms require an environment suited to its organism. For example, the organism of a fish requires a very different environment from that of a bird.

Place a living fish in the environment of a bird (on land) the fish must soon die, because the environment of a bird will not correspond with the organism of a fish to sustain life. Likewise the environment of a fish, will not correspond with the organism of a bird.

"All dissolution is brought about practically in the same way. A certain condition in the environment fails to be met by a corresponding condition in the organism, and this is death. And conversely, the more an organism in virtue of its complexity can adapt itself to all the parts of its environment the longer it will live. The life will continue only while the correspondence continues. The completeness of the life will be proportionate to the completeness of the correspondence; and the life will be perfect only when the correspondence is perfect."

For eternal life, the organism must establish such a correspondence with the spiritual life, that will possess the elements of eternity. "The environment must be perfect. If it is not perfect, if it is not the highest, if it is endowed with the finite quality of change, there can be no guarantee that the life of its correspondents will be eternal. But grant a spiritual organism, is in perfect correspondence with a perfect spiritual environment, then conditions will exist by which life may be perpetuated endlessly."

This is the scientific argument with regard to the life eternal.

Enid. But does the above harmonize with Scripture?

Teacher. I will answer this by another quotation from Drummond.

"Let us turn for a moment to the definition of eternal life laid down by Christ. Let us place it alongside the definition of science and mark the points of contact. Uninterrupted correspondence with a perfect environment is eternal life according to science. 'This is eternal life,' said Christ, that they may know thee, the only true God, Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.' To know God, is to correspond with God. To correspond with God is to correspond with a perfect environment. The organism which attains to this, in the nature of things must live forever." "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body (an organism now subject to an imperfect environment) and fashion (or form) it like unto his glorious body,"—a perfect organism, with perfect environment, and perfect correspondence.

George. How can this come?

Teacher. By re-generation. "It comes not from generation, but from re-generation." That which is flesh is flesh. Instead of attaching immortality to the natural organism, he introduces a new and original factor, which few of the theological theories seem to take into account"—"He that hath the Son of God hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." This as we take it, defines the correspondence which is to bridge the grave. This is the clue to the nature of the life which lies at the back of the spiritual organism. And this is the true solution of the mystery of eternal life."

Arlon. Does science teach that the spiritual, immortal, and eternal can [illegible] in that which [illegible] correspond with within [illegible] flesh?

Teacher. No. Science teaches that "Emotion, volition, thought itself, are functions of the brain. When the brain is impaired, they are impaired. When the brain is not they are not. Everything ceases with the dissolution of the material fabric, muscular activity, and mental activity perish alike."

Buchner in "Force and Matter" p. 282, says: "Unprejudical philosophy is compelled to reject the idea of an individual immortality (by nature) and of a personal continuance after death. With the decay and dissolution of its material substratum, through which alone it has acquired a conscious existence and become a person, and upon which it was dependent, the spirit must cease to exist."

Lucy. I want to ask, if you find the above in harmony with Scripture teaching?

Teacher. I do. I call your attention to Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

George. Then if man lives again he must look to some higher source than nature to give it him must he not?

Teacher. Yes. Drummond says: "It ought to be placed in the forefront of all Christian teaching that Christ's mission on earth was to give men life. 'I am come' he said, 'that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly.' And that he meant literal life, literal spiritual and eternal life, is clear from the whole course of his teaching and acting. To impose a metaphysical meaning on the commonest word of the New Testament, is to violate every canon of interpretation."

"Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life," is still a live question, clearly answered in the Word of Truth.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The night cometh when no man can work. Remember this, O minister, as you preach; O teacher, as you ply your pupils with the truth. Remember this, O rich men who feel generally that you should do good, but put it off. Oh, the littleness and the meanness of that sickly appetite for sympathy, which will not let us keep our sorrows to ourselves! Let us hide our pains and sorrows. When the very darkness within us creates a sunshine around us, then has the spirit of Jesus taken possession of our souls.—Fredrick W. Faber.

An Oasis in Life's Pathway.

"My grace is sufficient for thee." 2 Cor. 12-9.

When our bodies are racked with pain, and disappointments, and seeming persecutions come upon us, it is human nature to become discouraged and despondent. The Apostle Paul was no exception to this rule, as we learn in 2 Cor. xii. 7, 8, but after thrice appealing to the Lord for relief, he receives, not the removal of the affliction, but the comforting words of verse 9. "My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness." And Paul continues, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me," and he further says in verse 10, "Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distress for Christ's sake; for when I am weak then am I strong."—Weak physically, but strong in faith and service of the Lord.

We do not receive direct messages from the Lord as did his apostles; neither by angelic messengers, as did the Savior and the ancient worthies: but we have God's Holy Word as a "Lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path," and by carefully and prayerfully studying which we may learn how messages and blessings may, and do come to us, and in ways unexpected.

The writer hereof has had occasion to realize this. On account of rheumatism of long standing, he has not been able to mingle in society, or meet in worship, with those of like precious faith, until he could sympathize with Paul in his "Thorn in the flesh;" but the Lord's consoling message, "My grace is sufficient for thee," came in the form of forty of the "Household of faith," suddenly dropping in on him, on the beautiful evening of August 11, serving ice cream and cake, and spending the evening very enjoyably in social converse, gospel songs, prayer and exhortations. Then could we with the faithful apostle, rejoice in our infirmities, distresses and disappointments.

The joyful occasion closed with the soul inspiring song,

O! how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again.

Suppose a boy has a lot of cigarettes and smokes a few of them every day. Is there any injury in this? I can tell you, for I have had such boys for patients. Such smoking, even in so-called moderation, (as if there was any such thing as moderation in stimulants for the young) will do three things for him: 1. It will run his pulse up to one hundred or more per minute. 2. It will reduce his weight below the healthy standard. 3. It will reduce his strength and general vitality, as will appear in his pale complexion and diminished appetite. Cigarette smoking is one of the worst habits physically that a boy can get. —Harpers Young People.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

Let love be the ruling passion of your lives, for God is love. He who does not love does not know God, because God is love. By this the love of God to us was manifested, and God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if "God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." 1 John iv. 8 11. You observe that love is first in the list of graces. Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Against such there is no law. Gal. v. 22. There is much in that little word love. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." Love is the fulfilling of the law. Rom. xiii. 10. Charity (love R. V.) covereth a multitude of sins. Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not: seeketh not her own; thinketh no evil; heareth all things; love never faileth. 1 Cor. xiii. 4-8. We are commanded to have fervent love among ourselves. 1 Peter iv. 8. Not a bogus love but genuine love. We will do well to heed Joseph's advice to his brethren. See, said he, that ye fall not out by the way. Gen. xlv. 24. If a brother or sister is overtaken in a fault, do not tell it abroad, go to them with love and kindness, weep and pray over it, and try to restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering ourselves lest we also be tempted. Gal. vi. 1. Be willing to forgive men their trespasses, that our loving Father may forgive us. Let us think for a moment, is there a day of our lives that we have not cause to ask God for forgiveness? If we cannot, with a loving heart, forgive a wrong, will our heavenly Father forgive us? Where there is a lack of love there is something wrong, then let us have fervent love among ourselves, for love shall cover a multitude of sins. Love is the first and great commandment. Paul tells us in Col. iii. 14, "Above all things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness." Put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand. We have only crossed the Red Sea and a wilderness of temptations lie before us 'ere we reach the promised land. We must each one remember that a race begun is not a race well run. Dear ones, let me entreat you with all earnestness and affection, so run that ye may obtain the prize. Be clad in all the gospel armor, you need every piece. Gird God's blessed truth around you with watchfulness and prayer, having on a righteous breastplate, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; shield your heart with faith and love, take the helmet of salvation, grasp the Sword of the Spirit, and firmly cling to God's dear Word, and an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of God.

Yours waiting.

Keturah Rogers.

God's King, Jesus, is to rule in righteousness. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord of our Righteousness." Jer. xxiii. 5, 6. We can clearly see in this that it will be a government entirely different from the one we have now. The poor are continually being oppressed. The Psalmist writes of his righteousness and his judgment better than any one can tell it. "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth. In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

A. Ablaksen.

For every good deed of ours, the world will be better always. Perhaps no day does a man walk down a street cheerfully and like a child of God, but what some one is brightened by his face, and unknown to himself, catching from its look something of religion.

Poetry.

The Burden Bearer.

Christian, when thy way seems darkest,
When thine eyes with tears are dim,
Straight to God, thy Father hastening,
Tell thy troubles all to him;
Not to human ear confiding
Thy sad tale of grief and care,
But before thy Father kneeling,
Pour out all thy sorrows there.

Sympathy of friends may cheer thee
When the fever wild from his hand,
But God only can console thee
When it breaks upon thee first;
Go with words, or tears, or silence,
Only lay thee at his feet,
Then shalt prove how great his pity,
And his tenderness how sweet.

Think, too, thy Divine Redeemer knows as thou canst never know,
All the deepest depths of suffering,
All the weight of human woe;
And though now in glory seated,
He can hear thy feeblest cry—
Even hear the stifled sighing
In thy dark hour of agony.

All thy griefs to him are ordered,
Needful is each one for thee;
Every tear he bids thee shed—
Once to wash the crimson red
Yet if want thy life embitter,
Or if sorrow thy soul bow,
Let not even his way seem blackly,
Let not even his way seem blackly,
Let not even his way is right.
Do not think a bitter tear of anguish
Precious is in Jesus' sight.

For if so well the Savior loves thee,
He will bless thy life to be
One long, calm, unbroken summer—
One unruffled, stormless sea;
It would leave the lonely nestling
Closer to his loving breast;
It would have that world seem brighter
Which alone is perfect rest.

Though his wise and loving purpose
Clearly yet thou may'st not see,
Still believe, with faith unshaken,
All will work for good to thee;
Therefore when thy way is gloomy,
And thine eyes with tears are dim,
Straight to God, thy Father, hastening,
Tell thy sorrow all to him.

The Book of Daniel.

Chapter 12.

1. And in that period Michael the great ruler who stands over the sons of thy laity will arise: and there will be a period of tribulation, such a tribulation as hath not occurred since there became a nation on the earth until this period. In this period thy laity will have been saved all (thy laity) that hath been written in the book.

2. And many of those who lie sleeping in the sepulchar-mould of the earth will have been awakened, these unto eternal life and those unto reproach and eternal shame.

3. And those who understand will shine like the splendor of the firmament as it were, and by reason of the many justified ones like the stars as it were for the animate-ages and still on.

4. And do thou Daniel shut up the words and seal the book until the fulfilment of an appointed-time, until many shall have been taught and the way of comprehension shall have been made full.

5. And I Daniel saw, and lo, two others were standing, one on this side of the brink of the river and one on that side of the brink of the river;

6. And one said unto the man clad with the linen traveling garments, who was over the water of the river; until when is the limit of these wondrous things of which thou hast spoken?

7. And I heard the man clad with the traveling garments who was over the water of the river, and he lifted up his right-hand and his left-hand towards the firmament, and swore by the one who liveth forever that it was until a definite period of definite-periods and half of a definite-period; when the dispersion shall have been consummated will they comprehend all these things.

8. And I heard and did not understand, and I said, O lord, what are the last of these things?

9. And he said, Come hither, Daniel, because the words have been shut up and sealed until the end of a definite-period.

10. Until many shall have been chosen out and made white and purified by fire and sanctified; and until transgressors shall have transgressed; and no transgressors will understand, and those with the right mind (the mind of Christ) will understand.

11. And from the definite-period of the passing away of the continuous daily sacrifice and the allowing of the abomination of desolation there will be twelve hundred and ninety days.

12. Blessed happy he who endureth and attaineth unto thirteen hundred and thirty-five days.

13. And do thou come hither and rest; for still are there days and hours unto the fulfilment of a consummation, and thou wilt arise (resurrection meant) unto thy allotment unto a consummation of days.

Bel and Drakon.

1. And the king Astuages was added to his fathers and Kuros (Cyrus) the Persian took his kingdom.

2. And Daniel was a companion of the king and more renowned than all his friends.

3. And the Babuloonians had an idol by the name of Bel; and twelve Artabai of fine flour and forty sheep and six measures of wine were being lavishly furnished it each day.

4. And the king revered it and went his way each day daily to worship it: but Daniel was worshiping his God; and the king said unto him, Why dost thou not worship Bel?

5. And he said, Because I do not revere an idol made with hands, but the living God who colonized the heavens and the earth and who hath lordship of all flesh.

6. And the king said unto him, Doth not Bel seem to thee to be a living God? or dost thou not see all that he eateth and drinketh each day daily?

7. And Daniel said, Be not led astray, O king, for this thing is clay within and copper without, and never hath eaten.

8. And the king was angry and called his priests and said unto them, If ye do not tell me who it is who devoureth this lavish supply

9. Ye will be put to death; but if ye demonstrate that Bel devoureth the things, Daniel will be put to death, because he hath blasphemed against Bel; and Daniel said, Let it occur according to thy word.

10. And there were seventy priests of Bel besides wives and children; and the king went with Daniel into the house of Bel;

11. And the priests of Bel said, Lo, we will run away outside, but do thou, O king, set the kinds of food alongside, and mix and place the wine, and shut the door and seal it with thy finger-ring;

12. And when thou hast come in the morning if thou dost not find all the things have been eaten by Bel we may be put to death, or Daniel who is bearing false witness against us.

13. Now they knew well that a hidden entrance had been made under the table, and that through it they were accustomed to enter constantly and take the things away.

14. And it came to pass when they had gone out and the king had placed the food beside Bel, that Daniel directed his young men, and they brought cumerar,-ashes and sprinkled the whole inner-temple floor in the presence of the king alone: and going out they closed the door and sealed it with the finger-ring of the king and went away.

15. And the priests came in the night as was their custom, they and their wives and children and ate and drank up everything.

16. And the king arose at dawn and Daniel with him;

17. And he said, Are the seals safe, O Daniel? And he said, they are safe, O king.

18. And it came to pass straightway when he had opened the doors that the king looked at the table, and shouted with a great voice, Great art thou, O Bel, and there is no deceit on thy part, not at all;

19. And Daniel laughed, and held the king back from entering in, and said, See the pavement and become aware whose these footsteps are;

20. And the king said, I see the foot-prints of men and women and children; and the king becoming wrathful, he

21. Then seized the priests and their wives and children, and they showed him the hidden doors, through which they had been accustomed to go their way in and lavishly dispose of the things on the table.

22. And the king slew them and gave Bel unto Daniel as a cast-off thing; and he, (Daniel) overturned him and his temple.

23. And there was a great drakoon (dragon in common parlance) and the Babuloonians were revering him.

24. And the king said to Daniel, Thou wilt not say that he also is copper, wilt thou? Lo, he liveth and eateth and drinketh; thou canst not say that this is not a living God; and do thou worship him.

25. And Daniel said, The Lord my God will I worship, because he is a living God.

26. And do thou, O king, give me official-power and I will kill the drakoon without sword and club; and the king said unto Daniel I give thee it.

27. And Daniel took pitch and fat and hair and cooked upon the same and made barley cakes, and gave them into the mouth of the drakoon, and the drakoon ate and was rent asunder; and he said, See your objects of veneration.

28. And it came to pass when the Babuloonians heard it, they were very much annoyed and conspired against the king and said, The king hath become a Joudaian; he hath dragged down Bel and killed the drakoon, and he hath slaughtered the priests.

29. And coming they said unto the king, Deliver up Daniel to us; and if thou dost not we will kill thee and thy household.

30. And the king saw that they were pressing very hard upon him, and the king under compulsion gave up Daniel to them;

31. And they cast him into the pit of the lions, and he was there six days;

32. Now there were in the pit seven lions, and they were accustomed to give them daily two carcases and two sheep; (the term translated "carcases" here usually applied to human bodies). But the n these were not give n to them, that they might devour Daniel.

33 And the prophet Ambakoum (Habbakuk in all the versions) was in Joudaia, and had a boiled mess and crumbled bread with it in a hollow vessel, and was going his way to the plain to carry it to the reapers (or summer harvesters).

34. And the angel of the Lord said to Ambakoum, carry the luncheon which thou hast to Babuloon to Daniel in the pit of the lions;

35. And Ambakoum said, Lord, I have not seen Babuloon, and I do not know the pit.

36. And the angel of the Lord took him by the crown of h s head, and carried him by the hair of his head, and placed him in Babuloon over and above the pit with the rushing motion of his spirit.

37. And Ambakoum called saying, Daniel, Daniel take the lunch which God hath sent thee;

38. And Daniel said, Thou hast been mindful of me indeed, O God, and hast not utterly forsaken those who love thee;

39. And Daniel arose and ate; and the angel of God restored Ambakoum straightway to his place:

40. And the king came on the seventh day to sorrow for Daniel, and he came to the pit and looked in, and lo, Daniel seated;

41. And shouting with a great voice he said, Great art thou, O Lord God of Daniel, and there is no other besides thee;

42. And he drew him up and the accusers for his loss he cast into the pit, and straightway they were devoured in his sight.

Comment.

The portion of this chapter with the separate heading entitled Bel and the Drakoon has been made apocryphal in all the versions and entitled "Bel and the Dragon"—and this too without any good reason; for it contains additional information not contained elsewhere in the Scriptural record both historical and biographical. By changing the name Bel to "Bel" the average reader would not imagine it to be the same personal name as Baal in the earlier books of Scripture and the drakoon worship here in Babuloon was but one of the many forms of Baal-worship that have come down even to our times and are even now perpetuated in our very midst by our Chinese population. The sin and degrading consequences of it, as Paul so clearly puts it, lies not in the idol as a thing, but in the worship of the demon which is always back of it.

Note also that we are informed here that Astuages was the immediate predecessor of Cyrus (Kuros) and not Dareios which statement agrees with the record Herodotos gives.

The incredibility of the story about the prophet Ambakoum being transported from Joudaia to Babuloon by the angel to minister to Daniel seems to me puerile on the part of the critics who accept and maintain the record of other miraculous facts still more incredible to the unspiritual minded, and skeptical trifler. Who knows how Philip after baptizing the eunuch was transported to Azootos? or how Jesous himself easily evaded human toils and snares and passed at will through mobs seeking to kill him as long as he chose so to do?

We have moreover a good reason for the plot against Daniel's life briefly given in an earlier chapter of this book, here stated in detail, and who has not wondered why the king so easily gave him into the hands of his enemies—all made clear in the fuller record here given. It seems that the king of the court was in a very close corner himself growing out of this Baal incident and the king's conversion to the Javah worship, which also throws light on some statements about Kuros (Cyrus) in Hecaiah's (Isaiah) and makes clear how through Daniel's influence and agency he became such an important instrumentality in God's hand to uproot, and overturn old established dynasties.

Again, notice that Daniel's solutions of idolatrous mysteries and humbugs are always in the line of enlightened reasoning and common sense. This is the most practical lesson of the whole book to us in this practical 20th century of the Christian era. If Daniel does not know a thing it is "sealed" till he does know it. He does not indulge in what Paul calls "wicked suppositions," a practice so much in vogue with modern theologians. I hope I have made clear some of the vague and contradictory things in all the "versions" of this old book and with this new translation of it put into the hands of sincere piety a new means of harmonizing "the truth as it is in Christ" for these "last days."

Editor Restitution:

I would like to present a few thoughts on baptism. Christ says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark xvi. 10. Can a man omit baptism and be saved? We hope to in the future become citizens of God's kingdom. To do so we must be born of the water (baptism) and of the Spirit (the resurrection). Jno. iii. 5. Paul declares the wages of sin is death. Rom. vi. 23. This being true, how can we obtain pardon for our past sins? "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii. 38. "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts xxii. 16. So we see that sins are pardon through baptism. We read that Christ is the firstfruits from the dead, afterwards they that are his at his coming. 1 Cor. xv. 22, 23. We also read that the rest of the dead live not again while the thousand years are finished. Rev. xx. 5. Now, how may we become Christ's and have a part in the first resurrection? "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 29. So we find that to become Christ's and secure a part in the first resurrection (on such the second death will have no power. Rev. xx. 6, we must put Christ on by baptism. When a man buys a tract of land he wants to secure a good deed so he can hold the land. The saints must spend eternity somewhere, and Christ says that where I am (heaven) thither ye can not come. Jno. viii. 34. Have many promise of a home on the earth? We read in Gen. xiii. 15, that God promised the land of Canaan to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting inheritance. Now, to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ. Gal. iii 16. So this earth was given to Abraham and Christ. Where do we get in? For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27, 29. Yes, we find that baptism washes away all our past sins, takes us in the Abrahamic promises, and puts us into the first resurrection.

J. H. Anderson.

"I come down from heaven not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John vi. 38. This statement, with others, leads me to believe that before the Son came down from heaven he had his own will distinct from that of his Father's, but not opposed to it, that he subordinated his will to his Father's, "emptied himself," Phil. ii. 7; came and "took part of the same," (flesh and blood) Heb. xi. 14 16; "knowing that he came from God and went to God." John xiii. 4, died, was raised and the disciples saw "the Son of Man ascending up where he was before." John vi. 62. Confessedly great is the mystery, but it is not solved by denying the record.

Obituary.

Mary Adell Gans was born Dec. 27, 1846 near Grand de Tour, Ill., and died at Lanark, Ill., Aug. 9, 1905, aged 58 years, 7 months and 12 days.

She was the oldest daughter of David and Maria Gans.

Married at Antioch, Ill., Sept. 17, 1865, to Josiah M. Glotfelty, she came with her husband the following year to Lanark, Ill., where she has since made her home.

She put on Christ by baptism at the age of about 16 years and has lived a true Christian life, with the bright hope of a resurrection from among the dead. A supreme love for truth and right, as the ruling passion of her life, found practical expression in loyal devotion to her church.

Though naturally retiring in her disposition, an ardent love for the cause led her always to feel a deep interest in Temperance reform, and made her an active member of the Womens' Christian Temperance Union, she being president of the local society at the time of her death.

Resorting to mourn an unspeakable loss, she leaves her husband, two sons, a sister and a host of sorrowing friends.

J. M. Glotfelty.

Jesse R. Moore was born in Marion Co., Ind., Jan. 17th, 1834. Died at his home in Argos, Ind., Aug 11th, 1905, aged 71 years, 6 months and 24 days.

Brother Moore with his parents, David H. and Jemima Roberts Moore moved to Marshall Co., Ind. in 1835, and has lived here ever since.

By losing his parents in youth, he was early in life thrown upon his own resources. He was reared upon a farm, given a good common school education, and began farming which has been his occupation. In 1857 he was united in marriage with Sarah Allen, who died in 1861. In August 1861 he enlisted as a private in Co., D. 19th Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged Sept. 6, 1864.

At the close of the war he returned to Marshall Co., and in 1866 he was wedded to Miss Ann Starkey, daughter of William D. and Nancy Pugh Starkey, who died Jan. 3, 1877. To this union were born four children, Eva, of Barron, Wis. Sarah of Atkinson, Ill. Lucy J. of Argos, Ind., and Israel, of Anawan, Ill.

In 1878 he was married to Sarah Low, who with the children were with him during his last illness.

He was a member of Argos Lodge No. 162, I. O. O. F. and Argos Lodge No. 399, A. F. and A. M. and was formerly a member of LaFayette Gordon Post, No. 132. He was a member of the Church of God and a devout believer in its faith.

For many years he lived on his farm three miles south east of Argos, but about four years ago he moved to town.

To know him one day was to know him all his life. He was one of the strong, rugged characters of the early settlers of this county, a man of sterling integrity and great industry, one whose word was his bond, a man always charitable to the needy, helping in the building up of schools and churches, with cheerful words for all, in fact—one of nature's noblemen.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer hereof, on Sunday, August 13, at the Church of God, in Argos, after which he was laid to rest awaiting the summons of the Master.

D. E. VanVactor.

Nancy Catherine Strafford was born in Shelby Co., Ind., Aug. 23, 1846, and died at her home at Argos, Aug. 8, 1905, aged 58 years, 11 months, and 16 days. She was married to John Laturner June 19, 1873. To this union two sons were born, William and Bertie, both of whom, with her husband, are living.

Sister Laturner became a member of the Church of God in the year 1882, and was a faithful member of the Church until the time of her death.

The undersigned spoke at the burial service on the words of Job xiv. 1, 2, "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." This condition is due to sin. Salvation from sin must take place in this life; then death will be swallowed up in victory at the coming of Jesus the Life Giver.

A. H. Zilmer.

William J., son of Jacob and Martha Jane Huffer, was born Jan. 27, 1865, and died at his home in Clinton Co., Ind. Aug. 9, 1905, at the age of 40 years, 6 months, and 13 days. He was married to Catherine Smith Nov. 5, 1887.

The deceased became a member of the Church of God in the month of April, 1892, and died after a long illness in the full hope of the gospel. He leaves his wife, four children, one sister, a large circle of relatives, and a host of friends to mourn his death. He was always present at the meetings of the Church when able to attend. He was a great sufferer during the last year of his life, but bore his illness with fortitude and resignation, and longed for the time when we shall be free from sin, sickness and death. May that time soon come.

To the Sisters in Indiana and Elsewhere.

Dear Sisters:

You will see by referring to the Program of the Indiana Conference, that I have been requested to take charge of the "Sister's Hour." Now I would just love to hear from every Sister in the state. Some kind of an exhortation, greeting, comment on favorite passage of Scripture, your hope, suggestions as to special work that we might do, needs in your own home church, etc. I have asked for some special papers on "The Sermon on the Mount," but that does not mean that other subjects are excluded. There are many Sisters now living in other states who have formerly lived in Indiana. Let us hear from you. We will be so glad to hear that you are still trying to serve the Lord, and anxiously waiting for him. To Sisters outside the State, I say:—Dont you think we had better get acquainted? I do. Let us hear from you. We are commanded to exhort each other, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Send all communications to me, at Plymouth, Ind.

Your Sister, hoping that this service will be acceptable to our Heavenly Father, and an up-lift to each one of us.

Meeting Instructive.

On Saturday July 29, we began a weeks meeting at Guthrie Grove, four miles west of Pelzer in Anderson. Co., S. C.

Every member of the Church who could get there was on time for service and each one decided to lay aside their worldly business and devote themselves to the meeting.

This meeting was conducted by the pastor of the church, Elder E. M. Anderson, Elder B. J. Heaton and the writer.

I have never taken part in a meeting where love so filled the heart of each member as it did in this one. To be there was to realize that Jesus was there to own and to bless. Yes, we just gave ourselves to God and asked Jesus to use us for the good of the cause and he did. To stand in the pulpit and preach to people and see their eyes fill with tears of love as they hear the grand old gospel of the kingdom is a great pleasure.

On Saturday, Aug. 5, Elder Anderson assisted by Brother J. W. Fowler, baptized Mrs. Nelson Guthrie, Miss Brewer, a daughter of Brother John Brewer, Mr. Manning Pack and A. T. Anderson. We hope that others will be led to put on Christ by baptism in the near future.

The happiness of life consists, like the day, not in single flashes of light, but in one continued mild serenity. The most beautiful period of the heart's existence is in this calm, equable light, even although it be only moonshine or twilight. Now the mind alone can obtain for us this heavenly cheerfulness and peace.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Paylon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

Rest Remaineth.

Rest remaineth—oh, how sweet!
Flowery fields for wandering feet,
Peaceful calm for sleepless eyes,
Life for death, and songs for sighs.

Rest remaineth; lands that sigh!
Mourning pilgrim, rest is nigh;
Yet a season bright and blest,
Then shall we rest on thy rest.

Rest remaineth, rest from sin;
Hallowed mercy enters in;
Every worrying thought shall cease,—
Rest in purity and peace.

Rest remaineth, rest from cares,
Rest from parting, rest from fears;
Every troubling thought shall be
Lost, my Savior, lost in thee.

Rest remaineth—oh, how blest!
We believe, and we may rest;
Faith, rejoicing, hath been Making all the things that are not seen.

Thus, my Savior, let me be
Even here at rest with thee,
And at last, by thee possessed,
On thy bosom sink to rest.

Communicated.

The Importance of Searching the Scriptures on the Part of the Hearers of the Word.

[The article appearing below is a paper which was prepared for a ministerial convention in 1897 while the writer was making the transition "from darkness to light." It contains some error, but much truth, and it is thought that the reader may profit by its perusal.

A. H. ZUMSTEG.]

It goes without argument in a ministerial convention in the Evangelical Association that the Scriptures, as the different Books of the Bible are called, are of divine origin, that is: they were given by inspiration (or in-breathing) from God. Upon this fact of inspiration hinges their authority. If it could be proven that the sacred writings of the Bible were merely a convenient collection of good and useful moral maxims, conceived by ingenious minds, they would at once lose their dignity, and their authority over men; and it would not matter very much whether their otherwise good precepts were heeded or not. So little does the authority of men count. But here God has spoken, and has expressed his mind concerning the destiny of mankind. And therefore it is of supreme importance that we should give heed to him who has spoken from the heaven, whose Word is laden with a message of life. However, he did not speak to all men, or at all times from the foundation of the world, in the same way, yet he spoke in such ways that those who received his communications could (in part at least) understand him. To "the fathers"—the patriarchs—who lived before Christ, he spoke by means of prophets; men who were specially endowed with the gift of foreseeing and foretelling future events. In the fulness of time, "in these last days" (Heb. i. 1), he spoke to men, and more particularly to the Jew, through his Son whom he sent into the world that the world through him might have life. The writings of the Prophets, and later those of the Apostles and Evangelists, were gathered together, and these, were called "the Scriptures," or things written. It is of the highest importance that these writings, containing the revelation that God had made to holy men concerning his people and the destiny of the world, should be thus collected and preserved in definite and accessible form. Tradition would soon become tainted with foreign substances, and thus the Word of God would be darkened, or lost entirely. We see the wisdom of God in directing men to pen the sacred words from his mouth, and thus handing down to succeeding generations the oracles of God.

It is proper to say at this juncture that the Scriptures were given particularly to the people of God, and that they take little note of the world in general. God speaks to those whom he would have for his special friends; to them he discloses his deep plans and his exalted purposes, as also the destiny of the world now lying in darkness and in the embrace of the wicked one, "the god of this age." 2 Cor. iv. 4. The Scriptures thus given by inspiration of God are said by Paul to be "profitable for teaching, for conviction, for correction, for discipline which is in righteousness; that the man of God may be complete, fully fitted to every good work." 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. "Profitable." A piece of land may be ever so productive, the soil ever so rich, yet it is practically of no profit until it is properly cultivated, sown with good seed, and, other things being equal, a harvest matured and gathered. The quantity and quality of the harvest determine the value of the field. A mountain range may contain the rarest and costliest metals, but these metals are of no benefit whatever to anyone until they are brought forth from their secret chambers, and turned into practical use or coined into convenient mediums of exchange. Thus the Word of God may contain the most precious truths, the most perfect plan for the redemption of fallen man, the most exalted and elevating moral precepts, the most radical and effective remedy for sin, and it does contain all these and more; yet if this mine of truth is not utilized, this storehouse of wealth not used, this field not searched, it is of no benefit to those who even own it. Not in vain are the repeated admonitions to "search the Scriptures." The necessity for the most painstaking and diligent search is best realized by the most devoted students of the Scriptures. He who casually and superficially glances over the sacred pages or even reads a chapter to "satisfy his conscience," realizes but very little of the benefit that accrues to the earnest and untiring seeker for God's truth. The truths God would convey to us were not stated categorically, but in different parts and in many ways, and we therefore see at once that in order to gain an intelligent and coherent knowledge of these truths it is indispensible to search the Scriptures carefully and persistently. The Book of Genesis is not only history, but it also contains much prophecy, some yet unfulfilled, and in fact a prophetic cord pervades the entire catalogue of books and leads us forward to ultimate consummation of God's great "purposes of the ages." Eph. iii. 11. It has pleased God to send men into the world as heralds of the truth, and "by the foolishness of preaching to save those who believe." 1 Cor. i. 21. This preaching, in order to be effective, must come from the Word of God on the one hand, and must be accepted and believed on the other. Otherwise the Word of God becomes of none effect in those who hear. "How shall they call on him on whom they have not believed? How shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear apart from our preaching? .....So faith is by report, but the report by the Word of God." Rom. x. 14, 18. The preaching which does not come from the Word of God, as the natural fruit and outgrowth of earnest, prayerful study surely cannot save anyone; it might possibly be what is called "popular," but the true object of preaching would be entirely lost.

Now, while it is true that God commissioned men and still commissions them to proclaim his truth in the world, it must not be supposed that unqualified approval of all that is being preached, and especially in these days, is necessarily equal to acceptance of God's truth. The Apostle Peter tells us that "there were also false prophets among the people (of Israel), as also among you will be false teachers, who will bring in stealthily destructive sects," etc. 2 Peter ii. 1. Every impartial student of church history, and every close observer of events and circumstances in our day, will notice that these prophetic words of warning have found their exact fulfilment since the day they were penned by the inspired writer. And this being true, we cannot fail to see the great importance and absolute necessity of "searching the Scriptures on the part of the hearers of the Word." "Every (possible) wind (and shade) of teaching in the sleight of men, in craftiness with a view to the systematizing of error" (Eph. iv. 14), is brought to bear against the steadfastness of God's true children, and if they do not themselves feed upon the Word of God and receive its truth into their very make up, they are soon driven to and fro by these "winds," and become wrecks upon the sands of confusion. There is nothing irreverent or unbecoming about such personal (shall I say, independent?) investigation of the Scriptures on the part of the hearers. Paul, a highly educated and divinely enlightened man, who could no doubt preach as no other apostle could, and whose writings carry weight and authority, preached at Beren, but we find the Bereun Jews daily searching the Scriptures whether the things (as affirmed by Paul) were so. Acts xvii 1. 11 He announced, with parchment in hand, that this Jesus whom I preach to you, is the Christ; the Anointed of God, See Psa. ii. 6; Rev. xi. 15. No doubt those people had copies of the Scriptures with them, and searched in them whether Paul's teaching was Scriptural or not. "They searched." The word for search in the original is "anakrino," which means, "to sift again." Such diligent sifting will bring forth from the Word "things new and old;" (Matt. xiii. 52) besides things past and present, also things future. Let no one imagine that God's dealings with men upon this earth will cease with the close of the present dispensation. Peter tells us that the Word of God is "a Word of prophecy" (2 Peter i. 19), and pro phetein reaches out into the future. He also says, that we wait for new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells. It certainly does not dwell in the present earth as its constant and permanent abode.

The writer of this thesis is candidly of the opinion there is a great evil under the sun today, viz: that people go to church, sit through the sermon, admire the speaker's perfect manners and graceful gestures, wonder at his elegant combination of words and sentences, are pleased at the grand climaxes he builds; but when you enquire: "What was the text; what the sermon?" they are often utterly at a loss. And it is to be feared that there are many clergymen who do very little to improve this condition of things in their "intelligent audiences." Little use to "search the Scriptures whether these things are so;" they can be abundantly verified by searching a sensational secular press. Oh, brethren, God's judgments are coming apace, and what did we preach to the people? If "searching the Scriptures on the part of the hearers" is of "importance;" which no one denies, then let us as ministers of Christ and shepherds of the flock urgently advise and constantly encourage a disposition in our hearers to search the Scriptures whether our preaching is truth or not. Neither let us fear or evade their criticism if they have such to offer, and least of all let us warn them against criticising our sermons. If our pulpit productions could not endure the light of friendly criticism from our hearers, how could they pass the search light of God's judgment?

Had the course outlined and recommended in the above lines been pursued by the people since the incipiency of Christendom, we would never, I sincerely believe, have witnessed the spectacle of almost 600—say six hundred—protestant churches; each claiming to be a "special child of providence," and looking with little less than envy upon the success and prosperity of the other. Neither would it have come to the altogether unwarranted assumption of power over the "laity" on the part of an educated and cunning clergy in the Church during the 4th and 5th centuries of the present era, if the people, the "laity" very improperly so-called, had been permitted and encouraged to read and think for themselves, especially as regards the Word of God. What a veritable Babel of confusion there exists in the so-called Christian literature of today. "Of making books there is no end," and yet the more books there are written on the Scriptures and Bible subjects the more confusion and uncertainty we are compelled to behold. Each year adds many new volumes to the already immense amount of conflicting and contradictory Christian literature. And no one is able to calculate when or where this thing will end. Is it not about time that Christian people should lay aside human fabrics, dismiss "authorities," and return to the infallible Word of God for the truth? My heart ached and burns within me as I contemplate the appalling amount of ignorance of God's will existing among apparently intelligent Christian people, and I plead for a return to simple milk of the Word that Christians may grow thereby. Which is the best commentary? I unhesitatingly answer, The Bible itself. There is no text book or commentary written, however pious or learned its author, that is not tainted with some manner of error; but the Word of God, as given by inspiration, is reliable. Many of the so called "helps" to Bible study are very small helps, and often great hindrances in such study. The writer of this essay would urge upon all Christians who hear its reading the absolute and imperative necessity of searching the Scriptures on the part of the hearers of the Word. Go to church, listen attentively and prayerfully to the preacher, but search the Scriptures daily whether the things he affirms are so. This is your privilege, your right, your duty before God. God bless you all. Amen!

Life and Letters of the Apostle Paul as our Example.

No. 8.

After Paul's departure from Philippi, he journeyed through Amphipolis and Appolonia and came to Thessalonica a place about 90 or 100 miles southwest of Phillippi. It stood at the head of the Thermaic Gulf, and was at the time of Paul's visit a most important city, and one of the centers of trade in the eastern part of the Mediterranean Sea. It has had many vicissitudes in the course of history, but is still an important place with a large Jewish and Christian population. His arrival at Thessalonica was ever to Paul a memorable event, as well remembered by him as his departure from Phillippi. With some exultation of feeling, notwithstanding the weariness of his protracted journey, he had entered Thessalonica and began work at once. He made his way to the synagogue. There were apparently enough Jews there to have provided for themselves a building in which to worship. For three successive Sabbaths he reasoned with them. He met them on the common ground of the Old Testament Scriptures familiar to them and to him from their earliest days. His work among them was very great and was not without result. The Thessalonians received his word as the Word of God, and rejoiced in the midst of afflictions. They soon became an example to all believers in the provinces of Macedonia and Achaia, and their Christian life was everywhere known. Paul was tenderly attached to them, and esteemed them as his joy and crown of glorying. While Paul was in Thessalonica he lodged with Jason, who, judging from his name, which was that of an ancient king of Thessaly, was a Macedonian. The success of Paul with the proselytes aroused the jealousy of the Jews, and with a hired mob, they assaulted the house of Jason, but Paul fortunately was not there; but the uproar caused by the Jews put an end to Paul's personal work in Thessalonica. The situation had become dangerous, and Paul and Silas departed by night to Berea. From this brief account we obtain but a faint conception of the greatness of the work done in Thessalonica, and of the conditions under which the work was done. The converts at Thessalonica to whom Paul wrote were of as regards the Word of God. What a veritable Babel of confusion there exists in the so-called Christian literature of today. "Of making books there is no end," and yet the more books there are written on the Scriptures and Bible subjects the more confusion and uncertainty we are compelled to behold. Each year adds many new volumes to the already immense amount of conflicting and contradictory Christian literature. And no one is able to calculate when or where this thing will end. BESSIE NICHOLLS.

Gog of the North.

First appears in Gen. x. as Ma-gog. Ma being regarded by Ezekiel as a prefix signifying one of the great ones, the second son of Japheth. According to the pen picture by Ezekiel xxxviii. Gog is to come from the north with a mighty army to invade the land of Israel in the latter days. Verse 3 and 4 is what I purpose to notice briefly; the prophet is told to say, "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal; and I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws." This is as far as the prophecy is fulfilled. The bringing him forth with a mighty army is as yet sometime in the near future.

In the first place let us enquire why God is against Gog. The reason is because Gog is a proud, selfish and cruel tyrant. The present Czar took an oath to respect the constitution and the laws of Finland, and has ruthlessly trampled them under foot. Poland, Siberia and the massacres of the Jews bear testimony to the savage heathenism of Russia. And the time is near when God will according to promise "break the rod of the oppressor, "Therefore Gog stands in the way—in opposition to God's purpose in the earth, and must be humbled. The means used for this purpose is indicated in the prophecy, "I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws."

Three times in the short space of my memory has Gog been turned back. First in 1854-5-6. Russia made war on Turkey, thinking to gain possession of Constantinople; she was met in the Crimea by England, France and Italy, who after nearly four years of warfare compelled Russia to sign a treaty of peace in Paris, the terms being dictated to Russia by France and England. Thus was Russia "turned back" in her march south.

Then again 1876 she made war on Turkey, and after many reverses by Turkey, she finally drove the Turks as far south as Adrianople in a demoralized condition. At this juncture the British fleet passed up the Dardenelles for the defence of Constantinople; and Russia was again "turned back," and was not allowed to acquire any territory from Turkey. This was when Bismarck and Disraeli were powerful in Europe. The treaty of peace was signed in Berlin. And now after Russia's march through Asia to the Pacific Ocean, she is again turned back by Japan. Russia's deceitful diplomacy has shown itself in Manchuria, inasmuch that recently an American correspondent said, "Japan knows that the word of Russia is not worth the paper it is written on." Napoleon is reported to have said, "China is a sleeping giant, don't wake her up." And now we often read in our daily papers about the awakening of China—certainly Japan is waked up in good earnest. The thought comes to us, are we not entering into the period when the heathen is to wake up, when the "ploughshares" are to be made into swords," and the "pruning hooks into spears." Some have thought and expected that Russia in order to fulfil what the prophets have said concerning her career in the last days should be successful in the war with Japan; but judging the future by the past, there is nothing that will stir up a people to prepare for the future, as will an unexpected defeat. Witness the French nation after Sedan, but their preparation to regain Alsace and Lorain was more than countered by Germany, so that France could not see the time when she thought it safe to make war spread to all nations. The same conditions that led France to make vast preparations for revenge will naturally exist in Russia; and in an effort to regain lost prestige she will naturally muster a vast army, and having experienced the difficulties of making war six thousand miles from home will set to fight in the near east. How undoubtedly have the words of the prophet been fulfilled, "I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws;" and how significant the word, "Behold, I am against thee, O Gog."

How plainly to be seen is the hand of God in the preparation of Japan [illegible] "turning back Gog;" how well sharpened is the Japanese hook that is in the jaws of Russia. It is safe to say that Russia will not learn wisdom by her troubles, but like Pharaoh of old will harden her heart until finally destroyed on the mountains of Israel. The irony of this subject comes in when we learn that the Czar of Russia claims to be the Lord's Anointed, who is to speak peace to the nations, give justice and judgment to earth's inhabitants. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" It seems that we are surely in the day of God's preparation for the establishment of his kingdom under the reign of his truly Anointed, when all counterfeit kingdoms will be brushed aside to make room for the genuine. Important events crowd one upon another; Russia must have a rest to recuperate and gather her forces for the final contest, when she will be broken on account of her cruel sins, so that as a nation she will exist no more. Such nations as Russia stand in the way of God's purpose in the earth. Therefore he will "break the rod of the oppressor, before he will "proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Seed Thoughts.

And if Christ be not raised your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. These seed thoughts will harmonize with no system of natural immortality. Dr. Walsh and Brewster's long and tedious discussions on that question were able, but not useful; more calculated to bewilder than to convince and settle one's faith. The impregnable fortress of natural immortality drawn from its universal belief by the heathen world, is a sham and delusion. You can prove a plurality of gods, yea a multiplicity of gods, in the same way. All these nations believe in a multiplicity of gods as strongly as the natural immortality, and all are idolaters.—C. Beardman.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 23, 1905. NUMBER 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 28, 1905.

RUSSIA and Japan have not reached peace terms yet.

THERE being five Wednesdays in August, our next issue will bear date Sept. 6.

THE Editor and wife had the pleasure of attending the Ohio State Conference held last week at Cleveland. Our trip was made pleasant through the courtesy of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railway Co. We will not attempt to describe the several meetings, as the Secretary will supply his report in due time. We found many with whom we had met in other years, and many new ones as well. It was good and pleasant to meet these brethren, and we came away encouraged and strengthened by our visit with them. They are earnest and zealous for the truth, and the several papers read by young and old, show that they are students of the Word. Brother and Sister Neill were again chosen State Evangelists. Pledges for the coming year's work show a gain over last. We left the home of Brother and Sister Goss, with whom we had been housed, on Monday morning, feeling that we had been with brethren who are striving to walk in the path the Lord would have them go, and we bid each God speed.

Heremias (or "Iremiah").

CHAPTER I.

1. The oracular-Word of God that occurred unto Hieremias, the son of Chelkias of the priests, unto him who dwelt in Anathooth in a land of Benjameln,

2. When a Word of God occurred unto him in the days of Joosias, son of Amoos, king of Jouda, in the thirteenth of his royalty.

3. And it continued to occur in the days of Jooakeim, son of Joosias, king of Jouda, until the eleventh year of Zedekias, son of Joosias, king of Jouda until the [redacted] saleem in the fifth month;

4. And a word of the Lord occurred to him, as follows,

5. Before I moulded thee in a belly, I knew thee well, and before thou didst come forth from a womb I sanctified thee, a prophet unto nations I disposed theo.

6. And I said, Hoon (thou Being) thou Despotes (sole Lord) O Lord, Lo, I do not know well how to talk because I am too young (had not reached the age of eldership meant).

7. And the Lord said unto me, Do not say, I am too young, because unto all those whom I may have sent thee wilt thou go thy way, and according to all that I may have enjoined on thee wilt thou talk.

8. Fear not before their face, because with thee am I to deliver thee, saith the Lord.

9. And the Lord reached forth his hand unto me and touched my mouth, and the Lord said unto me, Lo, I have given my words into thy mouth.

10. Lo, I have established thee today over nations and kingdoms to uproot and to dig down and build up and plant down.

11. And a Word of the Lord occurred unto me. Le saying; What dost thou see? And I said, a wand of nut-wood (the prophet's baton or sceptre of authority).

12. And the Lord said unto me, Thou hast seen well; because I have awakened over my words to authorize (casual doing meant) them,

13. And a Word of the Lord occurred unto me a second time, he saying, What dost thou see? And I said a caldron with a fire burning under it, and with its face away from the face of the north.

14. And the Lord said unto me, From the face of the north will have flamed out all the calamities upon all those who inhabit the land (the chosen land meant).

15. Because, lo, I am going to call together all the kingdoms of the earth from the north, saith the Lord, and they will come and place each one his throne before the front doors of the gateways of Hierousaleem and before all the walls round about her and before all the cities of Jouda.

16. And I am going to talk to them with judicial-procedure about all their evil doing, how they have already forsaken me, and sacrificed to alien gods and worshiped the works of their hands.

17. And do thou gird up thy loins and arise and speak all the words which I have commanded thee. Be not afraid of their face nor be awe-struck in their presence, because I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord.

18. Lo, I have placed thee today like a walled city and a copper wall as it were, a walled one for all the kings of Jouda and his rulers and the laity of the land? And they will war with thee and they shall not be able against thee, for the reason that I am with thee to deliver thee saith the Lord said.

COMMENT.

This book of Hieremias, one of the most remarkably significant and oracular of all the prophetic books of the Old Covenant shows more internal evidence of garbling and tinkering than perhaps any other of the usually accepted canonical series. Not only the numbering of the chapters themselves has been changed but portions of chapters and single verses have been shifted from one chapter to another, so deranging and obscuring the historical sequence of events as well as perverting the true sense of the prophetic statement in very many instances. The prophet's name Hieremias made up as it is of the roots of three Semitic verbs is significant of his divinely appointed official character and work; the first meaning "to go"—the second "to lay waste"—the third "to heal"—and freely translated would embody God's command-ment to the prophet as elaborated in the first chapter. "Go to Lay Waste and to Heal," in short the prophet's name is as usual the key to open up the hidden significance of the whole book. Therefore gentle reader please keep this in mind as we proceed with this key to open up many a dark passage of this prophecy.

Three Gospel Pillars.

The following Bible readings show the prominence given in the Scriptures to these three facts concerning our Lord Jesus.

First. His sacrifice, culminating in the death on the cross for our sins.

Second. His resurrection and present work of intercession.

Third. His second coming with its [redacted] for his saints.

I. Three Appearings. Heb. ixix. 24-28, 1. "He hath appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." 2. "Now to appear in the presence of God for us." 3. "He shall appear the second time without a sin-offering unto salvation. Here is the sacrifice, the intercession, the second coming.

II. Three salvations. 1 Eph. i. 7, "In whom we have redemption through his blood—the forgiveness of salvation." 2 Heb. vii. 25, "He is able to save to the uttermost—seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." 3. Matt. x. 22, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." Here is a past, a present and a future salvation; the past, related to the death of Christ, the present to his intercession, the future to his second coming.

III. Three Shepherds. 1. Jno. x. 11, "The good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Here is the cross. 2. Heb. xiii. 20, "That great Shepherd of the sheep"—our present Leader. 3. 1 Peter v. 4, "When the chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of life."

IV. Three Deliverances. 2 Cor. i. 9-10, 1. "Who delivered us"—at the cross from the penalty of sin. 2. "And doth deliver us"—from the power of sin by his resurrection life as our Intercessor. 3. "He will deliver us"—from the presence of sin when he returns.

V. The cross, the crook and the crown. 1. Psa. xxii. This is the one plain Old Testament prophecy of the cross. It is the broken utterances of the dying Savior. 2. Psa. xxiii. Here is the Shepherd leading his "little flock" "through the valley of the shadow" with his crook—our risen Savior. 3. Psa. 24. This is a prophecy of Jerusalem opening its gates to welcome our coming Savior. Here he is no longer the suffering Messiah of the past, nor the gentle Prince of Peace of the present, but the future "Lord of hosts" and "King of glory."

VI. The Lord's table rests upon these three pillars. 1. It points back to the cross—the broken body and the shed blood." 2. It points up to the Bread of Heaven—our daily sustenance. 3. It points forward "till he come."

VII. Baptism presents the death, burial and resurrection and return [illegible] Rom. vi. 3-5. 1. We "were baptized into his death." 2. "We should walk in newness of (resurrection) life." 3. "We shall be in the likeness of his resurrection" at his coming.

VIII. Three gospel facts. 1 Cor. xv. 1. "Christ died for our sins." Verse 3. 2. "He rose again the third day." Verse 4. 3. He is coming again to raise them "that are Christ's" verse 23, to "change" the living saints. Verses 51-52, to "reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet" verse 25, to raise the general dead, verse 22-24, to destroy death, verse 26. This great chapter puts the second coming of Jesus in the list of these three fundamental facts. They constitute "the doctrine of Christ." Observe how baptism is "that form of doctrine." Rom. vi. 17. See VII.

IX. Work, labor and patience. 1 Thes. i. 3. 1 "Work of faith." 2. "Labor of love." 3. "Patience of hope." The relationship of this trinity to the three gospel pillars may be seen when combined with the following trinity.

X. Turning, serving and waiting. 1 Thes. i. 9-10. "Ye turned to God from idols." 2. "To serve the living and true God" and 3 "To wait for his Son from heaven. Combining IX. and X. we have 1. "Your work of faith"—"ye turned to God from idols." 2 Your "labor of love"—"to serve the living and true God." 3. Your "patience of hope"—"to wait for his Son from heaven." A crucified Savior is the foundation for a "work of faith" and the reason for turning "to God from idols." A resurrected Mediator makes possible the "labor of love"—serving "the living and true God" for the coming King we have the "patience of hope."

IX. Three Graces. 1 Cor. xiii. 1, Faith looks forward to the cross. 2. Hope looks forward to the Lover's return for his betrothed. 3. Love looks up to the risen Savior and from him receives strength for service in the "little while" between the cross and the second coming.

XII. Salvation, Sonship and similitude. 1 Jno. iii. 1-3, 1. "He was manifested to take away our sins—at the cross. 2. "Now are we the sons of God." "Behold what manner of love." This is our present relationship "in Christ" our risen Savior. 3. "When he shall appear we shall be like him."

XIII. Loving, living and looking. Titus ii. 11-13. 1. "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared." "God so loved," Here is the love of the cross. 2. "We should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world—between the cross and the coming, under the ministry of our risen Intercessor. 3. "Looking—our Savior Jesus Christ."

XIV. Three looks. 1. Isa. xlv. 22, "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." "There is life for a look at the crucified One." 2 Heb. vi. 12, 2. "Looking unto Jesus" -at the right hand of the throne of God." 3. 2 Pet. iii. 12, 13, "Looking for—the day of God."

XV. Three conversations. 1. Luke ix. 30-31, "Two men—spake of his decease." 2. Luke xxiv. 4-7, "Two men said, "He is not here; he is risen." 3. Acts i. 10, "Two men—said—"This same Jesus shall come again." These two men spake first of his death, the next time of his resurrection and the next time of his return.

XVI. Three links. Rom. v. 1-3, 1, "Justified by faith"—"by his blood." —"by his blood." Verse 9. Here is the cross. 2. We have peace and access"—through our Lord Jesus Christ. 3. We "rejoice in hope of the glory of God"—to be revealed at the coming of Christ. Justification is linked to the crucified Savior; access to the ascended Savior, and hope to the coming Savior.

XVII. Three Hooks. Rom. v. 8-11, 1, "Christ died for us." 2. "We joy in God"—our present joyful experience through Christ our Mediator. 3. "We shall be saved by his life"—at his coming.

XVIII. Three Sabbath sermons. Acts xvii. 1-9. 1. "Christ must have suffered." 2 and have risen from the dead." 3. "There is another King—Jesus."

XIX. Three names. Rev. i. 5. 1. "The Faithful Witness—from his baptism to the cross. 2. "The First begotten from the dead." 3. "The Prince of the kings of the earth"—his future office.

XX. Three Tenses. Rev. i. 8, "The Lord"—1. "Which is"—our risen Redeemer. 2. "Which was" crucified for us. 3. "Which is to come," or Heb. xiii. 8 "Jesus Christ the same, 1 yesterday, 2 today, and 3 for the ages."

XXI. Three offices. 1 as Prophet, Jesus brought God's completed and final message—"He was the Word." Jno. i. 1-3. 2. As Priest, he now intercedes for us—sympathetic, merciful and faithful. Heb. ii. 17; iii. 1-2; iv. 14-16. 3. As King of kings and Lord of lords." Rev. xix. 16, he will "break them with a rod of iron" and "dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Psa. ii. 59.

The enemies of the gospel assail these three facts. The death of Christ for our sins is opposed as unreasonable, cruel, smacking of the shambles. The resurrection is assailed by infidels and cold-blooded critics as not in harmony with evolution. The second coming of Jesus is figured away by so-called "spiritualizing" plain texts, because an unprepared church is not looking for nor desiring his return.

Good Breeding.

There would be fewer broken friendships, fewer unhappy unions and family quarrels, were it not so much the custom among intimate friends and relations to neglect the small courtesies of life, to show less and less mutual deference as they grow more and more familiar. It is the foundation of misery in marriage, and many a serious and life-long estrangement has begun, not from want of affection so much as from lack of that delicate and instructive appreciation of the feelings of others, which makes a person shrink from saying unpleasant things and finding fault unless absolutely obliged; and in any case avoid wounding the offender's sense of dignity or stirring up within him feelings of opposition and animosity, for although many persons profess to be above taking offense at honest censure, and even seem to court criticism, yet it must be very carefully administered not to be unpalatable. Very kind and generous actions are often so uncouthly performed as to give the recipient more pain than pleasure, while a reproof or denial may be so sweetened by courtesy as almost to do away with any sense of mortification or disappointment. True good breeding is always inclined to form a favorable judgment, and to give others credit of being actuated by worthy motives; it does not wish or seem to know more about people than they themselves desire should be known, but it is always prepared, when necessary, to take an interest in the affairs of others, while self is not suffered to obtrude unduly. A show of respect never fails to beget respect. The stronger an individual, the more impressive is his gentleness, the wiser he is, the more gratifying and complimentary his deference; and in a world where there is so much unavoidable discomfort and unhappiness, it is surely every one's duty to cultivate those gracious manners under whose magic influence the restless and dissatisfied grow more content with their surroundings, by which the diffident are encouraged, the invalid is aroused and interested, the young are inspired with self-respect, the old are kept bright and hopeful; which, in short, beam sunshine everywhere, and increase a thousand fold the aggregate of human happiness.

A Good Man.

"He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." Acts xi. 24.

A good man, then, is a man who draws his goodness from God, the source of all goodness. He himself is a type of all perfection, the home of all things fair. Whatsoever things are lovely, and whatsoever things are venerable—all that we call virtue, all to which hearts and consciences ascribe praise—dwell in God as their native home. In the abyss of his being the streams of goodness, which part into many heads to fertilize the wilderness and sweeten the salt marshes of human nature, rest undivided. He is the reality of which all our conceptions of goodness are but the fragmentary representations, the substance of which they are but shadows. Not only so, but as all life is an effluence from him with whom is the fountain of life, and as it is his light in which we see light, so all the goodness which is in men is from above, and cometh from the Father of Light. All light and heat are from the sun, and all goodness is of God. All virtues are radiations from him. "They are but broken lights of thee." He alone is good of himself and by himself, Drawing his being from none, he owes his character to none, to no outward helps or occasions his actions, to no importation his beauty. Receiving from none he gives to all, and every deed of fair goodness that man has ever done, at the last analysis, has been to the doer no less than to the beholders or the hearers, the gift of God.—A. McClaren.

Communion with God.

"In him we live, and move, and have our being." Acts xvii. 28.

God's presence amid and throughout creation is immediate and is constant; and not a presence of thought merely, or of organizing plans, or of secondary forces operating for him, but of his own personal and infinite mind. He is near, he is with every one whom he has made; and while no sense takes cognizance of his glory, and no human spirit is bowed beneath its august burden, the soul that thinks of him, and affectionally aspires to meet him, becomes often intimately aware of his presence. That presence is constant too, as well as immediate; so that at no time in all our life, and amid no scenes, are we in the least removed from God. On sea or land, at the tropics or at the poles, the personal energizing mind of the Most High, ubiquitous and supreme, and everywhere present, includes us continually, and even, in the mystic prerogative of divinity, without invading our equal personality, pervades and sustains us. The loneliest scene is populace with his presence. The commonest habitation hath in it this grandest of all sublimities. The pillar of stone becomes a temple, the crag of granite seems a part of the chrysolite walls of heaven when the eyes of those who stand before them are anointed to see this indwelling presence, wherewith the desert and the peak are both consecrated!

We may then have communion and intercourse with this mind, of him who built and governs the world. We may directly confer with him, and be conscious of his sympathy. Prepared for it by righteousness, we may with clear vision behold his face; and when we wake, and when we sleep, be still with him.—R. S. Storrs.

Home Happiness.

Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over, and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house or have one little room in that house, you can make that little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence and will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you should ever transgress. You should always treat each other with courtesy. It is often not so difficult to love a person as it is to be courteous to him. Courtesy is of greater value and a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will but be courteous to each other you will soon learn to love each other more wisely, profoundly, not to say lastingly, than you ever did before.

The Glory of the Church.

The glory of the Church is at the coming of the Bridegroom in glory. It is at "the manifestation of the sons of God." "It doth not yet appear;" it is hidden now, as is the flower in the seed; but the seed is the earnest of the flower; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. Now and all along we see a process of development, involving as preliminary the believer's discipline of joy and sorrow, suffering and trial in a state of imperfection unto the fulfilment of the promises as the reward of cheerful service, of patient waiting and hopeful endurance "at the resurrection of the just." Now it is the cross, then the "crown, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give in that day unto all those who love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 6 8, in that day not of death but of rapture and of life "when he who is our life shall appear" in glory. Brethren, we look for life, not for death. The blessed hope of glory carries us beyond an intermediate state of twilight to the resurrection morning, when the Sun rises and the mist fades away. It is possible to raise death. "Behold;" says the great apostle to the Gentiles, who believed with all his soul in the second coming of his Lord and the resurrection of the dead, "I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." Again; "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Then the marriage of the Church is come, and she is "arrayed in fine linen, clean and white." Then is she presented to her Lord "a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing;" a holy and perfect Church, "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."—W. R. Joyslin.

Prayer as a Tonic.

You have hoped that, as an answer to your prayer for strength, strength would be given, and this was a just and right hope; but, oh! so much more than this is your portion; to know what prayer itself is the spiritual tonic, and that the very continuance in the earnest communion with God is the thing that will enrich your life, renew your energy, and lift you up to a vantage ground in respect to your temptations, by toning up the very spirit and temper of your mind. So that your struggle is no more the base, half-yielding struggle it was, but a sublime conquest, accomplished through the power of this Divine Presence in which you are abiding. We have spoken of friendship; it is a noble illustration. You have been very weak in spirit, very impoverished, and making miserable work with life. This friend came suddenly in upon you, perhaps for a few moments only, but bright, earnest, pure—radiating a life power that changed you, that warmed you, purified you, toned you, that lifted you to victory. This is like prayer in its fullest sense. You are praying, indeed most earnestly for a special thing; but now you have learned that the special thing is not the only blessing. There is one much nearer, even the act of praying for it. Prayer is not crying out to a distant God; but holy continuance in the presence of the Divine Friend. Prayer is drinking from the fountain of strength, eating of the manna of life.

What you need, what I need is far more of this kind of prayer. In prayer we close our eyes through involuntary reverence, that we may not be distracted by surrounding objects; but often we have closed also the eyes of the soul, and asked blindly, as if the thing we asked were the only blessing, and the act nothing—nothing but the means. But when we pray aright the soul's eyes are open, and fastened on the face of God, and our hands are folded in his, and prayer is companionship.—Charles Cuthbert Hall.

Just Three Things.

"I once met a thoughtful scholar," says Bishop Whipple, "who told me that for years he had read every book he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ, and he said he should have become an infidel but for three things:

"First I am a man. I am going somewhere. Tonight I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray of hope or light upon the darkness. They shall not take away the guide and leave me stone-blind.

"Second. I had a mother. I saw her go down into a dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen Arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. I know that 'was not a dream.

"Third. I have three motherless daughters (and he said it with tears in his eyes). They have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world if you blot out from it all the teachings of the gospel."

He that lives out the Golden Rule is a safe man to follow.

Poetry.

Will he Give his Beloved Sleep?

When the feet are worn and weary,
When the eyes grow dim with tears,
When the days are long and dreary,
With the monotone of years;
When the fainting footsteps falter
In the marshes dark and deep,
With the griefs no time can alter,
Will he give his loved ones sleep?

When our happiness has vanished,
And the heart is worn and old,
Feeding on the husks is furnished
With a hungering untold;
And the way is dark and lonely
I'p the rugged mountain steep,
Faith asks the assurance only
That he gives his loved ones sleep.

Will he lead them by still waters,
to the pastures fair and bright
Earth's poor heartsick sons and daughters,
Out from darkness into light?
Oh! I long to know the secrets
The eternal silence keep,
Will we lose our burden some day?
Will he give his children sleep?

Till there come a day of resting,
When the pain and toil are done,
Done the penance and the fasting,
And the final words are on?
Will the heart long a-breaking
And the eyes forget to weep?
Then will be no weary morrows,
If he give his loved ones sleep.

The Disciple that Jesus Loved.

There is a certain sadness connected with the attachment of two friends who have become so much to each other, that they divide the world into only two parts, "one where the loved object is, and one where it is not." It is too intense for this life; changes and separation will weaken it, or death disrupt it. But there is something sadder in the attachment of Christ and John. The deep devotion, the pure and generous heart, the tender sympathy, the trusting, loving nature of the latter, had so won upon the Savior, that every look he cast upon him was a caress, and every word he spoke, took the gentle tone of a mother addressing her child. He knew how his disciple loved him, and knew too how much he must suffer in the sufferings that awaited him. John, absorbed by his attachment, his countenance by turns made tearful and joyous at the kind words and glorious truths that fell from his Master's lips, seemed never to dream of approaching evil, of possible separation. Jesus, on the other hand, as he with his sorrowful face looked down upon him leaning contentedly on his breast, thought of the future. With his human heart beating warmly for the true, devoted friend on his bosom, he could not but sigh, knowing, as he did, the trials and sufferings his tender nature must yet pass through to prove its love for him. As, in imagination, I behold the two in each other's embrace, I seem to see tears on the cheeks of Jesus, at the same time that his hand bestows a caress. The implicit confidence and trust of his follower appealed to every noble quality of the heart, and he must in those moments have looked upon John, as a mother upon the smiles of her infant, when she knows that in a few hours the executioner's axe will leave it an orphan in the world. The dark hints he ever and anon threw out, filled John with wonder, rather than anxiety, and he loved on indifferent to his own fate. The other disciples respected this attachment, and far from being jealous, seemed affected by it. When Christ uttered those sad words, "One of you shall betray me," they dared not ask him who it was, but requested John, who they knew would not be rebuked, to do it for them. He, looking up from that pillow he could not surrender to any other head, said, "Lord, who is it?" and the Savior told him. The youngest of all, a mere youth when he began to follow Christ, he was yet most beloved of all.

John must have passed through strange states of mind, as the wondrous character of the being he loved so intimately and treated so familiarly, became revealed to him in his miracles and by his high claims. Christ seems always to choose him for a companion when about to accomplish any great event. John heard his predictions respecting Jerusalem and the Jewish nation; stood by when he took the dead daughter of Jairus, and bade her arise amid her astonished friends; was one of the three who ascended the Mount of Transfiguration, and saw the face and form he had so often caressed assume the likeness and splendor of God; was in the garden on that night of fearful agony, and gazed on that pallid face streaked with blood, which had so kindly smiled on him; and, last of all, beheld him ascend into heaven, triumphant over death and the grave.

But there is one event which gives John peculiar claims to being "that disciple whom Jesus loved." Christ had endured the agony in the garden; his sacred face had been spit upon; his cheek shamefully struck; the farce and insult of a trial endured; he had fainted under the cross as he struggled with it up the steep hill-side; and with his frame strung to the point of extremest sensibility, had been laid on the rough beams, and the bolts rudely crushed through his shrinking hands and feet, and thus suspended on high. Around him was the railing crowd, behind him a scoffing thief. All his friends had forsaken him and fled; and alone, all alone, he was left to wrestle with his doom. No, not quite alone, for nearer the cross than the taunting rabble stood his mother. It was her child, bleeding and dying there before her eyes, and what were the scoffs and violence of those around her! ay, what was death itself compared to the throes of maternal anguish that shook her bosom! There stood John, rivaling even the mother in love. He forgot he had a life to loose; he did not hear the taunts that were rained upon him, nor see the fingers of scorn that were pointed at his tears; he saw only his dying friend and Lord; beheld but the bosom on which he had so often rested his head, heaving and swelling as though the heart would burst its confinement, and the brow on which peace ever sat like a white winged dove, contracted with agony unutterable. True to the last, pale as the suffering one before him, he stood and wept in speechless sorrow. Christ, in the midst of his torture, and in the midst of the stupendous scheme he was finishing at such a fearful price, cut off from earth, and just as heaven too was about to abandon him, and the power of his Father was darkening over his spirit, was struck with his matchless love. The last, the wildest wave that ever broke over the soul of the Savior, was gathering for its flow, yet even then he gazed lovingly on those two faithful hearts, and his calm though failing voice reached their ears, and he said to his mother, "Behold thy Son," and to John, "Behold thy mother." True-hearted disciple, faithful friend, take my place beside my mother; to thy love, so great for me, I can safely commit her. Oh! what a proof of confidence and attachment was that! So high an honor was never before paid human love. Oh! what an inheritance was that the Son of God gave him, his mother, and his affectionate confidence in the last hour of his suffering, and while standing on the portals of the eternal kingdom. No wonder that John, after that, took her to his own home, soothed her sorrows, nursed her declining years, and at last gently and sorrowfully laid her in her grave.

Years passed by, and changes and persecution came, but no change in the affection for his Master. Living in his life, he now lived to make known his death and resurrection. Love seemed to supply the place of native energy, and he passed into Asia, preaching the gospel, and planting churches until at length the hand of the persecution reached him also, and he was banished to a lonely island in the Ægean Sea.

How long he remained there we know not; silence and uncertainty rest on his history. Alone he trod the desolate beach, cheered by no voice, solaced by no companionship. He whose happiness had consisted in laying his head on the bosom of his friend and Lord, was left without a friend. The monotonous dash of waves at his feet, the broad and boundless deep stretching away before him, the cry of the sea bird and the roar of the storm, these were the only sights and sounds left to the lonely exile. Day after day, and week after week, the same unvarying routine. The solitary walk on the shore, and still more solitary rest under an overhanging rock, filled up the measure of his employments. Ah, how sweet then was the remembrance of his long and affectionate interview with Christ—how full of solace the words he had spoken, so sweet that the desert seemed peopled with angels, and the hoarse murmur of the sea sounded like an anthem of praise to God. As he stood and saw the sun go down on the deep, he remembered that just so it flashed over the Sea of Tiberias, when Jesus fed the five thousand. As he looked up to the silent firmament, gorgeous with stars, he remembered the strange night he passed with Jesus on Mount Tabor, looking on the same heavens; and when he pillowed his lonely head upon the sand, he thought, with throbbing heart, of him "who had not where to lay his head."

How long he lived thus in holy contemplation, to prepare him for the wondrous revelations about to be made, we know not; but one Sabbath morning, as he was walking the wild desert island, filled with thoughts of the world to come, he heard a voice repeating in trumpet tones behind him, "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last." Turning to meet the voice, he saw a form dread enough to appal the stoutest man. A mantle wrapped it from the neck to the feet; the head and hair were white as wool, the eyes burned like fire, the feet shone like brass in a furnace; in his uplifted hand stars were blazing; his countenance was like the sun shining in its strength, and his voice like the sound of many waters. No wonder the overwhelmed exile fell on his face as a dead man, before his fearful form and aspect, and dared not lift his eyes again from the earth, till the same terrible voice bade him arise. Of the wondrous visions that were then revealed to him, who can speak? The gates of hell and heaven were flung open to his view. He saw the smoke that curtained the bottomless pit, and the city whose only light is the presence of the Lamb; but the speechless agony, the terrific conflicts, the appalling sights, together with the splendors of the heaven of heavens, the throne and the white-vested elders, dazzling glory of the crystal sea and rivers of paradise, the music of the harpers, the thrilling power of that loud hallelujah, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain," as it rolled from ten thousand tongues full on the throne of God and the Lamb, who can describe? That desolate island around John, was greater than Mount Carmel of old, when horses and chariots of fire encircled the prophet. God was there! unveiling himself, this world, and eternity, to a mortal!

This strange interview, with its long train of mysterious and fearful visions, was at last ended; as was also the exile of John, and he smiled once more in the midst of his friends. But the scenes he had passed through did not change his nature; he was the same gentle, loving being as ever. Overflowing with kindness and sympathy, all things else seemed worthless in comparison.

And when the lamp of life burned dimly, and his trembling voice could hardly articulate, he still spoke of love. It is said he lived to be eighty years of age, and then, too feeble to walk, was carried into church on men's shoulders, and, though scarcely able to speak, would faintly murmur, "Brethren, love one another." Affection was his life, and it seemed to him that the world could be governed by love.—J. T. Headley.

Absent from the Body.

In pursuing the regular course of our inquiries, we proceed naturally from the consideration of the resurrection to that of final judgment which immediately follows. Of the many places in Scripture which relate to that event, there is one in the fifth chapter of the Apostle Paul's second Epistle to the Corinthians, to which I particularly wish to call your attention; because in studying the passage as a whole, you will perceive the importance of the rule I have so often insisted on; that of not interpreting single texts by themselves, but judging of them partly by the general drift and tenor of the whole discourse (examining what goes before and what follows), and partly from a comparison of one passage with another, so as to reconcile each part of Scripture with the rest.

Take, for example, the words of the tenth verse (which are most frequently quoted), by themselves, and they will not only afford no indication of any such doctrine as bodily resurrection, but would seem the rather to imply the contrary; "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in the body;" here our present state in the world is spoken of as "in the body;" and there is nothing in the passage to lead us to suppose that we shall have bodies when we appear before Christ's judgment-seat; the two conditions—that of being "in the body," and that in which we shall "appear before the judgment seat of Christ"—seem opposed and contrasted to one another. And if you look at some of the preceding verses, they would seem rather to imply of themselves, that the apostle is speaking of a separate state, without a body: "knowing," says he, "that whilst we are at home in the body we are absent from the Lord; (we are willing rather to be absent from the body and present with the Lord; wherefore we labor that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him;" and then follow the words, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, to give an account of the things done in the body."

This passage would, I say, of itself, seem to relate to the condition of the soul separate from the body; and indeed some commentators have referred to it as regarding the separate state. But they should have remembered that the apostle is most evidently alluding to the state, whatever it is in which we are to appear before Christ's judgment seat; so that if we are then to have bodies, he cannot be supposed, without a very forced and harsh interpretation, to be speaking of a separate state, in the words immediately preceding.

And if you look a little further back, Paul himself furnishes a ready interpretation of his own expression here: "We know," says he, "that if this our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God—a house not made with hands—eternal, in the heavens." That is, when the bodies in which we now dwell are destroyed (which he can call tents or tabernacles, to indicate that they are not our lasting and final habitation; a tent being only a temporary residence, which after a time is taken down and removed), we have another dwelling place provided for us—a permanent habitation (which may therefore more properly be styled a "house"), namely, immortal bodies, in which we shall be clothed at the resurrection.

And shortly after this he adds, "We that are in this tabernacle, do groan, being burdened" (laboring, that is, under the infirmities, temptations, and imperfections to which our earthly bodies are subjected); not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Then, having spoken of the burden of the corruptible body which we now inhabit, he adds this caution, on purpose, as it seems, to guard against the supposition that the deliverance he looks for from this burden, is a separate state of the soul; what we desire, he says, is, "not to be unclothed" (namely, as in a separate state), but the hope we cherish is, he says, "to be clothed upon," that is, to have an addition to what we now possess, by being placed in a far superior habitation—by having "our vile" bodies made like unto Christ's glorious body." And these our glorified bodies are to be of so refined and purified a nature in comparison of what we now have, as to be called by him in another epistle "spiritual bodies," for "flesh and blood" says he (that is, such gross materials as our present flesh and blood), "can not inherit the kingdom of God."

And when you observe that, in that very passage where he says that flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God," he is distinctly teaching that Christians shall, never, theless, in that kingdom of heaven, have bodies (though very different from what they have now), you may easily perceive how he comes in this place also to speak of being absent from the body and present with the Lord," when he is speaking not of a separate state, but of absence from such a body, of gross flesh and blood, as we now dwell in. The body in which he speaks of the Christian as being "at home," whilst he is "absent from the Lord," is evidently that "earthly tabernacle" which he has just before spoken of as a burden (of which he holds out the encouraging hope) is, not being "unclothed"—not a separate state—but the condition of being "clothed upon;" namely, with our spiritual and eternal body.—Archbishop Whately's "Future State."

We who walk here, sometimes in shadow, trial and hardship, must not for a day forget the land toward which we journey. Paradise we may well call it, perfect in its conditions, beautiful to the eye, a country of unsullied gladness and peace. There are spots in this fair world so exquisite in their beauty one would almost linger, but none compared with the country where our Lord is fitting up mansions for his children. Men may rob us here of houses and lands, but of that inheritance, not all the kingdoms of the world can deprive us. Through the windows of Scripture, faith gets many a glimpse of that home, that thrills the heart with unspeakable joy and gladness.

It is better to be a poor Christian than a rich sinner.

To the Sisters in Indiana and Elsewhere.

Dear Sisters:

You will see by referring to the Program of the Indiana Conference, that I have been requested to take charge of the "Sister's Hour." Now I would just love to hear from every Sister in the state. Some kind of an exhortation, greeting, comment on favorite passage of Scripture, your hope, suggestions as to special work that we might do, needs in your own home church, etc. I have asked for some special papers on "The Sermon on the Mount," but that does not mean that other subjects are excluded. There are many Sisters now living in other states who have formerly lived in Indiana. Let us hear from you. We will be so glad to hear that you are still trying to serve the Lord, and anxiously waiting for him. To Sisters outside the State, I say:—Dont you think we had better get acquainted? I do. Let us hear from you. We are commanded to exhort each other, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Send all communications to me, at Plymouth, Ind.

Your Sister, hoping that this service will be acceptable to our Heavenly Father, and an up-lift to each one of us.

Mrs. Eva L. Underwood.

Pardon.

"He will abundantly pardon." Isa. lv. 7.

Pardon implies the removal of guilt. It differs from acquittal. The latter term is applied where guilt is charged but not established. The innocent man, when found to be innocent, is acquitted. He is not pardoned, but justified as an innocent man. But the sinner is not innocent. The dreadful fact of his guilt is established, and cannot be ignored. If he be delivered from guilt it must be by cancellation—by blotting out the record of the guilt—a work which God only can perform. Hence pardon is not an act of acquittal, but the reversal or revocation of the condemnatory sentence of the law. This act takes away the guilt of sin by expiation, and removes its legal results, including the penalty, so that the sinner escapes from punishment as effectually as by acquittal. The sacrifice of Christ expiates the guilt provisionally, and faith in Christ makes the expiation actual, and delivers from condemnation. The relation of the atonement to pardon is one of the great questions in theology. God has determined that relation in infinite wisdom, and has been graciously pleased to reveal to us the fact and result, without gratifying our curiosity by telling us all we would like to know the reason and processes involved. It pertains to our probation to accept gratefully the revelation as made, to rejoice in the assurance of pardon through the sacrificial blood, and await the disclosures of eternity for the solution of the mysteries which now surround the subject.—Merrill.

If you say, "I am hedged about, I can do nothing, and would help, but cannot," your very longing is help. It is never true that we are not helpers; where the fervent heart is, there is the servant of God, and unto him comes ever, with the work, the reward.—Robert Collyer.

Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1 25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Poetry.

What is Best.

We do not know! Thou knowest!
As children in the dark
We lift our hearts, our hands to thee,
And find a rest, an ark;
We trust Thee in our ignorance,
O Wise, O Good, O Strong;
And though the shadows encompass us
We find thee with our song.

We stagger [illegible] Thy hand we feel,
We dream and hope and pray,
And make mistakes, and sin, and know
How frail and weak is man;
But then, upon the beginning,
Christ saw the end of all,
We rest upon thy knowledge,
Father, on whose wise will.

We do not know the best for us,
And so we strive in vain;
And for our sowing often reap
A harvest dire of pain;
We fail and fall, and then at last
We cry to thee for aid,
And only rest when thou dost say,
"Tis I, be not afraid."

O God, we would be wiser yet,
And only pray: Choose thou."
Lead as one leads the little ones,
We are thy children now:
And day by day, and step by step,
We need thy guiding hand.
Oh, let us cling to thee until
We reach the safe home land.

And then let days be fair or dark,
The journey short or long,
Our hearts will rest in comfort,
And we will sing our song;
Since thou dost know, our ignorance
And weakness matter not,
We trust in thy great love, O God,
And thou dost choose our lot.

—Mariana Farningham.

Charity.

Give! be the gift be ever so small;
Better do little than nothing at all;
An act of kindness, a word, a prayer
To lighten the burden of sorrow and care.

Little hands, little hearts, their little may do;
Little works of advice, so kind and so true;
Little errands of mercy and actions of love;
Little prayers prayed in earnest for help from above.

The cheerful giver is loved of the Lord,
And Charity never shall lose its reward;
Even the poor widow's mite was better than all—
'Twas the best she could do, though the gift was small.

Communicated.

Charity.

The Greek word translated "charity" in the 13th chapter of 1 Cor. is "agape." It means "love," and not the giving of money, or food, or clothing to the poor. The two words are not synonymous. One may give all that he possesses to feed the poor, and not have a particle of love in his heart. He may go to the stake as bravely as John Huss or Rowland Taylor, and not have the love that God requires. We can do charitable deeds, without love, but we cannot have Christ-like love, and not be charitable.

What then is this illimitable thing; this thing that Paul calls greater than faith, and greater than hope, which we are to have "above all things" and without which we are but things of noise?

Paul says, "Love is the fulfilling of the law," and Jesus says, "If ye love me keep my commandments." The great commandment in the law is that we shall love our God with all our heart and soul and mind. The second is like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." If we love, it is easy to do all the rest. If our hearts be set upon God, if he be the supreme object of our affection we shall want no other God; we shall never speak lightly of his name; we shall delight in setting apart a day to his service, and shall honor him by keeping the second great commandment in loving our neighbor as ourselves. And love for man takes in all our duties to man. It honors parents, it will not kill, it will not touch nor covet another's property, it will be false to none. So love "is the rule" as Professor Drummond says, "for fulfilling all rules, the new commandment for keeping all the old commandments, Christ's one secret of the Christian life," for "all the law and the prophets" are hung on love to God and love to man. Let us now look at our chapter. Paul imagines himself in a pulpit, speaking in the various languages of his audience and even in the language of angels, with such eloquence such as the people of Corinth in those days greatly admired, but doing it merely to show off his talents and without any love for souls, and compares himself, if it were possible for him to speak thus—to the powerless notes of the "sounding brass or tinkling cymbal." Mere sound, no matter how pleasing will never move men to repentance. Words without love behind them, will never persuade men to "turn from dumb idols to serve the living and true God." We might as well stand in the pulpit and play on "a sharp and piercing cymbal" as to speak with words that have no heart in them. We cannot deceive sinners. They instinctively know the hollowness of the speech that comes only from the lips of one who really cares not whether they live or die.

Paul might understand the deep things of God; he might be able to foretell the future, he might have perfect knowledge of all truth; he might have such faith and confidence in God, that mountains would move at his word, and without love he would still be nothing; he would fail of the heavenly reward, because his gifts, his knowledge and his power would not be used as God would have them used in saving men.

Faith connects us with God. It makes him a real being. It gives us confidence in him. It brings him into our lives. It makes him speak to us through his Word. It awakens hope. It sets before us a goal. It gives us an arm to lean upon; tools to work with, a helper to look to in every time of need. And we are connected with God by faith that we may become like him in character. "God is love," hence love must come into our lives, as the end or outcome of faith, and as the only key to a perfect life—a life that will be a real success, and profitable to the cause of Christ.

No sacrifice will avail anything without love. We may give to the orphans of the home-land; we may pour out our offerings for the famine-stricken little ones of India. We may feed the hungry until we spend all that we possess, but if we do it because we think we must and others expect it, it will profit us nothing, for God will reject us at the last as having given grudgingly and with selfish motives. We need to know this 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians by heart and to repeat it every day. And to know it by heart I mean, that we need to understand it, so that we may put it into our lives. As the little boy preached on the text "Be kind to one another," by doing no unkind act, so must we preach love. What then are the elements that make up this many colored, glorious rainbow of Christian character? First patience.

"Love suffereth long;" "beareth all things;" "endureth all things." Can the scoffer at the Bible show patience like that? Yet, see how patient Jesus was under the cruel mockings and scourgings inflicted upon him. This patience of love made him "like a lamb dumb before her shearers," so that "he opened not his mouth" when crowned with thorns, when spit upon, when nailed to the cross. The worldling says "take your own part." "give back as good as is sent." Jesus says, "Resist not evil." The martyred hosts obeyed to the letter. They went to the place of slaughter like so many sheep. They did not strike back. They bore without a murmur the confiscation of their goods. They suffered with incredible meekness and patience, imprisonment, tortures and death. Love can afford to bear and to be patient, for bearing and waiting is to bring victory. Love can give no life because from its ashes springs a flame that no Inquisitor of Rome can ever quench, a flame that spreads far and wide and carries the blessed gospel wherever it goes.

2nd Kindness. Love is still kind though it has suffered long. It is kind to its most cruel tormentors. It does good to its bitterest enemies. It takes delight in making others happy.

3rd Generosity. "Love envieth not." It can work with others. It can be glad in the success of its co-workers. It can say, "Let the work of the Lord move on," if not through me—then through whomsoever he may choose. If I can not lead, I can pray, I can praise, I can hold up hands.

4th Humbleness. "Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up." It does not speak of its gifts, nor use its knowledge of the tongues of men for mere display, as some at Corinth did, nor is it "puffed up for one against another," as some of the Corinthians were. It does not forget its high calling when party zeal comes knocking at its door. Nor does it stand on the corners of the streets and toll with the sound of a trumpet of the alms it has given. Its deeds are not in the papers.

5th Behavior. Love "doth not behave itself unseemly." It cannot be uncourteous. It will not wound the feelings of even the lowliest one. It will not make sport of the unfashionably clothed poor. It treats the aged with tenderness and consideration. It looks upon them with reverence. It carries their burdens. It helps their faltering steps. Love never stoops to act like a clown; it is never rude nor boisterous. It makes no obscene speeches; uses no profane words. At home, at school, in church, in society it keeps the same calm, quiet demeanor that bespeaks the perfect lady and the true gentleman.

6th Unselfishness. Love "seeketh not her own." It finds its happiness in serving, in giving. It lays up its treasures where moth and rust cannot corrupt them. The easy chairs, the best grapes, the largest apples, are modestly given up to the aged friend, the poor guest, or the little orphan child. Unselfishness takes the hard places without a murmur, gives up cherished plans and ambitions for another's sake, does all its work with the good, the salvation of the perishing in view. That it may work most efficiently, it "chooses to suffer affliction with the children of God rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." There is nothing so beautiful in the world as unselfish love—a love that puts self out of sight that it may serve its day and generation in the highest and noblest way—a way that will tell for the eternal years.

7th Good temper. "Love is not easily provoked." The worldling prides himself on showing what he calls "proper resentment" over injuries and insults. To avenge himself and vindicate his honor, he will fight a duel and slay his friend. But not so the faithful follower of the meek Nazarene. He has a more lofty courage than this—the courage to rule his own spirit, though he be called "poltroon" and "coward" for it. And the man who keeps his temper is the strong man. He has the advantage in every tempest, for the oil he can throw on the boisterous waves soon brings a calm. He can rule and influence other men by ruling himself. He is never in danger of saying and doing things that will fill all after life with regret, as so many have done. The man who takes the city is not half so great as is the man who has won the victory over himself, because to give way to bad temper is to lose the whole vantage ground and set the beautiful rainbow of love in total eclipse. For bad temper is not a mere infirmity of poor human nature, to be pitied and excused, but a most heinous sin, and is so looked upon and condemned by God. We are not to go with "an angry man." "Wrath killeth the foolish man." Job v. 2. More than one man has died in a fit of anger, and if it does not bring sudden death, it brings disease. "Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous." "Put off wrath." "God hath not appointed us to wrath," for bad temper embitters home, ruins children, starts neighborhood feuds, breaks up churches, keeps the unsaved away from Christ, nullifies all our influence for good. We estimate the character of the man by the temper he shows. Bad temper reveals something wrong within, an "unloving nature" a soul that has never really and truly put on the yoke of Christ. "Let that mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." It is a matter of life or death.

8th Guilelessness. "Love thinketh no evil." It believes in people: it trusts them, it puts aside suspicion, when working to save them, and thus restores their self respect, enkindles faith and awakens hope. We must have this attribute of love if we are ever to win men to Christ. To show the drunkard that you believe in him, believe he has enough of manhood about him to reform is often enough to set him on his feet in the way of righteousness and peace. If a man believes that we believe in him, we can influence him to turn from sin but not otherwise.

9th Love of the Truth. "Love rejoiceth not in iniquity but rejoiceth in the truth." Love clings to the Bible, it rejoiceth in it. It lays hold of the gospel as the most precious of treasures. It will guard the truth even at the sacrifice of life, it will never recant. It will make no compromise of truth "by glossing over iniquity." These nine elements make the love that Paul so wonderfully describes, without which we can have no part in Christ's glorious kingdom. The person that has them, has jewels worth more than Kohinoor diamonds. He can face cannibals without fear. He has weapons that few can resist. He can, like Livingstone, go into the wilds of Africa and win all hearts. Put love, with its sparkling gems into your lives. Grow, grow by constant exercise of the spiritual graces. "Practice makes perfect." "God is love," and you want to be like him. "God is love," because he is patient, long suffering, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to a knowledge of the truth. "God is love," because he is kind. His loving kindness is better than life, says David. He draws with loving kindness, says Jeremiah. His great plan of the ages has been made out of kindness for the good and the happiness of man. "God is love" because he is generous. He does not envy his children but condescends to be a co-worker with them in bringing about the great change that shall make a paradise of this earth. "God is love" because though great in majesty and power there is humility in his character that excludes pride, haughtiness, arrogance and vain boasting. He tells us what he is and what he has done, but there is no vanity in the telling. It may sound strange to talk of the humility of God, but does he not stoop to save? Did any being ever show greater humility than Jesus, and was he not the exact image of his Father? God is love, because he is courteous. He "does things gently with love" "He considereth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Through wisdom he calls unto the sons of man, that hearing her they may find life, may inherit substance," and have their treasures filled. No one is so mean and poor but that God loves him. While we were yet sinners—think of it—while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us! Many a professed Christian of today will not descend to speak to the low and vile, but God does, and he speaks with sympathy, with compassion, with courtesy. "Come," he says, today, if you will hear my voice, harden not your hearts. God is love, because he is unselfish. He serves men by giving them "every good and perfect gift." He gave his only Son, that through him they might have life. God is love, because he is "slow to anger." He weighs evidence and condemns the guilty, but it is as a judge and in love.

God is love because he is guileless. He believes in people that they may believe in themselves. He shows his faith in their power to reform, by giving them the opportunity and the means of reformation. None are debarred from repentance. "Whosoever will may come and partake of the water of life freely." God is love, because he "rejoices in the truth" and hates unrighteousness. So you see how important it is that you have and keep the adorning of love and so attain to the stature of perfect men and women in Christ Jesus, being God-like in character; shining as lights in the world and coming off at last, "More than conquerors through him who hath loved you."

Pure in Heart.

The cure for the evils of this life cannot be found in outward surroundings. These help to some extent. But evil finds its birth in the soul's choices. To meet this Christianity is radical. The Word of God reaches to the purposes of men's hearts, and thus seeks to control outward acts. Formalism makes the outside of the platter clean. The gospel makes the heart clean. It purifies the fountain from whence life issues. Outward influence may restrain in some degree, but no life can be made pure from without. The body may be surrounded by pure air, and yet be filled with disease. But let healthful lungs bring the pure air in contact with the blood which flows to the heart, and disease is driven out. Christ casts the devils out. The Spirit in the heart keeps them out, and so the life remains pure. Seek that inward purity. This only is purity. All else is delusion or deceit. This within, all else is harmless. Temptation may rage, but it must stay outside. It is dangerous only when it is permitted to rest within.—Star and Crown.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.
